CALDERWOOD'S HISTORIE

OF

THE ERLE OF LENNOX, REGENT.

THE TWENTIE-FIRST GENERALL ASSEMBLIE.

TRIELL OF SUPERINTENDENTS.

The Superintendent of Fife was delated for negligence in reparation of kirks. He answered, he could gett no officers of armes to putt in execution letters against parochiners, where the said kirks were ruinous. The Assemblie ordeaned the superintendents and commissioners for planting of kirks to charge the collectors' officers within their provinces respective to execute letters for reparation of kirks decayed, who sall caus them be satisfied at the discretion of the Assemblie, conforme to their diligence, and paines takin therapent.

VOL. III.

ACTS.

It is ordeanned, that all superintendents and commissioners to plant kirks, with suche as they sall choose in their synodall conventions, sall heare the compts of the collectors of their owne provinces, at suche day and place as sall please them to appoint to the said collectors; and report to the nixt Assemblie what diligence and fidelitie they sall find in them; and that they sall have power to depose and reteane the said collectors, as occasioun sall serve, conforme to the Act of the Assemblie made before.

- 2. It is ordeaned, that all suche persons as for their offences resort to the Generall Assemblie, to receave injunctiouns, to shew signes of repentance, or present themselves before the samine in linnen clothes to receave farther injunctiouns, that heerafter they be warned by their superintendents, commissioners, and ministers, to compeere before the said Generall Assemblie the secund day of the same, peremptorlie.
- 3. Becaus some who had once accepted the charge of the ministrie had deserted their calling, the Assemblie ordeanned, that all and sindrie ministers who heerafter sall accept the said office, sall be inaugurated publictlie, conforme to the order sett doun in the end of the treatise of excommunicatioun; and sall protest solemnlie, that they sall never leave the said vocatioun at anie time heerafter, under the paine of infamie and perjurie; and that this be done and executed by superintendents and commissioners appointed for planting of kirks. And in like maner, that all ministers alreadie placed sall make the like protestatioun in their synodall conventiouns before the superintendents or commissioners, who sall insert the said protestatiouns frome time to time in their bookes, ad futuram rei memoriam.
- 4. It is statut and ordeanned, that ministers and elders of kirks universallie within this realme sall trie and examine all young childrein within their parishes, which are come to nyne yeeres of age; and againe when they come to the twelf yeere; and the thrid time when they come to the fourteene yeere; that it may be knowne how they have profited in the schoole of Christ from time to time, and that their names may be writtin up by the ministers and elders of their parishes.

5. It was ordeanned, that as it pleased God of his mercie to erect the authoritie of the king's Majestie, with publict consent of the estats, even so the samine ought and sould be universallie obeyed throughout this realme, without acknowledging anie other authoritie, whatsoever title be pretended. Moreover, that ministers, after their publict sermons, pray publictlie for the preservatioun of his Majestie's persoun and authoritie; with certificatioun, that all suche as sall be found negligent or disobedient sall be punished, as the Assemblie sall thinke expedient. Farther, it was declared, that if anie subject or subjects of this realme, of what estat so ever they be, sall tak upon them presumptuouslie to inhibite anie minister to obey this ordinance of the Generall Assemblie, what cloke or colour so ever he or they pretend, or by minassing mak impediment unto them, so that ministers may not without feare serve God in their vocatioun, that in that cace suche troublers sall be summarilie, upon the notorietie of the fact, excommunicated, and sall be holdin rottin members, unworthie of the societie of Christ's bodie. And, last, the Assemblie commandeth all superintendents and commissioners of provinces to caus this determination to be published in all the parish kirks, that none heerafter pretend ignorance. It was ordeanned, that this act sould be printed by Robert Leckprevick, that it might come to the knowledge of all men. The Superintendent of Lothian's letter, extant in 399 and 400 page, agreeth best with this time.1

Item, It was statut and ordeanned, by reasoun of the great troubles latelie raised by defectioun of some frome the king's Majestie's lawfull authoritie, that certane brethrein be sent from the Assemblie to all erles, lords, barons, and other gentlemen, that have made defectioun, as said is, to draw them by all meanes possible to the lawfull obedience of his Majestie; and to certific them that disobey, the Assemblie will use the sword against them, which God hath committed unto them. According to this Act, commissioun was givin to some ministers to travell with the duke, Argile, Eglintoun, Cassils, Crawfurd, Ogilvie, Boyd, &c.

PENITENTS ORDERED.

The penitents compeering to submitt themselves to the discipline of the kirk, were ordeanned to repaire to their owne ministers respective, who would show to them the injunctions appointed by the Assemblie, to be fulfilled for signes of repentance unto the nixt Assemblie: and to compeere in linnen cloathes, bare-headed and bare-footed, the secund day of the nixt Assemblie, to receave farther injunctiouns; and everie one of them to bring a testimoniall frome their owne minister of their behaviour in the meane time. Others compeering in linnen cloathes, bare-headed and bare-footed, with testimonialls from their ministers, or testificatioun of their ministers there present, that they have fulfilled the injunctiouns layed upon them, were remitted againe to their owne ministers respective, to be receaved to the societie of the faithfull, according to the Act of the Generall Assemblie made the secund of Marche. 1559, in the secund sessioun of the said Assemblie. Others summouned by superintendents, commissioners, and ministers, often times called, but not compeering, it was ordeanned, that the sentence of excommunicatioun past against so manie as were excommunicated sould be intimated againe, and the caus declared wherefore; and that they proceed against others to the sentence of excommunication for their disobedience.

QUESTIONS DECIDED.

Mrs Johne Craig, Johne Row, and David Lindsay, ministers; Mr Thomas Makcalzeane, advocat, David Forrest, called the Generall, Mr James Lowsone, sub-principall of Aberdeen, were appointed to decide questions. They reported their decisions as followeth:—

- 1. It being asked, What is the jurisdiction of a superintendent; and how farre it sould be extended? the answere was remitted to the Booke of Discipline.
- 2. If a minister, exhorter, or reader, be at debate with anie other man, for anie injurie in word or deid, the action of injurie belongeth to the magistrat, the slaunder to the kirk.
- 3. If a minister, being sufficientlie provided at anie kirk, have anie other benefices, the modifiers of stipends sall determine whether they sall reape the fruits of the other benefices without sacriledge and thift, as they will answere before God.
- 4. It being asked, Whether it be Papistrie, when anie man professed in an abbey, sall be chosin ministrator or economus, by suffrages of these that have beene professed in the abbey, and by that election bruike the title? It was answered, The profession was Papistrie before; yitt the ministration of temporall fruicts is a part of the policie, and no-wise Papistrie.
- 5. If the husband cloke the adulterie of his wife, notoriouslie knowne, lett him be called; and if he be convicted, lett the rule have place, "Consentientes et agentes pari pæna puniantur."
- 6. The communioun may be ministred upon Pasche day, where superstition is removed.
- 7. That the magistrat be intreated to mak a law, that a man deflowing a virgin be constrained to marie her, or ellis to pay her dowrie, according to the discretion of the kirk.
- 8. If a woman, at the deliverie of her birth, alledgeth before the midwife that N. is the father of the childe, and being called before a judge, is readie to sweare the same, and the man als readie to sweare that he never had carnall deale with her, neutro credendum.
- 9. Ministers sall pray for the king's Majestie, according to the act made in this Assemblie, and for revenge of the regent's murther, notwithstanding they be charged by anie privat men to desist.
- 10. These that withhold the duetie of the kirk, wherby ministers are defrauded of their stipends, all things being first done which the civill order requireth, the kirk may proceed to excommunicatioun for their contempt.

- 11. Ministers provided to benefices and manses, lett them be admonished to make residence, under the paine of deprivatioun.
- 12. That letters of captioun be raised against Popish preests excommunicated for ministratioun of the sacraments, selling of the same, and wilfull continuing.

COMMISSIONS.

Commissioun was givin to some superintendents, ministers, barons, and burgesses, or to anie seven or eight of them, to conveene the 12th of this instant moneth of Julie, with continuatioun of dayes, so oft as the nobilitie of the realme sall conveene betwixt this and the nixt Generall Assemblie; and in name of the Assemblie, present to the nobilitie articles, supplicatiouns, complaints, suche as the Generall Assemblie hath alreadie penned and delivered to them, or sall heerafter be delivered; to require answere and redresse; to assist, concurre, and consent, to all and whatsoever sall be treated in the said conventioun, tending to the setting fordward of the glorie of God, and maintenance of true religioun, and of the king's Majestie's authoritie; and also to tak cognitioun in all and whatsoever complaints, supplicatiouns, and requests, speciallie remitted to them by this Assemblie: And whatsoever sall be done by them in the premisses to report the same in the nixt Assemblie. Commissioun was givin to Mr Robert Pont, commissioner of Murrey, with assistance of the kirk-sessioun of Elgine, to proceed, after due admonitiouns, to excommunicatioun against Patrik Bishop of Murrey.

COMMISSIONERS CONTINUED.

Mr Robert Pont, commissioner of Murrey, and Mr Andrew Hay, commissioner of Cliddisdaill, craved to be disburthenned of their commissioun, but were requested to continue till the nixt Assem blie. Ministers hunted not in these times for the offices of superintendents and commissioners, farre lesse for the plenarie power of bishops.

PENSIONS DISCHARGED.

The Assemblie discharged all and sindrie assignations and pensions granted by the Assemblie during their will, and ordeaneth the collectors of the kirk to intromett therewith heerafter; and to raise inhibitiouns against these who heertofor have had anie suche assignatiouns or pensiouns, except that which is assigned to the king's Majestie's hous allanerlie. And this to be intimated to the lords senators of the Sessioun of Justice, with requeist that no letters be granted by them to anie person having assignatioun of pensioun out of the thrids of the kirk, contrare to the tenor of this act.

THE QUEEN'S FACTION HINDERED TO HOLD THEIR PARLIAMENT.

The regent's first care is to hinder the parliament appointed to be holdin at Linlithquo the sixt of August. The king's lieges were charged to be at Linlithquo the thrid of August, with provisioun of twentie dayes' victuall. He sent to the captan of the castell for artillerie. He refused, pretending he would rather doe his diligence to stay the shedding of Scottish blood than to farther it. The regent cometh, notwithstanding, to Linlithquo, so the duke, Huntlie, the queen's lieutenants, and all their confederats, were disappointed.

THE GARISON LYING AT BRECHIN DISCOMFITED.

The Erle of Huntlie came no nearer than Brechin. He had placed an hundreth and three score waged souldiours there, and charged the inhabitants to provide victuals for some thowsands, against the tenth of August. The regent, with advice of the lords, determined to prevent the day, and surprize the Erle of Crawfurd, Lord Ogilvie, and Sir James Balfour, together with the band of souldiours lying at Brechin. Patrik Lord Lindsey, William Lord Ruthven, and James Halvburton, Proveist of Dundie, were sent before with the choicest men of Dundie and Perth. They made good speed; but approaching to Brechin, they moderated their pace, to refreshe themselves for an assault. So the bruite of their comming prevented them. Ogilvie and Sir James Balfour being in the toun, after they had exhorted the captan and the souldiours to be of good courage, and promised to returne with Huntlie within certane dayes, with new forces for their releefe, retired themselves over the Mounth. They keeped beyond the day appointed, but gott no succour, except a letter invented by Sir James Balfour, and convoyed, as it were sent from Huntlie to the duke, wherin Huntlie is brought in, writting to the duke, that according to their appointment, he had drawin the adverse partie to these bounds, to the effect the purpose he knoweth might be performed with the greater ease in their absence: that he sall not faile to hold them doing in that countrie, yea, if it were to give them battell: that howsoever it fall he needeth not to care, if the peremptour be weill handled: that he feareth nothing but their suddane retreat: that if they passe by Dundie or Perth, he sall have some on their tailes, that they sall not find suddane passage: that the man in the craig (meaning Grange) will keep his promise. Albeit this letter was craftilie devised, to encurage their garisoun, and to terrifie the regent and his forces, vitt did the regent persist. He sent the Erle of Morton after the first forces, who came to Brechin with eight hundreth horse the day after. He sent backe the men of Lennox and Renfrew, incace anie invasioun were made out of Argile upon their countries, and came him self to Brechin the thrid day. The gentlemen of the countrie about repaired to him. His forces amounted to the number of seven thowsand men. The souldiours had takin the steeple, or fled to the Erle of Marr's loodging for their defence; perceaving themselves destitut of all succour promised, randered themselves. Captan Cowtes, Captan Mure, and threttie of their souldiours, were hanged. Captan Wemes, becaus this was the first knowne fault, and was induced to it by the Laird f Grange, captan of the castell of Edinburgh, was pardouned, but ynned. Huntlie being within twentie myle, labouring to gather orces, but finding few willing to assist him, fled with speed to his wne countrie.

TWO PROCLAMATIONS.

At this time there were two proclamations made at Brechin; the ne discharging, under paine of death, that anie man call in quesioun the king's authoritie: another answering to the Erle of Huntlie's calumneis, who had alledged that the Erle of Lennox was sworne Englishman, and had professed obedience to a forrane prince. It was declared that he was a Scotish man, borne of an ncient and noble hous, and of the royall blood of the surname: hat his hous had continued longer, and of greater antiquitie at the state of an erledome, then the spotted houses of them that spread hese shamefull lees and slaunders against him: that he was never worne subject to anie prince in earth, preassed or burthenned to nake faith or promise prejudiciall to his allegiance owed to the king and crowne of Scotland, but ever stood in assured hope and espeance to recover his owne rowme: that how soone God had putt an end to the furie of these that ruled in the minoritie of the queene, ne obteaned a lawfull and honorable restitutioun of the pretended and partiall processe of forfaulture led against him by his ancient unfreinds, the time of their furie, to the which the said Erle of Huntie voted; whose just forfaulture can not be so honestlie wiped away in the consciences of men, considering the wicked and detestable condition by which he obteaned his restitutioun, as to be a partner of the horrible murther of the king, the king's decrest father; a procurer of the pretended divorce of the said erle's owne sister; and a consenter to the unlawfull mariage of the queen, the king's mother, with Bothwell, the husband of another, and the cheefe executer of the murther of the king, her owne husband, then recentlie perpetrated. This declaration was printed by Robert Leckprevick.

A BRUITE OF A CONSPIRACIE AGAINST THE CITICENS OF EDINBURGH.

The regent returned to Stirline the fifteenth of August. Du ing his absence in the north, the duke, Hereis, Lochinvar, Phairn hirst, and the captan of the castell, intended, as was bruited, to su prize Edinburgh at unawars, and to have hanged over their own stairs the principall citicens who stood in defence of the king's ar thoritie. Whether this bruite rose of the fained letter above mer tiouned, writtin by Huntlie to the duke, or otherwise, it is unce tane; but the bailliffes and counsell, and honest citicens, upon ac vertisement from the regent, conveened; and ordeaned that upo paine of five punds they sould be readie at the knell of the con moun bell, and beating of the drumme, to repaire to the bailliffe loodgings, to receave their directiouns; and that everie housholds sould give up the names and number of strangers loodging i his hous, and what weapons they had, under the pain of death These ordinances were proclamed the 15th day of August. The sent likewise two bailliffes, and some of the counsell, to the castell to enquire at the captan if he was partner in the conspiracie; bu he denied.

THE CASTELL OF DOWN BESIEGED AND RANDERED.

The regent went from Stirline to the castell of Downe, to be siege it. It was kept by the servants of the Lord of Sanct Colme's Inche, a false and feeble tratour to the good regent, a shame to the Stewarts. He was for the time in the castell of Edinburgh. The castell of Downe was randered after three dayes siege.

A COUNCELL OF THE REBELS HOLDIN IN ATHOLL.

In this meane time the regent sent one of his servants, called Johne Moone, to the Queen of England. But he was executed for creit practising with the king's enemies, for receaving their letters carie, and for discovering to them sindrie secreits which were mmitted to his credit and trust. He had sindrie letters directed the king's mother from the Erle of Atholl, Secretar Lethington, e old Ladie Setoun, and diverse others; for a little before, there as a great counsell holdin in Atholl, two or three dayes, where le duke, his two sonnes, the Bishop of Sanct Andrewes, Mr Gawin fammiltoun, Abbot of Kilwinning, Argile, Huntlie, Atholl, Lethoton, and Sir James Balfour, everie man accused another. Lethigton layed suche a plaister to that wound of variance as he could est devise for the time. He exhorted them to continue conant in that course till the last of September, or foure dayes after; romising to them, upon his credit, assistance of strangers. Lethagton, the Pryor of Coldinghame, and another brother, were sumnouned to underly the law, but compeered not, and therefore were enounced rebels. When he perceaved maters to fall out so unleasantlie, he sent sindrie letters to the Scotish queen, to be subcrived and sent to the King of France, the King of Spaine, the mperour, the Gwises, to declare to them her boundage, and that der caus could never be heard. Wherupon they dealt by their ampassaders with the Queen of England, to this effect. The Queen of England sent Secretar Cicil and Sir Walter Melmant to confer vith the Scotish queene. Her desire was to have her caus reasouned again. It is likelie that, in these letters was craved assistunce of some forces for her restitutioun; wherupon the secretar promised, at this famous councell holdin in Atholl, assistance before the fourth of October. This famous councell was called the Councell of Ballach. It was their purpose to hinder the convention of the estats indicted to be holdin in October.

THE ERLE OF SUSSEX DEMOLISHETH CASTELS AND TOWRES IN THE WEST BORDERS.

The Erle of Sussex entered in Scotish bounds at the west border, the 22d day of August, and remained in the countrie till the 28th. He demolished the castells of Annand, Howdan, Dumfreis, Calaverok; the towres of Cowhill, Kinnall, and some others, that he mainteaned the Queene of England's rebels.

PROMISE OF ASSISTANCE IF THE MASSE BE ERECTED.

About the same time, there came from Flanders a little pink and in it two gentlemen, with Mr Johne Hamiltoun, called the Skirmisher, from Duke D'Alva. After they had remained certadayes, and had tried the deepth of Montrose haven, and of certaother places, they returne to Flanders. All the comfort the brought with them to the rebels was, that if they would erect the masse, and mainteane the public exercise of the Roman religious they sould nather laike men nor money, and that upon the Pop expenses. So wrote Sir James Balfour to the Laird of Burlie The Ladie Northumberland was directed ambassader, to bring better tidings, and with her, the wise Lord Seton.

MONSIEUR VIRACK RETURNETH.

About the end of August came from France first a pinnage, and after a ship, with that famous ambassader, Monsieur Virack, a no table pyrat. He brought with him oranges, rasins, bisket, bread powder, and bullet, to furnishe the castell of Dumbartane.

THE ERLE OF SUSSEX SUSPECTED.

About the middest of September, the Erle of Sussex sent diverse missives to the queen's favourers, bearing in effect that their mastresse stood in good cace, with manie protestations of upright dealing. Whether these letters were begged, or freelie sent, was then uncertane, but his dealing was suspected by honest men.

QUEEN ELIZABETH'S PROMISE.

After this came letters from Mr Randulph, willing him to assure he lords mainteaning the king's authoritie that it behoved the queene, his mastresse, to enter in communing with the Scotish queene, but had promised to provide sufficientlie for the preservatioun of the young king.

MR JOHNE KELLOE'S DEATH AND CONFESSION.

Mr Johne Kello, minister of Spott, suffered at Edinburgh, upon the scaffold, the fourth of October, for the murthering of his wife.1 He aggredged his owne fault before the multitude, and desired the people not to measure the truthe of God's Word by the lives or falls of the preachers; and as the profane were prompt to speek of his fall, so his repentance might move them, and humble their hearts. He came not compelled or apprehended, by the hands of justice, but was perswaded by freinds to flee to some other countrie. Yitt was he willing rather to glorifie God in his death, than that his life sould be a slaunder and discredite to the truthe. He confessed that his wife gave him no just caus of offence; and if things past could be amended, there was no flesh he would choose rather to be associated with in mariage than with her. As for the practise of magick, he tooke God and his angels to witnesse that he never had anie ingresse in magick, nor was farther curious to understand, than God had manifested in His Word. Becaus his first ingresse in the Kirk of God was unfained, and without hypocrisie, to sett furth His glorie, and publishe the truthe, he had assurance in God's merceis, that albeit He had suffered him to fall, yitt he was not even destituted of confort to the end. Becaus he was not able to stretche out his voice to the eares of the whole people there conveened, he said he would leave a short memoriall against himse of his owne offence, wherin the whole ground and proceedings a discovered, which I have heere subjoyned; which he also uttered the audience of so manie as could heare him. Then he desired a good Christians to forgive him the slaunder, speciallie the preache of the Word, whose doctrine and labours Satan had laboure through him to deface. He desired all good Christians to incate earnestlie upon God, to continue his favour and grace with him to the end. Then he prostrat himself upon his face, and prayed a ferventlie, that these that heard mourned.

THE MEMORIALL OF MR JOHNE KELLO HIS OFFENCE.

"I had first a little portioun of money in myne owne hands which I bestowed in Linlithquo upon profite, and did wickedlie re ceave some gaines and filthie ocker1 thereby,—a thing (alas!) ove muche used in this countrie. This maner of doing kindled in me: desire of avarice, which the Apostle Paul, not without caus, termet! the root of all evill. And therafter, after a certane time that I had bestowed it in the toun of Spott, I bought a portioun of land there for the which I wedsett lands at Linlithquo, and contracted farther Then, being disappointed of the ordinar provisioun for preaching of the Word, and not weill intreated of them whose duetie was to have takin care for me, I entered into a mervellous perplexitie of minde, and opened a readie window to the tentations of the enemie. For I reasouned with myself, that being single, without a partie, I might the more easilie spend my time; and nixt, incace I would marie therafter, I might joyne myself with suche a one as sould have freinds in the countrie, to mainteane me in my possession, and procure my farther advancement.

"Thir were the glistering promises wherewith Satan, after his accustomed maner, deluded my senses, and prevailed so in my corrupted minde, that the space of fortie dayes together I did await onlie upon the opportunitie to putt my wicked desire in executioun.

itt sometimes, having the commoditie offered, God strake suche rrors in my heart, that I was not able to performe my intent. nmediatlie therafter, I was visited with sicknesses and great disases, which I am assured were the messingers of God to move my eart to his obedience. But that which sould have served to abtract my minde from the conceaved impietie, I abused most rickedlie to bring my purpose to effect; for, under pretence of icknesse, I laboured secreitlie to have takin her away by poysoun. And when I perceaved that the cleannesse of her stomacke did reect that violence, I was alwayes preassed fordward by the tentatioun of the enemie, till I had performed that cruell fact with my hands against her who, in the verie death, could not beleeve I bare her unie evill will, but was glade, as she then said, to depart, if her leath could doe me ather vantage or pleasure.

"But the farther that I doe remember of her, the more intolerable is the burthein of my displeasure, which, notwithstanding, I daboured by hypocrisic to have coloured. For, a certan space before her death, I did mak my testament, and therin appointed her to have the whole cure of my geir, and upbringing of my childrein, that no man sould suspect me to be author of that wickednesse which I had conceaved; and immediatlic before, did spread abroad a rumour of her, that she was tempted terriblic in the night, that it might therafter appeare her self to have beene the author and murtherer of her owne self. Likewise, after I had strangled her, I left the keyes within, and escaped by a backe doore of my studie, which was not accustomed to be opened.\(^1\) And when the bruite did arise that she had murthered her self, (for the good opinioun that everie man had, als weill of my doctrine as conversation, mad no man to suspect my innocencie,) I did faine myself onlie to be solicite for her salvatioun; and to dispute with them that came the comfort me, whether it were possible that she who had put than din her self could be under the protectioun of God; and whether anie man might suppose, that being under so terrible tentatious she could once sob for God's merceis. And that my affectioun to ward her might appeare the greater, I did so farre abuse the light of my owne conscience, as to denie, in plaine termes, there was a God, who suffered so innocent a creature give place to the tentation and rage of Satan; which things I past about, most craftilicate conceale.

"He stranglit hir in hir awin chalmer, and therefter closit the ordinar dur that was within the hous for his awin passage, and sa fynelie semit to cullor that purpose efter that he had done it, that immediatlie he past to the kirk, and in presence of the people maid sermon as thoght he had done na sik thing. And when he was returnit hayme, he broght sum nychtbours in to his hous to vissie his wyffe, and callit at the ordinar dur, but na answer was maid; then he past to another bak passage with the nychtbours, and that was found opin, and she hinging stranglit at the ruf of the hous."

"Yit the good providence of God did, by little and little, bring all things to light, and me to that acknowledgement of my owne offence, that I desire nothing more under God, than to be separated from the contagioun of this wicked flesh, in which I have so offended God and dishonoured his name. And, indeid, there was no small support in the mouth of some faithfull brethrein to bring me to this confessioun of my owne offence. But above all, Mr Andrew Simsone, minister of Dumbar, did so livelie ripe up the inward cogitations of my heart, and discover my minde so plainlie, that I perswaded myself God spake in him. And besides other notable conjectures which he truelie deduced before my eyes, he remembred me of a dreame which, in my great sicknesse, did appearandlie present the self. 'Brother,' said he, 'I doe remember. when I visite you in time of sicknesse, yee did open unto me this visioun: that yee were caried by a grim man before the face of a terrible judge, and, to escape his furie, yee did precipitat yourself in a deepe river. When his angels and messingers did follow you with two-edged swords, and ever when they strooke at you, yee did declyne and jowke in the water, whill in the end, by a way unknowne to you, yee did escape. This visioun I doe so interprete; that yee are the author yourself of this cruell murther, then conceaved in your heart; and are careid before the terrible judgements of God in your owne conscience, which now standeth in God's presence to accuse you. The messinger of God is the justice of the countrie, before which yee sall be presented. The water wherin yee stood is that vaine hypocrisic of your owne, and fained blaspheming of God's name, whereby yee purpose to colour your impietie. Your deliverance sall be spirituall: for, albeit yee have otherwise deserved, yitt God sall pull you furth of the bands of Satan, and caus you confesse your offence, to his glorie, and confusioun of the enemie. Nather doe yee in anie wise distrust in God's promises; for yee sall find no sinne almost committed by the reprobat, but you sall find the childrein of God to be fallin in the like. And yitt, the same merceis of God abide you, if from your heart you acknowledge your offence, and desire at God pardoun.'

"At this time did God move my heart to acknowledge the horrour of my owne offence, and how farre Satan had obteaned victorie over me. But as the flesh is carefull of the self, I discoursed within my owne heart what thing ratherest to doe for my owne releefe; of the which two necessiteis occurred; ather to abandoun this countrie, or to remaine. If I left the countrie, and accepted the deid upon me, I sould live in perpetual terrour, and have the marke of Cain upon me; besides that I sould leave a perpetuall infamie upon the Kirk of God, wherof before I was compted a member, albeit unworthie. So did I conclude to remaine. But heere had I the battell more strong with my self: for I thought to have dissimulat my fact before the world, and did enter in this argument, that sufficient it was to acknowledge my offence before God, nather was it necessar to publishe my owne shame before men; and did so flatter my self with this reasoun, whill at last, 'What if I be presented before a judge, where confessioun of the truthe sall be required? Sall I not onlie live in murther, but heape sinne upon sinne, and confirme my damnatioun with perjurie? Sall the love of this wretched life so shoot the doores of my heart, that I sall never returne unfainedlie toward my God? Sall I, miserable creature! leave an immortall slaunder upon the Kirk of God, for the which Christ, the Sonne of God, gave his life? God forbid!' And so did I conclude myself to make publict confessioun of my offence, and VOL. III.

present me to receave punishment, which cannot be sufficientlie imagined for my deservings. And, indeid, this farre I doe witnesse, that I was evidentlie troubled and diseased, not onlie in minde, but in bodie also, ever whill I resolved with myself to take this journey in hand; and sensyne I have beene at suche rest of both, that I am at a quietnesse with God in my conscience, and have suche strenth of bodie, as I had not this long time agoe."

A PARLIAMENT HOLDIN.

Great paines were takin for staying the holding of the parliament in October, speciallie by these who were guilty of the murther of the king and the good regent. By the mediation of the Queen of England, who had promised to the Spanish and Frenche ambassaders to heare both parteis, and to tak up the controversie, if it were possible, they obteaned that no act sould be made at this parliament, which was to be holdin the tenth of October; and, indeid, nothing was done in it but the regent his authoritie confirmed. The captan of the castell was required to deliver the sword, the scepter, and the crowne, which of ancient custome have beene borne in time of parliament. At the first he gave doubtfull answere, but in end he utterlie refused, supposing by that meane to have hindred the holding of the parliament. But the estats judged it no more sinne to hold a parliament without these ceremoneis, than a bishop needeth to make scruple to preache without his rotchet, myter, and ring. Assurance was granted to the rebells, favourers of the queen, for two moneths. The parliament was prorogued to the 14th of Januar.

THE REBELS SEEKE THE AIDE OF FORRAINERS.

Notwithstanding of the assurance, the rebells solicited the ¹ According to the penalty appointed in such cases, he was hanged, his body was afterwards burnt to ashes, and all his goods were forfeited to the crown. Spanish and Frenche ambassaders to procure some forces for restitution of the Scottish queene. The Pope was desired to assist with money, becaus he could not convenientlie send forces so farre off. The Pope sent one to trie the power of the Popish factioun in this countrie. He finding them too weake for so great an interprise, and the rebells not to agree in that point, went to England. There, finding the Popish factioun stronger, he stirred up the subjects against the queene, and caus affixe the Pop's bull, absolving them from their oath of obedience.

PICTURES AND FAINED PROPHECEIS.

About this time a present was sent, as was supposed, from the witches of Atholl to the Scottish queene; a prettie hart horne, not exceeding in quantitie the palme of a man's hand, covered with gold, and artificiallie wrought. In the head of it were curiouslie engraven the armes of Scotland; in the neather part of it a throne, and a gentlewoman sitting in the same, in a rob royall, with a crowne upon her head. Under her feet was a rose environned with a thistle. Under that were two lyons, the one bigger, the other lesser. The bigger lyon held his paw upon the face of the other, as his lord and commander. Beneath all were writtin these words, "Fall what may fall, the lyon sall be lord of all." At this time was forged this rude ryme:

"The howlett sall lead the beare to his baine.

The Queene of England sall dee the twelve yeer of her raigne.

The court of England that is so wantoun,

Sall shortlie be brought to confusion."

Such propheceis smelled of treasoun. The like was spread before the murther of the good regent.

MR KNOX STRIKIN WITH APOPLEXIE.

Mr Knox was stricken with a kinde of apoplexie, whereby the perfyt use of his tongue was hindered. The bruite went through Scotland and England that he was become the most deforme creature that ever was seene: that his face was turned awry to his necke: that he would never preache nor speeke againe. But within few dayes he preached, and his enemeis proved leers.

THE REBELS BECOME INSOLENT.

The bruite of the appointment of the two queens daylie encreassed. The rebells affirmed boldlie that she would be restored to her authoritie before Christmasse, in esperance wherof they were emboldened to committ whatsoever enormitie pleased them. It was thought that they were the more confident, that the Erle of Sussex, the Queen of England's lieutenant in the north, favoured the Scottish queene, not altogether despairing of her restitution. The posts went frequentlie from the castell of Edinburgh to the north, where Lethington was.

GRANGE RESCUETH VIOLENTLIE A MURTHERER OUT OF THE JAYLE.

Sir William Kirkaldie of Grange was a long time suspected by manie. Yitt his former conversation preserved his credite with manie, till suche time as his insolencie bursted furth so openlie, that it could not be excused. Johne Kirkaldie, sonne to Patrik Kirkaldie, father-brother to Sir William, receaved some injurie in the toun of Dumfermline by one George Durie. A gentleman called Henrie Seton was in his companie. This gentleman having ended his bussinesse in Edinburgh, whill he was readie to enter in a boat at Leith, was invaded by six of Sir William his servants. First the batoun was presented to him. He, enraged at suche an indignitie, made him for defence, and hurt one of the six. They, unmyndfull of the charge givin to them, left the battoun, and fell to sharpe weapouns, and cruellie murthered him, after that the cable of an anker had takin his feete from him. They preassed by speed of foote to escape to the castell of Edinburgh; vitt one of the number, called Fleeming, was apprehended, and committed to the jayle of Edinburgh. The captan bade treat him weill, for he would not suffer him to be punished for obeying his commandement. The rest came over at the North Loche, upon the yee, and were receaved by the captan. He threatened to shoot at anie would come neere them. The deacouns of the crafts were easilie perswaded to assist him to his wicked interprise. The cannons of the castell were mounted, and a ramme made, to mak open doores. At supper time, between six and seven at night, upon Thursday the 21st of December, a companie cometh from the castell to the tolbuith, without noise or clamour. The passages whereby men might have assembled to hinder their enterprise were stopped by armed men standing with culverings, picks, and other long weapons. The darknesse of the night covered their faces. The captan himself, and the Lord Hume, keeped the utter warde, above the Upper Trone, that none might come betwixt them and the castell. They provided also that none sould have accesse to the commoun bell. The Laird of Drylaw, cheefe leader of the band, required open doores. The jaylour refusing, the ramme was sett to, which quicklie made them open. So the hous of justice was violated, the murtherer violentlie rescued out of the hands of the magistrats; and to give the regent, who was then in the toun, a defyance in his face, nyne great cannons were discharged. No harme was done, but that Johne Wallace' hous was shott through, and a barn in the Cannogate.

MR KNOX DECLAMETH AGAINST GRANGE.

Upon the Sabboth day following, to witt, the 24th of December, Mr Knox, in his sermon, affirmed, that in his dayes he never saw so slanderous, so malapert, so fearefull, and so tyrannous a fact. "For," said he, "if the committer had beene a man without God, a throt-cutter, one that had never knowne the workes of God, it would have moved me no more than other ryots and enormities which my eyes have seene the prince of this world, Satan, to raise by his instruments. But to see the starres fall from heaven, and a man of knowledge committ so manifest treasoun, what godlie heart cannot lament, tremble, and feare? God be mercifull! for the exemple is terrible, and we have all need earnestlie to call to God, that we be not led into tentatioun; but speciallie to deliver us from the companie of the wicked; for, within these few yeeres, men would have looked for other fruicts than have budded out of that man."

GRANGE HIS LETTER TO MR CRAIG.

The captan was so offended with this reprooffe, that both God and civill honestie were forgot with him. He sent his servant after noone to Mr Craig, with a letter writtin as followeth, which he delivered to him sitting in the pulpit:—

"This day, Johne Knox, in his sermoun, called me, openlie, a murtherer and a throat-cutter, wherin he hath spokin farther than he is able to justifie. For I take God to witnesse, if it was my minde that that man's blood sould have beene shed, of whom he calleth me the murtherer. And the same God I desire, from the bottome of my heart, to powre out his vengeance suddanlie upon him or me, which of us two hath beene most desirous of innocent blood. This I desire you, in God's name, to declare openlie to the people. At Edinburgh castell, the 24th of December 1570."

Mr Craig answered, that he would read nothing in that place, without the knowledge and consent of the kirk. This dart being shott, the force of it vanished; yitt the bruit went to more countreis than one.

GRANGE'S COMPLAINT TO THE KIRK-SESSION OF EDINBURGH.

The captan, to utter his greefe yitt farther, directed a complaint to the sessioun of the kirk of Edinburgh, the 28th of December. He declared how his cousin-german, Johne Kirkaldie, being charged to compeere at a justice-court in Dumfermline, the 11th of this instant moneth of December, to passe upon an assise of certan persons for the slaughter of umquhile Johne Whyte, in Kirkaldie, and repairing to the toun of Dumfermline in peaceable maner, was invaded by George and Lawrence Durie, brethren to the Laird of Durie, and umquhile Henrie Seton, his servant, with their complices: that whill he was going to the kirk of Dumfermline, he was buffetted ignominiouslie with the fist of the said George: and in the mean time, the said Henrie and the rest drew their swords, and had slaine the said Johne Kirkaldie, if the proveist had not come and sindered them: that the said Henrie had latelie crossed his servant's way in the streets of Edinburgh, with jesting and mocking countenance: that when he sent some of his servants to Leith, to beate him with a battoun, he inhibited them to draw a sword: that the hous of Durie had done manie injuries to him and his: that the cheefe of that hous was the cheef author of the death of his goodsir, the Laird of Raith, and of the ruine of his hous: that since that time they have continuallie troubled his posteritie and freinds, in their righteous titles, native rownes, and old possessions. The rest of the heads of the complaint may be collected out of the answeres which Mr Knox made by word and by writt.

MR KNOX HIS ANSWERE BY WORD.

After that Grange's complaint was read in the sessioun, the copie of it was sent to Mr Knox; for he came not furth but upon the Lord's day before noone to preache, by reasoun of the infirmitie of his bodie and sickenesse. He answered, he sould send his answere in writt the nixt Thursday to the sessioun. Becaus there were some lees so manifest that he could not with safe conscience passe them with silence, the nixt preaching day he requested the presenters not to be offended, and to desire the sessioun not to be offended with him although he defended his owne innocencie, seeing he was a preacher. Which being granted, the nixt Lord's day in sermoun he said, "I am compelled, and that by impudent and manifest leers, to crave of you, loving auditors, as yee will answere to God, to beare true and faithfull witnessing. I am greevouslie accused, as a bill delivered to the sessioun of my kirk doeth proport. And, therefore, to you, as to my competent judges, have I my refuge, desiring you vitt once again, as yee will answere before the justice-seate of God, to spaire nothing of the veritie. Is there anie of you that heard me, in this publict place, call the Laird of Grange, now captan of the castell of Edinburgh, a cruell murtherer, an open throat-cutter, and one whose nature I had long knowne to be blood-thristie? &c. Or was not the conclusioun of my just reprehensioun and complaint directed to the plaine contrare end? I accused indeid that unjust and cruell murther; I affirmed the violating of the hous of justice to be treasoun; and, finallie, I compleaned, that the like enormitie and pernitious exemple I never saw in Scotland. Not but I had seene murther and rebellioun before: yea, I have seene magistrats gainstood, and the supreme magistrats of the crowne besieged in their owne tolbuith; and I have seene condemned persons violentlie reft from the gallows and gibbet. But none of all these forenamed can be compared to this last attemptat. For if the maisters and authors of this last ryott had beene knowne before to have beene open throat-cutters, bloodthristie men, and suche as had beene voide of the true feare of God, I would have beene no more moved at this time, than I have beene at other times before. But to see stars fall from heaven: to see men who have felt als weill God's judgements as merceis, in a part; and to see men of whom all godlie hearts have had a good opinioun-to see, I say, suche men so farre careid away, that both God and man are not onlie forgott, but also publictlie despised, is both dolorous and fearefull to be remembred. For I have knowne that man in his greatest extremitie, when he might have sett himself at freedome by shedding of blood, at the counsell of sober men, he utterlie refused all suche crueltie, and tooke a hazard to the flesh most fearefull; which God notwithstanding blessed, having a respect to the simplicitie of his heart. And therefore then I said, and vitt I say, that this exemple in him is the most terrible comple that ever I saw in Scotland. I know that some have ade other report. But in their face, I say, that of their father in devill they have learned to lee, wherin if they continue without repentance, they sall burne in hell." This muche being spokin is pulpit, he made a generall answere in writt as followeth:—

MR KNOX HIS ANSWERE IN WRITT.

"To the long narrative preceeding the complaint of the said Sir Villiam Kirkaldie unto your wisdoms, and his accusatioun of me, answere nothing, save onlie this, that his owne confessioun conicteth him to be a murtherer in heart, before that his servants committed murther in deed. For his owne confessioun is, that he, noved by diverse misbehaviours of umquhile Henrie Seton, sent ertan of his servants to Leith, to have dung the said Henrie with battoun; which directioun and charge, I avow, was murther beore God, before anie blood was shed. For our Maister, Jesus Christ, and his Apostle Johne, pronounce the hatred of the heart to be murther before God: yea, Johne affirmeth that whoso loveth not his brother is a manslaver. The Apostle Paul affirmeth that love worketh not evil. And so, the charge to strike with a battoun, imported with it, from the first conception therof, murther, which hath burst furth, to the knowledge of the world, in moe sorts than one. I utterlie denie that I have done or said anie thing in publict reprehensioun of the said Sir William, repugnant to the duetie of a faithfull pastor: yea, I feare not to affirme, that a true pastor nor a faithfull watcheman I had not beene, if I had keeped silence at so open a slaunder, and so proud contempt both of God and man. And this for summar answere to his whole complaint, refering the particulars to farther opportunitie. Where he compleaneth, that privie admonitiouns past not before, I answere, that nather to him nor yitt to anie that in suche sort offendeth perteaneth privie admonitioun. But against so proud and manifest attemptats belongeth publict apprehensioun, that others may feare, according to the commandement of the Apostle Sanct Paul, 1 Tim.

v. Where he compleaneth that I called him open tratour, unme cifull murtherer, and a plain throat-cutter, and that I did expreshim by his name, giving the people to understand that I had ce tane knowledge, prooffe, and experience, of his nature and inclintioun to be bent to murther and bloodshed, &c., becaus that the part of his accusatioun and complaint is manifestlie false, and farre contrarious to my words, I omitt all answere and purgation of my self, that onlie excepted, which, in publict audience, I gav upon Sunday last. But, in my rigorous accusatioun, (as it please the said Sir William to terme the publict discharge of my cor science, and duetie to God, to his kirk, and to him, then, and yit alas! I feare, sleeping in sinne;) that my publict denunciatioun his defectioun, I say, is anie wise contrarious to the acts, ordinances and practises of this, or anie other weill-reformed kirk, or yit against the rule of Christian charitie, I utterlie deny. For in thi kirk, since the erecting of it, this order hath beene observed, tha upon the notorietie of suche enormiteis committed within our own bodie, publict declaratioun hath beene made to the whole people as I suppose your wisdoms doe weill enough remember and under stand. And, therefore, I superseed anie farther probatioun in tha head, and also farther apologie or defence of my self, unlesse you wisdoms please give me new commandement. And so for conclusioun, I say, the said Sir William most unjustlie accuseth me, who have done nothing in all that action beside the duetie of a faithful pastor. That I am flesh and blood, and clothed with manlie pas siouns, as he alledgeth, I never denied. But that ather flesh or blood impired in me, in rebooking his manifest impietie, that I utterlie denie, praying God that yee may deale with him so faithful lie and so uprightlie, that yee communicat not with his sinnes but that it may please God so potentlie to worke with you, that he may be brought to the deepe consideratioun of his fearefull defectioun, and so to unfained repentance, by continuance wherof, he may escape the vengeance pronounced, and that inevitablie sal fall upon all impenitent persons. And this for answere, in gene rall, being readie (as habilitie of bodie will serve or suffer, and If it please you to command me) to answere everie heed in parti-

"Yours to command in God,

" JOHNE KNOX."

GRANGE HIS SECUND BILL TO THE SESSIOUN.

Upon the declaratioun made in the pulpit, the captan sent a new bill to the session, the tenor wherof followeth:—

"Right reverend ministers, elders, and deacons of the Kirk of Edinburgh, unto your godlie wisdoms humblie meanes and shewes I, your servitour, and one of your brethrein, William Kirkaldie of Grange, knight: Forsameikle as I have this day eight-dayes a complaint upon Johne Knox, minister, tuiching a part of his sermon made by him that day concerning me, which, as I was informed by diverse that heard the same, was takin, reported, and understood by them, and manie others, to be spokin to my great injurie, slaunder, and defamatioun, as at more lenth is conteaned in my said complaint: Neverthelesse, I understand that the said Johne Knox, minister, upon Sunday last, declared in his sermoun, the meaning of his words and intent to have beene other than they were takin by manie; and uttered in lament, and for amendment of my fault, and not to my hurt, injurie, or defamatioun. I am content to give place to the truthe and credite of his owne declaration, and so quiett myself in hope of the mercie of God, and not to unquiett your wisdoms or him, by further pursute of the complaint. Onlie desiring, if it please him and you, for satisfactioun of suche as understood and reported his speeches otherwise than he declared, to give his said declaratioun in writt, otherwise referring the same to God, and the end of the same mater which will declare. And your wisdoms' answere I beseeke."

MR KNOX HIS ANSWERE BEFORE THE SESSION.

As Mr Knox was going to the sessioun of the kirk, to answere more particularlie to Grange his complaint, this other bill was presented to him by two elders. When it was read, he said, "I wil goe to the sessioun, and give my owne answere." So, creeping upon his club, he came in before them, and, standing, said, "This day was assigned to me, to answere the complaint of Sir William Kirkaldie of Grange, knight. But becaus, as his letter proports, he is not willing to persue the same, whatsoever pleaseth you pleaseth me; for, God knoweth, I have never beene an enemie to that man. And, therefore, his pursute ceasing, my defence sall cease. But two things I must protest and require of your wisdoms: First, That this my easinesse to be entreated, nather prejudge myself, nor anie of my brethrein, fellow-preachers. For what it is to accuse a minister for discharging of his office, I suppose yee understand. The secund is, That yee suffer not the gentleman sleep longer in his sinne, ensnared by Satan. It is your duetie to have compassion on him. Therefore, Superintendent, I pray you (for the mater cheefelie tuicheth you) be faithfull and stout in your office. Admonish him of his offence committed against God, against the partie, against the kirk, and cheeflie against the magistrat."

MR KNOX INSISTETH IN HIS REBOOKE.

The Superintendent of Lothiane was directed by the sessioun to the castell. It was bruited in the eares of some, that the captan had satisfied the superintendent in all things, and would satisfie the kirk as they would command. In the meane time went another bruite, that Mr Knox had recanted, and asked the captan mercie. The Sabboth day following, Mr Knox in his sermoun declared the nature of true repentance; how it brought with it humiliation without excuse, and how true humiliation procured of God delay of plagues, at least for a time. This he illustrated by lias reproving Achab for the slaughter of Naboth, for that he aproved the fact when it was done. This sermon exasperated the aptan. He came to the sermon the Lord's day following, as he had ot done before almost a whole yeere, accompaneid with the cheefe nurtherers, and suche as had brokin up the jayle doore. Mr Knox prewarned proud contemners, that God's mercie apperteaned not o suche as with knowledge proudlie transgressed, and therafter nost proudlie mainteaned their transgression.

THE PROFESSORS OF THE WEST CAREFULL OF MR KNOX.

The captan conceaved a new displeasure. The bruite went that he Laird of Grange had sworne himself enemie to Johne Knox, and would slay him. Wherupon Glencarne, Uchiltrie, Cuningnamheid, William Cuningham of Caprinton, Barganie, Johne Lokhart of Barr, Hugh Wallace of Carnall, Johne Foullertoun of Dreghorne, Johne Cathcart of Carleton, Gilbert Kennedie of Daljuharne, Johne Neilson of Craigcaffie, Hugh Kennedie of Bennam, Thomas Kennedie of Lambie, directed a missive from Air, the thrid of Januar, signifeing to the captan, that they could hardlie be perswaded that he who had beene not a simple professor, but a defender of religioun, could be moved to doe anie harme to him, in whose protectioun and life standeth the prosperitie and increasse of religioun: protesting that the life and death of that man whom God had made both the first planter, and also the cheefe waterer of his kirk among us, was als deare and pretious to them as their owne lives and deaths; desiring also a declaration of his minde in that mater, with the bearer, whom they had directed to him with farther credite.

THE QUEENE OF ENGLAND'S ANSWERE TO THE REGENT'S LETTERS.

Soone after the parliament holdin in October, the Queene of England sent letters to the regent, desiring some noblemen to be sent, with commission for the king, to reasoun with the other par-tie, promising it sould not be prejudiciall to the king or his authoritie. Upon the 7th of December she wrote to the regent an an swere to the letters the Commendatare of Dumfermline had brough unto her, and declared unto her, so farre as time would permitt resolving no farther for the present than the commendatare sal informe them; referring farther answere to the comming of the commissioners, who were looked for to be there before this time. Her requeist was for the present, that the abstinence of hostilitie betwixt both parteis be keeped fullie for two moneths, seing the other partie hath agreed for two moneths. And, considering that this space of time, being alreadie weill spent, will not suffer the treatie of the commissioners, that there be a further abstinence agreed upon by both parteis, and that the same be extended to Marche following; praying them to advertise her of their resolutioun with speed, becaus the other partie agreed at the first time, that there sould be an appointment not onlie for two moneths, but also als long as it sould be thought meet in her judgement, as the commendatare did see, under their hands and seales.

THE QUEEN OF ENGLAND HER ANSWERE TO THE COMMENDATARE OF DUMFERMLINE HIS INSTRUCTIONS.

The queen's Majestie hath perused the instructions which he brought from the regent, and findeth in them diverse things worthie of consideratioun, which, without farther debating of them, cannot be weyghed as they import. And, therefore, her Majestie wished that some suche persons of that estat as have credit and acquaintance with these causes, might furthwith repaire hither for that purpose, with whom her Majestie will have farther and more particular conference upon these articles, as sall be fitt. And for the principall point, tuiching the restitutioun of their queene; considering that, by their sindrie answeres, als weill heertofore made as now at this time, it seemeth that, by their allegatiouns, their pretended caus in justice is to stay the same, her Majestie would that the regent, and others of the king's part, sould understand that she never in-ended, nor will grow in resolutioun therin, that sall appeare unto er to be against justice or otherwise, untill their caus may be hoorablic provided for to all purposes. And, therefore, whatsoever nev can make apparent to her Majestie, for their continuance and onservatioun, to be agreeable with justice, her Majestie will be eadie to understand the same, and therupon further doe as sall e to their satisfactioun, for the continuance of the part they hold. and if, percase, on the other side, they sall not be able to fortifie heir caus with suche evident reasouns as her Majestie may with onscience satisfie herself, and with honour answere to the world, then, neverthelesse, her Majestie, for the naturall love she beareth o the king, her owne kinsman, and good will she hath to the nopilitie on his part, and their associats, will leave no meanes to proride for all their safeteis. In both which cases, it is easilie to be seene how necessarie the presence of some fitt personages is to be sent from them, with whom her Majestie will treate to those ends, f they sall thinke good to send them; and, therefore, required the abbot, ather by himself or by his advertisement, to give knowledge of this her Majestie's answere to these noblemen with speed, that they may speedilie dispatche the commissioners sufficientlie authorized, to conferre with her Majestie in either case, so as, by no delay of time, the good intent her Majestie hath for them be hindered. And, considering the good opinioun her Majestie hath conceaved of the sinceritie and discretioun of the said abbot, she wished him to be present with suche as came for that purpose.

M.D.LXXI.

THE PRACTISES OF THE REBELS IN TIME OF ABSTINENCE.

Abstinence from hostilitie being agreed upon, and again renewed, yitt did not the rebels absteane from secreit and open practises. The captan of the castell, nourished in great esperance of the returning of the queene, spread a bruite, that the Queen of England had offered to him and for his caus, to Lethington, reparation of all losses that they or their freinds had susteanned. The death of the regent, the Erle of Morton, and Alexander Hume of Manderston, was contrived by Lethington and the captan, as was supposed; and it was suspected that the Lord Hume, who was in the castell, sould have been the executioner. Johne Cowper, appropriately, sould have been the executioner. Johne Cowper, appropriately, constantlie avouching it to be true. But the other, by moyen of freinds, escaped triell. In time of the abstinence, Pasle, Hous was takin from the Lord Sempill's servants by the duke's sonne, Claud Hammiltoun, and fortified with men and munition.

THE HOUSE OF PASLEY RANDERED.

After that the Erle of Morton and Mr James Makgill, Clerk o Register, were directed commissioners to England, and had entered in their journey the fyft of Februar, accompanied with twentie-four gentlemen, the regent went to Glasgow, where he appointed the lieges warned before by proclamatioun to meete him the 14th of The Erle of Glencarne, the Laird of Barganie, the Laird of Blaquhan, and their freinds, were appointed six dayes before to conveene secreitlie, and ly about the House of Pasley till the regent came, which was done. The Hammiltons gathering to their releefe, were driven backe, and some hurt. Upon Saturday, the 17th of Februare, the house was randered without promise or compositioun other than the regent's will undeclared. They were all brought to Glasgow. The gentlemen were delivered to the Laird of Minto, captan of the castell; the souldiours were committed to prison during the regent's will. Nyne or ten of the souldiours were hanged.

CASSILS, EGLINTON, AND BOYD, GIVE PLEDGES TO THE REGENT.

After this, the regent went to Kyle and Carict, to persue the Erle of Cassils, who greevouslie vexed suche as acknowledged the king's authoritie. But he, fearing the wasting of his lands, gave his brother in pledge to enter the 15th day of May at Stirline, to confirme the conditiouns craved and agreed upon. Hugh Montgomerie, Erle of Eglinton, and Robert Lord Boyd, did the like.

GRANGE WAGETH SOULDIOURS AND FURNISHETH THE CASTELL.

Whill the regent was in the west, and Morton in England, the captan of the castell, by perswasioun of Lethington, was waging souldiours privatlie, speciallie the poorer sort of craftsmen in Edinburgh. The regent charged, by open proclamatioun in the king's name, that all captans and souldiours waged by Sir William Kirkaldie sould desert him within three dayes after the proclamatioun, under the paine of rebellioun. This charge was published the 19th of Marche. The captan caused beate a drumme, and warne all that would receave pay under the charge of Captan Melvill, to come to the Castell Hill the day following, to receave their wages; whereby he uttered manifestlie that treacherie which before he ever covered with some colour. This Melvill was servant to Lethington, and had been a captan in the first regent's time. The captan and his complices in the castell seaze upon the most commodious parts in the toun, reave victualls brought in to Leith from merchants, and provide all necessar furniture for the castell to endure a long siege, till supplee were sent from forrane nations. He made a rowstie ryme, which went from hand to hand, wherin he reproached bitterlie the lords mainteaners of the king's authoritie, and aggredged the injureis alledged done to the queen.

THE TWENTIE-SECUND GENERALL ASSEMBLIE.

The Generall Assemblie conveened at Edinburgh in the Neather Counsel-hous the fyft day of Marche. Mr George Hay was chosin Moderator. The regent craved the Assemblie to be translated from Edinburgh to Stirline or Glasgow; but it could not be granted for sundrie impediments.

VOL. III.

meane time. Others compeering in linnen clothes, and submitting themselves to farther injunctions, the Assemblic ordeaneth them to

ACTS.

Forasmuche as it hath beene ordeaned by the Generall Assembleis, that all adulterers, murtherers, incestuous persons, and others committers of haynous crimes, sould first present themselves to the Generall Assemblie, there to receave their first injunctiouns; and at the nixt therafter following to present themselves in linnen clothes, &c. And forasmuche as diverse of the said offenders partlie are farre distant from the places of Generall Assembleis, others for povertie and deidlie feeds may not, nor dare not, travell through the countrie, to present themselves before the said Assembleis, &c. For these causes, and other considerations moving this present Assemblie, it is ordeaned, that all suche offenders sall be called hecrafter by the superintendents and commissioners of provinces, to compeere before them in their synodall conventions,—which are to be holdin twise in the yeere, there to be receaved, and to tak their injunctiouns, conforme to the order used before by the Generall Assemble is in all sorts.

- 2. It was ordeanned, that all superintendents and commissioners to plant kirks sall present heerafter their books of visitations of their owne provinces respective, to be revised and considered by suche brethrein as sall be appointed thereto from Assemblie to Assemblie, to the effect the Assemblie may understand their diligence in executing of their offices within their provinces. Some were appointed presentlie to revise the commissioners' diligence in their visitatiouns.
- 3. Forasmuche as trouble and slaunder hath rissen for solemnizatioun of mariage in privat houses, and that by ministers to whose parishes or kirks the controveeners perteaned not, where-through there hath beene controversie in particular kirk-sessiouns, for satisfactioun to be made for transgressing the publict order of the kirk, &c., the Assemblie statuteth and ordeaneth, that all mariages be solemnized in the face of a congregatioun, according to the publict order established; and also inhibiteth all ministers and exhorters, that none of them solemnize mariages of anie persons, other than within their owne congregatiouns, without sufficient testimonialls from their ministers, or licence asked and obteaned, under the paines before established against the ministers and controveeners, with their parents to make publict repentance, &c., at the discretioun of their owne kirks.
- 4. It is ordeaned, that all ministers inhibit all civill magistrats to hold their courts within kirks, and if need be, to admonishe, &c.
- 5. That all superintendents and commissioners to plant kirks, heerafter, with advice of their ministers in their synodall conventiouns, reasoun upon the necessitie of publict fasts, and appoint publict fasting, if it sall be thought necessar; and als, that they appoint certane brethrein to travell for unitie and concord among the nobilitie of the realme.

- 6. That persons excommunicated for not adhering to the established religioun, or not thereto joyned of before, yitt presentlie of their owne accord submitting themselves, and requiring to be receaved in the societie of the faithfull, be receaved by their minister in low and humble habite, observing the order prescrived in the booke of excommunication, and all other points.
 - 7. An act for deciding of questions. (Vide p. 41.)

QUESTIONS DECIDED.

The brethrein appointed for decisioun of questiouns produced their decisions as followeth:—

- 1. It were good that superintendents tak up particular delations in cheefe and metropolitane kirks, where executioun of discipline is, and weeklie assemble is of ministers, elders, and deacons, observed for the same caus; that he doe it with advice of some elders, for avoiding all corruptioun and partialitie.
- 2. Where ministers are not in use of excommunicatioun, or the executioun of it would be contemned, that the superintendent, or some other sufficientlie qualified and authorized, execute the same.
- 3. Whether a superintendent may absolutlie depose and admitt ministers, without advice and consent of the cheefest ministers, and of his seate in speciall? We referre to the ordinance made before.
- 4. If anie person or persons in a reformed parish or citie, where order and discipline is observed, may be compelled to answere before their superintendent in prima instantia, or yitt before the Generall Assemblie; the mater not being tried nather before their owne particular Assemblie, their immediat judge, nor before the superintendent? It was answered, that the order of the Booke of Discipline be observed heerin, wherunto the superintendents are subject.

- 5. A minister may proceed against magistrats who will not putt n executioun the acts of parliament concerning discipline, and other acts agreed upon by their own particular congregations, to the sentence of excommunicatioun, due admonitioun preceeding.

- 7. If a man ravishe a woman against her owne and her parents' will, and strike her parents under silence of night, and the magistrat will not correct, the kirk may proceed with admonitions to excommunicatioun, for satisfactioun.
- 8. These that will not enter in the ministrie according to the order sett down by the kirk, lett them not be admitted.
- 9. If a woman committ fornicatioun with a man, and suffer him after to marie her owne sister, and would not reveele the impediment when the bannes were proclamed, both he and she are to be punished according to the discipline of the kirk, but cheefelie the man; and the other cannot be his wife.
- 10. Suche as impugne proclamation of bannes cheeflie by infamie, and prove not, lett them be punished according to the discipline of the kirk, as infamators.
- 11. It is unlawfull to a minister to receave a benefice by presentatioun, under pactioun with the patron; to witt, that the patron sall have the greater part, and the minister a small portioun.
- 12. That superintendents tak order, that parishes be not destituted of preaching, where their ministers are sent in commissioun to the Generall Assemblie, or for other needfull effaires, or chance to fall in sicknesse; cheefelie, if they be within burrowes or touns.
- 13. A man deflowring a virgin hath libertie, notwithstanding, to marie another.

- 17. Whether the kirk, jure devoluto, may give a benefice which is dispouned by a laick patron to an unqualified person, or if the superintendent or commissioner to plant kirks may doe the same without the Generall Assemblie, is referred to an act of parliament.

And whatsoever happeneth to be done by them in the premisses, to report the same to the nixt Generall Assemblie of the kirk, to beginne in Stirline, the sixt day of August nixt to come, stable and firme; holding, and for to hold, all and whatsomever the saids brethrein, or anie tenne of them, in the premisses conclude to be done. AN ACT FOR DECIDING OF QUESTIONS.

Becaus the Assemblie is yeerlie troubled with the solution of questiouns, of which some are unprofitable, others may be easilie solved by superintendents and commissioners to plant kirks, with the assistance of their ministers in their synodall conventiouns, which are to be holdin twise everie yeere; the Assemblie statuteth and ordeaneth, that all questions heerafter be propouned and presented to the superintendents and commissioners in their synodall conventiouns, there to receave their solutiouns. And if anie questioun happen to be hard for them that sall happen to be at the said conventiouns, then and in that cace, that the superintendents or commissioners of kirks present the said hard questiouns to the Generall Assemblie, there to receave their solutiouns in the owne time, according to order; with certificatioun, that no questiouns heerafter sall be receaved in Generall Assemble is from particular ministers. That the same order be observed for complaints of all sorts.

A COUNTERFOOT SKIRMISH.

Upon the secund day of the Assemblie, there was a foolish skirmish devised in the castell. The one part of the captan's souldiours tooke upon them to skirmishe, in maner of an assault to the castell; the other part of the captan's gentlemen took upon them the defence and keeping of the castell. The skirmishe continued from eight houres at night till nyne. It was demanded from the castell, who these were that troubled the captan, under silence of night? It was answered by the other partie below, that they were the Queen of England's armie. There beganne brawling and flytting; and these in the castell answered, "Away, lubbard! away, blew-coat! I defy thee, white-coat! Dirt in your teeth! Hence, knaves, and goe tell that whoore, your mastresse, vee sall not come heere. We lett you know, we have men, meat, and ordinance for seven yeeres."2 About the end of the skirmishe, three cannons were discharged, and the counterfoot assaulters tooke the flight. Mr Knox, sitting with two brethrein, said, "I could expone, if I might speeke, the mysterie of thir shotts; vitt this muche I say, ' Ante ruinam præit fastus,' as saveth Salomon; before destructionn goeth pride. I saw als great bravaders in the castell of St Andrewes: and vitt, within few daves were they brought low."

Thus sylit begylit,
They will bot get the glaikis;
Come thai heir, thir tuo yeir,
They sall not misse thair paiks."

² Kirkaldy's preparations in the castle of Edinburgh, for a siege, were upon so great a scale, that it was declared, the like had never been seen in Scotland before. Upon these he naturally valued himself so much, that he boasts of the completeness of his resources, in the "rowstie ryme" alluded to in page 33,

[&]quot;For I have men and meit aneugh,
They know I am ane tuilzeour teoch,
And wilbe rycht sore greved;
When thei have tint als mony teith
As they did at the seige of Leith,
They wilbe faine to leive it.
Then quha, I pray you, sall be boun,
Thar tinsall to advance,
Or gif sic compositione
As thei gat then of France?

A LIBELL AGAINST MR KNOX.

Upon the thrid day of the Assemblie, there was a libell writtin vith a counterfoot hand, which fell from the upper hous, where the ords were sitting, into the Assemblie hous. Mr Knox being traluced therin, would have made answere for himself. But some orethrein thoght it not expedient, but rather suffered time to worke, hat the compleaners might open further of their mindes. The night ollowing, the same libell, with some additioun, was affixed upon the loore of the Assemblie hous, the tenor wherof, together with Mr Knox his marginall observatiouns, followeth:

"Unto you, right honourable superintendents, ministers, and cirk of God presentlie assembled within this burgh for reformatioun. numblie meanes and compleanes your fellow members of Jesus Christ professing the same religioun with you, upon Johne Knox, minister of this burgh: That where, upon Sunday last bypast, and diverse other times of before, the said Johne, contrare to his professioun, openlie in the kirk of Edinburgh, most seditiouslie3 detracted, railed, and inveyghed against our soveran ladie,4 the nobilitie, and other subjects of this realme professing her Grace's obedience; naming her an idolatresse, a murtherer, and an adultresse, and her subjects mainteaners of adulterie and idolatrie; with manie other injurious and slaunderous words,5 as is notourelie knowne to this whole burgh. Attour, whereas, of duetie,6 he sould not onlie have openlie, in his commoun prayer, prayed for her, but exhorted the whole kirk to pray for her weelfare, repentance, and conversioun to God, not onlie doeth he omitt the same, but, contrariwise, useth all maner of imprecatiouns and execratiouns against her, and otherwise speaketh of her as she were a reprobat, sayin she repenteth not, nor cannot repent,2 becaus she desireth moreasonablie to be restored to her owne realme and authoritie just apperteaning to her, both by God's right and man's, and wherefi she was unnaturallie dejected, and is wrongouslie debarred; this entering in God's secreit counsell, as though he were privie there and called thereto. In which doing, he worketh so farre as lyet in him by suche presumptiouns and malapert arragancie,3 to ma the religioun of Jesus Christ to be evill spokin off, and the who ministrie to be hated and abhorred; and by intermedling of civi and profane maters with the Word of God, divideth the church i contrarious factiouns, wherupon may ensue great hurt and perel not onlie to the kirk, but also to the commoun wealth. Heerfore we beseeche your wisdomes, as you that are appointed to watch above his church, to putt order to the said Johne, in executioun his office; and that he desist from suche intolerable and enorm railing upon our soverane ladie,4 and intermedling suche profan causes with the Word of God, farre above his commissioun otherwise vee will be thought, in times comming, partakers of hi schisme, and charged therewith. As opportunitie will serve, un lesse yee putt remeed heerto, the ingivers heerof will seeke the samine with greater unquietnesse."5

LIBERTIE GRANTED TO ACCUSE MR KNOX.

This libell comming to the knowledge of sindrie, the Assemblic directed some brethrein and some ministers, with both the libells

Then he Assemblie ordeaned this warning to be made and published, which followeth:—" Becaus some writtings are cast by some persouns slandering Mr Knox, and the ingivers are unknowne, the Assemblie desireth anie persoun or persouns that will persue and stand to the same, to compeere and persue, promising to minister justice accordinglie."

ANOTHER LIBELL AGAINST MR KNOX.

No man was found, notwithstanding of libertie granted, to accuse; but the thrid libell was affixed upon the kirk-doore, the tenour wherof followeth:—

"To the Right Honourable Superintendents, Ministers, and Kirk of God, presentlie assembled for reformatioun.

"Forasmeekle as upon the supplicatiouns givin to you of before, yee caused openlie proclame at the counsel-hous doore, if anie man would compeere to persue the same, saying that Knox was readie to answere thereto: If the supplicatiouns be reasonable, and founded upon a good caus and complaint worthie to be regarded, (as they are most reasonable,) then are they sufficient without farther persute, to admonish you, men of judgement, of your duetie, and move you to provide, that no slaunder be givin by the minister that occupyeth the cheef chaire of this realme. The ingivers of the supplicatiouns looke, that the same be als weill an admonitioun to the criminall as unto your wisdomes. Yitt if he, upon his corrupt sense and perverse affectioun, persist in his arrogant malice, he sall not want one or moe accusators at the nixt Assemblie, provyding he be then law-byding, and not fugitive, according to his accustomed maner."

RICHARD BANNATYNE HIS SPEECHE IN THE ASSEMBLIE, FOR HIS MASTER JOHNE KNOX.

This libell being affixed upon the kirk doore, and sindrie other places, was brought by the bell-man to Mr Knox the tenth day c Marche, as he was putting on his clothes. After he had read it, h send it with his servant, Richard Bannatyne, to the Assemblic After it was read in the Assemblie, the said Richard craved to b heard; which being granted, he said, "It hath pleased God to mak me a servant to that man of God. Johne Knox, whom I serve, a God beareth me witnesse, not so muche for anie worldlie commo ditie, as for that integritie and uprightnesse which I have eve knowne, and presentlie understand to be in him, speciallie in the faithfull administration of his office in teaching the Word. And if I knew he were a false teacher, a seducer and raiser of schismes or one that maketh divisioun in the Kirk of God, as he is reported to be by the former accusatiouns, I would not serve him for all the substance in Edinburgh. Therefore, I desire your wisdoms to make it manifest and knowne by some publict edict, that yee approve hi doctrine; consent and agree with him; that yee are of one mind and judgement with him, and that yee sing all one song; that there by the rest of the ministrie bearing part of the burthein with him which, in my judgement, now lyeth onlie on his backe, the enemeihave not occasioun to say, 'It is onlie Johne Knox that speeketl against the queen," &c. They all answered they would beare their part of the same burthein with him. He craved an act therupon but it was refused. Johne Gray, scribe to the Assemblie, was the first who refused. One asked if his maister commanded him to crave anie suche thing. He answered, What he had spokin he had spokin it without his master's knowledge, onlie moved by scandalous reports, and, therefore, could doe no lesse in conscience than seeke remedie so farre as in them lay; which could by no meanes be better provided, in his judgement, than to mak it knowne by publict edict or otherwise, that they approved what Johne Knox pake; least the enemeis alledge, in cace they be silent, they have Is manie ministers on their side as the king hath on his. The lerk refused to give an act. He required Mr George Mackesone o be witnesse to the premisses, and to mak an act under his hand-vritt of the former words; which he did.

MR KNOX HIS APOLOGIE IN PULPIT.

The Generall Assemblie being dissolved the same day, some of he brethrein, having a good meaning, travelled with Mr Knox to basse over with silence suche accusatiouns. He answered, "The Assemblie may forbid me to preache; but, when I am in the pulpit, cannot stoppe my tongue. Therefore, ather lett me be discharged, or ellis lett you and the adversareis both looke for an answere." So, upon the nixt day, which was the Lord's day, the sermoun being ended, he answered to all the libells as followeth:

"Albeit it is most dolorous to my heart to mak an apologic against suche as call themselves fellow members of Jesus Christ, and men professing the same religioun with us, vitt, becaus it is no new thing that God's servants have beene accused by suche as have beene esteemed cheefe pillers in the kirk, it becometh me to take my lott in good part; for Jeremie was not accused by the Gentiles, but his accusators were Jewes, borne and circumcised according to the law, and all externallie professing and avowing the testament made with Abraham. Paul was in manie dangers; and among the rest, he recounteth his perrells among his false brethrein. Yee heare how greevouslie I am accused. I will not say that Tertullus accuseth Paul: but we know that once he accused him, as we may read in the Acts of the Apostles. If this accusatioun be weill weyghed, I doubt not but yee sall perceave the same to be the dytement and stile of a flattering orator, travelling to cloke impietie, and to deface the just reprehensioun of God's Spirit.1 That I have called her an obstinat idolatresse, one that consented to the murther of her owne husband, and one that hath committed whoor-dome and villanous adulterie, I willinglie grant, and never minde t deny. But railing and seditioun they are never able to prove i me, till that first they compell Isav, Jeremie, and Ezechiel, S Paul, and others, to recant, of whome I have learned plainlie and boldlie to call wickednesse by their owne termes; a feg, a feg, an a spaid, a spaid. I feare that threatning pronounced by Isav in these words, 'Woe to them that call light darkenesse, and darke nesse light; good evill, and evill good.' If she be innocent of ani of the crimes laved to her charge by me, then may I be accused a a railer. But if their owne consciences beare witnesse to them that she is guiltie in all the forenamed, and in everie one of them and manie moe, lett them studie how they sall be absolved before God, who threatneth to cast Jesabell in a bed, and these that com mitt fornicatioun with her in great afflictioun, except they repent How manie flattered her when she raged in her iniquitie under the cloke of authoritie, some within this realme, and within this same citie, understand. But how that God, the just Judge, hath over throwne her pride, and disappointed their flattering promises, the whole world can witnesse. And yitt they will not cease, but stil they will mainteane her, as if she were an innocent, and unjustlic handled by her subjects. Lett her and her mainteaners compleane upon God, who made her cheefe flatterers her cheefe enemeis What she sall be to them, or they to her, lett time declare.] speeke of times certan and bypast.

"Now to the rest of the accusatioun: I pray not for her. I answere, I am not bound to pray for her in this place, for soverane to me she is not. And I lett them to understand, that I am not a man of law, that hath my tongue to sell for silver, or favour of the world. But to reasoun with them on prayer, who never understood what prayer was, were but lost labour. I prayed till I was forbiddin. But this maner of speeking the world understandeth not. They terme her their soveran; others, the nobilitie and subjects professing her obedience. In this they confesse themselves tratours; and so, I am not bound to answere them nor their accusatioun, till they give answere to my peremptore.

"As to the imprecatiouns made against her, wherof I am accused, I have willinglie confessed that I have desired, and in my heart desire, that God of his mercie, for the comfort of his poore flocke within this realme, will oppone his power to her pride, and confound her, her flatterers, and assisters in her impietie. I praise my God, he of his mercie hath not disappointed me of my just prayer, lett them call it imprecatioun or execratioun as pleaseth them. It hath ofter than once stricken, and sall strike, in despite of man, mainteane and defend her whose list. I am farther accused, that I speeke of their soverane (myne is she not) as that she were a reprobat; and that I affirme she cannot repent, &c.: whereto I answere, that the accuser is a calumniator, and a manifest leer, for he is never able to prove, that at anie time I have said that she cannot repent. But I have said, and vitt say, that pride and repentance abide not in one heart of anie long continuance together. What title she hath, or ever had, to this realme and the authoritie therof, I list not to enter in contentioun: how she was dejected from it, lett the estats answere: for me they cannot accuse, unlesse they lee. For, hitherto I have lived as a subject, and obeyed as a subject, to all lawfull ordinance of God within this realme.

"Yitt resteth one thing which is most bitter to me, and most fearefull, if my accusators were able to prove their accusatioun; to witt, that I proudlie and arrogantlie enter in God's secreit counsell, as if I were called thereto. God be mercifull to my accusators for their rash and ungodlie judgement! If they understood how fearefull my conscience is, and ever hath beene, to exceed the bounds of my vocatioun, they would not have so boldlie accused me. I am not ignorant, that the secreets of God apperteane to himself alone; but things reveeled in his law perteane to us, and to our childrein for ever. What I have spokin against the adulterie, against the murther, against the pride, and against the idolatrie of that wicked woman, I spake not as one that entered in God's secreit counsell; but being one of God's great mercie called to preache, according to his blessed will reveeled in his most holie Word, have ofter than once pronounced the threatnings of his law against suche as have VOL. III.

beene of counsell, of knowledge, of assistance, or consent, that innocent blood sould be shed. And the same thing I have pronounced against all and sindrie that goe about to mainteane that wicked woman, and the band of these murtherers; that they suffer not death according to his Word, that the plague may be takin from this realme; which shall never be, so long as she and they remaine unpunished, according to the sentence of God's law. Where I am accused, that by intromedling civill and profane things with the Word of God. I divide the kirk in contrarie factiouns; I make the religion of Jesus Christ to be evill spokin of, and the whole ministrie to be hated and abhorred, &c.: I answere, that when they sall teache me by God's writtin truthe, that the reproofe of vice is a civill and profane thing, that it apperteaneth not to the ministrie, I sall doe as God's Word commandeth me. But till that time, which will not be till the morne after Doomesday, and not then, I must hold that sentence pronounced, and power givin by God to his prophets Jeremie and Ezechiel to stand for a perpetuall law and rule to all true ministers, which, with God's assistance, I purpose to follow to my live's end. Where they threaten to putt order to me with greater unquietnesse, unless I ceasse from railing on their soverane, I answere as before. Railing I deny, their soverane I know not: lett God's will be done in me. I have laved my compt. Manie things I know I have omitted, but in that I find no great fault with my memorie. Let them reply, if ather they can or darre, and I sall answere as it sall please God to assist me.

"This muche being answered to both their first accusations, in few words I answere to the thrid, wherin my accusators alledge that their complaint is sufficient that the Assemblie accuse me for discharge of their owne duetie, &c.: Wherto I answere, that my accusators would have the Assemblie of Christian ministers more brutish and more barbarous than an ethnick judge was in a more notorious accusatioun. For, the princes of the preests comming to Festus the deputie, desired sentence against Paul; to whom he answered, that it was not the consuetude of the Romans to decerne against anie man before he were accused, and his accusators present before him, and he had place to purge himself of things objected against him. Now, if my accusators would that a Christian assemblie sould condemne me at their requeist, and, upon their accusatioun, they make it inferiour to this ethnick judge. But they have promised to accuse me face to face at the nixt Generall Assemblie, if I be found law-byding. I praise God they have nothing presentlie to accuse me when the time is als favourable as ever they will find it, if Christ Jesus have place within this realme. But, becaus they know that their persute is unjust, they flee to the last refuge of all walterers, of commoun wealths; Tempora mutantur. Whether I sall be law-byding or not at that time, I know not, for my dayes and waves are in the hands of him on whom I depend, who hath guided me through many troubles, and hath yitt preserved me to this decrepit age, which now is not apt to flee farre. Moreover, I thinke that no man is able to convict me to have beene a fugitive from the flocke whereto I was bound, without their owne commandement."

ANOTHER LIBELL.

The fourth libell was affixed before the nixt Lord's Day, the tenor wherof followeth, beginning with a great Nota, thus:—

"NOTA.

"If the booke entituled, The Blast of the Trumpet, sett furth by Johne Knox against the regiment of weomen, be grounded upon a schisme and false doctrine, as without doubt it is, why then may he not be judged truelie a seditious man, and a false doctor, that sett furth the same so arrogantlie? And if it be grounded upon an infallible truthe, why then doeth he avow and approve the contrare, I meane that regiment in the Queene of England's persoun, which he avoweth and approveth; not onlie praying for the maintenance of her estat, as he hath done diverse times openlie in pulpit, but also in suting and procuring by himself, and by others whom he allured by all meanes possible, her aide and support against his owne native countrie and libertie therof? It is evident, that ather his doctrine is false, or ellis that he worketh against the manifest truthe."

The nixt Lord's day, the sermoun being ended, Mr Knox required a little audience, "Because," said he, "I am accused as a schismatick and a false doctor."

After he had read the libell, he said, "God be mercifull to my accusators; and give them grace cleerelie to see, and perfytlie to understand, the doctrine which, by me, God hath pronounced, ever since it pleased him, of his mercie, to illuminate the eyes of my minde with the brightnesse of his Word. God grant me patience, that, without bitternesse I may beare the opprobrie of the croce of Jesus Christ, wherin, I praise my God, I am so assisted by his Holy Spirit, that if I had not greater respect to you, who now, of long time, have beene my auditors, than I have, or ever had to myself, I sould never open my mouth in my owne defence. But becaus I am not ignorant, that Satan, through his malice, seeketh to deface the truthe of God in my weake persoun, I cannot passe by suche accusations with silence. The dytement seemeth to smell of some craftie lawlesse man of lawe's braine. And vitt, if I list to handle him as his follie deserveth, I might easilie lett him see that, in accusing the author of that tractat, he hath nather looked to God, nature, nor to just law. His dilemme beginneth with a conditionall saying, 'If the booke intituled,' etc. I will onlie answer his If with another If, and say, If it be grounded upon good reasoun, upon God's plaine truthe, and upon most plaine and just law, then hath the accusator nather God before his eyes, knowledge of just lawes, nor reverence to nature. So lett one If answere another, till farther probatioun be produced. He boldlie affirmeth that 'That booke is grounded upon schisme,' etc.; whereto I answere, that the affirmative of a leer may not be a sufficient prooffe against me, principallie, in his owne caus. A good and wise dialectitian would have laboured to lay down some prooffe, before he had rashlie pronounced. So, because the former part of his delemme hath no greater strenth than his owne affirmation, I say, it is brokin, and he is a manifest leer. If ever I intreated that argument in publict or in privat, since my last arrivall in Scotland, the argument may have some probabilitie. But seing therof I cannot be convicted, a schismatick I cannot be provin.

"The craftie accusator thinketh, I cannot avoide the other horne of his argument; that no force of reason is able to breake it. Yitt my good hope is, that the hammer of God's truthe sall prove it to be more fragile and weake than ever glasse was. He affirmeth that I approve the contrare, to witt, the same regiment in the persoun of the Queene of England. The probation is, I pray for the maintenance of her estat, and procure her aide and helpe against my native countrie. But neither of these reasouns fight against me; for nather doth the prayer of God's servants for the maintenance of commoun wealths where the people of God remaine, prove that God's servants allow all things done in suche commoun wealths, nather yitt doth the seeking of helpe even from the wicked prove that the godlie justifie the wicked. That these my assertions may be understood to be most true and sure, I will not alledge the testimoneis of profane writters, but content myself with the mouth of God, and with the facts of them who, in their cheefe actiouns, were ruled by the Spirit of God. For exemple, I bring the prophets of God, that served in Israel from the dayes of Jeroboam the sonne of Nebat, till the destruction of that kingdome. Some of these prophets comforted the kings, although they were wicked; some forewarned them of dangers; some gave them charge to fight, with promise of victorie. But did anie of these acts prove that the prophets did allow or approve that kingdom of idolatrie, and their unnaturall defectioun from the hous of David? Jeremie prayed, and commanded the Jews to pray, for the prosperitie and health of Nebuchadnezar. Did he therefore justifie his crueltie against Jerusalem? I am assured he did not, as his owne prophecie beareth plaine witnesse. So, my praying for the Queene of England cannot prove that I doe anie thing contrare to the truthe conteaned in that booke. The like I answere to the secund member of his probatioun, to witt, that I seeke and procure her aide. and therefore doe justifie her authoritie. If he were able to prove his assertion, to witt, that I seeke and procure her aide, vitt is he never able to prove, that ather my doctrine is false, or that I worke against the manifest truthe, Quia omnia munda mundis. David. persued by Saul, sought support and refuge of Achis, king of Gath. Did he therefore approve and justifie the enormiteis practised in Palestina? My accusator may consider how easie it is, the simple truthe to breake the strenth of his lees, how artificiallie soever they be composed. But one thing in the end I may not pretermitt; that is, to give him a lee in his throat, that ather darre or will say, that ever I sought support against my native countrie. What I have beene to my countrie, albeit this unthankful age will not know, yitt the ages to come will be compelled to beare witnesse to the truthe. And thus I cease, requiring of all men that have anie thing to oppone against me, that he will doe it so plainlie, as that I may make myself and all my doings manifest to the world. For to me it seemeth a thing unreasonable, that in this my decrepit age, I sall be compelled to fight against shadows and howllets that darre not abide the light."

THE WINNING OF THE CASTELL OF DUMBARTANE.

The castell of Dumbartane was taken the 2d day of Aprile, in the morning, about breake of day. The maner was this:—One of the watchmen, malcontent that his wife, who repaired to him, was ignominiously scourged for alledged thift, at the directioun of the Lord Fleeming, the captan of the castell, he went out of his owne free accord, or, as others report, was putt furth. He addresseth himself to Robert Dowglas, the regent's kinsman, and offered to wonne the castell, if the regent would appoint a sufficient companie to follow him as guide. Johne Cuninghame, Laird of Drumquhassill, was appointed to trie him farther. He discovered to him the whole maner, and offered to expose himself first to perell. It was concluded that an assault sould be made.

Some few dayes were spent in preparation of ledders, and all other instruments necessarie for the purpose. The abstinence was to expire the first of May; therefore it was chosin as the fittest time for executioun. The Lord Fleeming had defended it foure veeres bygane, with the assistance of the King of France. He vaunted, that he had in his hands, as it were, the fetters of Scotland; and whensoever the Frenche king had leasure and rest from other warres, if some small forces were granted to him, he would bring all the countrie under their subjection. The Frenche king fed his humour, and sent Monsieur Virack, with some artillerie and munitioun, and commanded him to stay there, and to observe how Scottish affaires went. He was emboldenned likewise by the defection of the captan of the castell of Edinburgh, and the hurt the regent had gottin by the fall off a horse, and the gutt in his feete. The abstinence made him secure. Manie of the watchemen were deboshing securelie in the toun of Dumbartane.

The ledders, cords, and crowes of yron, to putt betwixt craigs, to fasten to cords, were provided before by Captan Thomas Crawfurd. Upon the first of Aprile, about the evening, Drumquhassil was sent out of Glasgow with the horsemen, before the drumme was beatten, to make sure all passages betwixt Glasgow and Dumbartane, and to intercept all advertisement of the comming of the footemen. Then, after the beating of the drumme, Captan Crawfurd followed with the foote-men, till they came to the hill of Dunbucke, where Drumquhassill was, a myle distant from the craig of Dumbartane, about tenne houres at night, or, as the captan himself wrote to Mr Knox, about one after midnight. There, Drumquhassill and the captan reveeled to the companie their interprise, and what hopes they had. They answered they would follow and assist, in God's name and the king's. In the mean time, they prepare their cords, ledders, and other instruments, and putt all in good order, so long as the moone gave light. The foot-men went fordward with their ledders to the craig. The horsemen stayed, waiting upon all events. Whill the foot-men came neere the craig, a great light shynned behind them, and a tree bridge, which lay over a water betwixt them and the castell, was brokin. They suspected the bridge had beene brokin purposelie to stoppe their passage, and that the light behind was the light of some beakens descrying their comming. When they sent backe to trie, the light had vanished away. The bridge before them was easilie repaired; yitt were they not free of feare, in regard of the cleerenesse of the night, whereby the watche might easilie perceave them.

The highest part of the craig had no watche, and that part of the wall above, within six score foote. They thought best to assay that part which is the east part, called the Beik. The ledders sett to the craig being too long, and not sure sett, fell with the weight of the climmers; yitt none were hurt. They sett to the ledders again more warilie. Howbeit the ledders were sixtie stepps, vitt were they twentie steppes from an ashe-tree which was above them in the craig. The guide and Captan Crawfurd wanne to the tree without ledders, with great difficultie, taking cords with them, and fastened the cords to the tree. They lett the cords hang down to the ledders, wherewith men might draw themselves up to the tree. When they were at the tree, they had five score faddoms to the root of the wall, to which they caried cords in like maner. A thicke mist envirouned the craig from the middle upward, that the watche-men could not see what they were doing below. Whill they were climming up to the hight of the craig, one of their number was stricken with apoplexie. He, gripping fast to the ledder, was an impediment to others. They quietlie turne the ledder, and the apoplectick in the meane time never losed his grippe. When they came to the hight of the craig, they had a stone wall to climme. Captan Crawfurd reporteth, that they sett the ledder to the stone wall. Captan Alexander Ramsay was the first that entered upon the wall, and cried, "God and the king! A Darly, a Darly, a Darly!" The watche-men throwed stones at him. He leapeth doun, and is sett upon by the three souldiours, whom he boore off till others followed him, and then they slue three of the watche. In the meane time that the rest are following, the wall being ruinous, falleth through their weight, and maketh a patent way for them to enter. Captan Crawfurd, in his letter to Mr Knox, writteth that they came to the wall about day-light: that at the entrie of the first man upon the top of the wall, the watche sitting beside cried, and a cloud of mist fell about them: that there came sindrie running naiked, of whom three were slaine, and some others hurt, and the rest retired. So they wanne their artillerie, powder, and bullets. These that keeped watche in the neather castell, that keeped Wallace Towre, the white towre with the windie hall, the chamber betweene the craigs, als soone as they saw their owne artillerie turned against them, everie man tooke him to his shift. The Lord Fleeming fled by a posterne gate; and the sea being full, he gott a boat and escaped to Argile. The mist was so thicke, that some leaped from the wall. Twentie-five of the garisoun that were whooring and drinking in the toun could make no help, but fled. There were takin in the castell Johne Hammiltoun, bastard Bishop of Sanct Andrewes, Johne Fleeming, Laird of Boghall, Alexander Maister of Livingston, Monsieur Virack, the Frenche king's agent, an English gentleman called Johne Hall, the Ladie Fleeming, and a number of souldiours.

The regent came the day following, at ten houres in the morning. He was favourable to the Ladie Fleeming, gave unto her some of her husband's lands which before had beene forfaulted, and suffered her to injoy the silver vessell, houshold stuffe, and all the apparrell that belonged to her. Manie judged that Monsieur Virack sould have suffered an assise, for robbing of merchants in Clyde Firth; yitt the name of an ambassader or agent prevailed with the regent more than needed. He was commanded, notwithstanding, to be keeped, that the robbed might have some hope of restitution, and was sent afterward to St Andrewes; Hall, the Englishman, how beit recommended to the captan of the castell by the Bishop c Rosse, and muche suspected for traffique, was sent home to England After his departure, it was understood that he was sent by the Duk of Norfolk's factioun to poysoun the young King of Scots. Holin shed recordeth, that he was afterward arraigned and executed fo a new intended conspiracie. Boghall was committed to prisoun The Bishop of Sanct Andrewes was sent to Stirline. Beside pow der and artillerie, there was found in the castell twentie tunnes o wyne, twelve chalders of meale, ten bolls of wheat, eight bolls o malt, elleven hogheids of bisket bread, foure puncheouns of bacoun Drumquhassill being placed captan of the castell, the regent returned to Stirline.

THE BISHOP OF SANCT ANDREWES HANGED.

After the Bishop of Sanct Andrewes was takin, the Hammiltouns rainged abroad to apprehend some man for the bishop's releefe. Claud Hammiltoun, the duke's sonne, took a boy careing the Lord of Marr's clothes to Stirline, and some men of Edinburgh travelling in the countrie, whom they suffered to depart, upon sovertie to enter again at their call. The regent, fearing that the Queen of England her intercessioun would be procured by the Hammiltons, whering they were indeid labouring, hastened the executioun. There needed not long processe, for it was notoriouslie knowned that he was guiltie of the murther both of the king and of the regent. He had takin upon him to slay the king's father, partlie becaus there was old inimitie betwixt the Hammiltons and the hous of Lennox, and partlie upon hope that the crown might be transferred to the duke's hous.\(^1\) That night the king was murthered,

he sent out of the duke's loodging seven or eight of the choicest men of his companie, gave them the keves of the king's loodging, and committed to them the committing of that fact. They entered with great secrecie, surprised him when he was sleeping, wirried him, and caried him furth; and then, after a signe givin, the hous was blowne up with powder. Johne Hammilton, a cheefe actor, was so troubled in conscience, that he could gett no rest night nor day, so that his bodie pynned away. He reveeled his greefe to a Popish preest, the school-master of Pasley, and discovered to him the whole maner. The preest did what he could to comfort him: but he, overcome with displeasure, ended his life within few dayes. The preest concealed not the confessioun so close, but the king's freinds gott knowledge of it. The preest was sent for when the bishop was now apprehended, and affirmed all that he had said before. The bishop asked, If he had heard suche a thing by auricular confessioun? the other answered, "Yes." The bishop could make no other defence, but said, "Yee know what punishment abideth those that reveele anie thing uttered to them by auricular confessioun." About fifteene moneths after, the same preest being apprehended the thrid time for saving masse, when he was to be led furth to executioun, confirmed all that he had said before, and made a more ample narratioun; wherupon the Hammiltons' defenders, brawling among themselves, charged eache other with the murther of the king. The bishop was hanged at Stirline the sixt of Aprile.1

cond, and last counts, but confessed upon the scaffold to the third, acknowledging that he was privy to the design of Murray's assassination, and had furthered it, of which he now repented.

Cresce diu felix arbor, semperque vireto Frondibus, ut nobis talia poma feras.

To this mischievous wish the following answer was returned the same evening, inscribed upon the kirk door, and other parts of the town:

THE REBELS CONVEENE AT EDINBURGH.

In the meane time, Mr Knox ceased not, according to his ac customed maner, publictlie to deplore the murther of the king "invented," said he, "by the queene, fortified by suche as Go made after instruments to confound her, and putt in executioun b Bothwell and others." He ceased not to pray in publict for th king and his regent, and to exhort the people to stand constantli to the defence of the present authoritie, notwithstanding of th queen's brags and her lieutenants', who had appointed a conven tioun to be holdin the 10th of Aprile, at Edinburgh, to depose th regent. Huntlie came to Edinburgh the 8th of Aprile. The se cretarie came to Leith the 10th of Aprile, at night, and was carie up to the castell by six worke men with sting and ling.1 Hereis Maxwell, and the Laird of Lochinvar, came to Edinburgh about ten houres at night, the 14th of Aprile, and lighted at the caste gate. About ellevin houres at night, Captan Melvill came to Ro bert Lickprevick's hous, and sought him, as he had done twise be fore, and searched the hous for the Cameleon, which the secretar feared he had printed. All Lethington's practises and pageant were livelie expressed in this Cameleon. The printer being warne before, escaped, and caried with him suche things as might bree him harme. Upon Tuisday the 17th of Aprile, Hereis and Lochin var went home, and Maxwell the day following. Upon the 19t. day, about midnight, Captan Melvill went furth, under pretence t see men going with lunts in their hands upon the Croce. But i was to bring in Claud Hammilton, Arthure of Merrington, Rober Hammiltoun of Inchemauchane, and a companie of the stronges cutthroaters of the Hammiltons. The bailliffes, with some of the counsell, asked at the captan if he had receaved Claud Hammil toun. He denved. This day Patrik Ogilvie was apprehended by the Castellans, careing letters from Sir James Balfoure to Stirline us was alledged. This night some brethrein watched about Mr Knox his hous for his safetie.

GRANGE'S PROCLAMATIOUN OR PUBLICT CARTELL.

Upon the 13th of Aprile, the captan of the castell caused make this proclamatioun following, at the Mercat Croce of Edinburgh:—

"To all and sindrie noblemen, barons, gentlemen, and other lieges throughout all Scotland, I, Sir William Kirkaldie of Grange, Knight, captan of the castell of Edinburgh, make it manifest and declare, that forsameekle as Mathew Erle of Lennox having unlawfullie intrused himself in the regiment of this realme, hath latelie caused publishe sindrie letters at diverse burrowes of the same, full of calumneis, injureis, and untrue reports against me, by perswasion of certane factious persouns, enemeis to their native countrie, and to all suche as tender the libertie therof, and in effect, commanding and charging, in his pretended maner, all men, and speciallie my freinds, servants, and men of warre whom I have conduced for preservatioun of the said castell, to abandoun and leave me and my service, to the end, as cleerelie may appeare, that he might the more easilie betray and surprise the samine, and thereby to continue in his detestable tyrannie, to the utter subversioun of the lawes, estat, and libertie of this our native countrie: For what crueltie, reafe, heirship, oppressioun, destructioun of policie, he and his factioun have used and done bygane, I leave to be judged by your wisdomes, as a thing most notourlie knowne. And howbeit I am provoked by his said letters, to make plaine demonstratioun of all my proceedings in tyme bypast, and that for defence of my honour, vitt will I differre the same to a time more convenient, at which time I intend, God willing, to doe the same, and nixt, toward the libertie of the realme; yitt I could not omitt, in the meane time, to make some answere to some heeds mentiouned in the said letters. And, namelie, where he alledgeth, that I have devised treasoun, mischeef, and conspiracie against this my lawfull countrie, as letters of myne apprehended in Dumbartane beare, I am assured, that he nor no others are able to lett see suche letters o myne. For I am content to avow all letters writtin by me, beforthe whole world, which sall be found honest and profitable for this troubled countrie; and sall be at all times answerable to the lawes at command of the lawfull magistrat, for anie treasoun that may be layed to my charge, by him, or anie of his adherents; for I have hazard my life for defence of Scotland, when he was against it And if anie gentleman undefamed, of my qualitie and degree, o his factioun and perteaning to him, will say the contrare heero but I am a true Scotish man, I will say he speeketh untruelie, and leeth falselie in his throat; and denounce by thir presents to whatsomever persons will take the said querrell in hand, I sall be readie to fight with him on horsebacke or on foote, at time and place to be appointed, according to the lawes of armes. Further accompt of my doings I will not give the said Erle of Lennox, whose usurped regiment I never acknowledged, not vitt intend to doe, but rather opposed my self at the beginning, and ever sensyne, to the samine. And how I have behaved myself in keeping or using of the said castell without violence or injurie, and how uprightlie I have ever meant, and meane anent this realme, and pacificatioun of thir present troubles, I call God to witnesse most earnestlie, and all other good men within Edinburgh, and others within the reeke of this house: Requiring heerefore all good Scotishmen, and these that feare God without hypocrisie, as they tender the weelfare of this their native countrie, to fortifie and assist me to continue in keeping of this said hous, against whatsomever persouns sall happing to invade me, my freinds, partakers, or the said castell, as I sall be readie to mainteane and defend everie one of them incace they be invaded by anie unlawfull meanes, for that caus, or others causes under colour therof: Certifeing all suche as will not concurre with me in the caus and querrell foresaid, that I will be their unfreind at my power, discharging my self to them by thir presents, which I thought good to verifie to all subjects of this realme: Protesting befor God and the world, that I meane nothing, but to be readie to mainteane the true religioun established within this realme, with the commoun weale and libertie of this my native countrie, without unie kinde of particular of my owne. Proclamed at the Mercat Croce of Edinburgh, 13 Aprilis, 1571."

THE ERLE OF MORTON RANDERETH COMPT OF HIS COMMISSION.

The Erle of Morton returned to Scotland the 18th of Aprile, and came to Stirline the 23d of Aprile, which day, Kilwinning and the Laird of Stennoes came to the castell of Edinburgh. The Erle of Morton randered a compt of his commission at Stirline. The summe was this:—

He came to Londoun the 19th of Februar. Seven of the counsell were appointed to heare them. After long reasouning it was required, that they sould rander sufficient reasouns of their proceedings in the yeere bygane. They gave in their answere in writt, wherin was called to remembrance, that the crimes objected against the king's mother were evidentlie proved the last time the Erle of Murrey, sometime regent, was at London. As for her deposition. and translating of the crowne to her sonne, it was provin to be just and agreeable to the ancient custome of our countrie, and the punishment to be lesse than the desert. The natioun of the Scots hath ever beene a free natioun; constitute kings in suche maner, that the soveraintie granted unto them by the voices of the people, might be takin from them by the voices of the same people, incace there was anie just occasioun offered. A footstep heerof doeth yitt remaine in the Iles, in choosing the captan of the tribes.1 The ceremoneis likewise used at the inauguratioun of kings argue no lesse than a mutuall stipulation betwixt them and the people. Our ancesters have punished manie of their kings, some by depositioun from their authoritie, some by imprisonment and banishement, and some by death. Nather is this proper onlie to the natioun of the

Scots. When Rome it self was most heavilie oppressed with tvrannie, vitt anie good man advanced to the impyre acknowledged himself to be inferiour to the people, and obnoxious to the lawes. When Trajan delivered his sword to the captan and proveist of the toun of Rome, he said, "Use it for me, or against me, as I deserve." Theodosius, one of the best emperours in the worst time, confessed he was inferiour to the lawes. Christierne, King of Denmarke. and his whole posteritie, was deprived of all title and right to the crowne. The Emperour Charles the Fyft his mother was adjudged to perpetuall prisoun, becaus, after the death of her first husband, she was treating of a matche with a secund husband. If we had used that severitie which our ancesters have used, we had beene free both of danger and calumneis at this time. What doe our adversareis crave? Is it, that the controversie might be decided with equitie? That was never refused. What then seeke they? But that we enarme tyranns guiltie of manifest crimes, enriched with the spoile of the people, embrued with their blood, gaping for the slaughter of good men, with authoritie, and sett them over us to rule. Where ever was there read suche lenitie as hath beene used to the king's mother? None of her ancesters, dejected from the throne for manifest crimes, had power to substitute sonne or kinsman, or to nominat curators to the young successour. She craved by letters, that the nobilitie would disburthein her of that authoritie which she was not able to beare, which was granted. She nominated curators. All was allowed and ratified by the estats in parliament.

If it be objected, that her renunciatioun made in prisoun proceeded of feare, and therefore is of no force, it may be easilie answered, that all title to the crown and authoritie was takin from her, and that her life was in their hands, which was spaired, not through her innocencie, but through their pitie. She renounced nothing, therefore, but an emptie title and stile of a queen, and resigned that authoritie which by force might be takin from her. So, if her patrons would have her restored to her owne place wherin she was before the renunciatioun, they would have her to suffer a new triell of her crimes, or rather, due punishment for her crimes.

Where as they alledge, that the majestie and authoritie of good kings and queens is diminished by this rigorous dealing with her, it may be answered, that rather nothing is more honorable for the societie of good men than to be freed of the contagioun of the evill. The senat of Rome losed nothing of their majestie or authoritie by the punishment of Lentulus, Cethegus, or Catiline. Lucius Junius Brutus judged not his hous to be stained with suppressing of tyranns, but rather a staine of the Roman nobilitie to be washin away with the blood of his owne childrein. Christierne, the Danish king his prisoun, detracted nothing from the commendatioun of the nixt king, Christian.

This answere was read before the commissioners the last of Februar, and caried to the queen. The queen went to Greenwiche the day following. Yitt they understood by some of the commissioners that she had read their answere, but was not for all that fullie perswaded of the equity of their caus; therefore desired that the Scotish commissioners would answere to the secund heed, to witt, how, and upon what honest conditiouns, agreement might be made betwixt the two parteis. It was answered, their commissioun was limited; nather was it permitted to them to consult or reasoun upon anie thing which might be prejudiciall to the king's authoritie, nather would they use that libertie, incace it had beene granted.

The fyft day of Marche they compered again in court, and were brought to the queen, who objected unto them, pertinacie. And when it was answered, they had made sufficientlie evident the equitie of their caus, she answered, that she was not satisfied with exemples and arguments that they had alledged. They were remitted to conference with the commissioners before appointed. They cleered themselves of pertinacie, offering to follow anie good advice the queen or her counsellers could find out, providing the present state of the realme were not altered, and the king's authoritie no wise impaired.

The nixt day the Scotish commissioners confered with the English commissioners at Greenwiche. The English propouned some overtures for decisioun of the controversie, about the title of the crown betwixt the mother and the sonne. The Scotish commissioners, after some reasonning, desired that the overtures might be sett doun in writt, and space granted to deliberat upon them, which, after the English commissioners had advised with the queene, was granted. When they had examined them, they perceaved them to be dangerous, prejudiciall to the king's authoritie, and to reache beyond their commissioun. The day following, Robert Pitcarne, Abbot of Dumfermline, was sent to court with their answere, which was this, that the mater concerned the whole estats, and was not to be debated by some few. When they sought an answere in writt, it was granted, wherewith he returned the day following, the 9th of Marche, to court, and sought licence to the Scotish commissioners to returne home. About the tenth day after they gott presence of the queene. The English commissioners were then again appointed to confere with them. They continue constant in their former resolutioun, to witt, to agree to no conditioun of pacificatioun which may abridge the king's royall authoritie.

The aixt day following, the 20th of Marche, they were called again to court. The queene declared unto them that she had weyghed and considered their answeres, and understood verie weill they could not conclude in suche a mater, but that it belonged to the whole estats: and seing there was a parliament to be holdin shortlie in Scotland, willed them to adresse themselves to their journey, that they might be at it; and to travell that an equall number might be chosin out of everie factioun, to reasonn upon the present controversie, and promised to send her ambassaders, to travell to the same effect: in the meantime, desired that the abstinence might be renewed, till the mater were brought to some fine; and promised to move the Scotish queen's commissioners to doe the like, if she might. But the Scotish queen's commissioners answered, they could doe nothing without advice of their owne mastresse; but they sould write to her to understand her minde.

Morton and his assisters sought libertie to returne home. They were desired to await patientlie upon an answere from the Scotish queen to the Bishop of Rosse, and others her commissioners. They answered, they had nothing to doe with the Bishop of Rosse: they had discharged their commissioun; and tumults at home, in their owne countrie, required their presence. Yitt nothing availled till the 4th of Aprile. Then, the queene being at Londoun, sent for the Scotish commissioners, shew unto them that she would stay them no longer, seing the Scotish queen had sharpelie rebooked her owne commissioners for treating in her caus after the maner they did; and becaus "her commissioners doe alluterlie reject the middes which I have propouned for reconciliatioun." So, the Scotish commissioners, licence being granted to returne, entered in their journey the eight of Aprile.

When the Erle of Morton had rehearsed these proceedings in England before the nobilitie, all was approved, their fidelitie and diligence commended. Their nixt care is how to hold the parliament, which was prorogued from the 19th of Januar to the 1st of May, which the rebels purposed to hinder. A proclamatioun was made, that everie man sould come with fyfteene dayes' victuall, to accompanie and assist the regent to the holding of the parliament. The Erle of Morton at this time, becaus he had undertakin upon his owne charges this journey to England, and had sindrie times before susteaned the commoun burthein with his owne privat moyen, was rewarded with the bishoprick of Sanct Andrewes, now vacant, by the death of Johne Hammiltoun the bastard, hanged the sixt of the same moneth, as we have said before.

Upon Fryday, the 27th of Aprile, the Erle of Morton returned from Stirline to Dalkeith, accompanied with two bands of the regent's souldiours. This night, about midnight, the captan's souldiours tooke out the toun's ordinance and artillerie out of the kirk, and some picks out of the counsell-hous, and that by the discoverie of some false brethrein who were upon the counsell, and knew where they läy.

THE ERLE OF CASSILS' CRUELTIE.

Gilbert Erle of Cassils, and Thomas Maister of Cassils, with their complices, to the number of sixteene persons or thereby, came to Croceraguell Wood upon the 29th of August last bypast, and entised Mr Allane Stewart, Commendatare of Croceraguell, to passe with them to the castell of Dunure, being minded, if he had refused, to have caried him away by force. The erle appointed six of his servants to wait upon him, that he escape not. He returned the first of September, and required him to subscrive a few-charter to him of the whole lands perteaning to the abbacie of Croceraguell, together with nyneteene and five veere tackes of the fruicts, tithes, and dueteis therof, of the whole kirks and personages perteaning thereto. He answered, it was a thing unreasonable, in respect the same was alreadie dispouned long of before to the kindelie tenents and possessors, and to James Stewart of Cardonald, and therefore could no wise doe it. After long boasting and minassing. the erle caused his baiker, his cooke, his pantrie man, and some others, take him to a hous called the Blacke Vaute of Dunure. They stripped him naked of all his clothes perforce, except the shirt and doublet; then they bound both his hands at the chekkell bones with a cord, and both his feete likewise. Therafter, they bound his soles betwixt an yron chimney and a fire, whill he was forced, through the torment of cruell burning, to grant to obey his desire, howbeit sore against his will, and to be releeved of the said paine. He subscrived the charter and tacks, without reading or knowing what was conteaned in them. Then the erle caused the tormenters sweare upon a Bible never to reveele this unmercifull handling. The erle came againe the 7th day of September, and brought with him the charter and tacks, which he compelled Mr Alane to subscrive, and required him to ratifie and approve the same before a notar and witnesses, which he refused. Wherupon, he was tormented againe as before. The torment was so great, that he cried to them, "Fy upon you! will yee putt whingers in me, and putt me off this world; or ellis putt a barrell of powder under me, rather than I sould be demained after this maner." The erle hearing the crie, commanded his servant, Alexander Richard, stoppe a servit in his throat, which was obeyed. At ellevin houres at night, when they saw his life in danger, his fleshe consumed and burnt to the bones, and yitt would not condescend to their purpose, he was sett at libertie, but could not recover his former strenth againe.

The erle intrometted by all order of justice with the whole living of Croceraguell for three yeeres bygane, and yitt continued, not regarding the letters of charges executed in the king's name. When Mr Allan was deteaned captive, the erle was charged under paine of treasoun to sett him at libertie. Yitt he disobeyed, went to the horne, and incurred the said paine of treasoun. Mr Allan compleaned to the regent and counsell conveened at Stirline, and craved that the said erle might be charged to produce the few-charter and tacks above mentionned, and these being produced, to be decerned of no availe, for the causes above writtin; and als, to compell him to find cautioun and sovertie, that he, nor none of his name, in anie time comming, intromett or meddle with anie part of the rents of the said abbacie of Croceraguell; and not to oversee his usurped authoritie in tormenting him. The erle was warned, and compeered before the regent and Lords of Secreit Counsell. He alledged, the points of the complaint were either civill or criminall, and that he ought not to answere thereto, but before the judges competent. The regent, with advice of the counsell, without prejudice of the ordinar jurisdictioun and judgment, ordeaned and commanded the said Gilbert Erle of Cassils, being personallie present, to find cautioun and sovertie acted in the bookes of Secreit Counsell, that he, nor none that he may lett, sall invade, molest, or persue the said Mr Allane in his bodie, nor meddle or intromett with his speciall living of Croceraguell; or uptake the fruicts, rents, profites, or duteis therof, otherwise than by order of law and justice, under the paine of two thowsand punds; and to find the like cautioun and sovertie, under the same paine, to Mr George Buchanan, pensioner of Croceraguell, both for his owne persoun, and for his pension, who being personnallie present, craved the same. And incace the said soverties be not found before the said erle depart furth of Stirline, that alwise the same be found before he be releeved of his waird, where he is appointed to remaine, although the other occasiouns for which he is wairded were accomplished and fulfilled. This act of counsell was made at Stirline the 27th of Aprile.

A RYOT COMMITTED.

Upon Saturday, the 28th of Aprile, betwixt one and two in the night, Captan Melvill entered, with twentie and himself, into Andrew Henderson's hous, under promise to search the hous for one called Tod; but at his departing, the rest of his men entered, and tooke foure of Mr James Makgill's servants, the goodman himself, with two other young men, schollers, latelie come from Sanct Andrews. And the good wife demanding what they sought that time of night, a souldiour gave her a stroke, wherof she died incontinent.

THE SKIRMISH OF LOWSILA.

Upon the Lord's day, the 29th, the regent's souldiours, to the number of six score of men, and threttie horse-men, came to Leith, where they proclamed letters and charges in the king's name. After dinner, they come up Leith Wynde, shott in at the port of the Neather Bow, proclamed their letters at the Cannogate Croce, and with beating of the drumme warned all that would tak wages of the king, etc. So they went on their way neere to Craigmillar. Huntlie, Hume, Coldinghame, with all the gentlemen of the castell, the captan, and Sir James Balfour, with some few others excepted, followed after them, with Captan Melvill and Captain Cullan's bands, to the number of fourteene score of pick men and harque-busiers. The regent's souldiours turned and drave them in at the Potterraw Port, notwithstanding of the shooting of the ordinance out of the castell. Captain Moffet was hurt with a speare, whill he was steeking the port. Huntlie stoutlie discharged his dag when he came in at the port, becaus he durst not hold up his face against the pursuers. Others write, that they encountered first at Lowsila; that sundrie that issued out of the toun were slaine, and that, therefore, this skirmish was after called the Skirmish of Lowsila. Buchanan reporteth it after this maner:-When the Erle of Morton returned from Stirline, there was committed to him a band of an hundreth footemen, and some horsemen, for his owne defence, and to represse the incursions of the adversars. He sent twentie horsemen and seventie footemen to Leith, to assist a proclamation to be made in the king's name, that none succour the rebels by sea or by land, with victuall, armour, or munitioun. They returned hard by the ports. These who were within the toun invaded them, but were repelled with shame, after they had skirmished at Lowsila. This was the first breaking off of the warres, which were called the warres between Leith and Edinburgh, which continued till Julie 1572, at which time the toun was made patent to all men

GRANGE CHARGETH SOME OF THE INHABITANTS TO PASSE OFF THE TOUN.

Upon the 30th of Aprile, the captan of the castell caused proclame, at the Mercat Croce of Edinburgh, a charge, commanding all that were minded to concurre with the Erle of Lennox, and others, his enemeis, and will not assure him of their true freindship, that incontinent, within six houres after this proclamatioun, they depart off the toun and suburbs therof; with certificatioun the saids houres being past, he sall demaine them as enemeis, and they sall remaine at their owne perell, becaus the Erle of Lennox and his factioun were determined to invade and persue him with all maner of hostilitie, als weill by open force as secreit interprises; and some seditious persons assemble together by companeis, in privat houses, in the night, with weapons and armour, with watche and waird, without his knowledge, which maketh him suspect that they meane to joyne themselves with his enemeis, for his subversioun. The citicens conveened, and directed some to the castell, to understand what he meant by this proclamatioun. He gave them manie faire words, but never keeped one.

THE CAPTAN TAKETH THE KEYS OF THE PORTS, &c.

Upon Tuisday, the first of May, the captan of the castell tooke the keyes of the ports from the bailliffes, by force, and sett his souldiours to keepe the ports. This same day they beganne to make the barresse above the Butter Trone, for defence of the castell.

ELPHINSTON CAREFULL OF MR KNOX.

The same day the Laird of Elphinston sent a missive to his brother-in-law, Robert Melville, wherin he desired him to have a care that Mr Knox be not troubled. The other answered, that howbeit he had used them otherwise than they had deserved, yitt did they minde no harme to him. But becaus they could not be answerable for the rascall multitude, it was their advice, that he sould ather come to them to the castell, where he sould be preserved as themselves, or ellis that he would remove to some freind's hous, and stay till the troubles were ended. The other answered, whosoever medled with him to his hurt, the Lord would revenge it: alwise he would assay if he might move him to remove out of the toun for a while,

THE TOUN FORTIFEID.

Upon Wednesday, the secund of May, the rebells of the castell beganne to mak another barresse at the strait of the West Bow. Upon the thrid of May, they entered into the tolbuith and counselhous, and Andrew Lindsaye's hous; so the scribes were forced to remove all their letters. This day they spoiled the regent's loodging, and caried away cannabie beds, and other movables of small importance. Upon the fourth of May the duke came to Edinburgh, and his sonne Claud with him, accompaned with three nundreth men, or, as others report, an hundreth hors, and seventie ioote-men. This day they beganne to make holes in the vaute of the Great Kirk of Edinburgh, which they made like a riddell, to shoot thorough at suche as they pleased within the kirk, or at suche us would preasse to breake down the pillers. Now is seene that which men would skarslie have believed before; the Laird of Grange joyning with the Hammiltons, who slue his maister, which nade manie believe that he was privie to the fact.

MR KNOX HIS DEPARTURE OUT OF EDINBURGH.

The same day, the fourth of May, after noone, the rebells held a counsell in the castell. The captan desired an assurance to certan of the citicens, speciallie from the Hammiltons, for Mr Knox. They answered they could not promise him assurance upon their nonours, becaus there were manie rascalls and others in the toun, who might doe him harme without their knowledge. The best professors in the toun, together with Mr Craig, came to him, and desired him in the name of God to depart, seing he was in danger. But he refused, till they said, if he stayed, it would be the occasioun of shedding muche blood; they could not see him suffer harme; but it behoved them to defend him against whomsoever. Seing the Hammiltons and the rest of the rebels had now the strongest partie within the toun, so that they were not able to resist them, (they) besought him, for their owne sakes, to depart. So. at their instant request, he went over the water to Abbotshall, the day following. There rested other two dayes for celebration of the communioun, but (it) was interrupted by his departure. Upon the Lord's day following, the duke came to Mr Craig's sermoun, with his sonne Claud, the Lord Huntlie, and the rest, but went out after sermoun before prayer.

A BRAVADE BEFORE THE CASTELL.

Upon Moonday, the seventh of May, some gentlemen of the Erk of Morton's houshold ryding upon Hakerton's croft before the castell, for all their shooting, called them within tratours both to God and man, murtherers, &c.

A PROCLAMATION.

A proclamatioun was made this day, that none sould be troubled but suche as had borne armes against them, or assisted their enemeis: that if anie souldiour tooke anie man, he sould bring him to his captan; if a gentleman tooke anie, he sould bring him to the lords, to be tried if he had borne armes against them, or assisted their enemeis.

MR JAMES KIRKALDIE RETURNETH FROM FRANCE, WITH FURNITURE FOR THE CASTELL.

Upon Tuisday, the 8th of May, hors and foot were sent doun to Leith, to bring up the provisioun, which Mr James Kirkaldie brought out of France in a little barke. They brought up six coffers, and made men believe they had gottin als muche gold as would serve for waging of a thowsand souldiours for a yeere; which was not true. He tooke with him to France some of the queen's jewells, sold them, and brought home three or foure last of powder, some croslets and rotchets of small ordinance, four or five tunne of wine, some bisket, bread, and suche other furniture. This Mr James Kirkaldie was seene by some merchants familiar at Parise with James Hammiltoun of Bothwelhauche.

ARGILE AND BOYD COME TO EDINBURGH.

Upon Wednesday, the 9th of May, the Erle of Argile, Lord Boyd, and the Commendatare of Arbroth, came to Edinburgh, at en houres at night. Argile and Boyd came to make agreement etwixt the two parteis.

PROCLAMATIONS.

Upon Thursday, the tenth of May, all who were minded to asist the regent and the Erle of Morton were commanded to depart iff the toun, by proclamation at the Mercat Croce. The inhabitants were charged to keepe their loodgings everie night after nyne toures.

THE REGENT COMETH TO LEITH.

Upon Friday, the elleventh of May, the regent came to Leith, ccompaneid with five or six thowsand hors, wherupon the ports vere shutt, and captans appointed to possesse suche parts of the oun as were allotted to them.

Upon Saturday, the 12th, a drumme was sent from Leith to the sailiffes, to crave that the ports might be patent to the regent and us companie. Arthure of Myrrintoun being at the port, answered, hat he sould not gett entrie there, and forbade the drummer come gain suche earands. Another was sent to the West Port, to the ame effect.

PHAIRNIHIRST AND HIS COMPANIE.

Upon the Lord's day, the 13th of May, Phairnihirst came with eventie speares or thereabout. One of his companie was hurt with the shott of a hacquebutt, becaus they were mistakin for the regent's men.

MR CRAIG A NEUTRALL.

This day Mr Craig taught upon the 130 Psalme. He compared the estat of the Kirk of God within the toun to the estat of the Jewes, who were oppressed, sometime by the Assyrians, sometime by the Ægyptians. He said, when wicked parteis contend and strive for their pride, ambitioun, and worldlie honour, the kirk is always in trouble. By these speeches he offended manie, because he made the caus of both parteis alike. He lamented there was no neutral man to make agreement betwixt the two parteis, seing whatsoever partie sall be overthrowne, the countrie sall be brought to ruine. But some said, "Happie is that countrie wherin murtherers, tratours, and blood-thristie men, &c., are punished, and so the countrie freed of trouble."

THE EAST PORT FORTIFIED.

This night the regent's men planted their ordinance upon the Dow-craig, from whence they shott at the men of warre in the dirtic blocke-hous within the wall of Leith Wynde. Captan Gibson, who was captan of the steeple, one called Kirkaldie, who before had danced at the cocke of the steeple,¹ and a corporall, and a Frenche man called Busyne, were slaine. The regent's souldiours entered into one Lowson's hous at the head of Leith Wynde, and in another hous just over against it, from whence they shott, and lett none remaine upon the two turrets above the Neather Bow Port. The port was shutt, and filled up with mucke, stones, and timber, by fourthoures of the morning. All worke men were commanded, at beater of drumme, to come with spaid, shoole, and mattocke; but Huntlie, Dancing upon such dangerous eminences was not an unusual bravado among the martialists of the middle ages. Las Casas gives an account of a daring exploit of this kind performed by Don Alonso de Ojeda, one of the fellow adventurers of Columbus. He ascended the tower of the principal church of Seville, walked along a narrow beam that projected twenty feet from the wall into the air, stood on one leg when he reached the end of the beam, turned himself nimbly round, and walked back again to the tower, while the people below, to whose sight he was almost diminished to a span, gazed upward in breathless astonishment. He then stood with one food on the beam, planted the other against the wall, and threw an orange to the top of the tower;—thus proving his immense muscular strength as well as his firmness and adventurous courage.

Hume, Claud Hamiltoun, Kilwinning, Arbrothe, the Parson of Flisk, and diverse others gentlemen, were the cheefe worke men. They drew down manie of Alexander Clerk's geests¹ lying in the street, for feare the other partie sould have entered. The captan came never furth to the toun, muche lesse to the feilds.

THE REBELS FENCE A PARLIAMENT.

Upon the 14th of May the regent came out of Leith, with his armie, to the Cannogate. They cast their trenches before the ports. The other partie within sett their men in good order about the walls of the toun where there was greatest danger; the gentlemen awaited on the streets. They sett foure gabrons at the strait of the Bow, which they filled with earth, just against the port, where they placed some ordinance, to shoot at the port when need required. About ellevin houres, the Erle of Huntlie, Lord Hume. and Kilwinning, the Pryour of Coldinghame, brother to Lethington, with foure or five gentlemen, went to the tolbuith, and fenced the court of parliament in our soveran's name, specifeing nather king nor queene; and tooke documents that they were present in name of suche as were called to the parliament, to answere to suche things as were to be layed to their charge. This was done in presence of three scribes of the sessioun, George Gibson, Robert Scot, and Johne Wallace, whom they had charged before under the paine of five thowsand, to be imposed upon everie one of them, not to give furth anie letter or letters whatsoever, without licence asked and given by the captan; and that they remain in Edinburgh, under the same paine.

THE GREAT CANNON BROUGHT DOUN.

This day the great cannon was brought doun from the castell to the Blacke Frier Yaird, but was caried up again to the castell about the evening; but brought doun again on the morne, at Huntlie's desire, who found sovertie, under the paine of five or six hundretl punds, to bring it backe againe. Two or three poore men lose their lives with drawing of it. They shott with it twentie-four shott. One shott fired their owne gabrons. There was slaine this day of souldiours and workemen eight or nyne. They were compelled, by shooting out of hous in Pleasants, to remove the cannon.

THE REGENT HOLDETH A PARLIAMENT IN THE HEID OF THE CANNOGATE.

The regent not having sufficient artillerie to assault the toun, is advised to hold the parliament in the head of the Cannogate, which was within the freedome of Edinburgh, and therefore als sufficient a place as if it had beene within the walls. So the parliament was holdin above St Johne's Croce, the 14th of May. The Bishop of Sanct Andrewes his sonne was forefaulted the 17th of May, the Abbot of Kilwinning, Lethington, and his two brethrein, Johne Pryour of Coldingham, and Mr Thomas Matlane. The parliament was continued till the fourth of August to be holdin in Stirline.

THE REBELS HOLD A PRETENDED PARLIAMENT.

The rebells held their parliament in the queen's name in the tolbuith of Edinburgh, with crowne, scepter, and sword, and prorogued their parliament to the fourth of August, or, as others write, to the tenth of June, to be holdin in Edinburgh. Two bishops, and some others, sent their votes to that rare number. They forfaulted some of the other partie.

The Lord Hereis, Maxwell, and Lochinvar, returned to Edinburgh, accompanied with two hundreth hors, or above. Argile and Boyd would stay for no treatie, becaus they refused reasonable offers propouned to them by the other partie.

A SKIRMISH.

Hereis, Lochinvar, and Phair nihirst, went out at the West Port, accompanied with 200 hors, and 120 harquebusiers, of purpose to have takin the fort upon the Dow-craig. But, when they came here, they retired at the sight of twentie-foure or threttie men. The regent's horse-men came at out by the Canno-mylnes. Some pricking and skirmishing there was in the crofts; fyve or six were aurt, Arthure of Myrrintoune runne through with a speare. They thurst never goe without the shott of the castell. There were singlere shotts out of the castell of great and small peeces. Captan Moffett was buried this night.

The commissioners appointed by the last Generall Assemblie conveened at Leith, and sent some of their number to the castell of Edinburgh, to travell for agreement betwixt the two parteis. Their travells may be gathered out of the discourse following:

"At our entrie in the castell, we past to the great hall on the south side, where soon after Sir James Balfour came to us; and incontinent therafter the lord duke, and at last the captan of the castell; who desired the lord duke and us also to enter in the chamber within the said hall, where the lord secretare was sitting before his bed, in a chaire. My lord duke satt down. So the captan desired us all instantlie to sitt down, which we did.

"Then the Superintendent of Fife beganne the propositioun, saying, 'My lords, becaus some commissioners of the kirk are conveened presentlie at Leith, who perceaving thir intestine troubles in this commoun wealth, thought it became them of their duetie to offer their labours and travells, to the end, if it sould please God, that thereby the same might be quenched: for the which we are come heere to offer our travells and labours, as said is.' After this propositioun silence was keeped a certan space, whill I continued the purpose again on this maner: 'My lords, I thinke our commissioun extendeth this farre, that seing your lordships are willing we sould travell as yee have declared, by your writting to our brother, Mr Craig, and we are also verie willing to bestow our labours, then it resteth to know and heare of your lordships what heeds or articles yee will offer unto us, as a ground wherupon we may travell.'

"To this answereth the lord secretar: 'Mr Johne, ye are overwise. We will make no offers to them who are in the Cannogate: for the principals of the nobilitie of Scotland are heere, to whom they who are in the Cannogate are farre inferiour in that ranke. Therefore, to them we minde not to make offers: for it becometh them rather to make offers to these that are heere. And if they would come to this point, to consider how farre they have gone astray, and desire the noblemen heere to travell for them, that suche things as they have done heertofore might be remitted to them, and securitie to be made of their lives, lands, goods, and heritages, for them, their freinds, and their posteriteis. I understand thir noblemen will to that effect concurre with them, that all securitie may be provided for them, so that concord may be had among them all; and otherwise, bidde them not looke for anie offers from us.' Then said I, 'So, my lord, it appeareth to me we have the lesse to doe, seing no ground is offered to us wherupon we may travell. Then said Mr Craig, 'But it appeareth to me that we have somewhat further to say; that seing there is a lawfull authoritie established in the persoun of the king and regent, throughout this realme, which ought to be obeyed by all the subjects therof, therefore our duetie is, as commissioners and members of the kirk, to admonishe everie one of your lordships to obey the same.'

"Then said the secretar, 'I will show you the discourse of the proceedings heerof from the beginning. When we enterprised the taking of the queen on Carbarrie Hill, there was then two cheefe occasiouns that moved us: The one was, to punishe the king's murther, cheefelie in my Lord Bothwell; the other was, that the unhappie mariage contracted betwixt the queen and him might be dissolved. And to this end, to sequestrat her bodie from him, she was putt in Lochlevin. And that thir were the cheefe occasiouns, the proclamations made at that time, and the writtings sent to other countreis plainlie declare. So that we meant nothing then of the king's authoritie, nor to putt the queen out of her owne rowne, as I myself, (said he,) that same night the queene was brought to Edinburgh, made the offer to her Grace, if she would abandoun the Lord Bothwell, she sould have als thankfull obedience as ever she had since she came in Scotland. But no wise would she consent to leave the Lord Bothwell, and so she was putt in Lochlevin. At which time we hoped that all men sould have assisted to revenge the king's murther: but never one moe came to us nor we were at Carbarrie Hill. But by the contrare, the Lord Huntlie and manie others rose up against us, so that they were greater partie than we. And then we, finding no other way to preserve us from inconveniences, devised to make the cloke of some new authoritie; even as if we were passing over at Kinghorne, and the boat tooke fire, yee would leape in the sea to flee the fire, and finding yourself able to drowne, yee would preasse again to the boat. Even so the setting up of the king's authoritie was but a fetche or shift, to save us from great inconveniences. Not that ever we meant that the same sould stand and continue, as ever therafter I shew my lord regent, willing him to compone and agree the mater. And for my owne part, plainlie I confesse, that I did verie evill and ungodlie in setting up the king's authoritie; for he can never be justlie king, so long as his mother liveth. And that which I speeke, the whole noblemen within this toun, and others heere present, I am sure, will affirme the same.'

"At this speeche the lord duke, Sir James Balfour, and the captan, confessed with mutuall consents, nodding with their heads, and with low speeche, the premisses to be of truthe. Then said the secretar to Sir James Balfour, 'My lord president, yee can tell thir things als weill as anie man can.' Then said Sir James, 'Indeid, my lord, I was privie to thir things, and knew them weill, and understand the verie ground of thir proceedings to have beene as your lordship hath spokin.' Then said I to the secretar, 'My lord, I cannot tell what fetches and shifts your lordship hath used: but heerinto lett your owne conscience accuse yourself before your God.

VOL. III.

Conscientiam vestram oneramus. But one thing weill I wote; honest men of simple conscience and upright dealing meant nothing of thir your shifts and fetches, but proceeded upon an honest and constant ground, having the glorie of God before their eyes, and the punishment of horrible crimes.' 'Nather,' said I, 'my lord, have godlie men of upright dealing used suche shifts and fetches as thir of yours are, namelie, in suche notable and weightie maters. But one thing, my lord, I perceave, that me thinke God hath beguiled you: that howbeit he hath used you and your shifts as an instrument to sett up the king's authoritie, yitt it appeareth He will not sett it down again at your pleasure.'

"Then said the secretare, 'How know yee that? Are yee of God's counsell? Quis fuit consiliarius ejus? Yee sall see the contrare within few dayes, and then we will see what obedience yee will give.' Then said I, 'Until that time, my lord, our argument is good, and yee and others ought to give the king obedience.' Then said the Superintendent of Fife, 'Your argument, my lord, appeareth verie good, that the authoritie once established by order, with consent of the three estats of the realme, ought and sould be obeyed, ay and whill the same be sett down again by the like power and order.' Then said the secretare, 'I mervell that yee will say so: for I remember I heard Mr Willocks, Mr Johne Row, and the rest of you, preache concerning Papistrie, that albeit the same were established by long continuance and authoritie of princes, vitt sould the same be rejected without order; and as it came in over the dyke, so sould it be shott over the dyke; and not tarie whill the like order be used in the setting down of it, as was used in establishing of it. Even so I say of the king's authoritie, that we need not tarie, whill the same be sett down by the self-same order that it was erected; for that, perchance, might be too long.' Then said I, 'In this your argument, my lord, I perceave a paralogisme; and that, by reasoun there is great difference and dissimilitude betwixt religioun and maters of policie. For as concerning religioun, howsoever a wicked religioun entereth in, so soone as the same is knowne to be wicked, how long continuance, or whatsoever authoritie it hath had, it ought incontinent to be rejected; and the preachers' duetie is, to admonishe the people therof, commanding them to reject it, and to embrace the truthe; and that, becaus a wicked religioun tendeth directlie to the dishonour of the name of God, which in no wise ought to be suffered, no, not an houre. But otherwise it is in the policie, and cheefelie in the established authoritie of kings and princes; for howsoever the authoritie be once established, I presuppone it were by violence or tyrannie.'

"Heere the secretar interrupted me, and said, 'Mr Johne, I am glad to heare that confessioun out of your mouth.' 'My lord,' said I, 'givand and not grantand that so were, alwise I understand a lawfull ground in the king's authoritie; and the authoritie once established, ought to be obeyed. Nather is it against conscience so to doe, but rather standeth weill with good conscience; as Paul testifieth, writting to the Romans, commanding them to obey the emperour's authoritie then established among them, and that for conscience' caus,' said I. 'Yitt if yee sall consider the ground how the emperours of Rome entered to their authoritie, I thinke the ground therof was rather violence and tyrannie, nor anie lawfull establishement by the lawes of reasoun. Yitt, notwithstanding, the apostle commandeth the samine to be obeyed, which he would not have done concerning the obedience to a wicked religioun. And if the argument be good, that we sall obey the established authoritie, howbeit it have entered in by violence and tyrannie, then, muche rather ought we to obey the authoritie established, the ground wherof is lawfull, reasonable, and godlie. And if we sould enter in discourse, I cannot tell how manie authoriteis are established upon a lawfull ground.'

"Heere, as I understand, we keeped silence a certan space, and therafter Sir James Balfour said to me, 'I mervell that in your kirk yee have made an act decerning the king's authoritie lawfull, and so to be obeyed.' 'My lord,' said I, 'have yee read that act?' 'Nay,' said he. 'Indeid,' said I, 'so it appeareth; for we have made no act decerning anie authoritie lawfull. But we have concluded that the king's authoritie established sould be obeyed, and all the subjects to be admonished to his obedience, and he to be prayed for in all publict sermons. And what fault find yee, my lord, with this?' 'I pray you, tell me how know vee that the king's authoritie is established?' 'I know, my lord,' said I, 'by two arguments: The First, Becaus it is established by the three estats publictlie in parliament; Secundlie, Becaus it hath receaved universall obedience within this realme, without erecting anie other face of authoritie in the contrare.' 'But,' said he, 'how know yee that it is established truelie?' 'My lord,' said I, 'I can weill answere to that argument: for I was present in parliament, where I both heard and saw the samine concluded. If it be true that yee are there standing, or that you little dog is lying in the secretar's lap, (for a little messan was lying upon his knee,) so is it true that I have said.' Then Sir James Balfour said, 'That parliament was no lawfull parliament; vea, it is null in the self.' 'My lord,' said I, 'is that processe of nullitie deduced and concluded by anie suche order as the parliament was holdin?" 'That needeth not,' said he, 'becaus it is null in the self.' 'Truelie, my lord,' said I, 'I learned a rule in the law, Sententia facit jus inter partes donec retractetur.' Then said the secretare, 'That parliament is null for manie causes, and cannot be judged a lawfull parliament.' Then said I, 'My lord, if anie parliament was holdin in Scotland thir seven hundreth yeeres, I doubt not but that was a lawfull parliament both in substance and ceremoneis; and what nullitie yee can alledge, I doubt not but the same may be alledged against anie parliament in Scotland thir seven hundreth veeres agoe. Men may know what the nullitie of this parliament tendeth to, seeing our religioun was heerin established.'

"And heere we were appearing to fall out in some other termes, devoiding from the purpose; therefore, the secretar tooke up the mater again, and said to us, 'See yee not what thir men which are in the Cannogate pretend? Not ellis, I warrand you, but to rugge and reave other men's livings, and to enriche themselves with other men's geare; for how manie of them have other men's benefices and livings, and yitt cannot be satisfied?' Then answered Mr Craig, 'Lett suche things be spokin of them that be yonder, meekle worse is spokin of them that be heere.' 'And what is that, Mr Craig?' said he. 'My lord, it is plainlie spokin, that these who are heere travell onlie in their proceedings to cloke cruell murtherers; and that the consciences of some of you are so pricked with the same, that yee will never suffer the nobilitie to agree.' 'Yitt, Mr Craig,' said he, 'so long as I was with them, they never accused me of the king's murther, and the last veere, when they gave me all their hand-writts, purging me therof. Yea, to be short with you, so long as I was a piller to mainteane their unjust authoritie, they would never putt at me as they doe. In the treatie that is begunne in England, that is one of the cheefe articles, that the king and regent's murther sall be punished to the rigour, in all persons who sall be found guiltie therof; and our queen hath also oblished herself to the Queen of England, under the paine of tinsell of her right that she pretendeth to the crowne of England, that these murthers sall be punished in all that sall be found guiltie therof.' Then said Mr Craig, 'How can thir two stand, that the queene being sett up in authoritie, who is guiltie of the murther of the king, sall punishe the murther in anie others?' 'My lord,' said I, 'I heard your lordship tell a tale, that there was an appointment upon a time betwixt the King of England and Spaine: and when maters were concluded, a mirrie man said to the King of England, 'Sir, who sall be cautioun for the King of Spaine?' Even so I say, my lord, 'Who sall be cautioun for our queen in that behalfe? 'Mr Johne,' said he, 'the Queen of Scotland will not type her right which she pretendeth to the crown of England for anie favour she beareth to anie man in Scotland.'

"'But this is a mervellous thing,' sayeth Mr Craig, 'that albeit my lord duke here, and some others, acknowledgeth not the king's authoritie, yitt, my lord,' said he, 'yee, yee, and yee,'—pointing to the Secretar, Sir James, and the Captan,—'will not denie the king's authoritie, seing yee have professed the same, and were the cheefe instruments of erecting the same.' Then said the secretare, that the king's authoritie was sett up in respect of the queen's dimissioun, to which I think I was als privie, and travelled as muche as anie in the Cannogate, as they can beare me record themselves; yea, and farther, without me they had nather the knowledge, wis-dome, nor moven to performe the same. And thinke vee of your conscience, that that dimissioun was made willinglie, seing the queene was holdin in captivitie, howbeit my Lord Lindsey and my Lord Ruthven so depouned publictlie? And for verificatioun heerof, my Lord Lindsey being desired by my lord regent therafter earnestlie to passe to England with him, he refused altogether, whether for laike of expenses or otherwise, I cannot tell. But, at length, when my lord regent preassed him so earnestlie, being in a hous of Leith, before a honorable companie, that he behoved to goe to England, then my Lord Lindsey swore a great oath, and said, 'My lord, if yee caus me goe to England with you, I will spill the whole mater; for if they accuse me, of my conscience I cannot but confesse the truthe.' Then said I, 'Truelie, my lord, this appeareth to me one of your owne fetches, that my Lord Lindsey used at that time; for seing he had no will of the journey, he would have used some coloured meanes. And in this fetche, my lord, he may appeare to be one of your disciples, howbeit he meant not so indeid.'

"Heere we beganne to mow, and, as it were, everie one to laugh upon another, and so raise. Then Mr Andrew Hay past to the captan, and spake with him a part; and therafter I spake with the captan. When we were readie to come our way, the secretare cryeth on me, 'Mr Johne, thinke yee that my Lord of Lennox, being an Englishman sworne, can be lawfull regent to this realme? 'My lord,' said I, 'whether he be an Englishman sworne or not, I cannot tell, for that standeth in facto, but I understand he is a naturall borne Scotish man.' 'But I can tell you,' said he, 'I know he is an Englishman sworne.' 'But presupponing,' said I, 'that so were, what impediment is that? Whether he be an English man, Frenche man, Spaniard, or Italian, if he be lawfull tutor of the law, and hath the right thereto, why may he not be lawfull regent during the time of the tutorie? For was not the Duke of Albanie a Frenche man borne? yitt becaus he was lawfull tutor to our king, he bare the regiment during his minoritie. And how could he justlie by anie letts be secluded therefra?' 'Mr Johne,' sayeth he, 'there is a difference betwixt the two.' 'And what is that,' said I, 'my lord?' 'We are joyned in league and amitie with France, but England hath beene our old enemeis.' 'My lord,' said I, 'that argument now appeareth nothing; for we have peace and amitie with England presentlie, as we have with France.' And thus we took our leave, and came our way."

CAPTAN HACKERSTON'S BRAG.

Upon Saturday, the 19th of May, the horsemen went out at the West Port, with two hundreth harquebusiers, of purpose to draw some of the regent's folke frome the Cannogate, that in the meane time others might sallie out at the Neather Port. Captan Hakkerston went out at a doore beside the Cowgate Port, accompanied with sixteene men, and came to the trenche at the head of the Cannogate, and slue a poore gudget doing the office of nature in a trenche, but lost one of the best he brought with him. When he went in again, he bragged he had slaine six or seven.

THE REGENT RETURNETH TO LEITH.

The regent and his armie stayed in the Cannogate from Moonday in the morning, the 14th of May, till Saturday at night, the 19th of May, notwithstanding of frequent shooting out of the castell. All this time, there was nather preaching nor prayer, nor sound of anie bell heard in the toun, but ringing of cannons. The cannon did little hurt, but demolished chimney-heads; but great harme was done with hacquebutts on both sides. The captan of the castell persued the regent, when he went out of the Cannogate to Leith, after supper, with ten shott of cannon.

THE REGENT REMOVETH FROM LEITH TO STIRLINE.

Upon the Lord's day, the 20th of May, about ten houres, all the gentlemen and souldiours that were in Edinburgh went furth on foote and hors, becaus the regent was removing from Leith to Stirline. Some skirmishing there was about the Water of Leith with the footemen. As the Erle of Morton returned from Corstorphine, where he parted from the regent, foure hundreth hors and three hundreth footemen sailled out of the toun, to the Burrow Mure, toward Merchinston. But he was past Braid's Craigs in his way to Dalkeith, before anie hors were drawin out.

THE REGENT'S LOODGING SPOILED.

Upon the 21st of May, the souldiours tooke out of Cuthbert Ferguson's hous of the Cannogate, where the regent loodged, three or four twnne of wine, with pockes of wooll, and packes of skinnes, which were brought from Leith for defence from shootting.

THE CASTELL OF GLASGOW ALMOST SURPRIZED.

Upon the 22d of May, Hereis, Maxwell, Lochinvar, Phairnihirst, went furth of the toun. Upon the 23d of May, Claud Hammiltoun went with a number of horsemen and footemen towards Hammiltoun, purposing to surprize the castell of Glasgow, which was to be betrayed by the three brethrein of Cochnoch, who were committed prisoners there. Some they seduced; they putt furth three or foure; some they bound; some knew nothing of the interprise. They shott a peece, for a warning to the other partie. The burgesses hearing the shott, suspected, and incontinent with the Laird of Minto, who had the castell in keeping, closed about the hous, placed some harquebusiers in the steeple, scaled the hous, and recovered it with the losse of two men. So their enemeis were dis-Claud returned with six or seven score of horsemen to Edinburgh the last of May, and brought with him the Lord Sempill. The captans or souldiours went out of the toun, and oppressed honest men where they pleased.

SKIRMISH OF SOULDIERS BETWEEN DALKEITH AND EDINBURGH.

Upon Saturday, in the morning, the secund of June, there went irth two hundreth and twentie footmen, harquebusiers, and a undreth hors, to burne the toun of Dalkeith; or, if that succeeded ot, to terrifie the bands of souldiours lying there from ranging broad; or by some brayade, to ostentat their power to the comoun people. Some report, that they were six hundreth hors and ote. They brought with them in carts two brazen peeces, or dcons. When they came to Lugton, in sight of Dalkeith, there illied furth threescore hors and two hundreth foote; drave them acke, and persued them till they came to Craigmillar, and drave nem from three or foure places which they had takin for defence. n their pursute, they tooke Captan Hackerston, and eight or nyne ouldiours with him, and foure horsemen. Whill Captan Melvill triketh up a barrell of powder, to deale among the souldiours, hey come so thicke upon him, that one of their lunts falling into he barrell, the powder taketh fire. Sixteene souldiours were burnt, that they were not able to serve; two of them died resentlie. Captan Melvill himself, having a croslet upon him, ras blowne up from the earth a good space; and after, was rought to the toun without hope of life. The other partie pereaving, pursued still. The pursuers after this were onlie threecore souldiours and twelve horsemen, the space of halfe a myle or nore. Eighteen horsemen and threttie foot were sent out of dinburgh, to succour the pursued. The pursuers flee. Some vere killed, some wounded, twentie-six takin prisoners; but moe vere slaine on the other side. The Erle of Morton had sent away. he day before, eightie souldiours and some horsemen, with money o be sent to Dundie, which emboldenned the other partie to their nterprise, wherof they reaped no vantage. Captan Melvill dearted this life upon Wednesday, the 6th of June, about midnight. Ie raved continuallie from the first night he came in till his dearture, being tormented with a fever. The captan of the castell made an harang to his band within the blocke-hous of the caste wherin he lamented the death of suche a captan; promised the he would be their captan himself; that none of them sould wan so long as he had a furre of heritage in Scotland; therefore, desired them to be true to the king and him, in defence of that hou "and in resistance," said he, "of our old enemeis, if they sall a sault it. What is the purpose of the lords," said he, "within th toun, I know not, nather will I have to doe with them. My on intentioun is to keepe this hous; and therefore desire you to be leill and true." Upon the elleventh of June, Hume, Balcleuch and Phairnihirst, went furth toward Dalkeith, where there was pricking on both sides.

GRANGE HIS CARTELL AND GARLEIS' ANSWERE.

Upon the elleventh of June, the Laird of Grange, captan of the castell, sent a cartell to Dalkeith. The contents of it were, the seing he was slaundered as a tratour, a murtherer, an assister murtherers, and allower of the slaughter of the Erle of Murre late regent, for whom, during his life, he hazard all that he had: the world, if he knew who were the authors or sowers of sucl bruites, he would answere them more particularlie: Alwise for d fence of his honour, which he would mainteane against all deidli of whatsoever estat he be, that hath by writt, speeche, or othe wise, slaundered him, as said is, he hath unhonestlie, falselie, ar mischeantlie leed in his throat. Upon the 14th of June, Alexander Stuart of Garleis, younger, sent an answere to this his cartel accuseth him of arrogancie, in that he compared himself to the cheefe of the nobilitie of Scotland, not excepting the king's Grad his blood, he being of so base condition, that his father had be eight oxengang of land, and his progenitors, for the most part, sal makers. "Howbeit that thou art," said he, "so notorious a tra tour, that this actioun sould be decided by other judges than b adventure of armes, notthelesse, I, Alexander Stewart of Garlei will offer my self to prove thy vyle and filthie treasoun with m persoun against thyne, and as the law and custome of armes requireth: With protestatioun, that it sall not be prejudiciall to my honour, nor to my blood, to compare my self with so late a printed gentleman, manifestlie knowne to have committed at sindrie times diverse treasouns; and takin out of the galeyes to be keeped to the gallowes."

THE REBELS HOLD A PARLIAMENT.

Hereis, Maxwell, Lochinvar, and the other rebells, returne to Edinburgh, and among the rest, the Bishop of Galloway or Athens, to the parliament appointed to be holdin the 12th of June. Upon Tuisday, the 12th of June, the duke, the Erle of Huntlie, Lords Hume and Maxwell, Lord Claud, the Pryor of Coldinghame, the Abbot of Kilwinning, the Bishop of Galloway, the Laird of Phairnihirst, and some other barons, came down on foote from the castell to the tolbuith. A letter was presented to them by Garthlie from the queen, but forged in the castell of Edinburgh. The letter or supplicatioun was read, and, according to her requeist, all the former proceedings tuiching the king's coronatioun were made null. The Lord Somervell his vote being asked, (for he was writtin for,) answered, he was a man of small judgement, and therefore behoved to advise, before he rashlie voted to depose a crowned king: so he refused for that time, wherof he tooke documents. Huntlie was created Generall-Lieutenant for the queene. Within two houres and a halfe, that is, about twelve houres, they came furth of the tolbuith, and road in order, first Phairnihirst, nixt Lord Claud, then the Pryor of Coldinghame, then the Lord Hume, bearing the sword: after him Huntlie, bearing the scepter, and the duke the crowne. The captan refused to deliver the honours out of the castell, when the regent held his parliament before; vitt he made no scruple to deliver them to the factioun of the rebels.

The forged supplicatioun, and their act made therupon, followeth; together with other proceedings at this their parliament. In Parliamento S. D. N. R. tento in prætorio Burgi de Edinburgh, undecimo die mensis Junii, Anno Domini 1571.

The which day, anent the supplication givin into the states of parliament, wherof the tenor followeth:—

"It is not unknowne to the whole nobilitie and estates of this realme, how the queen's Majestie being, by birth and lawes of the realme, your undoubted soverane princesse, was a long time deteaned captive within the loche and fortalice of Lochlevin; during which time of her imprisounment, there was presented to her Highnesse upon the suddane a letter, conteaning a certan forme of dimissioun of her crowne; bearing also her consent to renounce and overgive the same; with a commissioun to certane persons specified therin to receave the said renunciatioun and dimissioun, in favours of her Majestie's decrest sonne; and after the receaving, to plant, place, and inaugurate him in the kingdome, and with all ceremoneis requisite, to putt the royall crown upon his head, &c. as at more lenth is specified in the saids letters of procuratioun or dimissioun, which letter she was required, and with great instance preassed to subscrive. And albeit finding herself suddanlie assaulted with a motioun of so great consequence, when as she was by strait guairds secluded from all intelligence of the most part of her nobilitie and faithfull counsellers, she at the first required some delay and time, to be advised upon so weightie a caus, yitt it behoved her to yeeld to force which she was not able to resist. For suche threatnings and fearefull languages was used to her, accompaneid with a vehemencie and awful countenance of these who had the charge to deale in the mater, that it appeared weill, in what danger her most noble persoun stood, if she sould seeme repugnant to their most unreasonable desires. Which opinioun was also confirmed in her heart by secreit advertisement sent to her at the same time by some noblemen and trustie persons, who were privie to the extremitie intended against her, if she sould refuse, and yitt were, according to their duetie, carefull for her preservatioun; by whom she was advised to make no difficultie, as she tendered her owne life, and would eshew present death. The same advice also was brought to her from Sir Nicolas Throgmorton, knight, being there in this realme ambassader for the Queene of England, her Majestie's good sister, being directed hither purposelie to comfort her upon her said good sister's behalfe, and to use all good offices possible for procuring of her libertie; who, (as is probable,) by frequent conferences and discourses with her principall adversareis, had decyphered their wicked intentioun. When as she had a little mused with herself upon the dangers imminent; and casting her eve to view the place where she was for the time, being so small a compasse of ground, envirouned on all parts with the barbare element, the water; and therewithall considered, under whose rule, subjectioun, and keeping, she was, being persons like eneugh to putt their cruell minassings in executioun; having had experience by some other their actiouns, that they might weill find in their heart to shed blood, and how little reverence they bare to her royall persoun, it was no mervell, that being borne to impyre, and frome her craddell birth brought up in commanding, and so not accustomed to obey, namelie, suche as God had constitute her subjects; finding her state so suddanlie changed, and the order of nature inverted, that now she must be ruled by her owne vassalls; being also destituted of all worldlie comfort and hope of releefe; speciallie, being a woman, it is (I say) no mervell if her heart was stricken with a suddane feare, yea, suche as might fall in a constant man; by which feare, her Majestie was induced to subscrive the said letter, and others, bearing the establishement of a certane kinde of regiment during the minoritie of her sonne.

"Upon how weake a ground the dimissioun is founded may appeare by the narrative it self, conteaning so vaine and frivole causes, as need little declaration of the contrare. For all who know or have spokin with her Majestie can beare record, that (praised be God) her bodie, spirit, or senses, are not so feebled and decayed, that she was not able to discharge her self of the office God had called her unto als sufficientlie as anie whom they desired to be placed in the rowme. And ridiculous it had beene to lay upon the shoulders of an infant in the craddell a burthein, which her backe could not beare; being knowne to be of so great pregnant witt, and quick engyne, brought up in the most frequent theater of the world, continuallie exercised in the trade of princelie effaires; indued with suche wisdome and other naturall gifts for a prince, that her most malicious enemeis come never to that impudencie, that they durst argue her of insufficiencie to beare rule. Whether the Erle of Lennox' backe be able to carie the heavie burthein which her shoulders could not beare, lett the world judge, speciallie suche as are naturallie acquainted with his naturalitie, and have good prooffe how gravelie he can discourse in maters of estat.

"Upon this pretended dimissioun, subscrived, as said is, in the place of her imprisonment, and extorted by just feare of present death, is grounded, and consequentlie followed, the coronatioun of her deerest sonne; and the name of his authoritie abused by a few persons, who have clothed themselves with the coverture therof, the more easilie to overthrow the whole estate. It is not to be past over with silence, in what maner the privie seale was appended to that letter; how it was violentlie, and by force, reft out of the keeper's hands, as may appeare by authentick documents.\(^1\) So, as her Majestie's subscriptioun was extorted by force, so was the seale extorted by force.

"It is also to be considered, what probabilitie there is, that her Majestie would have of her owne motive, givin over her crowne to her sonne, being an infant in the craddell, without provisioun of her owne estat, or reservatioun of anie part of the revenues of the crowne, for maintenance of her princelie port. Attour, it is not to be neglected, of what validitie a dimissioun of the crowne had beene, albeit no compulsioun nor feare had interveened; the same being a privat act, done without all solemnitie, speciallie without con-ent and authoritie of the estats of the realme, who have speciall nteresse, in respect that without them maters of lesse weight canot be valuable by the lawes of the realme. For how might the queene, without the authoritie of parliament, annaillie the whole ealme, when by the law she may not annaillie the least tenement of land within the realme, annexed to the crowne, without the adice and consent of parliament? So soone as it pleased God of his nercie to deliver her Majestie's person furth of that thraldome, and that by his providence she escaped furth of Lochlevin, immeliatelie after her comming to Hammilton, in presence of her nobiitie there assembled, of whom a good part had beene deceaved inder colour of that surmized dimissioun, she gave her bodilie oath, hat the same dimissioun and renunciatioun was not of her owne ree motive, but, as said is, compelled, and that she was thereunto induced by just feare; and so, made solemne revocatioun, by adice of Mr Johne Spence of Condie, her advocat, as done in prisoun, ind by dreadour.

"It is therefore required upon her Majestie's behalfe, that the obilitie and stats presentlie assembled in parliament will examine he ground wherupon the pretended authoritie usurped by some, under name of her sonne, is founded. And if yee find it layed upon the said dimissioun and renunciatioun, for the reasons foresaid, and others to be considered by you, it is not, nor ever was, valuble, nor can, by the law of nature, God, nor man, be susteaned: hat yee will decerne the same, with all that followed or dependeth herupon, to be and have beene null from the beginning, voide, and of no force nor effect, and so to be reputed and holdin heerafter: and so, consequentlie, the said coronation, and the pretended auhoritie sett on by her deerest sonne's name, to ceasse, and have 10 farther effect during her Majestie's life: And the whole subjects of this realme to acknowledge their naturall band of allegiance to nerself, and to serve and obey her Majestie at all times to come, as heir soverane, like as the said pretended dimissioun and procuraorie, with all that followed therupon, had never beene devised, putt in ure; nor yitt had beene, in rerum natura, according to justice And that yee will heerupon make an act of parliament, and se out proclamations in form as effeires."

The Lords Spirituall and Temporall, and Commissioners of tl Burrowes presentlie assembled, being with the said supplication rypelie advised: It is statuted and ordeaned by the authoritie of the parliament forsaid, that the said pretended dimissioun, renuncia tioun, and overgiving of the crowne, and, consequentlie, the corons tioun of her deerest sonne, the regiment and usurped authorit therupon depending, with all that followeth therupon, for the resouns specifeid in the said supplicatioun, and good consideratiour notoure to the whole estats, are, were, and frome the beginnin have beene null in the self, voide, and of no force nor effect; and s are to be reputed and holdin of no validitie in all times to come, bu to ceasse, and have no farther effect during her Majestie's life: an that the whole subjects of the realme are bound to acknowledg their naturall band of allegiance to her Majestie, as their onli undoubted soverane, lyke as the same pretended dimissioun and cor ronatioun, with all that followed therupon, had never beene devised nor yitt had beene, in rerum natura, the same, notwithstanding according to the desire of the said supplication; and that letters b directed therupon, in forme as effeires.

"Attoure, it is statuted and ordeaned, that no man tak upon hand to alter, change, innovat, or pervert in anie sort, the forme or religioun, and administratioun of the sacraments, publictlie professed and established within this realme, that the Evangell sincerelic preached may have course and be prorogated, without lett, hin derance, or impediment, to the honour of God, and comfort of his kirk: and that all superintendents, ministers, exhorters, and readers, in publict prayers and supplications, make their prayer in a decent forme; namelie, for the queen's Majestie, our soverane ladie and her decrest sonne, the prince, and for her Highnesse' counsell, and whole bodie and states of this commounwealth."

A PROCLAMATION OF THE QUEEN'S AUTHORITIE.

Upon Wednesday, the 13th of June, they declared by open proclamation at the Croce of Edinburgh, how unjustlie the queene was deposed, how they had restored her to her former authoritie, and made null the king's authoritie. All the leiges were charged to acknowledge none but her for their soverane. Superintendents, ministers, readers, were commanded to pray for her after sermoun. They sent the same day to Mr Craig, to convocat the sessioun of the kirk, and read the letter sent to them. They conveened at three after noone. The Bishop of Galloway and Sir James Balfour craved an answere. Becaus the ministers refused to pray for the queene publictlie, the ministers were discharged by two messingers to preache, till they granted to pray for her.

CAPTAN WEMES' COMPANIE PERSUED.

Michael Wemes, captan of a Scottish companie in Denmarke, returned with his companie, and offered his service to the regent. His souldiours were to conveene at Leith, after visitatioun of their freinds. Captane Cullane and Mr James Kirkaldie went to Leith with six score of men, to intercept them at the comming over the water. The Erle of Morton came to Leith about the dawning of the day, the 14th of June, and tooke sixteene or eighteene: the rest, who went on boord before, could not be persued, becaus of the ebbing of the sea. But Captan Weemes, and a great part of his companie, sailling in a crayer, escaped, and came to Leith. Twentie-six or twentie-eight were takin in a boat, not farre frome Leith, and brought to the castell of Edinburgh.

SIR WILLIAM DRURIE HIS ARTICLES.

Sir William Drurie, Marishall of Berwick, came to Dalkeith the 25th of May, and conferred with the Erle of Mortoun. The day following he came to Edinburgh, and had conference with the captan and the lords that were in the castell. Upon the Lord's Day he went to Stirline to the regent. He returned to Edinburgh upon Tuisday the 29th. The captan came down after supper with him. They were heard on the streets speeking sharpelie to other. Some deemed collusioun. Now, in June, Sir William Drurie proponed these articles following, in the Queene of England's name, to the lords; but they were devised, as was thought, in the castell of Edinburgh:—

- 1. That there be a surceance of armes on both sides, so the same may be beneficiall to the king's partie.
- 2. That the persoun of the king be conteaned in safetie; and that the adversare partie sall not, by force, or anie other meanes, draw him in their hands.
- 3. That both parties sall be content to send to her Majestie sufficient personns authorized to treat for all maters in controversie, as well privat and publict, which the Laird of Grange and Lethington have, by letters, alreadie offered to doe.
- 4. The Lairds of Lethington and Grange, by their letters, have alreadie compleaned, that yee have spoiled the lands of Lethington, and his father's goods, as also manie others; and that now, by your late parliament, Lethington and sindrie others are forfaulted; it being concluded by the Erle of Morton and his colleagues, at their departure from her Majestie, that in the parliament to be holdin in May last for the king, choice sould be made of sufficient persons to treat of the difficulties betwixt the king and his mother: and yitt no choice was made of commissioners, but sindrie persouns forfaulted; whereby the adversarie partie taketh great advantage, calumniating the regent and the Erle of Morton, that they meane nothing but privat revenges.
- 5. By letters from Grange and Lethington, in name of the queen's partie, to remitt all their maters, both publict and privat, to her Majestie.
 - 6. Though the queen's Majestie had hitherto, by perswasiouns, stayed the comming of forces out of France, yitt can she not with her honour and reasoun procure a stay of the Queene of Scots her revenues due to her for her dowrie in France: but the same may be lawfullie sent, and disposed by her to mainteane her owne port.

7. That by mutuall accord, all armes cease, saving in this sort, that the regent, for defence of his persoun, may be permitted to have some reasonable guarde to attend upon him; the Erle of Marr likewise some, for preservation of the king.

Sir William Drurie laboured to travell betwixt both the parteis: but he could not so much as obteane truce or abstinence; for the regent and his assisters refused abstinence, unlesse the other partie restored the fortalices and castells which they had takin in time of the last abstinence.

A CONFLICT BETWIXT LEITH AND EDINBURGH.

Upon Saturday, the 16th of June, when Sir William Drurie was to depart, the rebels, under pretence of convoying him, brought furth all their forces, both on hors and foot, to ostentat their power, when now the Erle of Mortoun was lying bedfast in Leith, tormented with the cholick, and had sent away a band of souldiours to Dalkeith. Yitt he came furth, and arrayed all his companeis. When they were neere within halfe a myleto other, the Marishall of Berwick travelled betwixt the two parteis. When he had obteaned a grant to retire, there remained a controversie who sould retire first. The marishall desired, that when he, standing midway betwixt them, sould give a signe, they sould both at one moment turne their ensignes, and returne. Morton yeelded, for his forces were not so weill assembled as theirs. They had threatned to drive him in perforce, and to his shame, if he returned not willinglie, and skarse could be refrained.

The Erle of Morton judging that he had sufficiently contented the English marishall, could be stayed no longer; and the rather, because there were two peeces of great ordinance brought to the feild by the other partie. The marishall went out of the feild, and so the parteis joyned, first the horsemen, and then the footemen of the rebells. After a slight encounter, the footemen fled. Morton and his companeis chaseth them in at the ports, and up the Cannogate. There were slaine about fiftie persons, and about a hundreth and fiftie takin. Alexander Lord Hume was hurt, and almost confounded with the fall of his hors. Gawin Hammiltoun, Abbot of Kilwinning, was slaine. Captan Cullane was takin in a poore woman's almerie in the Cannogate, where he had hid him self. Manie fled to the Abbey Yairds, and vairds of the Cannogate, and so escaped. Captan Wemes, fiercelie persuing at the Neather Bow, was shott, and died within ten dayes after. There was none slaine for the present but onlie a poore souldiour. The port at the Neather Bow was left without defence, for all fled up toward the castell. The towne might easilie have beene takin, but the souldiours were bent upon their prev, and it was now eight hours at night. They returned about ellevin houres at night; and, after exhortatioun made by the minister, and thanksgiving in the kirk of Leith, they went to their loodgings, and tooke rest. Morton had at this time in the feild three companeis of waged souldiours under the conduct of Captan Thomas Crawfurd of Jordanhill, David Hume of Fishick, Johne Hume, Blacader's sonne, and Captan Wemes. He had with him some voluntars of Leith and Edinburgh. He had with him Dumlanrig, Cesfurd, Coldingknowes, Aplegirth.

I find in a certane manuscript, that after it was concluded that Morton sould stay in Leith, and the regent to be sent for, and the walls of Leith repaired, and Captaine Lambie sent to Dalkeith with a band of souldiours, the rebels consult, whether they sall cutt off these who were going to Dalkeith, convoyed by Dumlanrig, Cesfurd, and Coldingknowes; or shew themselves at Leith; or make their musters in presence of the marishall. Morton suspecting they were come to cutt off the companie he had sent to Dalkeith, came furth to the sands with all his forces. In the meane time, Dumlanrig, Cesfurde, and Coldingknowes, returning, fell to pricking with the castell men. The Marishall of Berwick desired him to retire, seing he had takin assurance till eight houres at night, and promised to move the other partie to retire. At his desire they retired. The other partie would not. but came fordward to the place where the other horsemen were. Then the other partie sent to Morton for moe horsemen, and a hundreth harquebusiers: but it was thought good, that the whole forces sould draw neere to the horsemen. The horsemen of the other partie stood betweene the Querrell Holes of Cragingate, and the Hawkehill, beside Restalrig; the foote men stood behind on the south side, upon a hill, called the Abbey Hill. Morton's horsemen stood on the Hawkehill. Morton came on foote from the Sands of Leith, neere to the rebels' horsemen, accompanied with the Lord Lindsey, the Tutor of Pitcurr, the Lairds of Wedderburne, Aitton, Swinton, Langton, Alexander Hume of Hattonhall, and manie others. to the number of three hundreth spears. Captan Hume with his souldiours was upon the one wing, Captan Crawfurd and his companie on the other. In this order they marched till they were neere the part where the Lord Hume, Claud Hammilton, Phairnihirst, and Wormeston, were upon horsebacke. When Morton had veelded to the marishall, to retire at the giving of the signe, providing the other partie retired likewise, Phairnihirst was so proud, he would not, except Mortoun retired first. All this time were they bussie bring [ing] furth artillerie. When it came in sight, convoyed by Huntlie, Hereis, Maxwell, Kilwinning, Coldinghame, then the Erle of Morton would heare no more of the marishall. The marishall went apart. Morton marching fordward, his horsemen drave Hume and Phairnihirst among their owne footemen, and then entered betweene the castell men and the hill, and stood there till Morton approached. Morton cometh fordward to the end of the long meddow. There were three shott of ordinance shott out of the castell, but did no harme. Then the parteis joyned together and shott. But, before they came to hand strokes, the rebels fled. Morton's horsemen pursued first after them. They were chassed in at the ports, and their ordinance takin. Captan Cullan, of whom we made mentioun before, had been a cruell oppressour in time of the civill warres. He receaved money both from the King of Sweden and the King of Denmarke to wage souldiours, but deceaved both the one and the other. Great was the applause of the people when he was led, not long after, to executioun.

The day following, the 17th of June, which was the Lord's Day, Mr Alexander Gordoun, Bishop of Galloway, father brother to the Erle of Huntlie, had suche a sermoun in substance as followeth:—

"Good people, my text is this, of faith, hope, love, and charitie, writtin in the 13th of the Corinthians. For of faith proceedeth love, and of love charitie; which are the winges to hope, wherby all Christian men sould enter in the kingdom of heaven, where, I pray God, we might all goe. And this for the present.

"Now, brethrein, may I not speare at you, in what part of this poore realme is faith, hope, and charitie sett; and if they be authorized among the estats? Na, na, brether, na. Is faith or love among our nobilitie? Why then, how manie lords have subscrived their hand writts and their seales, or keeped their promise, ather upon their side or ours? Yea, few or none. But I will speeke neutrallie, for it is my part, seeing my brother's sonne and I am thrids of kin to the Lord of Morton. Is not their regent siclyke, and moe neere of kin? But, alace! how manie of us keepe faith and love one to another? Why then, lett us goe to the secund estat: Have the spirituality observed the precepts of ecclesiasticall order, conforme to their first institutioun; or have not our ministers not altered from the last order sett out, after the reformation of the kirk? Or then. the thrid estat: Is there faith and love among your burgesses in buying or selling their waires, or borrowing and lending one with another? Yea, if I would digresse, I doubt not but faith and love is left in Machline, in the wood of Hardheids, where manie of your merchants leave their faith.

"But, alace! brethrein, the onlie caus of this is, particularitie, which hath beene the greatest occasioun that hath caused this poore countrie declyne from their soveran, the queen's Majestie, our onlie mistresse, who now remaineth in England; but not prisoner, as they have made you to believe. For I will assure you, and I may say it, for I have seene it, being commissioner there for the lords of her factioun. Wherefore, I would wishe you not to be abused; for this I will take upon my conscience, yea, and upon my honour, that she is better treated, better nourished, yea, reverenced and authorized more in England in one day, nor she was in Scotland in a yeere; and licenced to hawke and hunt, and use sindrie other pastymes, as pleaseth her.

"Albeit our ministers have altogether forgett her, and are not willing to pray for her, vitt I would wishe you, inhabitants of Edinburgh, to send for your ministers, and caus them pray for the queene; for they sould pray for their lawfull magistrat whatsomever. For this I may say, she is a lawfull magistrat, seing her father was a lawfull king, and her mother likewise an honorable princesse, and she borne in lawfull bed. This for the prooffe of my argument, that she ought to be prayed for. If we sould not pray for sinners, for whom sould we pray; seing that God came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance? Sanct David was a sinner, and so is she: Sanct David was an adulterer, and so is she: Sanct David committed murther in slaving Uriah for his wife, and so did she. But what is this to the mater? The more wicked she be, her subjects sould pray for her, to bring her to the spirit of repentance; for Judas was a sinner, and if he had beene prayed for, he had not died in despaire. Wherefore, I pray all faithfull subjects to pray for their lawfull magistrat, if it be the queen. It is the queen as I doubt not. But yee may weill consider, that no inferiour subject hath power to deprive or depose their lawfull magistrat, he or she whatsomever, albeit they committ whoordome, murther, incest, or anie other crimes, being once by God just and lawfull prince or princesse to raigne above you: not chosin, as the imperiall magistrats are. Yea, and further, Was she ever excommunicated by the order of our kirk? If so be, just caus had we not to pray for her; and albeit she were, we ought to pray for her, and all other sinners, to bring her to the spirit of repentance. But manie of our ministers are too ceremonious at this present; for I remember my self, at the beginning of our religioun, when I taught ather in this pulpit, or the pulpit besides, we would have beene glade to have had the masse heere, and the preaching there. And, brethrein, when I stood with the stole about my necke, how manie bishops abode, or bare the burthein on their backe then, but I? But now our ministers are growin so wantoun, and so ceremonious, that they will not pray for their lawfull heretrix, who hath permitted them suche libertie of conscience, that they may use what religioun they please. And if we pray not for sinners, for whom, then, seing the just have no need of amendment? Or if we be not sinners, Who may say he will cast the first stone at the woman being takin in adulterie? Is it my Lord of Morton upon their side? Is it my Lord of Argile upon our side? Or is it we ministers? Nav. brether, nav. for I confesse myself, yea, this foule carcase of myne, to be the most vile carion, and altogether givin to the lusts of the flesh; yea, and I am not ashamed to say, the greatest trumper1 in all Europ, untill such time as it pleased God to call upon me, and make me one of his chosin vessells, upon whom he hath powred the spirit of his Evangell. And as candles are lighted, and sett upon high places, so sall I show the gifts which God hath givin me among you. God illuminate your hearts to receave the same; for if Manasses had not been prayed for, he had not beene brought to the spirit of repentance. One word or two, and so I will beteeche you to the merceis of God.

"Brethrein, at after-noone I will be occupied with some other bussinesse: but, upon Wednesday and Fryday I sall take some paines to open the rest of this text. And becaus I know my self not so worthie as they who have occupied this place before, I beseeke you, brethrein, send for your ministers, and I sall take the paines with them to travell, to see if we can pacific the insatiable mindes of our brethrein who goe about like lyons, to sucke out the blood of their brethrein. And seing God blesseth the peacemakers, lett us see if we can be the instruments to bring the nobilitie to concord, with faith, hope, and charitie. But, alas! where was charitie yesterday among us? not where it sould be, conforme o the words of my text. And so, I beteeche you to the mercie of God."

THE REGENT RETURNETH TO LEITH.

The regent being advertised by post of the last skirmishe, came with all speed to Leith, upon the 17th day of June, and caused forifie the toun. These who were at the skirmish were dismissed; and others, obedient to the king's authoritie, came, and lay quarterite, by course, at Leith.

OLD DUMLANRIG TAKIN.

Upon Saturday the 23d of June, old Dumlanrig was takin, as he was riding home for some bussinesse betwixt him and the Lord Hereis, and others who were at variance. The Lord Hereis appointed to meete him at the same place where the Laird of Wormeston lay waiting for him. Young Dumlanrig and Applegirth escaped narrowlie. This same day, or the day before, there came from Flanders a shippe, wherin were three kists of callivers, foure or five last of powder, and some money.

THE QUEEN'S GOLD TAKIN.

Upon the last of June so muche gold as the queene might spaire of her dowrie out of France was found by the diligence of the Lord Lindsey, in a coffer, brought home by Johne Chisholme, which arrived at the Wemes. In it were found also a last of powder, five nundreth hacquebutts and culverings.

¹ Old Dumlanrig not being certain whether his son had escaped or not, sent to tim the following singular epistle: "Willie, Thow sall wit that I am haill and feare. Send me word thairfoir how thow art, whether deid or livand? Gif thow be deid, I loubt not but freindis will let me know the treuth; and gif thow be weill, I desyre na nair," &c.—He showed this letter to his captors, that they might be sure it contained to treason; and to save his purse, he sent it with the letter, desiring the messenger to teliver it to his son.

THE CHALLENGES CONTINUED BETWIXT GAIRLEIS AND GRANGE.

Alexander Stewart of Garleis, younger, sent this day an answere to Sir William Kirkaldie's reply. The contents of the reply, dated the 25th of June, may be gathered by the answer. He proveth his treasons by the notorietic of them to all men; his owne handwritts compared with his contrarious deeds, and, therefore, the lawes of the countrie sould punishe him, speciallie, that he fortified and assisted, and joyned with them who fortifie and assist the persons suspected and knowne culpable, and forfaulted by the law, for the horrible murthers of umquhile our soverane lord's father, and of umquhile the Erle of Murrey, late regent, and that he had diverse of them presentlie in the castell of Edinburgh: that he sett the wairders and prisoners committed to his custodie within the castell, for suretie of the king's estate, at libertie, soone after the murther of the late regent, his owne maister, which was the verie caus of staying the punishement therof: that he brake the king's prison of the tolbuith of Edinburgh, treasonablie, taking furth a man who had committed recent murther; and discharged the ordinance of the castell, to the terrour and harme of the inhabitants of Edinburgh: that he had used the said castell, and the king's ordinance and munition therin, to an other use and end than they were appointed, when it was committed to his trust, against his faith and promise: that he mainteaned and now mainteaneth open robbers, native theeves, and commoun breakers of the peace with England: that he hath sold a part of the king's munition and stuffe which was within the castell, and prodigallie consumed a part, to the destruction of the king's subjects: that he had made shamefull defectioun from the king, to whom he professed obedience, and suffered the authoritie of his mother, a murtherer of her owne husband, and an enemie to the true religioun, to be erected in Edinburgh: that he betrayed not onlie the king, and suche noblemen and subjects as he joyned with, in the actioun for revenge of the murther, and maintenance of the king's authoritie, but also had betrayed the toun

Edinburgh, and the inhabitants therof, under colour of freindship and league betwixt him and them, in the king's name, their libertie pressed by his tyrannie and treasoun: that he and his confedeits had procured their trade beyond sea to be restrained, drivin reir honest nighbours to exile, spoiled them of their goods, and sposed them to the searche of licentious souldiours; discharged nem from bearing of armes; garnished the ports and walls of their oun with souldiours; had made their kirk patent to excommuniits, their house of justice a denne of theeves, and receptacle of ouldiers. He offereth to meet him hand to hand, on hors or foote. med with jacke, speare, steele bonnet, sword and whinger, in the fallowlee, upon the west side of the high way betwixt Leith and dinburgh, upon the thrid day of Julie nixt, by nyne houres before oone, where none sall meddle in the querrell but themselves. and wheras he bragged that he and his progenitors were gentleen of blood and armes, he sayeth that the order and time of his lyancement was so weill knowne, that there needeth no other anvere, but to rander again shortlie his shamelesse lees in his owne roat. In end, he protesteth, that this his answere, by way of nallenge, prejudge not the processe to be led in forme of law against im for his manifold treasouns; nor his honour, being knowne for n ancient and undefamed hous, in comparing himself to so notorius a tratour, who of justice, and by law of armes, ought not to be eceaved to suche justification.

Sir William Kirkaldie replied the first of Julie: Garleis, younger, sturned answere the secund of Julie. He offered to prove all the oints of the former cartell. Whereas Grange alledged, that the lace appointed was not neutrall or unsuspect, by reason of the charge e had of the castell, he answered, that it was within shott of the unnon, and farther offered to send him before their medling a and of my lord regent's Grace, and of the rest of the noblemen ho were in Leith, that during the time of their medling there sall othing be attempted by them, or anie of theirs, against him or his ssisters; requiring the like of him and his. Whereas he craveth aree to be entered in the castell for his sovertie, howbeit it was a shift, he offereth to gett three equall in degree of blood and ren with himself, requiring the like again for suretie of him and his as sisters, during the time of their said medling. Whereas he quer elleth him for speeking unreverentlie of a princesse, he answereth he ought to give him no compt thereof: that he hath spokin mor of that mater himself nor he had done; and that he had greate caus to be sorrowfull, that he had suche occasioun nor he had.

Sir William Kirkaldie of Grange sent an answere upon the fyf of Julie. He requireth that immediatlie two freinds of his migh meet, upon assurance, with two gentlemen of the other partie to conferre and agree upon all things for bringing their medling shortly to passe: that he had directed the Laird of Pittadrow and young Pittadrow, with power to condescend upon the day and place of the combat; and to offer sufficient securitie for his partie and to him and certane gentlemen that sould accompanie him to the place, to see that he be uprightlie dealt with all: that Andrey Ker of Fadownside and Captane Crawfurd will beare record, that they had offered all measure in his name. Yitt seing he under standeth, by a ticket directed from them vesternight to the Lairdof Pittadrow and Dryla, that he requireth his offers to be sent in writt, he will satisfie him in that behalfe. Wheras he might refuse to fight with him, in respect of manie circumstances depending upor his person, in that he was degenerated from the ancient state of his hous, and his blood stained, in that one of the principall branches of his hous was a preest's daughter; wheras, on the contrare, it sal not be found that anie of his branches of anie continuance have beene other than gentlemen, without matching ather with preest or merchant, vitt sould not that consideration stay him to mainteane his honour against his unjust challenge. He telleth him how that his freinds forsaid had commissioun to agree upon a certane day, to witt, the 25th of Julie, upon the ground the barresse be-west the West Port of Edinburgh, the place accustomed, and of old appointed, for triell of suche maters: that none come with him neere the place, but twelve gentlemen, to see he gett no wrang; and that he sould, before their meddling, send him his owne band, and the and of the noblemen for his owne partie, that during the time of reir medling, there sall be nothing attempted against him and the velve gentlemen in his companie, but that which sould be done tweene themselves onlie: that seeing he was the defender, and respect of the charge of the hous whereunto he was bound, and hereupon so great things depended, being the principall fortresse the realme, and in respect of the time, he was compelled to icke upon manie things farther than he would otherwise have one; and, therefore, the choice of the place sould rather be his, making the same securitie which the other offered. Farther, nat his freinds were desired to crave, that all maner of armour, ith horse, and other things necessar for the combat, be suffered be convoyed to him without impediment. As to the armour, e biddeth him provide and bring with him a horse, a steele bonnet, jacke, plait sleeves, speares, a sword, a dager, a corslett, a murrion, picke, a two-handed sword, a paire of gantlets, two sword stripes, r plaits for the thighes and legges; and when he sall come to the sild, he sall prescrive to him according to his priviledge, whither ney sall fight armed or unarmed, on horse or on foote, or what rmes they sall use, and he sall use the like, and no other. Last, ging he is the person that is sent out by the Erle of Lennox and is adherents, as their campioun, to tak the querrell in hand, he equireth, that they would allow him, under their hand-writts, to e their campion in that querrell, and oblishe themselves to acknowedge the wrang done to him by slandering him by writts, proclanations, and speeches, and be content to repaire his honour accordnglie, in forme as effeires, in cace he obteaned the victorie.

Garleis, younger, sent an answere from Leith, upon the 10th of ulie. First, He offered to verifie, that he not onlie professed and vowed obedience to the king's authoritie, but also had writtin, amed, and acknowledged the Erle of Lennox, his Highnesse' roodsir, as regent of the realme: That the regent, prohibiting, by proclamation, menne of warre to serve him, did nothing but hat which the preservation and weale of the king required, seing his Grace had found by his letters apprehended in Dumbartane, a prooffe of his foresuspected treasoun; and that his treasonable ir terprise then kithed in deed, in raising of menne of warre against the lawes of the realme, beyond the bounds of his proper powe and charge. He laveth to his charge, that he vainlie and presump tiously usurped to counterpace the king's proclamatioun; and it words, to mak himself, a man of base condition, equal to his High nesse' goodsir, tutor, and regent. Where as he desireth to under stand, whether he be sett furth as a campion for the rest, he lettetl him understand that he tooke upon him, onlie as a true gentleman undefamed, to answere to his generall cartell; and that an hundretl gentlemen of blood and armes are readie to make the like offer, if they saw likelihood on his part to performe. Wheras, now, he alledged some circumstances depending upon his persoun, he made no mention of them in his first bragging cartell, becaus, then, appearandlie he looked not to find a matche. In that cartell he made no exception of persons of high or low degree; howsoever now, it pleaseth him to write of his mother's father, called Dumbar, alledging that he matched with a preest's daughter. That woman which he meant had brought in more old inheritance to him and his hous, than he had in propertie of anie lands holdin of the kings of this realme. In that he was not content of the neutrall place, and offer of the three hostages, but appointed the barresse by-west the West Port of Edinburgh, it appeared to the world that he sought but subterfuges and delayes. What reasoun or equalitie is there, that twelve gentlemen sall be present onlie in the time of the medling, without prescription of the number upon his part? What securitie can be in the place, lying under the power of the castell, and neere to Edinburgh, filled with souldiours raised under his trust? What suretie can there be in his band, who had violated his band and subscription of obedience to the king? As for the regent, he had nothing to doe with him, but by just execution of paines of the lawes for his manifest treasons. Yitt, againe, he offereth to meet him hand to hand, in a place neutrall, or equallie distant betwixt Leith and Edinburgh, anie day betwixt and the 25th of Julie, or the same day if it please him; and sall enter hostages, for the suretie of these that sall accompanie him, as he sall doe to him; and sall bring with him suche armour as he specified in his last cartell; and sall arme himself as he sall prescrive, the armour being equall: that he sall procure his armour, horse, and other things necessar, to be suffered to be convoyed to him without impediment. If he receave not a direct and resolut answere in writt, betwixt and the 15th day of this instant, then he will looke for no farther answere.

Sir William Kirkaldie gave a shifting answere; wherunto Gairleis replyed the 12th of Julie, wherin he telleth him, that he hath condescended to all his prescrived devices, saving onlie the place equall and indifferent, with equall number of attenders. Therefore, he taketh his last letter as a refusall of his cartell, and as a confession of his owne treasonable turpitude.

A FRENCH SHIP WITH MUNITION SEAZED UPON.

Upon Wednesday, the 4th of Julie, there arived at Leith a Frenche ship, with manie hacquebutts, culverings, croslets, and some money, which the regent caused seaze upon. Drumquhassil, without knowledge of the regent and counsell, caried up the water to Stirline a number of the croslets, hacquebutts, and callivers. The captan and his adherents sent to the Queen's Ferrie, and intercepted them, tooke Drumquhassil's boat, and brought with them so manie croslets and callivers as they were able to carie.

THE BRAVADE OF THE BURGESSES.

Upon Saturday, the 7th of Julie, the inhabitants of Edinburgh, about three hundreth or foure hundreth men, with their new bailliffes, went out of the toun toward Leith, having two ensignes, Patrik Thomson bearing one, and a taylour, called Dewar, another. But when these who were in Leith came furth they retired. The captan of the castell shott three or foure shott of cannon, whether to annoy the other partie, or to signific his contentment for the going furth of the burgesses, it is uncertane. These who were in the steeple head discharged their double falcoun, which they had baptized Knox, at these who came out of Leith; but it brake in peeces, and slue two standing beside, and hurt others.

THE ABBEY ASSAILED.

Upon Tuisday, the 10th of Julie, the souldiours of the toun came furth about Mowtrayes on the hill, on hors and foote, and, in the meane time, the inhabitants of Edinburgh came out at the Neather Bow, to assault these that were in the Abbey; but were mett and chassed in again by Captan Mitchell's souldiours. Upon Fryday, the 13th, they went out again to the Abbey, and by opening a little wicket at the utter port of the Abbey, they were trained in to the closse, where two or three of them were slaine, and sundrie hurt.

THE REBELS SUMMONED TO THE PARLIAMENT.

This same day, the lords sent a copie of the summouns, with the names of these who were to be summouned to the parliament, to Captan Mitchell, desiring him by some meanes to have it convoyed to the toun. The same night, after the skirmishe, the captan sent his owne page with the summons to the port, who fained he came from Phairnihirst with letters. They opened, supposing he would have entered. But after he gave the letters to the first he met with, he ranne backe again, calling them tratours, and said it was a copie of the summons, which they sould give to the lords. They came out in anger, to overtake him, but Captan Mitchell having a certan companie attending upon him, drave them in again. Upon the morne, at five houres in the morning, the said captan, with a clerk appointed, proclamed the said letters at the croce of the Cannogate, in their despite, having certan harquebussiers lying above, betwixt and the Neather Bow.

SOME BURGESSES TROUBLED.

Captan Cullan was beheaded the 17th day.¹ The same day, or the day preceding, the Lord Lindsey was sett at libertie, for a summe of money. The day following, Robert Cunningham, Johne Heriott, Mungo Fairlie, Thomas Browne, burgesses of Edinburgh, were apprehended and accused for bringing in of the English in Scotland, for burning of Hammiltoun, and other houses in Brechin, and beseiging the toun in time of parliament. Three came in will; but Robert Cunningham refused, and therefore was condemned by an assise of Liddisdaill men for the most part.

THE REBELS' PURSEVANT MISUSED AT JEDBURGH.

About this time a pursevant was sent from the lords in Edinburgh to Jedburgh, to proclame the new erected authoritie. He was suffered to read his letters, till he came to this point, that the lords assembled in Edinburgh had found all the proceedings against the queene null, and that all men sould obey her onlie: then the proveist caused the pursevant come down from the croce, and eate his letters; therafter, caused loose down his points, and give him his wages upon his bare buttocke, with a bridle; and threatned, that if ever he came again, he sould lose his life. Phairnihirst threatned the toun, but they gave him the defiance.

FRAGMENTS OF MR KNOX HIS LETTERS.

Mr Knox, in a letter dated the 19th of Julie, and sent to a familiar freind, hath these words:—" What order God sall putt into the minde of the authoritie, to tak for staying of thir present troubles, I know not. But ever still my dull heart feareth the worst, and that, becaus I see no appearance of right conversioun to God, but that both parteis stand, as it were, fighting against God himself, in justificatioun of their wickednesse: the murtherers assembled in the castell of Edinburgh, and their assisters, justifeing all that they have done to be weill and rightlie done, and the contrare partie als little repenting the troubling and oppressing the poore kirk of God as ever they did. For if they can have the kirk lands to be annexed to their houses, they appeare to tak no more care of the instructioun of the ignorant, and of the feeding of the flocke of Jesus Christ, than ever did the Papists, whom we have condemned, and vitt are worse ourselves in that behalfe. For they, according to their blind zeale, spared nothing that might ather mainteane or hold up that which they tooke for God's service; but we, alas! in the middest of the light, forgett the heaven and draw to the earth." In another letter, dated at Sanct Andrewes, about the same time, and sent to Mr Gudman, he hath these words: "From the castell of Edinburgh have sprung all the murthers first and last committed in this realme; yea, and all the troubles and treasons contrived in England. God confound the wicked devisers, with their cruell vices. So long as it pleased God to continue me in anie strenth, I ceassed not to forewarne these dayes publictlie, as Edinburgh can witnesse; and secreetlie, as Mr Randolph, and others of that nation with whom I secreetlie conferred, can testifie. Remedie now on earth resteth none, but onlie, that both England and Scotland submitt themselves to the correcting hand of God, with humble confessioun of their former disobedience, that blood was not punished when He, by his servants, publictlie craved justice, according to his law. In which head your realme is no lesse guiltie than we, who now drink the bitter part of the cuppe, which God of his mercie avert from you."

VOL. III,

¹ To this passing event, the author of the "Historie of King James the Sext" attaches a piece of the current scandal of the period, "Capten Cullayne was hanged in Leyth, and his death was hasted be Mortoun, the end he might the mair frelie enjoy the favour of his fayre wyff."—Morton's profligacy in this and similar cases was so notorious, that the Bishop of Galloway made no scruple to allude to it in his sermon.

THE UNDER-MARISHALL OF BERWICK CRAVETH ABSTINENCE, &c.

Upon the 24th of Julie, the Under-Marishall of Berwick came to Leith to seeke abstinence from armes, and the parliament to be suspended, saving onlie, for nominating commissioners on both sides, to meete the English commissioners at Berwick about the fyft or sixt of August, to treat of all controverseis.

SKIRMISHES.

There were sindrie skirmishes upon the secund and thrid of August. In the time of the skirmishes, the castell never ceased from ringing of cannons; yitt the bullets lighting among the companeis did no harme.

Mr George Buchanan his admonitioun directed to the lords, mainteaners of the king's authoritie, was imprinted at Stirline by Robert Leckprevick, about this time, or at least this yeere, before the holding of the parliament; the tenor wherof followeth:—

AN ADMONITION TO THE TRUE LORDS. M. G. B.

"It may seeme to your lordships that I, medling with high maters of governing of commoun wealths, doe passe myne estat, being of so meane qualitie, and forgett my duetie, giving counsell to the wisest of this realme. Notthelesse, seing the miserie so great appearing, and the calamitie so neere approaching, I thought it lesse fault to incurre the crime of surmounting my privat estat than the blame of neglecting the publict danger. Therefore, I choosed rather to underly the opinioun of presumption in speeking, than of treasoun in silence; and speciallie of suche things as even seeme presentlie to redound to the perpetuall shame of your lordships, destruction of this royall estat, and ruine of the whole commoun wealth of Scotland. Upon this consideratioun, I have takin in hand, at this time, to advertise your honours of suche things as I thought to apperteane both to your lordships in speciall, and in generall to the whole communitie of this realme, in punition of tratours, pacification of troubles among your selves, and continuation of peace with our nighbours, of the which I have takin the travell to write, and doe remitt the judgement to your discretioun; hoping, at least, that although my witt and foresight sall not satisfie you, yitt my good will sall not displease you.

"Of which advertisement the summe is this :- First. To consider how godlie the actioun is you have in hand, to witt, the defence of your king, an innocent pupill, the stablishing of religioun, punition of theeves and tratours, and maintenance of peace and quietnesse among your selves, and with forrane natiouns. Item, Remember how yee have vindicated this realme from the thraldome of strangers, out of domestick tyrannie, and out of publict dishonour, in the sight of all forrane natiouns; we being altogether esteemed a people murtherers of kings, impatient of lawes, and ingrate in respect of the murther of the late King Henrie, within the walls of the principall toun, the greatest part of the nobilitie being present with the queene for a time: and by your power, one part of the cheefe tratours was tried from among the true subjects, wherby strangers were constrained, afterward, als muche to praise your justice, as of before they wrongouslie condemned your unjustice. Item, Remember how farre, in doing the same, yee have obliged your selves before the whole world, to continue in the same vertue of justice; and what blame yee sall incurre if yee be unconstant. For all men can beleeve no otherwise, if the time following be not conforme to the time past, that nather honour nor commoun wealth stirred you up then, but rather some particular tending to your privat commoditie. Also remember how manie gentle and honest meanes yee have sought in times past to caus the king be acknowledged, and the countrie putt at rest; and how profitable hath beene your honestie in treateing, your valiant courage in warre, your mercifulnesse in victorie, your clemencie in punishing, and facilitie in reconciliatioun. Which things witnesse sufficientlie that yee esteemed no man enemie who would live in peace under the king's authoritie: that yee were never desirous of blood, geir, nor honour of suche as would not rather in making of trouble and seditioun declare themselves enemeis to God and the king's Majestie, than live in concord and amitie with their nighbours, under the correctioun of justice. And since yee can nather bow their obstinate hight with patience, nor mease¹ their stubburne hearts with gentlenesse, nor satisfie their inordinat desires otherwise than with the king's blood and yours, the destruction of religion, banishing of justice, and free permissioun of crueltie, your wisdoms may easilie consider what kinde of medicine is not onlie meet, but also necessar, for mending of suche a maladie.

"And to the effect that yee may the better consider this necessitie of medicine, remember what kinde of people they are that professe themselves in deed, and dissemble in word, to be enemeis to God, to justice, and to you, becaus yee mainteane the king's actioun. Some of them are counsellers of the king his father's slaughter, some convoyers of him to the shambles; who slue his grandsir, banished his father, and not satisfied to have slaine himself, murthered the king's regent, and now seeke his owne blood, that they may fulfil their crueltie and avarice being kings, which they beganne to exercise the time of their governing. Others are, who being allyed, not neere of kin, to the Hammiltons, thinke to be participant of all their prosperitie and successe. Others being guiltie of King Henrie's death, in the first parliament holdin in the king's raigne that now is, could weill accord that the queene sould be putt to death also. And seing they could not obteane that point, the nixt shift of their impietie was to putt down the king, that he sould not rest to revenge his father's death; which they thought could not be more easilie done than by bringing home the queene, with suche a husband who, ather for old hatred or new covatice, would desire the first degree of successioun to be of his owne blood. others are practized in casting of courts, and revolving of estats, by raising of civill warre, and are become richer than ever they hoped. And becaus they have found the practise so good in time past, now they seeke alwise to continue it; and having once gusted, how good fishing it is in drumlie waters, they can by no meanes leave the craft. Others of that factioun are, some Papists, some fained Protestants, who have no god but geare, and desire again Papistrie, not for anie love they beare to it, (for they are scorners of all religioun,) but hoping to have the promotioun of idle belleis to benefices; and lament the present estat, where (as they say) ministers gett all, and leave nothing to good fellowes. And to this intent they would sett up the queen's authoritie, say they. Some there be also, who, under colour of seeking the queen's authoritie, thinke to escape the punishment of old faults, and have licence, in time to come, to oppresse their nighbours who be feebler than they.

"Now have I to shew you by conjecture, what fruict is to be hoped of an assemblie of suche men as, for the most part, are of insatiable greedinesse, intolerable arrogancie, without faith in promise, measure in covatice, pitie to the inferiour, obedience to the superiour; in peace desirous of trouble, in warre thristie of blood; nourishers of thift, raisers of rebellioun, counsellers of tratours, inventers of treasoun; with hand readie to murther, minde to deceave, heart voide of truthe, and full of felonie, tongue tramped in deceate, and word tending to false practise without veritie. By which properteis, and manie others therunto joyned, as is knowne to all men, yee who understand their beginning, progresse, and whole life, may easilie remember to whom this generall speeking apperteaneth in speciall. And it is not unknowne to suche as know the parteis, how they are melled with godlesse persons; Papists, harlott Protestants, commoun brybers, holie in word, hypocrits in heart, proud contemners, or Matchiavelian mockers of all religioun and vertue, bloodie boutchers and open oppressers, fortifiers of theeves, and mainteaners of tratours. It is also necessarie to your lordships to understand their pretence, that if it be a thing may stand with the tranquillitie of the commoun weale, your lordships may in some part rather condescend to their inordinat lust, than putt the whole state in jeopardie of battell. First, it is not honour, riches, nor authoritie, that they desire; for they have had, and als have presentlie, and may have in time to come, such a part of all these things as a privat man may have in this realme, not being chargeable to the countrie, or not suspected to a king, as unassured of his owne estate. It is not the deliverance of the queene that they seeke, as their doings contrare to their word manifestlie testifie. For if they would have her delivered, they would have procured by all meanes possible the Queen of England's favour and support, in whose power the whole recoverie stood onlie; and not offended her so highlie as they have done, and daylie doe, in participatioun of the conspired treasoun, to putt her Majestie not onlie out of her state, but out of this life present: not in receating and mainteaning her rebels, contrare to promise, and solemne contract of pacificatioun betwixt these two realmes: nather vitt have hounded furth proud and uncircumspect young men to herry, burne, and slay, take prisoners in her realme, and use all misorder and crueltie not onlie used in warre, but detestable to all barbarous and vile Tartars, in slaying of prisoners; and, contrare to all humanitie and justice, keepe no promise to miserable catives receaved once to their mercie. And all this was done by commandement of suche as say they seeke the queen's deliverance, and reproached to them by the doers of the mischeefs, saying, that they entered them in danger, and supported them not in mister, so muche as to come to Lawer, and looke from them. In which deserting of their collegues, they show crueltie joyned with falsehood, and most high treasoun against the queene, pretending in word her deliverance, and stopping in worke her recoverance; the which, as everie man may cleerlie see, they sought, as he that sought his wife drowned in the water, against the streame. It is not the queen's authoritie which they would sett up in her absence: for if that were their intentioun, whom can they place in it more friendlie to her than her onlie sonne; or what governours can they putt to him lesse suspected than suche men as have no pretence of successioun to the crowne, or anie hope of profite to come to them after his death; or these that ever have beene true servants to kings before him? Sould they not be preferred to his paternall enemeis, yea, and slayers of his father, and soliciters of strangers to seeke his innocent blood?

"What, then, sall we thinke that these men seeke under pretence of the queen's authoritie, seing they cannot bring home the queene, to sett up her, nor will not suffer the king, lawfullie inaugurated and confirmed by decreet of parliament, to bruike it, with so manie of his tutors, chosin by his mother, as are not to be suspected to will him harme? I trust it is not uneasie to perceave, by their whole progresse now presentlie, and in time bypast, that they desire no other thing but the death of the King and Queene of Scotland, to sett up the Hammiltons in authoritie, to which they have aspired by craftie meanes these fiftie yeeres agoe. And seing their purpose succeedeth not by craftie and secreit meanes, now they follow the same trade, conjoyning to falsehood open wickednesse.

"And that yee may see what meanes they have used these fiftie yeeres bypast, to sett up by craft this authoritie which now they seeke by violence, force, and treasoun, I will call to your memorie some of their practises, which manie of you may remember als weill as I. First, after the death of King James the Fourth, Johne Duke of Albanie, chosin by the nobilitie to governe in the king's lesse age, the Hammiltons thinking that he had beene als wicked as they, and sould, to his owne advancement, putt down the king, being of tender age for the time, and by the decease of his brother left alone, and that they would easilie gett their hand beyond the duke, being a stranger, and without successioun of his bodie, held them quiett for a seasoun, thinking that other men's actiouns sould be their promotioun. But seing that the duke, as a prince both wise and vertuous, to bring himself out of suspicioun, putt foure lords, esteemed of the most true and vertuous in Scotland at that time, to attend upon the king's Grace, to witt, the Erle Marshall, the Lord Areskine, Ruthven, and Borthwick, the Hammiltons being out of hope of the king's putting down by the Duke of Albanie, and out of credite to doe him anie harme by themselves, made a conspiracie with certane lords to putt the said duke out of authothey might use the king and realme at their owne pleasure. To that effect they tooke the castell of Glasgow, and there made an assemblie of their factioun, which was dissolved by the hastic comming of the Duke of Albanie with an armie, for feare of which the Erle of Arran, cheefe of that companie, fled to his wife's brother, the Lord Hume, being then out of court. The secund conspiracie was after the duke's last departing, (the forsaids lords separated from attending on the king,) devised by Sir James Hammilton, bastard sonne to the said Erle of Arran, who conspired the king's death, then being in his hous, in the Abbey of Halyrudhous. Which conspiracie, after many yeeres reveeled, the said Sir James suffered death for it.

"This conspiracie not being executed, Sir James persevered in his evill intentioun, and, by secreit meanes in court, sought alwayes that the king sould not marie, that for laike of his successioun, the Hammiltons might come to their intents. For the king was young, lustie, and readie to adventure his persoun to all hazards both by sea and land, in down putting of theeves, and up setting of justice. The Hammiltons looked on when sicknesse, through excesse of travell, or some other racklesse adventure, sould cutt him off without childrein. And, destitute of this hope, first he stopped the king's meeting with his uncle, the King of England, who at that time having but one daughter, was willing to have maried with the King of Scotland, and made him king of the whole ile after him, and to have entered him at that present time in possessioun of the dutchie of Yorke. But the said Sir James ever having eye to his own scope, hindered this purpose by some of the king's familiars, with whom he had practised by gifts, and speciallie by the Bishop of Sanct Andrewes, James Beton, uncle to the Erle of Arran's mother, and great-uncle to Sir James his wife; and raised suche suspicioun betwixt the two kings as brought both realmes in great bussinesse. This purpose, as said is, putt abacke, the king seing that his ambassaders furthered not at his pleasure, delivered himself in persoun to goe by sea to France; and Sir James Hammil-ton persevering in his intentioun, went with him, to hinder his mariage by all meanes he might. And to that effect, the king sleeping in the ship, without anie necessitie of wind and weather. Sir James caused the mariners to turne saile, off the west coast of England, backeward, and land in Galloway, where the king was verie miscontent with Sir James, and Mr David Panter, principall causers of his returning, as diverse who were in the ship living can report. And frome that time furth, the king having tryed out his pretence, and perceaving his unfaithfull dealing, ever disfavoured him, and to his great displeasure favoured openlie the Erle of Lennox and his freinds in his absence; the which erle pretended a right and title to the whole erledome of Arran, the present erle for that time being knowne to be a bastard. As also, it was in men's recent memoreis, how Sir James Hammilton had cruellie slaine the Erle of Lennox at Linlithquo. So the king, as said is, understanding the privat practick of Sir James, in keeping him unmareid, hasted him the more earnestlie to marie, to the effect that his successioun might putt the Hammiltons out of hope of their intent, and him out of danger by the Hammiltons. And albeit that Sir James, to make himself cleane of that suspicioun, sought manie diverse waves to the destruction of the Erle of Arran his brother, vitt he could never conqueisse the king's favour, untill finallie he was executed for treasoun, and tooke a miserable end, conforme to his ungodlie life.

The king at last deceased; and leaving a daughter of six dayes old, the Hammiltons thought all to be theirs; for then the Erle of Arran, a young man of small witt and great inconstancie, was sett up by some of the nobilitie, and some familiar servants of the king, latelie deceased: for they thought him more tolerable than the Cardinal Beton, who, by a false instrument, had takin the supreme authoritie to himself. The Erle of Arran, named governour by a privat factioun, and favoured by so manie as professed the true religioun of Christ, becaus he was believed then to be of the same, howbeit he was gentle of nature, yitt his freinds for the most part were greedie both of geir and blood, and givin to injustice where aine followed. There was in his time nothing ellis but warre, oppressioun, and brybing of his called brother, the Bishop of Sanct Andrewes, so that all the estats were weareid with him, and disharged him of his office, and charged with it a woman stranger. n the beginning of his government, the queene and her mother vere keeped with him rather like prisoners than princesses. But itt that incommoditie was caus of preserving of the queene's life, believing to marie her on his sonne. But after the Erle of Lenox had delivered her out of his hands, and the nobilitie had refused o marie her to his sonne, howbeit he left his firme freinds, and came to the queene, abjured his religioun in the Grevfriers of Stirine, vitt he could never come againe to his pretended climming to the crowne which he had sought, partlie by favour of suche of the nobilitie as were allyed with him, and partlie by destrucion of the ancient houses which might have putt impediment to us unreasonable ambition. For having banished the Erle of Lennox, he thought the Erle of Angus to be the principal which might resist him. And having entered in waird Sir George Dowglas, to be yitt more assured, he sent for the said Erle of Angus in freindie maner, and putt him in prisoun without anie just occasioun, and would have beheaded them both, if the ariving of the English armie had not stayed their purpose; by the which, and feare of the murmure of the people, he was constrained to deliver them. And seing he durst not at suche a time putt them down by tyrannie, he offered them to the sword of the enemie, to be slaine by them. And to the effect, that they and their freinds having putt abacke the English horsemen, and receaving another charge, might be the more easilie slaine, they, standing in battell, and fighting for mim, he, in the battell behind, fled to tyne them. And so, these noblemen, so farre as lay in him, were slaine, and preserved by the providence of God. The young queene who, being in her mother's keeping, he might not putt doun, nor marie at his pleasure, he consented to offer to the stormes of the sea, and danger of enemeis; and sold her as a slave in France for the dutchie of Chattelerault, the which he bruiketh in name onlie, as the crowne of Scotland in phantasie; and receaved suche price for her, as treasoun, perjurie, and the selling of free persons, sould be recompensed with.

"But vitt, the covatice of the crowne which he had sold ceassed not heere; for before her returning out of France, and the repressing of the Frenchemen, and tyrannie against the religioun, how manie meanes sought the Hammiltons to have deprived her of all right, and translated the crowne to themselves, is knowne both to Scotland and England. Also, after the queen's arrival in Scotland, she, seeking a querell against the said duke, and some other lords. under pretence that they had conspired against her for religioun's caus, the duke's freinds left him all, becaus that the lords would not consent to destroy the queene, or derogate her authoritie, by anie maner of way. A little before which time, the occasioun of the duke's conspiracie with the Erle Bothwell, to slay the Erle of Murrey in Falkland, was no other, but becaus the said Erle of Murrey living, they could nather doe the said queene harme in her persoun, diminishe her authoritie, nor constraine her to marie at their pleasure, and to her utter displeasure. After the queene had maried with him whom they esteemed their old enemie, and was with child, the goode Bishop of Sanct Andrewes, first called Cunninghame, esteemed Cowane, and at last Abbot Hammilton, not onlie conspired with the Erle Bothwell, but came with the queene to Glasgow, and convoyed the king to the place of his murther, the bishop being loodged (as seldome of before) where he might perceave the pleasure of that crueltie with all his senses, and helpe the murtherers, if mister had beene; and sent foure of his familiar servants to the executioun of that murther, watching all the night, and thinking long to have the joy of the comming of the crown a degree neerer to the hous of Hammilton. And so great hope, melled with ambitioun, inflammed his heart for the king's decease, that within short time he beleeved firmlie his called brother to be king; and he (the said bishop) to be to him as curator during the whole time of his non-witt, which had beene a longer time than Witsonday or Martimesse. For he thought undoubtedlie, that the Erle Bothwell sould destroy the young prince, and not suffer him prosper, to revenge his father's death, and preced the orle's childrein in successioun of the crown; and the young prince once cutt off, the bishop made his reckoning, that the queen and of the Bothwell, hated alreadie for slaughter of her husband the ring, and more for the innocent, were easilie to be destroyed, with consent of all estats, and the crime easie to the bishop to be proved, who knew all the secreets of the whole designe: or if they would slay the Erle Bothwell, and spare the queene, they were in hope the would marie Johne Hammiltoun, the duke's sonne, whom, with nirrie lookes and gentle countenance, (as she could weill doe,) she had entered in the pastyme of the glaickes, and caused the rest of the Hammiltouns to fond for fainnesse.

"But after that the Erle Bothwell had refused battell at Carbarrie Hill, and the queene, before the comming of the Hammiltouns, came to the lords, the Hammiltons, at that time disappointed, fosered their vaine hope with a mirrie dream, that the queene sould be punished after her demerits, and were a time in double joy; one, that being ridde of the queene, she sould not beare moe childein to debarre them from the crowne; and the other, that they night have an easie way of calumniating the regent for destroying the queene. But seing her keeped, they blamed openlie the regent, who keeped her in store in despite of them, (as they said,) to be a stude to cast moe fooles, to hinder them of the successioun of he crowne. Yitt, for all that, there would none of them come to parliament, to further their desire with a vote; but lay backe, to ceepe themselves at libertie to reprove all that sould be done in hat conventioun, and to faine favour towards the queene, whom they lated; so as, if by consent of the lords, or otherwise, she was deivered, they might helpe to putt down the lords, who would not relpe to putt her doun in favour of them. This their intentioun vas openlie shewed, when the queene being keeped in Lochlevin by commandement of the whole parliament, was delivered by conpiracie of some privat men, especiallie of the Hammiltons: for hey assembled all their forces to putt down the young king, and ords obedient to him. Which evill will they shew towards the lords at the Langside, bringing with them great store of cords, to murther and hang them, if they had beene taken prisoners, and the victorie fallin to the Hammiltons; and the same evill toward the king, in keeping the Water of Forth, that he sould not escap their owne hands; being assured, that if he came in the Queene of England's power, that she, of her accustomed clemencie and kindnesse of blood, would not abandoun him to their unmercifull crueltie, experimented alreadie in his father. And seing that the providence of God had closed the doore to all their wickednesse at that time, they have never since ceased to seeke enemeis to his Grace, in all strange natiouns. And perceaving that they had faire words of all others, except of the queen's Majestie of England. who understood their false and treasonable dealing, they turned their hatred against her, and entered in conspiracie with some tratours of England, that were als evill minded toward the queen's Majestie their soverane, as the Hammiltons were to the king's Highnesse of Scotland. This is nather dreamed in wardrop, nor heard through a boare, but a true narrative, of which the memorie is loodged in men's hearts, both Scotish and strangers, and the veritie knowne; by the which yee may understand the Hammiltons' pretence thir fiftie yeeres and more.

"After so manie wayes sought by them to destroy the right successioun, and place them in the kinglie rowme, seing all their practises could not avail, and their forces were not sufficient, they sought to augment their factioun, adjoyning to them all who were participant of the king's slaughter, and had aspired to slay the Queen of England. And to the effect they might come to their wicked purpose, they, in a maner, displayed a baner, to assemble together all kinde of wicked men, as Papists, renegat Protestants, theeves, tratours, murtherers, and open oppressors. As for their adherents in Scotland, I need not to exprime their names, nor the qualiteis of the conspirators of England, for they are weill eneugh knowne to your lordships. Yitt one I cannot passe, being the cheefe conspiratour, chosin by them to be King of Scotland and England, I meane the Duke of Norfolk; in which act, yee may see how the thrist of your blood blinded them against their owne tilitie. First, they choose the principall enemie of the religioun of Christ within this ile, accompaneid with other filthie idolaters, o change the state of the kirk in both realmes, by cutting off he two princes, seing, their authoritie standing, the conspirators ould not come to their intent. Nixt, they respected in that proud yranne the vertues which were commoun to him and them, as rrogancie, crueltie, dissimulation, and treasoun. For even as hev had this long time in Scotland sought the death of their rightous prince, so he in England, following the trade of his anteessors, diverse times attempting treasoun, would have putt down he Queen of England. Heere also appeareth the Hammiltons' rueltie against the nobilitie of their owne natioun, in seeking the rofessed and perpetuall enemie of Scotland, (as his badge beareth itnesse.) who sould have spilt the rest of the noble blood of Scotand in peace, that his antecessors could not spill in warre. By hich electioun being assured, that no Scotish heart can love nem, so can they love none of you, against whom they have used manie treasonable acts. They doe show also, how crueltie and varice have blinded them. They cannot see, in bringing a tyranne have power over them, seing they, pretending neerest clame to ne crowne, sould be neerest the danger. And yitt, for all this, ould these men be weill contented, if by anie meanes they could teane unto their intent by spoile and robrie, as they did, when vev were placed in supreme authoritie; or by making of you aves, as they did in selling of their queen, beginne that practice; herin, howbeit the inhumanitie was great, yitt was it not in suceme degree of crueltie.

After the victory of Flodden, Henry VIII. restored the Earl of Surrey to his panal dukedom of Norfolk, and added to his shield the arms of Scotland, to be worn the bend of Howard. Surrey also gave his servants the livery of a badge for the t shoulder, on which was a white lion, his own cognizance, trampling under foot d rending the red lion of Scotland. These heraldric insults rankled as keenly in sensitive heart of Buchanan, as the more palpable injuries which the Howards had tailed upon his country.

"But it is no moderat, tolerable, nor accustomed thing which they seeke. It is the blood, first, of our innocent king, even suche as hath beene preserved by wilde beasts; nixt, the blood of all his true servants, and true subjects indifferentlie. For what defence can be in nobilitie, or what suretie against them who have murthered a king, and seeke strangers to murther another king? Whom sall they spaire for vertue and innocencie, who latelie executed, and vitt defend, the murther of the regent? Or who will be overseene for low degree or base estate, in respect of these who conducted some out of Tiviotdaill, to slav Mr Johne Wood, for no other caus but for being a good servant to the crowne, and to the regent his maister, and had espyed out some of their practises? If this thrist of blood of these loche-leeches might be imputed to haistie hunger, or anie suddane motioun, which causes men sometime to forgett their dutie, there might vitt be some hope, that suche a passioun overpast, they would with time remember themselves: and after power, amend faults past, or at least absteane in time to come. But there is no suche humanitie in their nature, nor no suche pietie in their hearts: for, not content with a king's blood, they gape for his sonne's murther: nor satisfied to have slaine the regent, they keeped the murtherer in the duke's hous, in Arran, most like thinking, that if they honoured not the doer, they sould not be knowne as counsellers of the deid, and would tyne the glorie of that noble act. And beside all this, they are not onlie contented to mainteane Scotish tratours, but also receave English tratours, and sett up a sanctuarie of treasoun, a refuge of idolatrie, and a receptacle of theeves and murtherers. And howbeit the bullering blood of a king and a regent about their hearts, wherof the lust in their appetite giveth them little rest dailie and hourelie, making new provocatioun, vitt the small space of rest which they have beside the executioun of their crueltie, they spend in devising of generall unquietnesse through the whole countrie. For not content of it that they themselves may steale, bribe, and reave, they sett out ratches on everie side, to gnaw the people's bones after they have consumed the flesh, and hound out, one of them the Clan Gregore, another the Grantie and Clan Chattan, another Balcleuche and Phairnihirst, another the Johnstons and Armstrangs. And suche as would be holdin the holiest among them, show plainlie the affectioun they had to banishe peace, and stirre up troubles, when they bended all their five witts to stoppe the regent to goe, first north, and syne south, to punishe thift and oppressioun. And when they saw their counsell was not authorised in giving impunitie to all misorder, they spent it in putting down of him who would have putt all in good order. There is a kinde of these theeves, even odious to more gentle theeves, who, calling themselves great gentlemen, spoile travellers and chope-men by the way, and ransoume poore men about Edinburgh for twentie shilling the head; which vice cannot proceed of vengeance of enemeis, but rather of love and pleasure in wickednesse. This kinde of men doeth not onlie dishonour to nobilitie, in steeling, and theeves, in purse-pyking, but also to the whole natioun of Scotland, giving opinioun to strangers, that some of the Scots be of so low courage, that men amongst them aspyring to the highest estat of a kingdome, have crowched themselves in the most low order of knaves.

"Now, my lords, yee may consider how they who slay so cruellie kings and their lieutenants, will be mercifull to you; and when they sall have putt you doun, who crave revenge of the king's blood, yee may understand how few darre crave justice of your slaughter. Yee may see how cruell they will be in oppressing of the poore, having cutt off you, who being of most noble and potent houses of this realme, suffer through your sleuthfulnesse everie part of this countrie to be made worse than Liddisdaill or Annandaill; and not onlie suffer the purse-pykers of Cliddisdaill to exercise thift and reafe as a craft, but nourish and authorise among you the cheefe counsellers of all misorder, as an adder in your bosome. Of all this, yee may lay the wyte upon no other but upon your selves, who have sufficient power to represse their insolencie and proudnesse, having in your hand that same wand that yee have chastised them with before: for yee have your protectour, the same God this yeere that was the yeeres bypast; unchangable in his eternall counsells, constant in promise, potent in punishing, and liberall in rewarding. Yee have your true freinds and servants, that were with you before. Yee are delivered of dissimulat brethrein, who had their bodeis with you, and their hearts with your enemeis; who subscrived with you, and tooke remissioun of your adversareis: who stood with you in battell, looking for occasioun to betray you, had not God beene your protectour. Yee have a great number of new freinds, alienated from them, for their manifest iniquitie in deid, wickednesse in word, and treasoun in heart. Yee have of the same enemeis which yee had then, so manie as have their hearts hardenned, and their mindes bent against God, and lawfull ingraits. Yee have the same actioun which yee had then, accumulated with recent murther and treasoun, to provoke the ire of the Eternall against them. How farre God hath blinded them, blind men may see, that having so evill an actioun, and so manie enemeis at home, vitt by hounding out of small tratours of their wicked conspiracie, men execrable to their owne parents, whom, among others, they have diverse times spoiled-by hounding out, I say, of suche persons to burne, murther, reave, and steale, they provoke the queen's Majestie of England to seeke vengeance of their oppressioun against her realme and subjects; which vengeance justice and honour craveth of her so instantlie, that she cannot cease but persue them, their resetters and mainteaners, untill she give suche exemple to others, that although they will not respect vertue, vitt, for feare of punitioun, they sall be content to live in peace with nighbours, wherin her Highnesse hath alreadie renued the memorie of her experimented liberalitie and tender love to this natioun; seeking upon her proper charges, and travell of her subjects, the punitioun of suche as we, on our charges, sould have punished: I meane, not onlie of our tratours, but also resetters of her Majestie's tratours; and in doing of this, seeketh pacificatioun among them who violated peace with her, without provocatioun; severing the punishement of suche as are guiltie in offending, from the subjects who have not violated the peace. And as she keepeth peace and justice among her owne subjects in England, so, unrequired, she offered support to the same end in Scotland; and not onlie giveth remedie to our present calamiteis, but cutteth the roote of troubles to come, and preventeth the wicked counsell of suche as provoke English men, and solist Frenche men, to come in this realme, to the end that these two natiouns, entered in barresse, the one against the other, they may satiat their cruell hearts of blood, their obstinat will of vengeance, their bottomlesse covatice of spoile and thift.

"Therefore, seing God hath so blinded your enemeis' witts, my lords, be of good hope, that he sall also cast the spirit of feare and desperatioun in their endured hearts, and prosper your good actioun, to the which he comforteth you with his readie helpe, exhorteth you by his Word, and constraineth you by the duetie of your estate, and necessitie of preserving your lives and honours. For promise being neglected, faith violated, subscriptions sett at nought, there is no meane way left, but ather to doe or suffer. And seing that both are miserable among suche as sould be freinds, yitt better it is to slay justlie, than to be slaine wrongfullie: for the executioun of justice in punishing the wicked is approved by God and man; and sleuthfulnesse in defence of justice cannot be excused of treasoun. And, beside, that God sheweth him so mercifull and liberall to you, in sending you freinds, by procuring of your enemeis, also the persons most recommended of God crave the same: for sakelesse blood, oppressioun of the poore and fatherlesse, crie continuallie to heaven for a vengeance, which God committeth to your hands, as to his lieutenants and speciall officers in that part. And even as He rewardeth faith and diligence in obedience of his eternall will, so, he will not neglect to punishe sleuthfulnesse in just executioun of his commandements. Therefore, my lords, as yee would that God sould remember on you and your posteritie, when they sall call on him in their necessitie, remember on your king, our soverane, and on my lord regent's pupills, committed to you in tutorie, by reasoun of your offices and estat; anent persons which are not in age nor power to helpe themselves, and are recommended speciallie to all Christians by God in his holie Scripture: and defend suche innocent creatures as may nather doe nor speeke for themselves, from the crueltie of unmercifull woolves. Neglect not the occasioun, nor refuse not the helpe sent to you by God; but recognosce thankfullie his favour toward you. who causeth the enemeis to procure your helpe. Neglect not the offer of freinds. In cace you lett slippe this occasioun, yee sall crave it in vaine in your necessitie. Thinke it no lesse providence of your heavenlie Father, than if he had sent you a legioun of angels in your defense; and remember that he shew himself never more freindfull and succourable to no people than he hath done to you. And trust weill, if ye will perseveere in obedience and recognoscence of his grace, He will multiplie his benefites to you and your posteritie; and sall never leave you, till yee forgett him first."

THE TWENTIE-THRID GENERALL ASSEMBLIE.

The Generall Assemblie conveened in the tolbuith of Stirline, the sixt of August. Mr Gilbert Gairdin, minister of Fordyce, was chosin Moderator.

COMMISSIONS.

The Assemblie appointed Mr James Lowsone, Sub-principall of Aberdeene, Mrs David Wemes, Johne Dykes, James Melvill, Patrik Balfour, Archibald Keith, minister at Peterheid, to trie the commissioners' bookes of visitations. Commissioun was givin to some brethrein, barons, and ministers, or anie ellevin of them, to compeere at Stirline the 22d day of this instant, at nyne houres before noone, to consult and reasoun, as in the commissioun givin in the last Assemblie.

AN EXHORTATION TO SUPERINTENDENTS AND COMMISSIONERS.

The Assemblie exhorted earnestlie all superintendents and commissioners to plant kirks, to be warie in giving letters, testimonialls, to anie persons presented to benefices, except to suche allanerlie as they sould perfytelie know, due examinatioun preceeding, to be able to instruct and teache sincerelie, as they will answere, first to God, and therafter to his kirk.

MR P. ADAMSON DESIRED TO RE-ENTER IN THE MINISTRIE.

The Assemblie preceeding had earnestlie desired Mr Patrik Adamsone to enter again into the ministrie, seing there were so few labourers in the Lord's vineyarde. He craved time till this Assemblie, to advise with himself and brethrein that loved him. He sent a letter to this Assemblie, conteaning his answere. The Assemblie ordeaned their commissioners who were appointed to speeke with the lord regent's Grace, to speeke him also to tak order with the contents of his letter, and to report to the nixt Assemblie.

Mr Knox sent this letter following to the Assemblie, which was read in the secund session therof:—

"The Mightie Spirit of comfort, wisdome, and concord in God, remaine with you. Amen.

"Deere Brethrein,—If abilitie of bodie would have suffered, I sould not have troubled you with this my rude dytement. I have not forgott what was layed to my charge, by famous libells, at the last Assemblie; and what a brag the adversareis made, personallie to accuse me at this Assemblie, which I pray you patientlie to heare, and judge of me as yee will answere to God: for unto you, in that heed, submit I my self, being assured, that I nather offended God, nor yitt good men, in anie thing that hitherto hath beene layed to my charge. And now, brethrein, becaus the daylie decay of naturall strenth threatneth unto me certan and sud-dane departing from the misereis of this life, of love and conscience I exhort you, yea, in the feare of God I command you, that yee take heed to your selves, and to the flocke over the which God hath placed you pastors. To discourse of the behaviour of your selves I may not, but to command you to be faithfull to the flocke I dare not ceasse. Unfaithfull and tratours to the flocke sall vee be reputed before the Lord Jesus, if that, with your consent, directlie or indirectlie, vee suffer unworthie men to be thrust in into the ministrie of the kirk, under what pretence so ever it be. Remember the Judge before whom ye must make accompt, and resist that tyrannie as yee would avoide hell's fire. This battell, I grant, will be hard; but in the secund point it will be harder: that is, with the like uprightnesse of heart, and strenth in God, yee gainstand thir mercilesse devourers of the patrimonie of the kirk. If men will spoile, lett them doe it to their owne perell and condemnatioun. But communicat not yee with their sinnes, of what estat so ever they be, ather by consent, or vitt by silence. But with publict protestatioun make it knowne to the world, that yee are innocent of suche robrie, which will, ere it be long, provoke God's judgement upon the committers therof. Yee will seeke redresse of God and man. God give you wisdome, and stout courage, in so just a caus, and me an happie end.

"Your brother in Christ Jesus,

" JOHNE KNOX.

"From Sanct Andrewes, the 3d of August, 1571."

This letter was read, considered with mature deliberatioun, and allowed in all points, with firme purpose to doe and proceed according to the godlie counsell therin conteaned, &c., tuiching the effaires of the whole kirk. And, as concerning his owne part conteaned in the said letter, the Assemblie ordeanned all persons to be warned at the Tolbuith doore, that had, or pretended to have, anie thing to the charge of the superintendents or ministers, ather presentlie conveened, or absent from the Assemblie, to compeere before the dissolving of the same, and accuse, if they had anie just mater, but cheefelie these that gave in famous libells at the last Assemblie holdin in Edinburgh, in the moneth of Marche last bypast, promising to heare their accusatiouns, to trie the same, and to minister justice therin, so farre as in them lyeth, according to God's Word.

APPLEGIRTH TAKIN.

Upon Thursday, the 9th of August, there sould have beene a combat betwixt Applegirth and Wormeston, five and twentie on the side. Wormeston refused to fight in the actioun presentlie debated, but if Applegirth had anie actioun against himself, was contented; and so it was stayed. The day after, Applegirth was takin, and his two brethrein.

MORTON WINNETH THE REBELS.

At the same time, the Erle of Morton mett with the Erles of Argile, Cassils, Eglinton, and Lord Boyd, at Stirline, and disswaded them from maintenance of their evill caus. He prevailed likewise after with Crawfurd, Rothesse, Arrell, and others. From Stirline he came to Sanct Andrewes, to take possessioun of the bishoprick of Sanct Andrewes. Mr Johne Dowglas, Rector of the Universitie of Sanct Andrewes, was presented to the bishoprick of St Andrewes the 18th of August.

LINDSEY LIEUTENANT.

Upon Thursday, the 23d of August, the Lord Lindsey was chosin lieutenant in Leith, till the regent's returne from the parliament; who tooke journey from Leith to Stirline, the 24th of August.

MONSIEUR VIRACK TAKIN.

Monsieur Virack, who was left in Sanct Andrewes upon his owne promise and oath, went out, as it were, to the hawking, upon the 28th of August, and was takin away by the Laird of Wormeston, accompanied with twentie hors.

THE REBELS' PARLIAMENT.

The rebels held their parliament in Edinburgh, and beganne the 26th of August, wherin were forfaulted the Erle of Morton, Lords Lindsey, Ruthven, Glames; Huttonhall, Manderston, Coldingknowes, Cesfurd, Fadownside, and others, to the number of two hundreth, where as there were but three of the nobilitie there, to witt, two appointed procurators and commissioners for the queene, to moderat the parliament, and Alexander Lord Hume, and two bishops; one, who had beene confynned before in Edinburgh by the regent, and stayed unwillinglie after the alteratioun of the state of the tour; another, who had beene drivin thither by necessitie, having wasted and consumed all his rents.

The regent held a parliament in the king's name in Stirline, the 28th of August. The young king was present in person, and uttered these words:—"My lords, and yee, the true subjects, who are conveened heere, as I understand, to minister justice; and becaus my age will not suffer me to exerce my charge myself, by reasoun of my youth, I have givin power to my goodsir, as regent and tutor to me, and you to assist him therin, as yee will answere to God and me therafter." The same day, sitting in his chaire of honour, and his rob royall upon him, looking up above his head, and seing a hole in the tolbuith, he said, "There is a hole in this parliament!" which in another sense was verified in the end, when the regent was slaine.

¹ This trivial affair is given in a more naive and minute manner by the author of the "Historie of James the Sext," in these words: "In Sterling, the king being convoyit to the Parliament Hous, and set at the burde, be fortune he espyit a hole in the burdecloth; so that, as yung childer are alwayis unconstant and restles, he preissit to attene to the hole with his fingar, and askit of a Lord wha sat nar by him, to know what hous that was; and he answerit, that it was the Parliament Hous. Then,' said the king, 'this parliament hes a hole into it.' Whither God inspyrit the

THE REBELS FOREFAULTED.

In this parliament there were about threttie persons forfaulted: be duke, the Erle of Huntlie, his brother, Adam Gordoun, Sir Wilam Kirkaldie of Grange, Sir James Balfour, Gilbert and Robert Balfour, Robert Melvill of Cairnie, David and Andrew Melvill. David Seton of Perbrothe, Alexander Crichton of Dryla, Thomas Ger of Phairnihirst, Johne Hammilton, Commendatare of Arbrothe. ohne Hammilton of Kilbowie, the Bishop of Dunkelden, the Bishops of Murrey, Galloway, and Aberdeene, James Borthwick, onne to Michael Borthwicke, James Borthwicke of Colliton, Feorge Barclay of that Ilk, Johne Cranston of Moreston, William Bailzie of Carinston, David Spence of Wormeston, Johne Matlane of Auchingassill, younger, Thomas Hammilton of Priestfeild, Thonas Ker of Cavers, Mr Alexander Hammilton, Vicar of Kilburnie, Harbert Maxwell, burgesse of Edinburgh, Mr Johne Moscrop and is sonne Patrik, Robert Gourlay, the duke's servant. These were orefaulted the penult of August.

THE PETITION OF THE KIRK REJECTED.

Upon Fryday the last of August, after the forefaulture, Argile, Cassils, Montgomerie, Boyd, the Shireff of Aire, and sindrie others, came to the parliament. The same day the commissioners of the Assemblie gave in the articles of the Assemblie, craving that benefices sould be bestowed onlie upon qualified persons, which qualification sould be tried by the kirk: that manses and gleebs be not sett in few, but be occupied by ministers: that incest and other greevous crimes be punished. But their petitions were rejected. The ministers were called proud knaves, and receaved manie injurious words from the lords, speciallie from Morton, who ruled all. He babe then with prophecie at that tyme or not, I will not dispute: but in verie deid, the cheif leader of that parliament was stoppit with sik a hole within fyve dayes efter this saying, that was the verie caus of his death."

said he sould lay their pride, and putt order to them. The regen himself approved their petitions. The Superintendent of Fife inhibited the Rector of Sanct Andrewes to vote at this parlia ment, till he be admitted by the kirk, under the paine of excommunicatioun: Morton commanded him to vote, as Bishop of Sanc Andrewes, under the paine of treasoun. Upon the Lord's Day after Mr Johne Row denounced judgements against the lords for their covetousnesse, and hard answeres to the commissioners of the kirk "I care not," said he, "my lords, for your displeasure, for I declare my conscience before God, who will not suffer suche wickednesse and contempt unpunished." He was called a railler and seditious knave, and the rest no better.

SKIRMISHES BETWIXT LEITH AND EDINBURGH IN TIME OF PARLIAMENT.

In the meane time there went out of Edinburgh two hundreth horsemen and a hundreth foot, upon the 27th of August, to the Byres, and brought in to Edinburgh with them eightie kyne and oxen, and poore men's hors. Within foure dayes after, they went furth again to demolishe the hous, but were disappointed, becaus some harquebusiers had been placed there for defence. Upon the penult of August there issued out of Edinburgh seven or eight score horsemen, beside foote, toward Leith, but were driven in again. They went out of freshe again, being encouraged by the returne of supplee of a fresh companie of eight score hors or thereby. But the Lord Lindsey encountered them with the forces he had in Leith, and drave them in again at the ports. Two ensignes came to the Nether Bow. Captan Lambie was almost takin. The Tutor of Pitcurr, colonell, was takin at the port upon horsebacke, supposing that his companeis were following. It was darke, for it was about halfe houre to nyne before they had ended their chasse. There were takin on the other side sixtie or eightie souldiours, and ten or twelve horsmen.

THE REGENT SLAINE.

Upon the 4th of September there went furth out of Edinburgh bout two hundreth horse and three hundreth foote, conducted by Feorge Erle of Huntlie, Claud Hammilton, and Walter Scott of talcleughe, and came to Stirline by breake of day, whill the lords vere verie secure and negligent; for they had not so muche as a ett watche in time of parliament. George Bell, a man borne in stirline, who knew perfytlie all the passages of the toun, and an insigne-bearer to a companie, was their guide. They tooke by vioence all the horse they could find by the way. When they enered in the toun, they cried, "God and the Queen!" Some cried, A Hammilton! Remember the Bishop of St Andrewes! all is urs!" They came fordward to the mercat place. Then a certane umber went to everie nobleman's loodging, who were all suddanlie urprized. Morton's loodging was defended till two of his men vere slaine, and the loodging filled with smooke. Hardlie escaped e out of the fire, and randered himself to Balcleughe. The regent, he Erle of Glencarne, the Erle of Eglinton, and sindrie others, ere takin with little resistance. Wormeston was appointed for he regent's loodging. Loath was he to come furth, till Garleis nd others perswaded him, seing there was no meane to resist. So e randered himself to Wormeston, upon promise to save his life. Slaud Hammilton had given a warning, that als soone as ever they ame out of the ports, all that had noblemen prisoners sould kill hem. Whill the enterprise thus succeeded, and the souldiours vent to spoile houses and boothes, the Erle of Marr, captan of the castell, preassed through with a companie of harquebusiers to his loodging beside the mercat place; (it was in building, and not vitt finished;) and shott out of the loodging, so that none of the enemeis durst come through the mercat place: yea, they were so affrayed. that they tooke the flight, and going out at the port, trode upon other for throng, and had hardlie escaped if there had beene manie persuers readie. There were onlie sixteene who persued them, as Buchanan writteth: but I read in a manuscript, that Captan Crawfurd, with assistance of some gentlemen out of the castell, and some other gentlemen that were in the toun, came furth to the streets, and chassed them out of the toun. These who were before persuers, abandoning all care of their captives, provided the best way they might for their owne safetie. George Ruthven persuing too hastilie, was slaine: Alexander Stewart, Laird of Garleis, caried away prisoner, was slaine, but it is uncertane whether by the enemie, or negligentlie by the persuers, and nyne or ten other gentlemen, and als manie on the other side, and twelve or sixteene takin. The takers of Morton and Glencarne randered themselves to them. perceaving they could not escape. The regent was slaine by Captan Calder at the directioun of George Bell. George Bell receaved the directioun from the Erle of Huntlie and Claud Hammilton.1 David Spence, Laird of Wormeston, was so carefull to save the regent's life, that he was shott through also and slaine.2 The regent was brought to the castell, where he called for a physician, one for his soule, and another for his bodie. His speeche is extant in Holinshed. He was buried in the king's chappell, in the castell of Stirline.

¹ This daring exploit of the surprisal of the parliament at Stirling, which was lanned by Kirkaldy of Grange, was also to have been conducted by that skilful and accessful leader, in which case the result would probably have been so different, that new direction might have been given to the subsequent history of Scotland. But he lords and gentlemen in the castle persuaded him to remain, by representing how ecessary his own safety was to the queen's cause, and by their assurances that all his irections would be carefully executed. They also engaged, at his express stipulaton, to respect the lives of their captives,—a promise not likely to be faithfully observed.

THE ERLE OF MARR, REGENT.

Within two or three dayes after the buriall of the regent, the Erle of Argile, the Erle of Morton, and Johne Erle of Marr, were putt in leits, and, by a pluralitie of voices, Johne Erle of Marr was chosin regent.

OTHER PROCEEDINGS OF THE PARLIAMENT.

In this parliament, the nomination, electioun, and acceptatioun of the Erle of Marr to, and of his regencie, was approved. Some neralds, macers, pursevants, and messingers of armes, were deprived of their offices of armes, and declared infamous, for accompaning the declared tratours, rebels, and conspiratours; fortifeing and assisting, and taking plaine part with them in their late treasonable, pretended, and arrogant proceedings, by displeying their coats of urmes in proper persoun, and bearing their maces. The Erles of Argile, and Eglinton, and Cassils, and Lord Boyd's escheats, and of their kin, freinds, tennents, and servants, were remitted, seing they were now come to the obedience of the king's authoritie. The parliament ended the 7th of September, where the king being present in persoun, by the tuiche of the scepter ratified all things blone.

Upon the 7th of September a letter was formed, to be sent to those who remained in the burgh and castell of Edinburgh, which was delivered in Lethington's owne hand, in the castell of Edin-

He appealed to the lords, that it was at their especial desire, rather than from any personal ambition, that he had undertaken the regency: he recommended the king to their care, and exhorted them to appoint a trust-worthy person to succeed aim. Then addressing himself to the Earl of Mar, whose hand he held, he tenderly besought him to carry his love to his Meg, (the Countess of Lennox,) and tell her that he committed her to the goodness of God; after which he breathed his last.

burgh, in presence of their counsell, the 27th of the same moneth of September, by Robert Dowglas, brother to the Laird of Whittingham, and servant to the Lord of Mortoun, the tenor wherof followeth:—

"The Nobilitie and Estats of this realme of Scotland, presentlie conveened in parliament at Stirline, in the feare of God, and lawfull obedience of the king, our soveran lord, to all persons now remaining in the burgh and castell of Edinburgh, the 7th of September 1571.

"Albeit we might lay furth before your eyes particularlie how evill vee have deserved of the commoun wealth of this your native countrie wherein vee were borne, in that yee have beene verie instruments, and occasioun both of your owne trouble and punishment, and also of the great calamitie which your whole countrie and poore people thereof hath susteaned, and doeth susteane, through this unnaturall and civil discord, vitt not meaning to irritat you by a repetition of things unpleasant, which to our greefe are over manie, and wherof we doubt not your owne consciences accuse you; but rather intending, by giving you this wholsome admonitioun, to discharge us, first to God, and nixt before the world, we have sought you to be wonne: Wherethrough, incace, by your owne obstinat wilfulnesse, yee taste the uttermost of the plague and punishment, it may be rightlie adjudged to be in your owne default. This consideration hath moved us, by this letter, to require you to consider, yourselves in commoun, and everie one in particular, the ground and circumstance of the caus and querell which yee pretend, your owne present conditioun, with whom it is yee contend, and what probablie must be the end of all.

"The ground is, tuiching the deprivation of the king, our soveran lord, from his crowne and royall authoritie, diverse times intended by some of you, and yitt by God's providence alwayes disappointed. For the caus: Amongst you are men that were als earnest to promote it as anie others; and by the same, diverse of ou acquired honour, good report, and benefite. But since yee rected his Highnesse' obedience, vee have found your reward; reoach, obloquie, and skaith, and your intents oft times frustrated. s to your oppressioun in that toun where the seate of justice sould maine, for the weale of the whole subjects, yee have not onlie ereby depauperated the inhabitants of the toun, but have made ourselves contemptible to this whole natioun. And now, yee have lay your compt whether the few number of you remaining there Il conqueisse and overthrow us all; or if, by likeliehood, we not more able to make you conformable. Your contentioun is. r displeasing of the king, our soveran lord, some of you being the eefe instruments of his promotioun, and the greatest part of you I having promised and sworne obedience to him. He is (ye see) e rysing starre; and shortlie will be able. God willing, to disrne this querrell himself, by course of age. And the end must , ather he to be obeyed, and peace and justice restored in this mmoun wealth, or then, the force of you now compassed within at castell must undoe him, whose subjects we professe our selves be, and so, consequentlie, exterminat us and our posteriteis. hat ground vee build on in your enterprise, or what certantie ee can looke for, or the course yee runne, lett everie one of you nsider by himself, and looke upon the inconveniences of this arre, if it will continue, and of the fruits which peace and juse would bring. Call also to your remembrance the desolatioun hich hath beene in other regiouns of Europ nixt unto us these te yeeres, through warres als weill forrane as intestine. And tt are the same at this day for the most part quietted, and peace quired, ather by victorie, or ellis the weakest hath yeelded to lerable conditiouns. Take heed whether yee mainteane that us by your owne proper force or not; or what abilitie yee had contend in it, if the king's hous and munition were not at your votioun.

"To be short, this realme may no longer susteane this contempt, bellion, and confused state; but ather must the king, our soveran cd, and his authoritie, be obeyed, that toun of Edinburgh sett at libertie, and the seate of justice restored, to the universall commeditie and ease of the subjects, or then must we give our lives, as imploy our substance and freinds in the querrel. And as we has orderlie proceeded heretofore by law against you, so, before to just executioun therof, which we cannot, nor may not, leave under we have thought good to give you this admonitioun, that yee main time eshew the imminent perell and danger approaching. Whise advice if yee follow, then will we travell, so farre as in us sall be for your releefe and safetie. And if our admonitioun be rejected then we protest, that as yee yourselves have beene and are to occasioun of all the evill and extremitie which hath followed yo obstinacie and contempt, so whatsomever harme or inconvenience happin to anie of us in prosecutioun of this just caus, that o bloods and skaiths be required at your hands, and your poster teis."

After this parliament, some barons, and other professors, dipleased with the hard answeres givin to the commissioners of the kirk, declared their greefe to the regent and counsell, as followed

"The Gentlemen, Barons, and other Protestants within the realme, to the Regent's Grace, wish to him and his how ourable Counsell all felicitie, with the spirit of righteon judgement.

"We doubt not but your Grace and honourable counsell hat found, and findeth fault with us, that we have beene absent from the king's service in our owne persons, at the appointed quarters: Leith, wherunto our owne consciences would accuse us, unlesse w had a sufficient defence before God and man; which is, that w darre not joyne ourselves in hazard with the professed enemeis Christ's Evangell. We call not onlie suche, as by open hostility make warre against the free preaching of the same, (as now-a-daye the tratours who occupie the castell and toun of Edinburgh;) by enemeis to Christ Jesus we call all suche, as, directlie or indirectlies.

goe about to deface the ministrie of his blessed Evangell. Of which crime, in our conscience, we nather darre excuse your Grace, nor vitt your counsell: for what can be a more readie way to banishe Christ Jesus from us and our posteritie, than to famishe the ministers present, and tyrannicallie so to impyre above the poore flocke, that the kirk sall be compelled to admitt dumbe dogges to the office, dignitie, and rents appointed for sustentatioun of preaching pastors, and for other godlie uses? In which crime the whole world may see your Grace and the nobilitie joyned with you, and with the king's service so drownned, that suche as looke not for a suddane plague (unlesse speedie repentance prevent God's judgements) are more nor blind. For, as tuiching the conditioun of our ministers present, it is more miserable than the conditioun of a begger. For beggers have freedome, without reprooffe, to beg over all. But our poore ministers, bound to their charge, are compelled to keepe their hous, and with dolorous hearts see their wives, childrein, and familie, sterve for hunger, and that, becaus vour Grace and greedie courteours violentlie reave, and unjustlie consume that which just law and good order hath appointed for their sustentatioun; to witt, the thrids of benefices, which are now so abused that God cannot long delay to powre furth his just vengeance for this proud contempt of his servants; wherof we crave hastie and suddane redresse.

"The secund caus which moveth us, that nather we can joyne with your Grace, nor yitt with your counsell, is, that we see suche a corruptioun begunne, and appearing to proceed, that, unlesse it be stayed by time, we sall give just occasioun to our posteritie to curse our negligence and silence, yea, to curse our barbarous crueltie committed against them. For what sall our childrein judge of us whom God hath illuminated miraculouslie, under whose feete he hath trode doun Satan, with idolatrie, and the mainteaners of the same, and hath granted to us such light and libertie of his blessed Evangell, as never realme nor natioun receaved the greater, yea, not the like, since the dayes of the apostles of Jesus Christ? If we, (we say,) to whom God hath showin suche graces and benefites, sall ather invy them to our childrein, or vitt suffer them to be suppressed in our default, can we ather be excused of rebellioun against God, or vitt be absolved of cruell murthering of our owne childrein? God commandeth that the fathers teache the true feare of God to their childrein and posteritie; and nature craveth that we have a speciall care of their temporall and eternall salvatioun. Our selves we know are mortall, and suddanlie tending to the grave, and so, unable to remaine, to shew to our childrein the wondrous works of our God showen in our dayes. And your Grace, and the nobilitie fightand with you, (against tratours, we grant,) goe about to cutt off from our posteritie the fountaine of living waters, the true and free preaching of the blessed Evangell of Jesus Christ. For whill that erles and lords become bishops and abbots, gentlemen, courteours' babes, and persons unable to guide themselves, are promoted by you to suche benefices as require learned preachers. When such enormiteis are fostered, we say, what a face of a kirk sall we looke for ere it be long within this realme? We, without boasting of ourselves, must speeke the truthe before God, your Grace, and the whole world, which is, from the beginning of this action we have served without sute of other reward, than to have the poore kirk of Christ Jesus sett at freedome, and so to remaine to our posteritie. Wherof perceaving ourselves to be utterlie disappointed, we darre not promise service. as heertofore we have done; for we are not ignorant of the mutuall contract that God hath placed betwixt the supreme power and the subjects.

"Beseeking, therefore, your Grace and counsell to have suche respect to the foresaid enormiteis, that just occasioun be not offered to us and others to be more cold in the king's Majestie's service than heertofore we have beene: And your Grace's answere most humblie we beseeke."

THE REGENT'S PROCEEDINGS AT LEITH.

Upon the 10th of September the Erle of Marr came to Leith, to putt order to effaires there, and constituted the Erle of Morton cheefe lieutenant. The subjects were warned by open proclamation to come to Leith. In the meane time, the regent and the lords were informed that the Duke of Norfolk's secretarie was takin at Newcastell, coming to the castell of Edinburgh with twentie-five thowsand crownes; that the duke was committed to the Towre of Londoun, and the queene more straitlie keeped.

LETTERS INTERCEPTED.

Upon the 18th of September, Monsieur Virack's servant, and one Hammiltoun, were apprehended, and the letters sent by them to the King of France intercepted, wherin Monsieur Virack craved aide of two hundreth harquebusiers; but with all signified that their estate was rather worse than better, notwithstanding of the regent's slaughter, and that he doubted greatlie how the harquebusiers might be safelie landed.

R. DOWGLAS' DEATH.

Robert Dowglas, brother to the Laird of Whittingham, died within two dayes after he had delivered the letter above-writtin. It was suspected that he was poysouned, becaus he swelled after his death.

THE BEGINNING OF THE SEIGE OF EDINBURGH.

Upon the 4th of October the regent came to Leith, accompaneid with foure thowsand men. The artillerie was brought from Stirline by sea. Upon the eight day, the pyoners beganne to cast trenches, some in the Cannogate, and some at the West Port.

THE QUEENE OF ENGLAND CRAVETH THE CASTELL TO BE RANDERED.

Upon the eight day of October, Captan Cairs and Captan Bricoll came from the Queene of England, with letters to the castell lords. The summe was, that the secretare and Laird of Grange had writtin to her, to know her minde, whether she would plainlie take upon her the maintenance of the king's caus or not: that she had laboured since by all meanes possible to have had the queene reponned to her former estat, with contentment of the nobilitie for the king's part, if it were possible. But, in the meane time, she hath perceaved the Scottish queene to use pernicious practices, als weill with the Pope and other formane princes, as with her owne subjects in England, tending manifestlie to the subversioun of the king's estate, of his nobilitie, and of the religioun presentlie professed within the realme; and also to the pulling of the crowne off her owne head, and subversion of the whole estat and religioun presentlie professed in the realme of England, so that she cannot, nor will not, travell longer in her caus; but will mainteane and assist the King of Scots his crown and caus, as she will doe her owne: Therefore, desired them to rander the castell and toun to the king and his regent without delay, and she would be oblished to be their suretie for their lives, lands, and rents; otherwise, she would helpe shortlie to recover it by force.

These letters being delivered in the castell upon Tuisday, the answere was delayed till Thursday. In the meane time, James Cunninghame, brother to the Laird of Drumquhassill, who was sent to England after the slaughter of the regent, returned with letters to the regent, wherin the queene accused the Scottish queene of ingratitude, and declared that she would mainteane the estat of religioun heere, as she would doe her owne crowne, state, and religioun within her owne realme. And least anie thing sould be wanting, through delay of time by sending to Londoun, or to court, she had sent down the Lord Hunsden, Governour of Berwick, sufficiently instructed with her minde in all these maters, to remaine at Berwick. Mr Cairs receaved this answere from Lethington and Grange, that the nobilitie assisting their part were not present; and these who were there, to witt, the duke and the Erle of Huntlie, had not their counsellers and freinds present, without whom they could not resolve in so weightie a mater. But how soone they might be convenientlie assembled, they sould direct their answere. Mr Cairs departed with this answere to Berwick upon Friday.

THE DUKE OF NORFOLK'S CONSPIRACIE.

In a discourse printed at Londoun, the 13th of October, are discovered the practises of Ladie Marie, sometime Queene of Scotland, in these words following:—

"First. It is not unknowne that the Duke of Norfolke did, of late veeres, secreetlie practice to have mareid with the Scottish queene, without the knowledge of the queen's Majestie, our soverane ladie. It is not also unknowne that the said Scottish queene hath beene the most dangerous enemie against the queen's Maiestie, our soverane ladie, that lived, in that she sought to have the crowne of England from her Majestie immediatelie after Queene Marie's death. It is also weill knowne, that when she could not gett it, nather by force nor by cunning, that she solemnlie promised to acknowledge her errour, and to recognize the verie true right to be justlie in the queene's Majestie, our soverane ladie, to whom the same belongeth, as lawfull daughter and heyre to King Henrie the Eight, her father; and so also, by the lawes of the realme perfytelie established, to succeed King Edward the Sixt, her brother, and Queen Marie, her elder sister; and by the homage of all her nobles, prelats, and people, als duelie acknowledged at her coronatioun as ever anie King of England was in former time; and in verie deed, als worthie a prince for this realme, for her elemencie and goodnesse in government, as ever raigned. It is also knowne that the Scotish queene hath not yitt performed her promise, but with frivolous answeres hath delayed it. Nather is it of anie force to be demanded, or worthie the having, if she would veeld to perform it; for nather can she that could not gett this realme when she sought it wrongfullie, nor keepe her owne when she had it quietlie, amend the queen's Majestie's estate, which is fullie perfyte; nor vitt is anie thing that she sould promise to be holdin firme and durable, but as time sall give her caus to keepe it or It is also said, and crediblie avowed, that the Scotish queene was the greatest caus of the rebellioun latelie in the north, whereby some noble houses who had served in this realme, partlie by themselves, and speciallie by their ancesters, valiantlie against the Scots, were now, by cunning practise of this Scotish ladie deprived of her kingdome, intised to overthrow themselves and their houses, with a multitude of moe English subjects, than she could have done by armes in the feilds, if she had beene in possessioun of her kingdome. It is also knowne, that notwithstanding this, that the queen's Majestie being voide of a revenging nature, (as in all acts have so appeared, that some sort of wise men have noted it a fault for a prince,) did labour to have her restored to her countrie, (as, indeed, the queene's Majestie was the caus of saving her life, after the murther of her husband,) with compositioun betwixt her and her sonne the king, and the states and people of that realme, thereby to putt some good end to the civill warres in the It is also knowne that the Queene of Scots did, upon the first apprehensioun of the Duke of Norfolke, by wryttings to the queen's Majestie, utterlie renounced the Duke of Norfolk and his mariage, with some note, that she did not of her self first move it, nor vitt like it. And so did the duke, after his first apprehensioun, by manie messages, and by speciall wrytting directed to the queen's Majestie, humblie and penitentlie acknowledge his offence, in seeking to marie with the Scotish queene; and did firmelie, under his hand and seale, promise never to deale therin further, or in anie other mater with that queene.

"And now, it is certanlie found, that the former practise betwixt that queene and the duke, notwithstanding their severall renunciatiouns and firme promises to the contrarie, hath had continuance without interruptioun, by secreet meanes of sindrie evill persons, both all the time that the duke was first in prisoun, in the Towre, and also ever since, when he was committed to his owne hous, untill he was now newlie committed to the Towre. But how dangerous so ever this attempt may be judged in them, to continue the secreit practise and intentioun to marie against the queen's Majestie's will, and the expectatioun of all that be knowne duetifull subjects to her Majestie, and true freinds to the duke, that may best appeare, by the dangerous practises that have accompanied and followed this attempt, which Almighty God hath mervelouslie discovered, to the safetie of her Majestie's persoun, and preservatioun of the realme. It was devised and determined that a new rebellioun sould be moved neere Londoun; the citie sould be takin by force, and possessed: in the meane time, a number of men of warre, strangers, sould be brought by sea, from the Low Countreis beyond the seas, to a notable port of this realme meete for the purpose. And so, both forces of enemeis and rebells sould joyne, and then proceed to further things than is expedient (as I heare) to be spokin of at this time. These devices were not onlie talked off, putt in wrytting, and fullie concluded, but the messingers were also sent over sea in Lent last, with sufficient authoritie of commissioun, and writtings, to testifie the determinatioun of these who sould be the heads and conducters of this rebellioun; as the same being imperted on the other side the sea, was weill accepted and allowed; and therof severall letters were speedilie writtin to the said queene, and to the Duke of Norfolk, and speciallie to that ungratious preest named the Bishop of Rosse, (the instrument of all the duke's calamitie, and the seed-man of all treasouns against this realme,) that this interprise must be keeped secreit; and, namelie, from the Frenche, for certane respects not of small moment, as is said, untill the messinger sould post to Rome to the Pope, for money, and to the King of Spaine, for order and direction for men and shippes. The messinger had his letters of credite from the Scotish queen, the duke, and others, to the Pop and the King of Spaine. And so, comming to Rome, he returned letters from the Pop's gracious Holinesse in the beginning of May to the said queen, and to the duke and others. The letter to the duke was in Latine, beginning, Dilecte fili, Salutem. But, indeed, the duke might weill say, he sent not salutem, but perniciem. The duke had them, and read them by the intercessioun of that foresaid ungracious preest. The contents in some part were, that the Pope weill allowed of the interprise: he would write also to the King of Spaine to further it; but his present bussinesse of the chargable warres then in preparing against the Turke was the caus that money could not then be had for that sommer. And vitt, his ungracious Holinesse, after his accustomed sort, comforted them all not to despaire. So, it appeareth, that God vitt ordeaned him ather to be so zealous against the Turke. which surelie was a good act, or ellis his Holinesse' coffers are not now-a-dayes so full of money, as his bulls are of thunder-claps: so as the laike of money at that time happilie stayed the prosecutioun, to full effect, of this dangerous treasoun. And so, it is to be hoped. that by the same goodnesse of God, the mischeefe heerafter meant sall be diverted. It was also, by the devisers of these rebellions and invasiouns, determined that the realme of Ireland sould be assailed at the same time, thereby to weaken the queen's Majestie's forces. or to divert them frome defence of her self and her good subjects. Now, were it best to leave with these former branches, for it is said that this tree of treasoun and rebellioun bath a number of other branches of the verie like nature: that is, in devising how the Scotish queene sould have beene convoyed away, sometime by disguising, sometime by plaine force and raising of rebellioun, and so putt to libertie, and proclamed Queene of England and Scotland. But to encrease the errour of her stile, she sould have beene proclamed King and Queen of England and Scotland. It might be also reported, how her sonne sould have beene stollin out of Scotland, to be sent into Spaine, with suche like devices, tending to move troubles in the realme that was, and vitt is, (thanked be God.) quiett.

"Since I wrote this, I am the more boldenned to think all these things true, for that this present day the Lord Major of this citie of Londoun, with a number of his brethrein, were at the Starre Chamber with the queen's Majestie's counsell, where, I understand, by report of some of them that heard what was said by the counsell to them, concerning the present case of the Duke of Norfolk, that the substance of all that is by me before reported is verie true, with muche more.

"At Londoun, the 13th of October 1571."

THE SIEGE RAISED.

The siege of Edinburgh beganne the 9th of October, and continued about eight or nyne dayes. Fourtie or fiftie foote of the south wall were beaten doun, but reinforced and filled up again in the night, by these within the toun. The peeces stelled on the Great Kirk, and upon the Kirk of Field, condemned the ordinance without, and shott through the regent's pavilioun, but did no harme. The want of powder and bullet constrained these without to raise the siege. It was reported that the Queen of England willed the noblemen not to hazard themselves upon the souldiours within the toun, for she would provide helpe sooner than they believed; and that thereupon the siege was raised.

TROUBLES IN THE NORTH.

In the meane time, there were no small troubles in the north. Arthure Forbesse, brother to the Lord Forbesse, a constant follower of the king's part, having a purpose to suppresse the insolencie of the Gordons, appointed a day and place for assembling the Forbesses. Adam Gordon, brother to the Erle of Huntlie, having privie intelligence therof, sett upon a troupe of the Forbesses, before they could joyne with the rest. Arthure was slaine, sindrie takin. The other troup and the rest who were scattered, fearing crueltie against the captives, gave place to the present time. The Lord Forbesse sent to court for supplee. Howbeit there was great need of men about Edinburgh, yitt the regent sent two hunlieth footemen, and letters to the barons and gentlemen in the countrie about to joyne with him. When their forces were assembled, there were not found men sufficient to be captans among them, for all the cheefes of the famileis were almost young mer Yitt the Lord Forbesse went fordward to Aberdeene, to drive from thence Adam Gordoun. Adam led his people out of the toun compelled the burgesses to follow, to make his armie seeme the greater. They joyne together neere the toun. The footemen ad venturing farther in pursuing of the Gordouns than their shott c powder would continue, were out of reache of defence, and putt to flight by the bowmen of the Gordons. Yitt were not manie slaine but takin prisoners, becaus it was night; and among the rest, Alex ander Lord Forbesse himself was takin, and William his secure sonne. Some relate this historie otherwise: that about the eightl or nynth of November, Captan Chisholme went with his band o an hundreth men out of Leith. When they came to Dundie Captan Wedderburne tooke up another band. The two bands went with certane horsemen under Alexander Campbell's charge to assist the Maister of Forbesse to suppresse the insolencie of Adam Gordon, who, a little before, had burnt the hous of Towy the lady, and other twentie-foure persons.1 The Maister of Forbesse and his freinds, certane of the Ladie Crawfurd's bowmen. sister to the Lady Towy, together with the assistance foresaid, and of Johne Keith, Maister of Marshall, and the Laird of Drwm. were marching fordward toward Aberdeene. But the Master of Marshall went home, becaus the Master of Forbesse would not follow his counsell, as he alledged. Upon Tuisday the 20th of November, the Maister of Forbesse and his companie came within a myle of the toun of Aberdeene. Adam Gordoun came furth with freshe men: vitt was he not willing to fight, becaus the other par-

Among the revolting cruelties practised on both sides, during this fierce civil war, the murder so briefly mentioned here was one of the most flagitious. Towy House, which was in the keeping of the lady, was attacked by Adam Gordon, upon which she demanded and obtained a cessation of hostilities, until she could ascertain her husband's mind upon the terms of surrender. But while her messenger was sent for this purpose, under a twelve hours' assurance, Gordon caused his soldiers to pile up heather and wood against the walls, and set the heap on fire, by which the Lady of Towy, her children, and all within the building, perished, except one poor woman, who forced her way through the blazing combustibles.

tie had thrise als manie harquebusiers. But the souldiours enterng too farre, Adam Gordoun sett upon them with his horse-men and bow-men, when he perceaved them to be without reache of lefence, and their powder spent, and defeate them. Captan Chisholme, and a great number of his best souldiours, was slaine, the Maister of Forbesse himself, and manie of his freinds takin.

JEDBURGH THREATNED, BUT RELEEVED.

Thomas Ker of Phairnihirst, and Walter Scot of Balcleuche, rathered, beside their owne followers, the theeves of Liddisdaill, Ewisdaill, Eskdaill, West-Tiviotdaill, and some also out of the English borders, of purpose to spoile Jedburgh. They had from heir assisters in Edinburgh 120 harquebusiers. Walter Ker, Laird of Cesfurde, was sent for to Jedburgh, who came and joyned with hem. William Lord Ruthven came with 120 shott, and certan orse-men, to Dryburgh. Balcleuche and Phairnihirst came earelie n the morning to Jedburgh, with three thowsand men, to prevent he aide of the other partie. But the Lord Ruthven followed them t the heeles, and vexed them with shott, and frequent skirmishes. Desfurde with his followers, and the toun of Jedburgh, came furth. Balcleuche and Phairnihirst their forces fearing to be enclosed, fled o places of defence, the most part to Hawick. The Lord Ruthren was within a myle of Hawick before they were aware. The nemeis amazed, led furth their horse and foote men, but were so persued, that the horse-men left the foote-men a prey. They hid hemselves in littill woods adjoynned to the water, but in end reelded themselves. They were suffered to depart, upon promise o returne and become true prisoners. Some were reteaned as bledges; the rest violated their promise, by the instigatioun of Sir William Kirkaldie.

THE QUEEN OF ENGLAND'S MESSAGE TO THE REBELLS RENEWED.

Upon the 23d of October, Mr Cairs returned from Berwick, and delivered to the rebells in the castell the heeds following, subscrive with the queen's (signature,) becaus they alledged before, the could not answere for want of subscriptioun:—

"Her Majestie's pleasure is, that yee leave off the maintenance of civill discord, and give your obedience to the king, whom she will maintenane to the uttermost of her power. And if yee will so doe, she will deale with the regent and the king's partie to receave you in favour, upon reasonable conditiouns, for securitie of life and living. In respect the Queene of Scots hath practised with the Pope other princes, and her owne subjects, great and dangerous treasonagainst the state of the countrie, and destruction of her owne person, she will never suffer her to be in authoritie, so farre as in helyeth; nor to have libertie whill she liveth. If yee refuse thes offers, her Majestie will presentlie aide the king's partie with mermunitioun, and other things, against you. Wherupon her Majesti desireth your answere with speed."

About the beginning of November, certan letters were proclame in Sanct Andrewes, at the regent's directioun, discharging the collectours of the kirk to gather the thrids, becaus, as the letters specified, ministers' stipends were not payed, nor that part which is allotted to the king's hous, out of the thrids. But it was thought that these letters were raised at the instance of the Erle of Morton, to whom the Rector of Sanct Andrewes (whom he had invested in the title of the bishoprick, reserving to himself the profite) had writtin informing him that the collector would not suffer him to uplift certane dueteis belonging to the bishoprick. But these letters were recalled at the instance of the Laird of Dun, who had writtin to the regent as followeth:—

"I have thought it expedient, in writt, to lett your Grace know my judgement in these articles and heeds contained in your Grace's last writting. As to the pensioun appointed before to the regent's hous, as I understand, little difficultie will be therin, your Grace doing your duetie to the kirk; the which, I pray God your Grace may doe. As to the provisioun of benefices, this is my judgement all benefices of tithes, or having tithes joyned or annexed thereto, which is takin up of the people's labours,) have the offices joyned o them; which office is the preaching of the Evangell, and minitratioun of the sacraments. And this office is spirituall, and thereore belongeth to the kirk, who onlie hath the distributioun and miistratioun of spirituall things. So, by the kirk spirituall offices re distributed, and men admitted and receaved thereto. And the dministratioun of the power is committed by the kirk to bishops r superintendents. Wherefore, to the bishops and superintendents perteaneth the examination and admission of men to offices and penefices of spirituall cure, whatsoever benefice it be, als weill bishopricks, abbaceis, and prvoreis, as the inferiour benefices. That his perteaneth, by the Scriptures of God, to bishops or superintendents, is manifest: for the Apostle Paul writteth unto Timothie, Cap. ii. ver. 2: 'These things that thou hath heard of me, manie being witnesse, the same deliver to faithfull men, who sall be able o teache others.' Heere the Apostle referreth the examination to Fimothie of the qualitie and abilitie of the person, where he sayeth, To men able to teache others.' And also, the admissioun he reerreth, where he biddeth, 'Deliver to him the same, that is able to eache others.' And in another place, 1 Tim. Cap. v. ver. 22: Lay hands upon no man suddanlie, nather be partaker of other nen's sinnes: keep thyself pure.' By laying on of hands is undertood admissioun to spirituall offices, the which the Apostle will not that Timothie doe suddanlie, without just examinatioun of their naners and doctrine. The Apostle also writting to Titus, Bishop of Creet, putteth him in remembrance of his office, which was to admitt and appoint ministers in everie citie and congregatioun. And that he sould not doe the same rashlie, and without examinaioun, he expresseth the qualiteis and conditions of suche men as ould be admitted, as at lenth is conteaned in the first chapter of the Epistle foresaid. The deacouns, which were chosin in Jerusaem by the whole congregatioun, were receaved and admitted by the Apostles, and that by laying on of their hands, as Sanct Luke writteth in the sixt chapter of the Acts of the Apostles. Thus we ave expressed plainlie by Scriptures, that to the office of a bishop perteaneth examinatioun and admissioun to spirituall cure and office. and also to oversee them who are admitted, that they walke uprightlie, and exerce their office faithfullie and purelie. To tak this power from the bishop or superintendent is to take away the office of a bishop, that no bishop be in the kirk; which were to alter and abolishe the order which God hath appointed in his kirk. There is a spirituall jurisdictioun and power which God hath givin unto his kirk, and to these who beare office therin; and there is a temporall power givin of God to kings and civill magistrats. Both the powers are of God, and most agreing to the fortifeing one of another, if they be right used. But when the corruptioun of man entereth in, confounding the offices, usurping to himself what he pleaseth, nothing regarding the good order appointed of God, then confusioun followeth in all estats. In the First of the Kings, Cap. xii., it is written, that Jeroboam king, in presumptioun of his authoritie, made preests in his realme, expresse against the order which the Lord in these dayes had appointed tuiching the preesthood; wherupon followed destructioun of that king and his seed, and likewise of all others that followed him in that wickednesse. For the better understanding of this mater, Christ hath givin furth a rule which ought to be weyghed of magistrats and of all people, saying, 'Give to Cæsar that perteaneth to Cæsar; and to God that perteaneth to God.' The kirk of God sould fortifie all lawfull power and authoritie that perteaneth to the civill magistrat, becaus it is the ordinance of God. But if he passe the bounds of his office, and enter within the sanctuarie of the Lord, medling with suche things as apperteane to the ministers of God's kirk; as Uzziah the King of Judah did, 2 Paral. xvi., entering in the Temple to burne incense. the which perteaned not to his office, then the servants of God sould withstand his unjust interprise, as did the preest at that time withstand the King of Judah; for so they are commanded of God-The servants of God, when suche wickednesse occurreth, sould not keepe silence, flattering princes in vaine pride, but withstand and reprove them in their iniquitie: and who doeth otherwise is unworthie to beare in God's kirk anie office. A greater offence or intempt of God and his kirk can no prince doe, than to sett up by is authoritie men in spirituall offices, as to creat bishops and pasors of the kirk; for so to doe, is to conclude no kirk of God to be; or the kirk can not be, without it have the owne proper jurisdicoun and libertie, with the ministratioun of suche offices as God th appointed. In speeking this tuiching the libertie of the kirk, meane not the hurt of the king or others in their patronages, but at they have their priviledges of presentatioun according to the wes; providing alwise that the examinatioun and admissioun perane onlie to the kirk, of all benefices having cure of soules. That sould not appeare that the pastors of the kirk seeke of avarice and ambitioun to have possessioun of great benefices, your Grace Il understand that the kirk hath continuallie suted, (of old als eill as now,) as their articles, concluded in the Generall Assemblie, ad consented to and subscrived by the most part of the nobilitie, hich are to be produced, beare; and was propouned to the queen, te king's Majestie's mother; to witt, that when ever anie of the eat benefices vaiked, having manie kirks joyned thereto, that all e kirks sould be divided, and severallie dispouned to severall men, serve everie one at his owne kirk: of which minde all that are office in the kirk continue; whereby it may be knowne at they seeke not of avarice suche promotioun as is alledged. nd I doubt not if others of the nobilitie were als weill purged avarice and other corruptions as the ministers of the kirk, they ould have agreed to fulfill that thing which they subscrived ith solemne oath. And as yitt, the kirk most humblie suteth your Grace and counsell to have the same fulfilled. this cannot be granted, I meane the dismembring (as they il it) of great benefices, I trust, in respect of this confused oublous time, the kirk will consent (the benefices and offices vned therunto being givin after the order before spokin, that the iviledge and libertie of the kirk be not hurt) to assigne suche proes as may be spaired above the reasounable sustentation of the inistrie of the kirks of suche benefices, to the maintenance of the thoritie and commoun effaires for the present, whill further order may be tane in these maters. For the kirk contendeth not fo worldlie profite, but for that spirituall libertie which God hath giving unto it; without which be granted, the servants of God will not b satisfied, but will oppone themselves against all power and tyranni which presumeth to spoile the kirk of the libertie therof; and rathe to dee than to live under that miserable boundage. Their lives ar not to them so deare as is the honour of God and libertie of hi kirk. I heare say, some men brag and boast the poore ministers to tak their lives from them: but I wish that suche men conteaned themselves within bounds. For they are not sure of their own life; and to runne that race will mak it more short. Of old, the Papists called the truthe heresie; and some now call the truth treasoun. We may perceave, in all ages and times, Satan wantetl not his servants to impugne the truthe. As to the questioun, If i be expedient a superintendent to be where a qualified bishop is, understand a bishop or superintendent to be but one office; and where the one is the other is. But having some respect to the cac whereupon the questioun is moved, I answere, The superintendent that are placed ought to continue in their offices, notwithstanding anie others that intruse themselves, or are placed by suche as have no power in suche offices. They may be called bishops, but are no bishops, but idols, (Zech. xi. 17,) sayeth the prophet. And, there fore, the superintendents which are called, and placed orderlie by the kirk, have the office and jurisdictioun; and the other bishops, so called, have no office nor jurisdictioun in the kirk of God; for they enter not by the doore, but by another way, and therefore are no pastors, sayeth Christ, but theeves and robbers. I can not but lament frome my verie heart, that great misorder used in Stirline at the last parliament, in creating bishops, placing them, and giving them vote in parliament as bishops, in despite of the kirk, and high contempt of God. Having the kirk oppouning itself against that misorder, they were not heard, but boasted with threatnings. But their boasting was not against man, but against the eternall God, whose ordinance publictlie they transgressed. What followed therupon is knowne. God hath power to destroy and to save: he is a mightie Lord, able to preserve the innocent, and cast down the pride of the mightie. I heare some were offended with the commissioners of the kirk at that time, but without caus; for they passed not the bounds of their commissioun: and the whole kirk will affirme their proceedings, and insist farther in that mater: for if that misordered creation of bishops be not reformed, the kirk will first compleane unto God, and also unto all their brethrein, members of the kirk within this realme, and to all reformed kirks within Europe. Some counsellers think now good time to conqueis from the kirk (being now, as they judge, weake and poore) priviledges and profites to the temporall authoritie. But if there were no other particular respects nor the authoritie, I judge they would not travell so bussilie. But what respect so ever they have, their unrighteous conqueist and spoile of the kirk sall never profite them, but rather be a caus to bring plague and destructioun both upon the head and counsellers of suche abominatioun. Becaus the servants of God speeke in this mater, reproving men's corruptions, they are called proud: that miskenne their owne place, and know not with whom they deale; as though they were gods, and yitt are but flesh. Lett suche men understand, of whatsoever estat they be, that the ministers of God's kirk have receaved an office of God above them, wherunto they ought to be subject and obedient; and have receaved a richer treasure than they, though it be in earthlie vessels, as sayeth the apostle Sanct Paul, 2 Cor. cap. iv. ver. 7; and have receaved a power of God to cast down and destroy the pride of man, and to bring in subjectioun all things that exalt themselves against God. 2 Cor. x. 5. The Lord will not that his servants, in executing and using their office, feare men, how mightie and potent so ever they be, as it is writtin, Isay li. 7, "Feare yee not the reproache of men, nather be affrayed of their rebookes and threatnings. For the mothe sall eat them up as a garment, and the worme sall eat them like wooll: but my righteousnesse sall be for ever, and my salvatioun from generation to generation." The Spirit of God entering in the hearts of his servants, giveth them suche a taste of his power and Majestie, and a sight of his judgements, that VOL. III.

with them the enemeis of God and his kirk are nothing regarded, but counted as dust before the wind, and as waxe before the fire: unable to stand, but to perish in the day of the Lord's visitatioun. They will, according to their duetie, reprove ungodlinesse, and withstand all iniquitie; and as to the malice and troubles raised against them by the wicked powers of the world, to their owne damnatioun, they will patientlie endure, for therin consisteth the patience of the sancts: for they see a glorious end to follow therupon. Some men in their corruptioun (as their words have declared) purpose, in time of trouble, craftilie to handle the kirk, whill all thir troubles be pacified. Lett suche men understand, that suche evill purposes make the troubles to continue the longer. But though the troubles were pacified, and they confederated with England, France, and Spaine, and all other earthlie kingdoms, vitt sall they not be able to destroy the kirk of God and libertie therof. For the Mightie Lord, who hath beene a protectour of his kirk in all ages, and hath destroyed and cast doun great impyres and kingdoms that made battell against his kirk, sall use the same judgements against all men that in thir dayes intend the like. For He beareth to His kirk a perpetuall love, and a perpetuall protectioun and defence to it, in this time and for ever."

AN ADMONITIOUN OF DAVID'S TO KINGS AND MAGISTRATS.

"Be wise, O yee kings; be learned, yee that are judges of the earth.

Serve the Lord with feare, and rejoice before him with reverence. Kisse the Sonne, least the Lord be angrie, and so yee perish from the right way; for his wrathe sall shortlie be kindled."

Of Montrose, the 10th of November 1571.

In this letter, we find that the superintendent could not weill distinguish betwixt a bishop and a superintendent; and that he taketh Titus for a bishop; which errour he acknowledged afterwards, when the Secund Booke of Policie was contrived. Of the difference betwixt bishops and superintendents, see before, page 254.¹ The superintendent wrote another letter, the 14th of November, to the regent, wherin he regrateth the inhibitioun made, that nothing be answered to the collectors of the kirk. The regent wrote an answere to the Laird of Dun, superintendent, for discharge of the letters of inhibitioun, as followeth:—

"RIGHT TRUST COUSIN, -After most heartilie commendations: In place of your self, whom we have long looked for, we receaved this day two letters of yours, one from Montrose, the 10th, another from Perth, the 14th of this moneth, conteaning other effect and mater nor our expectatioun was, in consideratioun of our good meaning, to have travelled by all possible meanes for quietting of suche things as were in controversie, that the ministers of the kirk might have found some ease and repose, and we releeved of a fasheous burthein, that we have in default of a certane forme accorded unto the dispositioun of benefices great and small. Our said meaning, we perceave, is otherwise takin; which we understand to proceed from other private fountanes than your owne good nature. And so will we not preasse muche to contend with you in writt, by reasoun of this mater, as the weight and gravitie therof requireth. We have beene verie desirous, indeid, to speeke your self speciallie, since we were burthenned with this charge of regiment, and your owne presence, peradventure, might have supplied some things that your letters find fault with. But seeing maters taken as they are, that all occasioun of grudge may be removed, for anie thing done by us, we send you heerwith again a discharge of the inhibitioun latelie givin. For as we have lived heeretofore (praised be God) honorablie upon our owne, so sall we forbeare to crave the collectors, whill this mater be better considered of. And vitt, when indifferent men sall looke upon the words of the inhibitioun, wherefore it is givin, and for how short space it sould have lasted, we trust they sall thinke, that it ought not to be tane in suche part as we see it is takin. If collectors be subjects to the king, (of others we will spaire to speake at this time,) they might compeare when they are charged, and not write in contempt. Lett als manie charges passe as they please, they will obey none. And this we meane, of suche as be most ewest: what the other regents had intended to be takin up, that we sall be frustrated therof. Which vitt was not the greatest occasioun why we desired some of the superintendents to be heere at this time. But thir maters tuiched in our letter sent you, which albeit we sent it for your privat informatioun, yitt being skansed, we see rather extremitie meant, to stoppe the helping of the mater, nor otherwise anie mentioun of quietting or ordering things amisse, as truelie our meaning it was, and is still, to procure the reforming of things disordered in all sorts, als farre as may be, reteaning the priviledge of the king. crown, and patronage. The default of the whole standeth in this, that the policie of the Kirk of Scotland is not perfyte: nor anie solide conference among godlie men, that are weill willed, and of judgement how the same may be helped. And for corruptioun, which daylie increasseth, whensoever the circumstances of things sall be weill considered by the good ministers that are nather bussie nor over-desirous of promotiouns to them and theirs, it will be found, that some have beene authors of things that no good policie in the kirk can allow. Wheranent we thought to have conferred speciallie with your self; and to have yeelded to you in things reasonable, and craved satisfactioun of other things alike reasonable at your hands, and by your procurement. If yee see no caus, that anie who beareth office in the Kirk of God sall come to Leith, I must take patience, and differe the mater to the conventioun of the estats of the realme, by whom I was burthenned with this office; and will make them, and all the godlie in Christendome, judges betwixt them bearing office in the kirk (yee write of) and me, whether I have not sought their satisfactioun; or if they have not neglected the meanes and occasions that were most appearand to bring quietnesse to the poore ministers of the kirk. And in the meane time, I will answere no further to the speciall points of your letters, but will keepe the same to my self, whill time and better advice worke effects. If yee of your self onlie have writtin, then there is one way to be considered of. If by commoun consent of anie number of them bearing office in the kirk, then are they to be otherwise answered, as time and place serveth. And so, for this time suffering, and ceasing to make longer letter, committs you to the protectioun of Almightie God.

"Your assured good freind,

"JOHNE, REGENT.

" At Leith, the 15th of November, 1571."

THE ERLE OF MORTON SENT TO BERWICK.

The Erle of Morton went out of Leith toward Berwick the 17th of November. The Lord Hounsdane was so restricted by instructions, as that he could doe nothing but minasse them in the castell, and heare what was craved and offered by the other partie, and so to advertise the queen and counsell. The marishall was to passe from Berwick to court, to give informatioun of the state of this countrie; wherupon it is thought, resolutioun sall be takin tuiching the sending of an armie.

After that the Erle of Morton returned from Berwick, letters were directed, to answere the new Bishop of Sanct Andrewes, Mr Johne Dowglas, of all the fruicts of the said bishoprick.

A CONFERENCE AT LEITH.

Upon Thursday, the sixt of December, the Superintendent of Fife and Mr Johne Dowglas came to Leith, becaus the Superintendent of Angus, at the regent's desire, had writtin for the superintendents, and some other commissioners of the kirk, that some order might be takin about provisioun of the king's hous out of the thrids; and to consult upon some maters tuiching the policie of the kirk, and dispositioun of benefices. But the mater was delayed till a conventioun appointed to be holdin in Januar.

CAPTAN HACKERSTON AND CAPTAN MITCHELL TAKIN.

Upon the tenth of December, Captan Hackerston was takin again, and fiftie souldiours with him, and seven or eight slaine. Captan Mitchell was also takin, and six or seven with him, following the chasse within the Kirk of Feild Port. It was thought, notwithstanding, that there was collusioun betwixt the two captans; for if the warres ceased, they would get no more wages.

MINISTERS IN THE NORTH TROUBLED BY THE REBELLS THERE.

The ministers in the north, speciallie in Murrey, were at this time rigorouslie handled. A certan number of them were called, upon the 13th of December, before the Laird of Auchindoun, and the Shireff of Murrey, and their deputeis, to a lieutenant court, to underly the law for treasonable defection from the queen's authoritie, and for praying for the king, and controveening the act of parliament made by the queen's commissioners; and blaspheming of her Highnesse, in calling her an idolater, adulterer, murtherer, and Jessabell. Some compound privatlie, others were fugitive. Some came in will, which will was declared to be this:-To renounce the king's authoritie, and give obedience to the queen and her authoritie; to pray for her and her lieutenants, in their publict prayers; which they promised, and found sovertie to performe. Some were forced, for feare of their lives, to find sovertie to underly the law, the tenth of Januar nixt, in Aberdeene. Sindrie had beene compelled before to leave the countrie, becaus they would not pray for the queen; but none were summouned by order of law till this time.

¹ This Mitchell was evidently one of those Dalgetties who would serve any cause for pay and plunder. His conduct is thus commemorated in the Diurnal:—" In this mene tyme, the wedder was vehement cold, and the coillis were verie scant in Edinburgh; for there wes nane that transportit coillis to Edinburgh, but behuifit them to pay tribute to Capitane Mitchell, ilk burden vj. pence." Such characters, however, were produced in plenty during the course of this war.

M.D.LXXII.

AN OFFER OF A COMBAT.

In the beginning of Januar there was sent down a drumme from Edinburgh to Leith, to demand if they would fight, fiftie against fiftie. When these in Leith offered to fight in the king's actioun, the others refused.

MR CARIE SENT TO BOTH PARTEIS.

Upon the first of Januarie, Mr Carie, sonne to the Lord Hounsdane, came to Leith, and from thence went to the castell, and craved that the toun might be made patent to the king's lieges.

CALUMNEIS RAISED UPON MR KNOX.

About this time the rebels raised calumneis against the servant of God, Mr Knox, becaus he had threatned that the Lord would punishe their cruell murthers and oppressiouns. They spread a bruite, that Mr Knox was banished Sanct Andrewes, becaus in his yaird he had raised some sancts, among whom came up the devill with hornes; which, when his servant, Richard Bannatyne, saw, he ranne wood, and so died.¹

It might appear a bold attempt in the manufacture of such a falsehood, that they should have hazarded the death of Bannatyne among the other particulars, he being not only alive, but the recorder of this most preposterous figment. But the medium of communication between St Andrews and Edinburgh was, at this time, so interrupted and tedious, that the tale could have a chance to serve a temporary purpose, before it could be effectually contradicted. Lady Hume and some others were so persuaded of its verity, that they thronged round the postman of St Andrews, inquired into the truth of it, and would not be convinced that John Knox had not been actually banished from St Andrews, and that Bannatyne was still alive, and had never seen the devil raised in his life.

THE CONVENTION HOLDIN AT LEITH.

Upon the 12th of Januar there was a conventioun of superintendents, commissioners, ministers, commissioners from touns and kirks, This meeting is called in the Register a Conventioun, and not a Generall Assemblie of the Kirk of Scotland. The ordinar Assemblie was appointed, at the last Generall Assemblie, to be holdin at Sanct Andrewes, and to beginne the 6th of Marche. Suche conveened as were sent for, and warned before. Yitt they concluded, that this present conventioun sall have the strenth and force of a Generall Assemblie; and that all things be treated and ended heerin, which might goodlie be done, and used to be concluded in anie Generall Assemblie: that not the lesse, all suche brethrein as might convenientlie travell, conveene to the Generall Assemblie, which is to beginne at Sanct Andrewes the sixt day of Marche nixt to come; and that the Moderator continue till that time, and to make the exhortatioun according to the order. Gilbert Gairdin, Moderator of the last Assemblie, was continued till the Assemblie which was to be holdin in Marche.

A COMMISSION.

They gave full commissioun and power to Johne Areskine of Dun, knight, Superintendent of Angus and Mernes, Mr Johne Winrame, Superintendent of Fife and Strathern, Mr William Lundie of that Ilk, Mr Andrew Hay, Commissioner of Cliddisdaill, Mr David Lindsey, Commissioner of Kyle, Mr Robert Pont, Commissioner of Murrey, Mr Johne Craig, one of the ministers of Edinburgh, or anie foure of them, to compeere before my lord regent's Grace, and so manie of the Lords of Secreit Counsell as his Grace sall appoint, in Leith, this instant moneth of Januar; and there, in the kirk's name, most humblie propone, shew, and declare the articles, heeds, supplicatiouns, and complaints delivered to them by the cirk presentlie assembled; most humblie requeisting for answere thereto; to confer and reasoun with his Grace and counsell, and o conclude therin, conforme to the instructions givin to them by he kirk, &c., and to report the saids heeds and articles, with their conclusiouns therupon, to the nixt Assemblie, to beginne at Sanct Andrewes the sixt of Marche nixt to come; to the effect the same nay be insert among the acts of the Generall Assemblie, &c., firme and stable, &c. Item, Ordeanneth the saids brethrein to penne the needs and articles for the kirk, and to deliver the double of them to the clerk, to be registred in the Register of the Assemblie.

LICENCE GRANTED TO MR ROBERT PONT TO BE A LORD OF SESSION.

Mr Robert Pont, Commissioner of Murrey, dimitted his commisioun, simpliciter, in the Assemblie's hands, requeisting them to proide for another visiter in these bounds. They understanding that ny lord regent's Grace and counsell was desirous that the said Mr Robert sould accept the place of one of the Senators of the Colledge of Justice, gave licence to the said Mr Robert to accept and use the aid place of a Senatour in the said Colledge of Justice, what time re sall be required thereto; providing alwise, that he leave not the ffice of the ministrie, but that he exerce the same, as he sall be appointed by the kirk; and that the said licence to the said Mr Roert be no preparative to anie other minister to procure suche pronotioun, without the Assemblie's advice had of before. By this orrupt act we may judge how corrupt in judgement this conentioun was. They gave power to some few commissioners, yea, o anie foure of them, to agree with the Lords of Secreit Counsell. nd to conclude upon the policie of the kirk, and dispositioun of penefices; whereas the custome was before, in maters of suche veight, that the commissioners of the Assemblie appointed to treat of their effaires were ordeaned to report to the Assemblie before unie thing was concluded.

The instructiouns, according to which the commissioners sould have treated with the Lords of Counsell, are not extant in the register. They were in haste, and might not stay, as they confesse in the thrid sessioun, and therefore committed maters of great est weight to commissioners. The commissioners conveened at the same time in Leith with the Lords, who were hunting for fat kirk-livings. At that meeting, bishops, archdeacons, deanes, chapters, chancellers, were agreed upon, and to stand during the king' minoritie; but bishops to have no further jurisdictioun nor super intendents have. The forme of the agreement heere followeth:—

ANENT ARCHBISHOPRICKS AND BISHOPRICKS.

"At Leith, the 16th day of Januar.

"It is thought good, in consideration of the present state, that the names and titles of archbishops and bishops are not to be altered or innovated, nor yitt the bounds of the dioceses confounded; but to stand and continue in time comming, as they did before the reformation of religioun; at the least, to the king's Majestie's majoritie, or consent of parliament.

"That persons promoted to archbishopricks and bishopricks be (so farre as may be) endued with the qualiteis specified in the exemples of Paul to Timothie and Titus.

"As for the remanent profite and title of the benefice, becaus the possessour of the same must supplee the place of one of the ecclesiasticall estat in parliament, needfull it is that he who sall have the style, title, and place of abbot, pryour, and commendatore, be weill learned and qualified therefore. And for triell of his qualificatioun, the king's Majestie's letters commendatorie, under the signet, sall be directed to the archbishop or bishop in the province wherin the abbey or pryorie lyeth, to trie and examine his learning and habilitie; and upon testimoniall of his habilitie frome the ordinar, the person nominated sall competer before the king and his regent, and give his oath in forme, as the bishop doeth. "Trustie and weilbeloved, we greete you weill. Forsameekle as the bishoprick of S. presentlie vaiketh, by decease of the late incumbent of the same; and calling to our remembrance the vertue, learning, good conversatioun, and other godlie qualiteis of our trusty and weilbeloved A. B., preacher of the Word of God, we have thought, by thir our letters, to name him, and commend him to you, to be chosin to the said bishoprick of S. Wherefore we require you indilatlie, upon the recept heerof, to proceed to your election, according to the lawes of our realme, and our licence to choose, sent to you heerwith. LICENCE TO CHOOSE.

"Our Soveran Lord, with advice and consent of his right trust cousin, Johne Erle of Marr, etc., ordeaneth a letter to be made under the great seale in due forme, directed to the deane and chapter of the cathedral kirk of N., making mentioun, that it is humblic meaned to his Highnesse and his said regent, on the part of the saids deane and chapter, how the kirk forsaid presentlie vaiketh, and is destituted of a pastor, by the naturall death of the last bishop therof; and that his Highnesse will grant them licence to choose another bishop and pastor. His Majestie favourablie inclynning to their desire, hath thought good to grant the same: Requiring the said deane and chapter to choose suche a bishop and pastor of the said bishoprick, that sall be devote to God, and to his Highnesse and his realme profitable and faithfull: And that precepts be directed heerupon, in due forme, as effeires. Subscrived by the said regent. At," etc.

THE TESTIMONIALL OF THE DEANE AND CHAPTER RETURNED TO THE KING AND TO HIS REGENT.

"The right excellent, right high, and mightie Prince James, by the grace of God King of Scots, our Soveran Lord; your Majestie's daylie oratours and humble subjects, the deane and chapter of the cathedrall kirk of N., humble reverence and submissioun. Forsameekle as we, having your Highnesse' licence to choose a bishop and pastour to the said kirk, now vacant by decease of the last incumbent, have tried and examined the qualificatioun of our weilbeloved brother N., nominated and recommended by your Majestie; whom we have found a personage endued with vertue, learning, and good conversatioun, and other good qualiteis, and able to discharge the office of a bishop in the kirk of God; and therefore have elected him therunto: humblie craving and requiring your Highnesse to grant your royall assent and approbatioun to our said electioun, by your Majestie's letters under your great seale, in due and competent forme, as effeires. Givin under our commoun seale, and subscrived with our hands."

Incace the person nominated be not found qualified.

"Have tried and examined the qualification of N., nominated by your Majestie, and find him not qualified in the whole or part of the qualities required in a bishop: most humblie therefore craving and requiring your Highnesse, that, with all convenient expedition, some other, sufficientlie qualified, may be of new nominated and recommended to the said bishoprick, that the kirk of God be not destituted of a pastour."

THE CONFIRMATION, PROVISION, AND ROYALL ASSENT, UPON THE CHAPTER'S CERTIFICAT MADE OF THEIR ELECTIOUN.

"Our soverane lord, with advice and consent of his right traist cousin, etc., ordeaneth a letter to be made under the great seale, in due forme, directed to the Most Reverend Father in God, and his Highness' weilbeloved A., by the provision of God Archbishop of S., or to whatsomever other bishops to whom in this part it apperteaneth, making mentioun that the seate of N., latelie vacant by the naturall death of the last bishop therof, or by forfalture, translatioun, dimissioun, or deprivatioun; his Highnesse, at the humble petitioun of the deane and chapter of the cathedrall kirk of N., by his Majestie's letters under the great seale, hath granted licence to them to choose another, in bishop and pastor of the seate foresaid. The same deane and chapter, by vertue of the said licence, have chosin his weilbeloved A. B., preacher of the Word of God, in bishop and pastor to them of the said kirk, as by their letters, under their commoun seale, directed to his Highnesse, may plainlie appeare. Therefore, our said soveran lord accepting the said electioun, hath givin his assent therunto, as also his favour, and signifieth the same to the said archbishop or bishop, by the said letter: Requiring, and in faith and oath (whereby they are holdin to his Majestie) commanding them to consecrat a bishop elected, as said is, in bishop and pastor of the kirk forsaid; and to confirme the said electioun; and all and sindrie other things to doe, belonging to their pastorall office in that part, after the forme of the lawes of this realme, with all diligence, favour, and effect. Subscrived by the said lord regent," &c.

If he be a bishop alreadie, and is to be translated, then to use thir words:—

"And the same A.B., bishop and pastor of the cathedrall kirk forsaid, by translatioun to confirme," &c.

After, the new-made bishop sall compeere before the king's Majestie and his regent, and make his oath, as followeth:—

"I, A. B., now elected Bishop of S., utterlie testifie and declare in my conscience, that your Majestie is the onlie lawfull and supreme governour of this realme, als weill in things temporall as in the conservatioun and purgatioun of religioun; and that no forraine prince, prelat, state, or potentate, hath or ought to have anie jurisdictioun, power, superioritie, pre-eminencie, or authoritie ecclesiasticall or spirituall, within this realme. And therefore I utterlie renounce and forsake all forraine jurisdictiouns, powers, superioriteis, and authoriteis, and promise, that from this furth I sall and will beare faith and true allegiance to your Majestie, your heyres and lawfull successours; and to my power sall assist and defend all jurisdictiouns, priviledges, pre-eminencie, and authoriteis granted and belonging to your Highness, your heyres and lawfull successours, or united and annexed to your royall crowne. And further, acknowledge and confesse, to have and hold the said bishoprick ad possessiouns of the same, under God, onlie of your Majestie, ad crowne royall of this your realme; and for the saids possesouns I doe my homage presentlie unto your Majestie, and unto the same your heyres and lawfull successours sall be faithfull and rue. So helpe me God."

RESTITUTION OF THE BISHOP'S TEMPORALITIE.

"Our soveran lord, with advice of his right trustie cousins, oreaneth a letter to be made under the privie seale, in due forme, aking mentioun that the bishoprick of N., vacant by decease of e last bishop therof, the deane and chapter of the cathedrall rk forsaid, by his Highnesse' licence sought and obteaned, have ected his Highnesse' weilbeloved A.B., preacher of the Word of od, in their bishop and pastor. THE EXECUTION OF THE DUKE OF NORFOLK.

About the same time, to witt, the 16th of Januar, the Duke of Norfolk was arraigned at Westminster Hall.¹ The effect of the indytement was this:—That, anno Domini regni reginæ 11, and of before and after, he did traterouslie compasse and imagine to deprive, destroy, and putt to death the queen's Majestie of England: to raise rebellioun, to subvert the commoun wealth; and to stirre up forrainers to invade the realme; and to warre against the queene: for that he, knowing Marie, late Queen of Scots, to have clamed the crowne of England, and to have named her self queen, and to have borne the armes of the queene without difference, did, the 23d of September, in the said elleventh yeere, without counsell or consent of the queen, send letters and tokins to the said late Scottish queene; and did lend her, diverse times, great summes of money, and receaved tokins from her, contrarie the commandement of the queen, and contrarie his owne submissioun and promise, under his hand and seale; and that he, knowing that the late Erles of Northumberland and Westmoreland, Nortoun, and others that had levied warre against the queene, the 16th of November, anno regni reginæ undecimo, and had assembled to them the number of 4000 persons; and that they fled the 12th of December, the twelfth veere of the queene, into Scotland, and there were receaved by the Duke of Chattelerault, the Lord Hume, and others, and als persued by the Erle of Sussex, the sixt of August, in the said twelfth yeere, and before and after, did send unto them; and that he, being adherent by promise to the Pope, enemie to the queene, 10 Martij, 13 reqinæ, did consent and counsell with Robert Ridolph, merchant, a stranger, and the Pop's factour, to have money from the Pope, King Philip, and Duke D'Alva; and that they sould send an armie to invade the realme, and deliver the said Scotish queene, to deprive the queen's Majestie, and to marie the said Scotish queene. And, farther, wheras the said Robert Ridolph had writtin, in name of the said duke, three letters, one to the Pope, another to King Philip, and another to Duke D'Alva, the said duke sent his servant to the ambassader. Two letters were to him allowed, and that they sould be takin as sent from him; to the which mater the said Ridolph agreed, who delivered to the Duke of Norfolke cyphers, wherof he caried a copie to Rome, whereby eache might certifie other; and likewise required of the said duke what time the aide sould arrive, that he sall be provided. And that, farther, the said duke did receave letters from the Pope, with promise of the said aide to Lord Hereis, and other Scots of the queen's enemeis.

In the examinatioun, it was layed to his charge, that he attempted the deprivation of the queen's Maiestie's releefe of the rebells, the releefe of the Scots, the queen's enemeis. To prove the first, two things were alledged: First, That knowing the Scotish queene to have clamed the crowne, he had attempted mariage with her. Secundlie, The conspirement of a forrane power to invade the realme. "He that would marie one that clameth the crowne, meaneth to aspire to the same," said Serjant Barhame.1 "This mater beganne at suche time as the duke was one of the commissioners for hearing of the caus betweene the Scotish queen and the lords of Scotland, at which time the duke being bound by an oath to deale therin directlie, to weigh indifferentlie the occasiouns and answeres, notwithstanding; he dealt indirectlie and partiallie, therby committing perjurie, and disclosing the queen's secreets." Barhame proved her clame by the armes and title which she used, and by her refusall to acknowledge the queen's Majestie lawfull queene. The duke answered, he must not defend her doings. She, having a husband, did it, which at the requeist of Throgmorton was left off; that the queene hath since entered in league with her, and that she hath christened her childe since. Then, said Serjant Barhame, "She hath not renounced her clame. And yitt you have so farre dealt with her, as being the queen's Majestie's commissioner there, to heare the mater, you have opened to her the occasiouns; you have her instructions how she sould deale, that the mater might not come to light, and conferred with the Bishop of Rosse about the same:—for prooffe wherof was shewed the examinatioun of Rosse, takin the 6th of November 1571, declaring that the duke uttered to him all that he knew in the mater, and promised what helpe he could. But he spake nothing of the mariage, but refered all to Lethington, who had caused the duke to stay the conference; and shew to him her good will, and how that he was sett to accompanie the Erle of Murrey, to convoy the Scotish queen's letters away, and to counterfoote other. And this was proved by a letter from Yorke writtin by the Erle of Murrey, and by a letter of the Bishop of Rosse to the Scotish queen, wherin he shewed that the duke did advertise him, that they went about to discredite the Scotish queene with the people of England, that she might be the lesse able to attempt anie thing against the Queen of England; and that he went about to procure the Scotish queene to be stollin away: and this, after his submissioun, wherin he promised, under his hand and seale. never to deale in this mater againe. There was further shewed a prophecie, which he shewed to Robert Higford, which was, In exaltatione lunæ succumbet leo: leo cum leone conjungetur, et catuli eorum regnabunt;2 proved by the examination of Hickford, to whom he shewed it.

^{1 &}quot;Wherefore pray you," said Barhame, in his speech, "sought he that mariage, yea, and sought it, as he meant to achieve it with force? It was not in respect of her person, for he knew her not; it could not be for any good report of her virtuous conditions; for he had an evil opinion of her: he did, by his writing, certify against her; he declared to Bannister that he thought very ill of her. It was not for her title to the kingdom of Scotland; for neither was she possessed of it, neither did he esteem it though she had it. Wherefore sought he her then? Surely, in respect of that unjust claim and title that she pretended to the present possession of the crown of England; which title cannot be maintained without evident purpose to depose the queen's Majesty, and to bring her to death and destruction."

Then was brought furth one Candish. The effect of his evidence was, that being at Southampton with the duke, and walking with him in his chamber, he gave advice to the duke, to travell for the queen's good will in this mariage. He answered, he sould have

Duke.—" As for Lethington and the Bishop of Ross, what their speeches were to me, I care not; I am to answer but for mine own speeches."

Serjeant.—" The Bishop of Ross accuseth you of your own speeches; and this he doth, being examined freely, and without any compulsion."

Duke .- " He is a Scot!"

Serj .- " A Scot is a Christian man."

Which was thus interpreted:—At the rising of the moon, (viz. the rising of the Earl of Northumberland, whose heraldric badge was the moon,) the lion (Queen Elizabeth) shall be overthrown: then shall the lion be joined with a lion, (the Duke of Norfolk and the Queen of Scots, who both had the lion in their coats of arms,) and their whelps (children) shall reign.

her, and it sould cost him his life. That the duke at Conhinghame did say to the said Candish, that there was nothing to undoe us but the rysing of the northerne lords, if they sould then rise; and did further aske, If the queen's Majestie were dead, that by his meanes he might procure his uncle Candish to be on his side? It was further shewed, that the duke sent one Habour to the erles, willing them not to rise; for if they did, they were undone. There was also shewed a letter of the Scotish queen to the duke, in cyphers, which was decyphered, declaring her sorrow upon a rumour that the Erle of Northumberland was takin, a long time before the rising of the duke. He denied that he had any suche conference with Candish.

It was layed to his charge by Mr Gerard, that he had conference himself with Ridolph the Florentine, for bringing in of 4000 men out of Flanders, to be landed at Harwiche, wherof 3000 sould have beene horsemen: that the Bishop of Rosse and he conferred about three severall letters tuiching the same maters, to be sent from the duke; the one to Duke D'Alva, another to the Pope, another to King Philip: but the duke would not subscrive them. Then was devised by Rosse, that he sould send Barker, his man, to the Spanish ambassader, to shew him how the duke was content with these letters, and that they sould passe as his, and that he did allow them as his owne; that the Spanish ambassader sould certifie them therof. He answered, if he had gone about anie suche things, he would have made provisioun for armour; but he had not bestowed five pund upon armour these five yeeres, except it were croslets. Then was read a letter of the Bishop of Rosse to the Scotish queene, which he wrote since his imprisonment, opening up the whole mater: and a letter of the duke's, writtin with reid oaker since the duke came to the Towre, willing him to burne that bag

And, or an'—quasi, if. Havers.

^{3 &}quot;The Earl of Shrewsbury (she wrote) came one night so merry to me, shewing that the Earl of Northumberland had been in rebellion, and was rendered to the Earl of Sussex, Lord Lieutenant of the North; which, since, I have found false; but at the sudden, such fear for friends cumbering me, I wept so till I was all swollen three days after."—Earl of Hardwiche's State Papers, Vol. i. p. 192.

f letters which Barker had layed in a place, to lay all on Rosse, shom law could not tuiche, becaus he was an ambassader. Then here shewed letters of Ridolph, sent by Rosse his servant, harles Bayle, by which it appeared how Duke D'Alva lyked the later, and how he enquired how farre Harwiche was from Lonoun; and the Pop's letter, dated the fourth of May, conteaning an answere of these letters which were sent by the duke. Then they roved the aide of the rebels that fled, by order givin from the lawer for distributioun of money to the Erle of Westmerland, the Jountesse of Northumberland, &c. Then the aiding of the Scotish bels was proved by letters from the duke to Bannester, and the eliverie of the money in Londoun to Thomas Brown. Therafter he jurie went apart, and returned after half an houre, and answered verie one, "Guiltie."

Then was Norfolk brought to the barre again. It was told him e was found guiltie, and the edge of the Towre axe turned toward im. Then said Shrewsburie, "Where as thou, Thomas, late Duke? Norfolke, hath beene indyted of severall treasouns, and hath leaded thyself not guiltie, and putt thyself to the triell of thy seres, and hath beene by them found guiltie; therefore, the countrie. I doth awaird thee, that thou sall be had from thence to the owre of Londoun, from whence thou come; and from thence be rawin through the middest of the citie to Tiburne, there to be unged till thou be halfe deid; then thy bowells to be takin out, and burnt before thy face; thy head to be cutt off, and thy bodie to a quartered, and thy head and quarters to be at the king's will and pleasure. Our Lord have mercie on thy soule."

He confessed upon the Towre Hill, the 2d of June, that he had ealing with the Queene of Scots; and, notwithstanding of her ajestie's elemencie upon his humble submissioun, continued still his former purpose. He protested he was not a Papist, but a vourer of the reformed religion. Thuanus, in his 49th booke, reteth, that after he was sett at libertie, a beggar was apprehended ith some letters careing in a staffe, writtin with ciphers; that at e same time was found a memoriall writtin with ciphers, sent from the Scottish queene to the Bishop of Rosse, among his papers the summe wherof was, that seing the Frenche king was embarked in civill warre at home, she would leane to the Spaniard: if she could escape out of the hand of the English, she would saile to Spaine, and open up her whole purpose to King Philip, which sho could not so convenientlie by an ambassader or agent. Item, That the King of France did in secreit favour the matche contracted betuix her and the Duke of Norfolke, through feare, as is likelie, of the other matche with Don Johne d'Austria, which the Spanish king hath motioned: That if she assent unto it, the Frenche king, no doubt, will assist her rebells in Scotland. Therefore, she would tra vell with King Philip, that he insist no further in the matche with Don Johne; and to move him to be contented with her match with Norfolk, by putting him in hope the Catholick religion sould be restored in Scotland by the meanes of Norfolke, a meane to se cure his effaires in Flanders, which cannot otherwise be settled, a Duke d'Alva hath advertised him: that by extirpatioun of heresi in Britaine, that the Spanish king his minde did hang in suspens hithertill, becaus he doubted of the fidelitie of Norfolke, a mar fleeting and flowing in the caus of religioun: that to exeeme thi scruple, Robert Ridolph, the Florentine, certifeid the Pope of th Duke of Norfolk's fidelitie, that the Pope might perswade the Kin of Spaine: that it was her intentioun, if Norfolke thought it expe dient, to send her sonne to Spaine als soone as she might gett hir in her hands, to be brought up there in the Catholick religioun and that all pretext might be takin away from her rebells in Scot land, who, under the shadow of his name, mainteaned their insu rections. Ridolph went to Rome, and returned with letters from the Pope to the Duke of Norfolke, wherby he signified, that bot he approved his purpose, and would deale with the King of Spain to that effect.1

¹ Every thread of this dark and complicated conspiracy was completely unravelle but we should wonder less at the ingenuity that detected it, than the merciless use the rack that was employed for the purpose. Several of the Privy Council attends night and day for upwards of a fortnight at the Tower, to examine the wretched a complices under torture, so that Sir Thomas Smith, one of the Commissioners, we

These letters, together with this memoriall, were found among he Bishop of Rosse his papers, himself then lying in prisoun. Wherupon the duke and his complices were committed to the Towre. He was arraigned the 16th of Januar. The heads of his ndvtement were these. That, without knowledge of the queene, he ntended to marie the Scotish queene, partlie to preferre her title to he crowne of England, partlie to colour the murther of the Lord Darly, her husband; that he dealt not faithfullie in his commission t Yorke: that he tooke part with the rebells in the north; that, ontraire to his promise, and after his humble submissioun to the ucene, he did treate againe by messingers upon the matche: that e communicat with the Bishop of Rosse, and Ridolph, a Florenine, tuiching aide to be receaved from the Pope and the Duke l'Alva; that he sent money to the rebels which had fled into Scotand, and to the Scotish rebels, her adversareis; that he intended to nvade Scotland, at what time England sould be invaded; that he inended to deliver the Scotish queene out of custodie, ather by force, hange of apparell, or suche like stratageme; that after, he sould have

o sickened with these spectacles of suffering, that he wished to be excused from furher attendance. He thus expresses his mind to Lord Burghley upon the subject:
Though we be importune to crave revocation from this unpleasaunt and panefull oil, I pray you be not angry with us. I assure you, for my part, I would not wish be one of Homer's gods, if I thought I should be Minos, Æacus, or Radamanthus: had rather be one of the least Umbræ in Campis Elysiis." He goes on to state, that in the following day two more persons are to be laid upon the rack, not in hope that my thing further would be elicited from them, but because such was the queen's order.

During the course of the examination, Burghley wrote to the Earl of Shrewsury, to commend his close keeping of the Queen of Scots, and thus speaks of the atempts to rescue her: "The conveyance of that queen from yow apperent to have ene many wayes attempted, wherof the duke confesseth to have bene acquainted ith sondry. Besyde Sir Thomas Stanleye's enterpryse, Sir Henry Percy, for whom am right sorry, was a gret devisor to have had hir from yow about Ester last, and he Bishopp of Ross had befor taken the mesure of a window wher she shold have been letten downe: Your change of her lodgyng altered the enterpryse, wherat she was much offended. Powell also, the pencionar, who is this day sent to the Tower, was an other enterprisor: One Raw, a servant of the Lord Lumley's, wold allso have tollen and carryed her to a castell in Cleveland, in Yorkshyre, of the Lord Lumley's: 3ut in all ther confessions it appereth your strayt keping of hir disappoynted them."

raised an uproare in the countrie, declare her Queene of Scotland and England, and to send her sonne to Spaine to the Spanish king enemie to both realmes. After he was convicted, he was led to the Towre, and keeped for conviction of others. About the 10th o May the estats urge executioun. He was brought furth the 2d o June to the Towre Hill. He confessed he had offended in treating of the mariage without the queen's knowledge; that he had receaved two letters from the Pope; that he entered in sindrie purposes and great familiaritie with the Papists, and denied that he meant anie harme to the queen's person, or deprive her of the kingdome; but most of all, he denied that he was a Papist. He was beheaded with an axe, and his head shewed to the people. After he had lyin an houre, his bodie and head were careid by his domes ticks in a beare to the neerest kirk, and bureid; for the queene had mitigated the punishement pronounced at his doome.

THE INHABITANTS OF EDINBURGH SUMMONED.

About the time of the last Generall Assemblie, holdin in Januar there were about tenne or twelve score persons, inhabitants of Edinburgh, summouned to compeere at Leith the last of the moneth of Januar, wherof a great number found sovertie: Mr Thomas Makcalzeane, Cuthbert Ramsay, George Heriot, goldsmith,² George Wauchop, merchant, Mungo Fairlie, merchant, Johne Maine, merchant, William Dicksone, flesher, etc.

² Father to the benevolent founder of Heriot's Hospital. He was frequently employed afterwards as a Commissioner in the Convention of Estates, and Parliament of Scotland, and he was Convener of the Trades of Edinburgh at five different elections of the Council. He died A. D. 1610.

WESTERRAW SLAINE.

Upon Wednesday, the penult of Januar, Claud Hammilton came to an oastler hous, to apprehend Westerraw and old Carmichaell. After the hous was sett on fire, they rander themselves, upon conditioun their lives be spaired. But when they come furth, and after their armour was takin from them, Westerraw was slaine, and Carmichael careid away prisoner.

Upon the 28th of Januar, the Erle of Morton went to Sanct Andrewes, and caused affixe the edict following upon the kirk loore, and the Abbey Gate, upon the Lord's day, the 3d of Februare.

THE BISHOP OF SANCT ANDREWES' EDICT.

"Forsameekle as our soveran lord's letters, under his Highnesse' reat seale, are directed to the deane and chapter of the metropolitan kirk of Sanct Andrewes, granting them licence to choose nother archbishop and pastour, the seate now vacant by the naurall death of the last bishop therof, requiring us to suche one in he name of the bishop and pastour of the same, as sall be devote o God, and to his Highnesse and his realme profitable and faithull: And to the effect that the said election may proceed to the bleasure of God, and to the weale of the king, the sixt day of Feruar nixt to come is appointed: Requiring and charging heereore, all the godlie ministers nominated and appointed to represent he chapter in the reformed kirk, that they be present at Sanct Andrewes, &c., the said day, to doe and performe that which to hem in the said electioun apperteaneth. Subscrived at Leith, the 4th of Januar, the yeere of God 1572." The ministers that are ominated to be present: The Pryour of Sanct Andrewes, Deane; he Pryour of Portmook; the Ministers of Edinburgh, Leith, Perth, Carraill, Cowper, Anstruther, Dysert, Kirkaldie, Kinghorne, Linthous, Stirline, Dumbar, Hadinton, Dumfermline, Aberbrothe, Fethercarne, Dunce, Methven, Eglisgreig, Forgun in Merner Long Forgun in Gowrie, Rossy, Leuchars, Dairsie, Kingoure Lathrisk, Merkinche, Sconie.

THE ELECTION OF THE BISHOP OF SANCT ANDREWES.

The sixt day of Februare, Mr Johne Dowglas, Rector, gave prooffe of his gift in the pulpit of Sanct Andrewes, the Erle of Morton being present. Upon Fryday, the eight day, so manie a were warned by the edict, and were present, conveened in th Abbey. Mr Patrik Constan, alias Adamsone, who looked to hav beene preferred to that bishoprick by the moven of the Clerk of th Register, shooting short, preached against the course. In his ser mon, he made three sorts of bishops: "My lord bishop," "m lord's bishop," and "the Lord's bishop." "My lord bishop," sai he, "was in time of Papistrie; my lord's bishop is now, when m lord getteth the benefice, and the bishop serveth for a portioun ou of the benefice, to make my lord's title sure: the Lord's bishop i the true minister of the Gospell." Great debate there was at th electioun; but in end, the rector was chosin, notwithstanding that manie ministers oppouned. George Scot, minister of Kirkaldie tooke instruments that he condescended not.

THE INAUGURATION OF THE BISHOP OF SANCT ANDREWES.

Upon the Lord's day, the tenth of Februar, Mr Knox, being then resident at Sanct Andrewes, preached, the Erle of Mortor being present; but refused to inaugurat the said bishop; yea, is open audience of manie then present, denounced anathema to the giver, anathema to the receaver. After sermon, the Superintend ent of Fife went up to pulpit, and made an exhortation upon the first chapter of the Epistle to Titus. The exhortation being ended he followed the order which was used in admission of superintend ents; demanding the same questions, and the rector answering having his answeres writtin in paper, and reading them after everies questioun. Mr William Cocke, Bailliffe of Sanct Andrewes, answered in name of the people: therafter, the Bishop of Cathnesse, Mr Johne Spotswod, Superintendent of Lothian, and Mr David Lindsey, sitting with the rector upon a furme, before the pulpit, the time of the sermoun, layed their hands on him, and embraced him, in signe of admissioun to the archbishoprick. Being demanded, if anie simoniacall pactioun was made, or was to be made, he answered, "None;" but it was not true. Being demanded, if he would be obedient to the kirk, and usurpe no power over the same? answered, He would clame no greater power nor the Counsell and Generall Assemblie sould prescrive.

OPPOSITION TO THE SECUND SORT OF BISHOPS.

When Mr Johne Rutherfurde, proveist of the Old Colledge, slaunderouslie alledged Mr Knox his repynning to proceed from malcontentment, Mr Knox purged himself the nixt Lord's day, in these words: "I have refused a greater bishoprick nor ever it was, which I might have had with the favour of greater men nor he hath his. I did, and doe repyne, for discharge of my conscience, that the Kirk of Scotland be not subject to that order." Notwithstanding that the better sort were miscontented, the course prevailed. The lords cried out, that they behoved to leave the ministers, if they gott not the kirk livings. Some of the ministrie were poore, some covetous and ambitious; some did not take up the grosse corruptioun of this humane inventioun, some had a carnall respect to some noblemen, their freinds; so it was easie to the court to obteane the consent of manie ministers. Yitt at the agreement made at Leith, no farther power was granted to them nor to superintendents. When they usurped further, they were takin doun again to that measure in the Assemblie holdin in Marche, 1573. They were not exeemed from the censure of the Generall Assemblie, nor consecrated by three bishops, according to the old canons. These bishops were called Tulchan bishops. A Tulchan is a calve's skinne stuffed with straw, to caus the kow give milke.

For the lords gott the benefices, and presented suche a man a would be content with the least commoditie, and sett the rest in fewes, tacks, pensions, to them or theirs.

THE REBELS CANNOT BE MOVED TO ACKNOWLEDGE THE KING'S AUTHORITIE.

Mr Randulph and the Marishall of Berwick came to Leith, the 21st of Februare, as commissioners from the Queen of England, to travell for agreement betwixt the parties. But the rebels refused to give obedience to the king, or to allow the present regiment.

METHVEN SLAINE.

Upon Moonday, the thrid of Marche, the Lord Methven was slaine with a shott from the castell.

THE TWENTIE-FOURTH GENERALL ASSEMBLIE.

The Generall Assemblie conveened at Sanct Andrewes, in St Leonard's Colledge, the sixth day of Marche. Mr Robert Hammiltoun, Minister of Sanct Andrewes, was chosin Moderator.

TRIELL OF SUPERINTENDENTS.

In the triell of superintendents, the Superintendent of Fife was compleaned upon, that in his visitatioun he consulted not with the ministers and elders tuiching things to be reformed; that he had givin a vicarage to one who had no functioun in the kirk, to the great prejudice of ministers. He was admonished to be more diligent in visitatioun. Upon Mr Johne Rutherfurd, Proveist of St Salvator's Colledge, his complaint for dispouning of the said vicarage, the Assemblie gave commissioun to some brethrein to passe to St Salvator's Colledge to consider the foundatioun therof, and what they find concerning the vicarage of Kilmanie. They reported to the Assemblie as followeth:—"Vicariæ de Kilmanie, electio et presentatio ordinaria facienda ad Dominum præpositum, et cæteros de dicto collegio graduatos, debent pertinere. Qui quidem vicarius omnia onera ordinaria subire tenetur. In fundatione collegii Santi Salvatoris, ita invenimus, ad verba scriptum testantibus, nostris chirographis subscriptis, et ex commissione ecclesiæ, ad id muneris destinatis, septimo mensis Martij, 1571. Gulielmus Christesonus, A. Hay, David Lindsey, Johne Row, Mr Gilbert Gardin." The Assemblie ordeaned a letter to be writtin to the Senators of the Colledge of Justice, to declare what they had found in the said foundatioun.

SUPERINTENDENTS CONTINUED WITHOUT PREJUDICE OF THE NEW BISHOPS.

In the thrid sessioun, Mr Johne Wynrame, Superintendent of Fife, of his owne free will, and for certan causes moving him, purelie and simpliciter dimitted the office of his superintendentrie which he had within the diocie of Sanct Andrewes, requeisting them to provide another. In the fourth sessioun, the Assemblie ordeaned the Superintendent of Fife to exerce his owne jurisdictioun, as of before, in the provinces not subject to the Archbishop of Sanct Andrewes; and requested him to concurre with the said archbishop, when he required, in his visitatioun or otherwise. And in like maner, the Superintendents of Angus and Lothiane to continue in their jurisdictioun, in maner foresaid, without prejudice of the said archbishop, except by virtue of his commissioun.

A COMMISSION.

The brethrein conveened, remembering upon the commissioun givin to certane brethrein in the Assemblie past before, to conveene with the regent's Grace and Secreit Counsell, to treate upon the heeds which were to be proponned to his Grace and counsell; as also, suche heeds and articles as they had to propone in name of the Assemblie: In respect wherof, understanding that the saids brethrein, commissioners, had alreadie concluded upon some heeds with my lord regent's Grace and counsell forsaid, and had reported the same to this Assemblie, appointed the Archbishop of Sanct Andrewes, Messrs Johne Knox, Johne Craig, Johne Row, Alexander Arbuthnot, James Wilkie, Patrik Adamsone, Gilbert Gardin, William Clerk, Robert Montgomrie, William Christesone, David Fergusone, William Spence, George Leslie, George Scot, Mr Johne Rutherfurde, Patrik Kynninmonth, with the Superintendent of Fife, Messrs David Lindsey and Andrew Hay, commissioners before appointed, that they, or eight of them, conveene in Mr Knox his hous, this day at two after noone, and there consider and sight the saids articles and conclusiouns; and what they find agreeable to God's Word, and to the utilitie of the kirk, to report the same to the Assemblie this night, or the morne, that the saids conclusions may be inserted in the register. But we find no suche thing in the register.

SUPPLICATION.

Mr Patrick Adamsone gave in a supplicatioun, requeisting the Assemblie to ratifie the pensioun he had granted to him by the lord regent's Grace, of good memorie, out of the personage of Glasgow, and to desire their procurators to assist him in this caus; offering to enter in the function of the ministrie, according as it sould please the kirk to call him. The Assemblie desired their advocats to assist him in his actioun; requested the lords to minister justice to him, and promised, when the said pensioun sould be evicted, to ratifie it, providing he doe as he hath promised; wherupon Mr Patrik subscrived the supplicatioun.

THE BISHOP OF SANCT ANDREWES HATH MANIE OFFICES.

Howbeit Mr Johne Dowglas promised to dimit the rectorie of the Universitie, and Provestrie of the New Colledge, how soone he sould be admitted to the bishoprick, yitt the Assemblie, for certan causes moving them, continued the said bishop in the rectorie till the nixt Assemblie; providing, in the meane time, a qualifeid man might be provided to the provestrie, according to the foundatioun. Mr Knox, when he heard of it, regrated that so manie offices were layed upon the backe of an old man, which twentie men of the best gifts could not beare; and said, he would be disgraced and wracked; which came to passe indeed; for he had nather that honour, healthe, nor wealth, that he had before. He was unable of his bodie to travell, and more unable of tongue to teache.

MR KNOX HIS THREATNINGS COME TO PASSE.

About this time, Mr Knox was verie weake in bodie, but mightie in spirit. The day that he was to teache, he stepped softlie to the kirk, having furring about his necke, a staffe in the one hand, and his servant, Richard Bannatyne, holding him up on the other side, from the abbey to the parishe kirk of Sanct Andrewes. He was lifted up in the pulpit, and behoved to leane a while; but ere he ended his sermon, he became so active and vigorous, that it seemed he would breake the pulpit in peeces. Mr Andrew Young, afterward minister of Dumblane, wrote his sermons, translated some of them in Latine, read them in the hall of the college instead of his oratiouns. Mr Robert Hammilton, minister of the toun, being offended with his particular applications, demanded what warrant he had to threaten so particularlie, that the Castell of Edinburgh sould runne like a sand-glasse; that it sould spew out the captan with shame; that he sould not come out at the gate, but over the walls, etc. Mr Knox answered, "God is my warrant, and yee sall see it." The other was skarse content with this answere. In the nixt sermon, Mr Knox repeated what he had said, and added, "Thow, that will not believe my warrant, sall see it with thy eyes, and sall say, 'What have I to doe heere?" It happened, that Mr Robert was in Edinburgh, when the fore warke of the castell was demolished, and runne like a sandie brae. He saw the captan come over the walls, upon ledders, with a staffe in his hand. He being troubled with the throng, said to his servant, "What have I to doe heere?" His servant, at Mr Robert's direction, wrote Mr Knox his sermons, (for what end God knoweth:) he putt him in minde of the sermon, and the words. Then Mr Robert, howbeit he was a Hammilton, was compelled to glorifie God, and to say, he was a true prophet.

THE CASTELL OF BLACKNESSE SOLD.

Alexander Stuart, Captan of Blacknesse, sold the castell to the rebells lying at Edinburgh for eight hundreth crownes. He alledged, the regent and the rest of the lords would not give him maintenance, and that he was superexpended.

VICTUALS WITHHOLDIN FROM EDINBURGH.

In the beginning of Aprile, the mylnes of Edinburgh were brokin, and some men slaine, standing in defence. Souldiours were placed in Craigmillar, Merchinstoun, Ridhall, and Corstorphine, to withhold victualls from Edinburgh.

BEZA'S LETTER TO MR KNOX.

Theodore Beza directed a letter to Mr Knox, dated at Geneva, the 12th of Aprile, which is extant among his epistles, wherin he willed Mr Knox to remember, that as bishops did breed Poprie, so, false bishops, the relicts of Poprie, did breed Epicureisme; and, therefore, as they loved the safetie of their kirk, to be ware of this pest, that it being already cast furth, gett not entrie againe, under whatsoever pretence of unitie.

MR ARCHIBALD DOWGLAS APPREHENDED.

Upon the 14th of Aprile, Mr Archibald Dowglas was apprehended, and sent to Stirline. It was reported, that he sould have betrayed the Lord of Morton, or shott him with a dag. He had receaved, a little before, from Mr George Hackett, out of Flanders, five thowsand crownes, which sould have beene sent to the rebels of the castell. He sent but foure thowsand. The captan rebooked him by letter, and said, five hundreth might have served him.

SOULDIOURS SLAINE AND HANGED.

Upon Fryday, the 25th of Aprile, the Erle of Morton went out of Leith, to ly in wait for Claud Hammilton, who was to come to Edinburgh with some victuals, as was reported. Some souldiours were sent before, who forgathered with twentie-two souldiours sent from Edinburgh to Blackenesse, of which number they slue fyfteene. Five were brought to Leith, and hanged, wherupon two were hanged by the other partie, upon Mowtraye's trees.

MERCHINSTON DEFENDED AGAINST THE REBELS.

Upon Moonday, the fyft of May, there issued out of Edinburgh some, to burne the lower hous of Merchinston. But these who were in Leith come to rid the fire, chassed in the horsemen to Edinburgh, hurt Captan Skougall and sindrie others, notwithstanding of fourtie shott of cannon out of the castell. The regent placed twentie harquebusiers and tenne or twelve horsemen in Merchinston. The captan sent furth his forces the tenth of June, to demolishe the hous of Merchinston, becaus the regent had placed souldiours in it, to stoppe victuall. The regent sent some souldiours out of Leith, who drave them backe with shame.

DEARTH IN EDINBURGH.

By withholding of victuals, a pecke of meale was sold for twelve shillings in Edinburgh. They were forced to drinke vinegar and water together instead of aill. The timber of some houses, which it pleased them to take down, was sold by stone weight.

CAPTAN HUME SLAINE.

Upon the 2d of Julie, Patrik Hume, captan to the regent's horsemen, was slaine, in rescuing a drift of cattell, which Phairnihirst had brought from a peece of ground, which the said Patrik had gottin by forfaltrie of James Hammilton of Bothwelhauche.

SKIRMISHING AT HAMMILTOUN.

The Hammiltons lay in the wood of Hammilton skirmishing with Captan Crawfurd. They slue seven or eight, and tooke als manie; the captan himself hardlie escaped. Manie other skirmishes I omitt, but these are sufficient, to see in what estat the countris was in time of these civill warres.

1 The events of this war, which are more fully detailed in other records and histories of the period, exhibit a rivalry in cold-blooded cruelty, wherein it is difficult to tell which of the two parties had the hateful pre-eminence. A band of queen's soldiers from Edinburgh are attacked by a body of the king's partisans, to whom the surrender, and deliver their weapons-but the captors slav fifteen of them in cold blood, drive the rest to Leith like a drove of bullocks, beating them all the way with their truncheons, and goading them with the points of their spears, after which, they hanged them without ceremony-and this summary process, in allusion to Morton, by whom these deeds were chiefly patronized, were called "The Douglas Wars." Those of the other side immediately made reprisals, by hanging, not only the prisoners whom they had received to mercy, but those who afterwards fell into their hands. When fuel was scarce in the town also, they not only threw down several houses of the opposite faction, and sold the timber at an exorbitant price, but appointed a functionary, nicknamed by the populace the Captain of the Chimneys, to take account of such houses as had been abandoned by king's-men, and sell them in the market-place, or ransom them at a valuation. These stern proceedings so terrified the neutral citizens, that they fled to Leith; but, instead of finding refuge there, they were driven back to the capital by proclamations, in which they were denounced as spies, and threatened with the gibbet. When Edinburgh was girdled with garrisoned houses and peels, so strictly were supplies to the city prohibited, that the country people who attempted to smuggle their little stores into the market were hanged, drowned, or burnt in the cheek; and this provoked the castellans to a more remorseless havoc upon the estates of their enemies, and a more frequent execution of prisoners without trial or sentence.

AN ABSTINENCE GRANTED.

Monsieur La Crocke, and the Marishall of Berwicke, Mr Drurie, came to Leith the 18th of May. After long travell takin by them, an abstinence and cessation from armes was concluded for two moneths, which was to beginne the first of August, during which time all other maters sould be conferred upon; as is conteaned in the forme following, subscrived by either partie at Leith and Edinburgh, the penult of Julie.

THE FORME OF THE ABSTINENCE GRANTED BY MY LORD REGENT'S GRACE, AND LORDS SUBSCRIVING WITH HIM, TO THE LORDS WITHIN THE CASTELL AND TOUN OF EDINBURGH, AND THEIR ADHERENTS.

"We, the noblemen of the realme of Scotland undersubscriving, following the instance and exhortatioun that the ambassaders of that most Christian King of France, and the Queen's Majestie of England, make unto us; for ourselves, our assisters, partakers, and suche as depend upon us, by the tenour heerof, sweare and promise an abstinence and cessatioun from hostilitie betwixt us and our adversareis that presentlie be in armes against us, their assisters, partakers, and suche as depend upon them; to beginne this present day, and to endure till two moneths be fullie outrunne, during the which, we oblishe us and promise, that with all sinceritie and suretie the said abstinence from warre, and cessation from hostilitie, sall continue: and so soone as may be, that the nobilitie and states of the realme sall be assembled, to advise, how by their meanes to rander the realme peaceable, and establishe a good and generall peace, which, with their companeis, sall be in full suretie in their comming to that place, remaining and returning therefra, during the said space of two moneths.

"And that so holie a worke be not retarded, we accord, that during the truce and abstinence, two, three, foure, or five, moe or fewer, of either partie, communicat together in all suretie, in suche place as sall be agreed upon, to open up the meanes for the more facile atteaning to a good peace. And if it chance (which God forbid) that, at the assemblie of the nobilitie and estats, the said peace and reconciliation may not be concluded, We, by the tenour heerof, for our parts, referre the difference betwixt us and our said adversareis, als weill of the abstinence as of the peace, to the arbitrement of the said most Christian King of France, and the Queene's Majestie of England; and promise faithfullie, upon our honours, to accept and hold the conditions concerning the peace and abstinence, which their Majesteis sall propone unto us: Providing, that the abstinence or pacification that may follow therupon on no wise tuiche the king our soveran lord and his estat, to the prejudice therof; and that the persons heerafter excepted be subject to judgement and execution of the law, the said abstinence notwithstanding: They are to say, James, sometimes Erle Bothwell, James Ormeston, sometime of that Ilk, Patrik Hepburne, sometime of Beenstone, Patrik Wilson, sometime servant of the said erle, James Hammilton, sometime of Bothwelhauche, Johne Hammilton, sometime Proveist of Bothwell, his brother, with the whole theeves and brokin men, inhabitants of the borders and Hielands, disturbers of the publict peace betwixt this realme and England, and oppressers of the peaceable subjects of this realme: Providing alwise, that so manie of the said borderers, or Hieland men, as have taikin part with anie of the parteis, be not during the abstinence persued for things bypast, and of that which they have done at commandement of ather partie, seing it is not meaned that anie of their faults sall be covered, but onlie suche as have beene directlie done in the querell of either partie. If during the abstinence they doe wrong to anie man, it is accorded, that for the same they be punished as apperteaneth, and no impunitie sought for their attemptats committed against England. But it is understood, that they sall be answerable for the same, conforme to the lawes of the borders.

"And, to the end that the subjects of this realme may find themselves presentlic some thing discharged of the burthein of the warre, and may with greater desire embrace that peace when it sall please God to send it, We agree, that, during the said abstinence, ill the subjects of this realme, of whatsomever qualitie or condiioun they be of, (except before excepted,) may freelie and lawullie traffique, speek, and converse together, through all the parts of this realme, untroubled, molested, or impeshed ather in bodie or goods, by word or deid, by the law or beside the law, for things ast; and tak our said adversareis now bearing armes against us. heir assisters, partakers, and suche as depend upon them, mutuallie n our protectioun, mainteaning and conforting together faithfullie ne another against all the injureis that may be done by us, or anie hat we promise for, or by anie of them that are enemeis to the peace. foreover, to make the meanes of peace the more facile, and that, y their familiar communicatioun and conversatioun, the hearts of hese who have been offended may be mollified, and induced to forett things that are past, by conference to be had with some of our dversareis, and therafter acknowledge that we are all members of ne bodie, being of one countrie, and naturall Scotishmen, the comunication and conversation sall in no wise be forbiddin by us to hem, but permitted with all libertie over all places, tounes, and ownes, where ever it may be: Providing, that the toun of Edinurgh be presentlie, and first of all, sett at suche libertie as it was before the king our soveran lord's goodsir, and late regent, dearted furth of the same upon the 27th day of Januar 1570; and ne castell therof to be keeped with no greater garisoun than it as at that time: as also, that all other tours of this realme preentlie be sett at the like libertie, and made patent, so that no place perof sall be withholdin, fortified, nor garnished, saving the casells and fortresses that of all ancietie, and before thir troubles, have eene accustomed to be fortified and guarded: And that, by this neane, all men, or their servants, without feare of men of warre or iolence, may freelie enter, and dwell in their owne houses, as sall lease them, during the said truce and abstinence.

"And forsameekle as manie persons within this realme have, during thir troubles, seazed themselves on other men's lands, wher upon there are presentlie fruicts that may be collected and wonnduring the said abstinence, of the which debate may follow, which may stop and hinder the good and holie effect which is to be hoped of the said peace, We therefore accord and agree, that these who have the saids lands sall not preasse to lift the saids fruicts, and speciallie the cornes; but sall leave the same stacked in heape upon the feilds, or in grainges, untuiched or dispouned upon anie way whill the end of the said abstinence. And, for observation and fulfilling of all these above-specified, we oblishe us, upon our faiths honours, and by our solemne oaths, that we sall caus the whole be keeped by our selves, our adherents and partakers with us. It witnesse heerof, we have subscrived thir presents with our hands At Leith, the penult day of Julie, the yeere of God 1572."

THE RETURNE OF THE CITICENS TO EDINBURGH.

This abstinence was proclamed in Leith, upon Wedinsday, the penult day of Julie, at afternoone; and upon Thursday at night the day following, the regent's souldiours, and the citicens of Edinburgh, who assisted the regent in Leith, came to Edinburgh is their armour, in good order, wherewith the castell men not content, would have had them stayed for that night. The ambassa der commanded them to returne backe, when they were at the Cannogate, readie to enter in the toun; but they would not be stayed. They stood that night upon their owne guard, in their armes. It was thought, if they had not entered that night, the had gottin entreis at that time; and that these within the caste had agreed to the abstinence, onlie to gett some victuals.

THE REGENT'S ENTRIE IN EDINBURGH.

Upon Fryday the first of August, the regent, and the lords wh were with him, came to Edinburgh, and caused proclame the abstinence, charging, that none on no wise presume or tak upon hand t doe or attempt anie thing tending to the violation thereof, under the paine of death.

THE TWENTIE-FYET GENERALL ASSEMBLIE.

The Generall Assemblie conveened in the Tolbuith of Perth the sixt of August. Johne Areskine of Dun, Knight, Superintendent of Angus and Mernes, was chosin Moderator.

BOOKS OF VISITATIONS SURVEYED.

Mrs Johne Craig, William Christesone, Andrew Simsone, Ropert Hammiltoun, Johne Duncansone, and James Dalrumpell, were appointed to visite the bookes of the Bishop of Sanct Andrewes' superintendents' and commissioners' visitations.

THE BISHOP OF SANCT ANDREWES CRAVETH HELPE.

This Assemblie declared the diocie of St Andrewes, wheresoever t lyeth, to perteane to the Bishop of St Andrewes, and to no other superintendent, to visie and plant kirks therin. Becaus the bounds were large, and the bishop not able to discharge his office in his owne person, he desired some of the godliest and best learned to concurre with him, to tak order how the whole diocie might be served; and, to that effect, he desired to have the counsell of the Superintendents of Angus and Lothiane, Mr Robert Pont, Mr Andrew Hay, and Mr Johne Craig, ministers, wherunto the Assemblie agreed.

AN ACT.

To the effect that obedience may be givin to the present Modeator, and in all times heerafter, the whole brethrein assembled, in one voice and minde ordeanned, that no person, of what estat soover he be, tak in hand to speeke without licence asked and granted by the Moderator; and, after licence obteanned, that the persons speeke and keepe moderation in reasoning and answering, and also keepe silence when he sall be commanded by the said Moderator, under the paine of removing out of the Assemblie, and not reentring therin during that convention. And this to be a perpetual act for all Assembleis heerafter.

MR P. ADAMSONE CHARGED TO RE-ENTER IN THE MINISTRIE.

Mr Patrik Adamsone was commanded to enter in the ministric at Paisley, at what time the Commissioner of Cliddisdaill sall charge him thereto; which the Assemblie desireth to be done with all diligence, according to Mr Patrik his owne promise.

Tuiching the revising of the heeds and articles concluded at Leith in the moneth of Januar last, betuixt my lord regent's Grace's Secreit Counsell and the commissioners of the kirk, the whole Assemblie appointed the Superintendents of Angus and Fife, Mrs Johne Craig, Johne Row, William Christesone, David Fergusone, David Spence, Johne Rutherfurde, Patrik Kynninmonth, together with Mrs Robert Pont, David Lindsey, Andrew Hay, and Mr William Lundie of that Ilk, that they conveene upon Fryday nixt to come, at six houres in the morning, in the counsell hous, and oversee and consider the saids conclusiouns, and what they find therin ather to be reteanned or altered; to report the same again to the Assemblie; ordeaning all and sindrie brethrein, that have anie reasons to alledge against the saids conclusiouns, that they conveene with the forsaids brethrein the said day, or before, and shew their opinioun, with certification, that therafter they sall not be heard theranent.

The brethrein appointed for viseing the heeds and articles concluded in Leith, in Januar last, with the regent's Grace and Secreit Counsell, presented to the Assemblie a protestation, with their opinioun anent some of the heeds and conclusions, requiring the whole Assemblie to adhere unto the same, the tenour wherof followeth:

"Forsameekle as, in the Assemblie holdin in Leith in Januar last, certan commissioners were appointed to travell with the nobi-litie and their commissioners, to reasoun and conclude upon diverse articles and heeds then thought good to be conferred upon; according to which commissioun, they proceeded, at diverse diets and conventions, and finallie concluded, for that time, upon the saids heeds and articles, as the same produced in this Assemblie proport: In the which, being considered and read, are found certane names. suche as Archbishop, Deane, Archdeacon, Chanceller, Chapter; which names were thought slanderous and offensive to the eares of manie of the brethrein, appearing to sound to Papistrie: Therefore the whole Assemblie, in one voice, als weill these that were in commissioun at Leith, as others, solemnlie protest, that they meane not, by using of anie suche names, to ratifie, consent, and agree to anie kinde of Papistrie or superstitioun, and wish rather the saids names to be changed into others that are not slaunderous nor offensive. And in like maner protest, that the saids heeds and articles agreed upon be onlie receaved as an interim, till further and more perfyte order may be obteaned at the hands of the king's Majestie's regent and nobilitie, for which they will preasse, as occasioun sall serve." -Unto the which protestatioun the whole Assemblie presentlie conveened in one voice adhered.

"Tuiching the names and titles of Archbishops, we thinke good, that they that had the names of Archbishops heeretofore, that heerafter, in these things concerning the functioun of the kirk, they sall use the name of Bishop, and not Archbishop. Toward the name of Chapter, Deane, Archdeacoun, and Chancellarie, we thinke it good, that becaus their names sound, to bring superstitioun with them, and so, offensive to the eares of a great number of the kirk, Therefore, desire they may be changed in other names tending to the same purpose; suche as, the chapter to be called the Bishops' Assemblie; the Deane, Moderator of the said Assemblie. As to the functioun of the Deans, Archdeacons, and Chancellers, we thinke good that some be appointed by this present Assemblie to trie and give in their judgement toward the said functions, how farre they sall extend in particular; and also, toward the functioun of the abbots and pryors, and toward the interchanging of all their names, in other names more agreeable to God's Word, and the policeis of the best reformed kirks; and they to report the same to the nixt Assemblie, or ellis to the nixt parliament, if anie happeneth to be betuixt this and the nixt Assemblie. And we thinke good that commissioners be appointed by this present Assemblie, to await upon the parliament, if it sall happin to be; or otherwise, to passe to the regent's Grace and Secreet Counsell, for suche things as sall be givin to them in commissioun."—Farther viseing of the saids conclusions, the said brethrein continued till farther opportunities alwise adhering to the former protestatioun.

MR KNOX HIS LETTER TO THE ASSEMBLIE.

Mr Knox sent the letter following to the Assemblie, howbeit it be not extant in the register:—

"Fyght and faint not, for the battell is short, and the victoric with Jesus Christ is riche, and without end.

"Howbeit I have takin my leave, not onlie of you, deere brethrein, but also of the whole world, and all worldlie effaires, yitt, remaining in the flesh, I could not, nor cannot, ceasse to admonishe you of things which I know to be most prejudiciall to the kirk of Christ Jesus within this realme. Above all things, preserve the kirk from the boundage of the universiteis. Perswade them to rule themselves peaceablie, and order their schooles in Christ. But subject never the pulpit to their judgement; nather yitt exempt them from your jurisdictioun. Take heed, that nothing proceed under your name, by particular factiouns. Farther, I have communicated my minde with thir two deere brethrein. Heare them, and doe as yee will answere before God, who presentlie worketh potentlie, how blind so ever the world remaineth. Fight ye in the truthe, and for the libertie of the same, and be assured to triumphe with Christ Jesus; to whose mightie protectioun I unfainedlie committ you.

"From Sanct Andrewes, the fyft of August, 1572."1

MR KNOX SENT FOR TO EDINBURGH.

The citicens of Edinburgh sought, at the last Assemblie, a minister to be joyned with Mr Knox, wherupon commission was givin to the Superintendent of Lothiane, with advice of so manie ministers of the province as he sould choose, of the sessioun of the thurch, and of Mr Knox, to choose a qualified man; and to the aid superintendent, to charge him to enter to the ministrie of the aid toun, under paine of disobedience to the Assemblie. Mr Craig was not weill liked of by the professors, becaus he sweyed over nuche to the sword hand. Nicoll Udward, and Johne Johnstoun, cribe, were sent in commissioun to Mr Knox, resident then in Sanct Andrewes. They presented to him a letter directed from the sessioun, raving his presence and travells among them again, and his adice in the choice of another minister. The Superintendent of Lohian was present when they came. Mr Knox yeelded to returne, out upon conditioun he sould not be desired nor preassed to tember his tongue, or to absteane from speeking against the treasonble dealings of the castell of Edinburgh; and willed them to siglifie the same to the whole brethrein, least they repent afterward, or feare to be worse intreated for his caus. These words he repeated after he returned to Edinburgh, before he entered in the oulpit. It was answered, they never meant his tongue sould be oridled, but willed him to speeke according to his conscience, as in ormer times. As for the other point, after long reasoning, they greed upon Mr James Lowsone, then Sub-principall of the Coledge of Aberdeene. Mr Knox wrote to him as followeth :-

MR KNOX HIS LETTER TO MR JAMES LOWSONE.

"All worldlie strenth (yea, even in things spirituall) decayeth and yitt sall never the worke of God decay.

"Beloved Brother, seing God of his mercie, farre above my expectation, hath called me once again to Edinburgh, and yitt I feel nature so decayed, and daylie to decay, that I looke not for a long continuance of my battell, I would gladelie once discharge my conscience into your bosome, and into the bosome of others in whom I thinke, the feare of God remaineth. If I had the habilitie obodie, I sould not have putt you to the paine to which I require you now, that is, once to visite me, that we may confere together of heavenlie things. For in earth there is no stabilitie, except the kirk of Jesus Christ, ever fighting under the crosse, to whose mightie protection I heartilie committ you.

"JOHNE KNOX.

"From Edinburgh, the 7th of September, 1572.

MR KNOX AND MR J. LOWSONE COME TO EDINBURGH.

After the receipt of this letter, Mr James Lowsone came to Edinburgh, about the 15th of September, and preached upon the Fryday after. Mr Knox came to Edinburgh the 23d of August and preached the last day of August, in the Great Kirk. But be caus his voice was become weaker, he desired another place to teache in, if it were but to an hundreth persons; which was granted When Mr James Lowsone came, Mr Knox preached in the Tolbuith, where he continued, so long as God gave him strenth.

THE REPENTANCE OF SOME BURGESSES OF EDINBURGH.

Mr Killigrew came to Edinburgh, about the 12th of September, ambassader from the Queene of England. It was said to him by the captan of the castell and his complices, that there were onlie two or three ministers that railed against them, and called them tratours; and that the toun of Edinburgh had compelled suche as remained within the toun, with terrours, to offer their repentance. Wherupon the persons of whom they meant, Henrie Andersone, Simon Johnston, bakster, Johne Henrysone, bakster, &c., were called before the superintendent and synodall assemblie, to be tried, whether their submissioun to the sessioun of the kirk of Edinburgh was voluntar or compelled. They answered, it was voluntar.

Upon the 22d of September, the regent came to Leith, to make some appointment with them of the castell, during the abstinence, which now draweth neere an end. After long conference at Edinburgh, with small agreement, nothing was concluded, but an abstinence to continue from the 26th day for eight dayes, in hope of appointment: all which time nothing was concluded but another abstinence for foure dayes; and therafter, upon the eight of October, an abstinence proclamed, to continue till the 6th of December.

A CONVENTION APPOINTED.

At this time, the regent and the lords, becaus of the bloody masacre of Parise, and a supplicatioun presented to them by the baons, gentlemen, and other professors presentlie conveened in Edinburgh, appointed by open proclamatioun, a conventioun of ommissioners, to be sent from particular kirks, to be holdin in Edinburgh the 20th day of October, to consult, advise, and delicerat upon suche maters and overtures as may be propouned to the regent and Lords of Privie Counsell, tending to the mutuall defence of the professors of Christ's Evangell within this realme, from the furious rage and lawlesse cruelteis of the bloodie and traterous Papists, executers of the decrees of the devilish Councell of Trent; and in suche things further, as may advance God's glory and true religioun. Libertie, licence, protection, and assurance was granted to all commissioners of kirks, notwithstanding of anie offence committed against the authoritie, to come safelie and freelie to the place appointed; to remaine there during the time of the conventioun, which is to be keeped for this purpose, and to returne at their pleasure to their dwelling-places without trouble, arreist, searche, or impediment to be made to them in bodeis or goods, for twentie dayes after the said 20th day of October, including also the times of their travells granted to them; and with certificatioun, that all that would require particular licence and assurance for this effect, it sould be granted. The proclamatioun was printed, together with some articles of the Councell of Trent, which concerned the exterminioun of all the professours of the reformed religioun in Europ. The ministers of Edinburgh inveyghed vehementlie against the cruell massacre. Mr Knox bade tell the Frenche ambassader, that the sentence was pronounced in Scotland against that murtherer, the King of France: that God's vengeance sall never depart from him nor his hous, but that his name sall remaine in execratioun to the posteriteis to come; and that none sall come of his loynes, that sall injoy the kingdome in peace and quietnesse. La Croke compleaned to the regent and Lords of Counsell; but it was answered, they could not stop the mouths of ministers from speaking against themselves.

THE CONVENTIOUN OF PROFESSORS.

Upon the 20th day of October, the day appointed for the conventioun, there came to Edinburgh none but ministers and some few commissioners, the Laird of Lundie, and some lairds of Lothiane. What was the impediment, whether the regent his sick-nesse, or another proclamatioun made at the same time, it is un-

"THE HEEDS AND ARTICLES WHICH ARE TO BE PROPONED IN NAME OF THE MINISTERS, BARONS, AND COMMISSIONERS OF KIRKS, TO THE REGENT'S GRACE, NOBILITIE, AND COUNSELL.

"The Assemblie of the kirk conveened at Edinburgh, the 22d day of October 1572, according to the proclamation, first have thought expedient, so farre as present convention is instituted, to provide remeed against the treasonable crueltie of the Papists; and to resist the same. To mitigat the wrath and indignatioun of God, whereby they are stirred up against us for our sinnes, there sall be a publict humiliation of them that feare God, throughout the whole realme, to beginne the 23d of November nixt to come, and to end the last day of the same.

"And to the effect that they who are notorious offenders, and publict slaunderers of the kirk, may be broght to amendement of life, or ellis be excluded from the societie of the faithfull, it is thought expedient, that betwixt this and the 23d of November, in all provinces and parish kirks, where order of discipline is, the superintendents, commissioners of countreis, ministers, and elders, sall call before them, at appointed dayes, all notorious offenders within their jurisdictioun; suche as murtherers, and assisters to murtherers, adulterers, fornicators, robbers of the patrimonie of the kirk or other men's possessiouns, and siklyke other criminall persons in all estats, beginning at the ministrie and nobilitie, and so proceeding to all others, that wickednesse, and suche haynous crimes as offend the Majestie of God, may be purged out of this land; and speciallie, that it may be knowne, that ministers, who ought to be good exemple, als weill in life as doctrine, to provoke others to godlie conversatioun, be not exeemed.

"And, first, it is thought necessar that all superintendents and commissioners of countreis tak diligent inquisition of the behaviour of all ministers, exhorters, and readers; and what faile sall be found, severe correction to follow therupon, according to the nature of the crime. And incace ministers sall appeare to conceale their owne imperfections, that all men may be required to declare to the superintendents and commissioners the vices that they know to be in them. And siclyke, in the reformation of the nobilitie consisteth the cheefe exemple of the whole countrie. We crave not onlie a generall reformation of the imperfections as be in them, but also that suche vices as in particular sall be givin in to them be amended: Suche as, they be reformed in the wrongous using of the patrimonie of the kirk; applying the same to their particular use, to the great hurt of the ministrie, poore, and schooles; and that the commouns may be eased by them, both in payment of their tithes and other dueteis, in respect of their great povertie; and that they may amend their great negligence in time past, in punishment of vices throughout the whole realme, suche as incest, adulterie, blood-shedding, and sorcerie, &c., and that there be notable persons deputed with commissioun to that effect, to execute the same. And that suche as have receaved commissioun alreadie be charged to proceed therin; and that the acts of parliament and counsell made against oath-breakers of the Sabbath day may be likewise executed. Unto which heeds, conteaned in this article, we desire my lord regent's Grace and counsell to agree, and to authorize the same.

"Secundlie, As concerning the Papists that be within this countrie yitt remaining, that they, without all exceptioun of persouns, great or small, be charged, als weill by the counsell as ministrie, to compeere at certane dayes, as sall be appointed, before suche as the kirk and counsell sall appoint, to give confessioun of their faith, according to the acts of parliament: and suche as have not recanted, to mak publict recantatioun; and they that are excommunicated for that caus, to underly suche injunctiouns as sall be layed to their charge. And if anie of them faile therin, their whole goods and gear to be confiscated, and themselves banished off the countrie; and they that are beneficed persons, their benefice to vaike, and be disponed to qualified persons. And if they (being decerned to be banished) be found therafter in the countrie, it sall be leasome to all the subjects of this realme to invade them, and everie one of them, to the death, as enemeis to God, the king, the kirk, and commounweale of the countrie; and that suche as are convicted may be executed with all rigour: And all others that be excommunicated for anie other crime or offence, sall be called likewise to particular dyets, to satisfie the kirk, or ellis to incurre the like paines as is before specified: and they that receave and mainteane them, if, after due admonitioun, they desist not from their companie, sall be holdin partakers with them, and be compted in their ranke of Papists, and to be punished in semblable maner. And further, we desire, that the act of parliament be putt in executioun, that none be admitted to publict offices of counsell, sessioun, or otherwise, that are knowne to be Papists, or favourers of them. Also, becaus there is masse said in certan places of this countrie, as in Old Aberdeen, Dunkelden, Paisley, Eglinton, that there be a speciall day appointed, to assemble the professors of religioun in places nixt adjacent to the bounds where the said masse is used, for apprehending the masse-sayers, and also the hearers, to underly the law. Likewise, incace this present divisioun take some agreement and concord, that none be comprehended therin but suche as sall be oblished for maintenance of religioun against the enemeis therof. Attoure, that all persons that have (since the reformatioun beganne) sought for the Pop's bulls or benefices, be holdin as Papists, and punished therefore, conforme to the acts of parliament; and that all professors of religioun having benefices, and able to preache, may be charged to doe their offices, seing it is not reasonable that they tak up the living, and remaine idle.

"Thridlie, For resisting of Papists of forraine countreis, als weill within as without, that my lord regent's Grace and nobilitie sall take suche order, that a league and confederacie be made with our nighbours of England, and other countreis reformed, and professing the true religioun, that we and they be joyned together in mutuall amitie and societie to support everie one another, wheresoever time and occasioun sall serve, for mainteaning religioun, and resisting the enemeis therof. Lykewise, that a solemne band and acts may be made by all them that be professors of the true religioun within this realme, to joyne themselves together, and be readie at all occasiouns for resisting the enemeis foresaid. And if anie sall be found negligent, he sall be holdin a false brother, and excommunication to proceed against him."

THE DEATH OF THE REGENT.

The Erle of Marr, regent, ended his life, the 29th of October, about three houres in the morning. It was constantlie affirmed, that about the time of his death, the trough of the water of Montrose, where it runneth through his lands, was dry, the water running neverthelesse above. At the same time, a violent wind drave a great number of sheepe from the linkes of Montrose into the sea,

A CONVENTION.

The Erle of Morton and some other lords conveened at Stirline, appointed a conventioun to be holdin in Edinburgh, the 15th of November nixt to come, to tak some order for choosing of a new regent,

MR JAMES LOWSON ADMITTED.

Upon the Lord's day, the nynth of November, Mr James Lowsone was admitted to the ministrie in Edinburgh, by Mr Knox, after he had come from the Tolbuith, where he preached. His voice was so weake that few heard him. He discoursed upon the duetie of a minister, and the duetie of the flocke. He praised God that he had givin them one in his rowme, and desired God to augment his graces in him a thowsand fold above that which he had, if it were his pleasure, and so ended with the blessing.

William Matlane, sometime secretar, sent this letter following to the sessioun of the kirk:-

"It is come to our eares, by credible report, that your minister, Johne Knox, als weill publictlie, in his sermons, as otherwise, hath slaundered me as an atheist and enemie to all religioun in direct speeches: that I have plainlie spokin in the castell, that there is nather heaven nor hell, and that these are things devised to mak barnes affraved; with other suche language, tending to the like effect, unworthie to be rehearsed in the hearing of Christian eares. Which words, before God, never at anie time proceeded from my mouth: nor vitt anie other sounding to the like purpose. nor wherof anie suche sentence might be gathered. For, praised be God, I have beene brought up from my youth, and instructed in the feare of God; and to know, that he hath appointed heaven for the habitation of the elect, and hell for the everlasting dwellingplace of the reprobat. Seing he hath thus ungentlie used me, and neglected his duetie, vocatioun, the rule of Christian charitie, and all good order, maliciouslie and untruelie leing on me, I crave redresse therof at your hands: and that yee will take suche order therewith, that he may be compelled to nominat his authors, and prove his alledgance; to the end, that if it be found true, as I am weill assured he sall not be able to verifie it in anie sort, I may worthilie be reputed the man he painteth me out to be. And if (wherof I have no doubt) the contrarie fall out, yee may use him accordinglie: at least, that heerafter yee receave not everie word proceeding from his mouth as oracles; and know that he is but a man subject to vanitie, and manie times doeth utter his owne passiouns and other men's inordinat affections, in place of true doctrine. It is convenient that, according to the Scriptures, yee beleeve not everie spirit, but that yee trie the spirits whether they are of God or not.

"WILLIAM MATLANE,"

The sessioun of the kirk gave this answere following, upon Thursday, the 20th of November:—

"As for the complaint givin in this day eight dayes before the sessioun of the kirk, by Johne Robertsone, in name of William Matlane, and subscrived with his hand, as he affirmed; the answere being referred to this day, and the sessioun therewith rypelie advised, thinketh good, that the complainer authorize the presenter of the supplication with sufficient mandat; and that he dedeigne himself, if he seeke anie benefite of the said kirk, to direct his supplication to the ministers, elders, and deacons now present, admitting them as judges in that caus, as use is. This letter was not read to Mr Knox whill two or three dayes after it was presented."

THE END AND DEATH OF MR KNOX.

Mr Knox was so enfeebled with a host, that upon the 13th of November he left off his ordinarie reading of the Scripture; for everie day he read some chapters of the Old and New Testament, with some Psalmes, which he passed through everie moneth once. Upon Friday the 14th, he arose beside his accustomed dyett, and yitt, when he is risen, could skarse sitt on a stoole. Being demanded what he would doe up? he said, he would goe to the kirk and preache: for he thought it had beene the Lord's day; and said he had beene meditating all night upon the resurrectioun of Christ, which he sould have taught in order, nixt after the death of Christ, which he had finished upon the Lord's day before. Oft and manie times desired he of God, that he might end his dayes in teaching, and meditatioun of that doctrine; and so he did indeid. He desired the elders and deacons to be sent for, that he might take his last good night of them, as he had done before of the people, at the admissioun of Mr James Lowson, at what time he said, he would never enter in that place againe. Upon the Lord's Day, the 16th, he keeped his bed, and would tak no meate, supposing it had beene the first Sabbath of the Fast, till the Laird of Braid, who was sitting at his bedside, called him to remembrance, and caused him eate a little.

Upon Moonday, the 17th, the elders and deacons came to him, to whom he protested he had taught nothing but true and sound doctrine; beating down, by the threatnings of God's judgements, the proud and stubborne, and raising up and conforting the troubled consciences by the promises of God's merceis: And how severe soever he was against anie man, it was not for hatred of his persoun, ut onlie to beate doun in him his vice, and that in him which reelled against God, which God would not leave unpunished; and or discharge of his conscience before God; and that he made not perchandice of the Word of God, whose message he boore, and to hom he must mak accompt for the same. In respect wherof, alcit he was a weake and unworthie creature, and a fearefull man, e feared not the faces of men. Therefore, exhorted them to stand onstant in the doctrine which they had heard out of his mouth, how aworthie so ever he was; and willed them, never to joyne with ickednesse, speciallie with the castell of Edinburgh, it remaining the estat wherin now it is. And albeit they sould triumphe in is world, vitt he besought them never to meddle with that facoun; but rather choose, with David, to flee to the mountaines, an to remaine in the companie of the wicked. And as for that veritie he had used against the Laird of Grange, with whom he d beene so familiar, it was onlie to bring him to acknowledge his amefull declyning, that thereby he might turne to repentance: d willed Mr David Lindsay, then present, and Mr James Lowne to signifie to him, that Johne Knox, now going to dee, was e same man that he was before, when he was able of bodie; and will him to consider his owne estat wherin he now standeth. As r answere to the secretar's bill, he desired all men to consider his, d the works of the rest, which testifeid, that they denied there is anie God, or heaven or hell, wherin vertue sould be rewarded, vice punished. It was not education that made a true Christn, nor brought a man to the true knowledge and feare of God, It the illumination of the soule by God's Spirit: for who was Itter brought up than Julian the Apostat, and sindrie others? s; for the nomination of the reporters, which the bill required, he Jused, howbeit he could verie weill have done it. As for that art of his bill where it is said, he is a "man subject to vanitie," "d, "all are not oracles," etc., confessed he was but a most vile ature, and wretched man; yitt the words which he had spokin ald be found als true, as the oracles which have beene uttered by tie of the servants of God before. For he had said nothing but that wherof he had a warrant out of the Word, to witt, that the justice of God sould never be satisfied, till the blood of the shedders of innocent blood were shed againe, or God moved them to unfained repentance; and caused them who were present read the 9th Psalme Farther, he added, that the secretar was the cheefe author of all the trouble raised both in England and Scotland. So, with exhortation to them, he commended them to God, who, after prayer, wen from him with tears.

After this speeche his infirmitie increassed, for he never spake almost but with great paine. And vitt few came to him to whom he gave not some admonitioun or exhortatioun. Mr David Lind say reported to diverse, that, at one time when he came to visit him, and asked how he did, he answered, "Weill, brother, I thank God. I have desired all this day to have had you, that I may send you vitt to you man in the castell, whom, yee know, I have love so deerelie. Goe, I pray you, and tell him that I have sent you to him vitt once, to warne him; and bid him, in the name of God leave that evill cause, and give over that castell. If not, he sall be brought down over the walls of it with shame, and hang against the sunne. So God hath assured me." Mr David thought the message hard, vitt went to the castell, and meeteth first with Sir Rober Melvill walking on the wall, and told him what was his errand who, as he thought, was much moved with the mater. Therafte he communed with the captan, whom he thought also somewha moved. But he went frome him in to Secretar Lethington, with whom, when he had conferred a little, he came out to Mr Davis againe, and said, "Goe, tell Mr Knox he is but a drytting pro phet." Mr David returned to Mr Knox, and reported how he has discharged his commission; but that it was not weill accepted o the captan, after he had conferred with the secretar. "Weill, said Mr Knox, "I have beene earnest with my God anent the tw men. For the one, I am sorie that so sall befall him, vitt God as sureth me that there is mercie for his soule. For the other, I hav no warrant that ever he sall be weill." Mr David thought th speeche hard, yitt layed it up in his minde, till Mr Knox was a est with God, and found the truth of that which he had spokin, ithin few dayes after.

Before his sickenesse, he commanded his wife, and his servant, tichard Bannatyne, that when God sould visite him with sicknesse, at he was not able to read himself, that then one of them sould read him everie day the 17th chapter of the Gospell according to the phase of the Epistle to the Ephesians, and the 33d chaper of the Prophecie of Isay; which was done. Few or no houre of the day past wherin somewhat was not read as he would appoint, and sometimes Mr Calvin's sermons in Frenche. Whill they were adding Mr Calvin's sermons upon the Ephesians, when they supposed he had beene sleeping, they asked if he heard? He answered, I heare, I praise God, and understand farre better;" which words a uttered the last time they demanded, about foure houres before expyring.

My Lord of Morton, Boyd, and the Laird of Dumlanrig, came him upon Wednesday the 19th day. What conference was aong them was not then knowne. The nixt day the Lord Lindy and sindrie other gentlemen came to visite him. He exhorted em to continue in the truth, and to have no dealing with the mnable hous of the castell of Edinburgh. The Lord Ruthven, nen he came to him, said, "If there be anie thing, Sir, that I am le to doe for you, I pray you charge me with it." He answered, care not for all the pleasure and freindship of the world." The le of Glencarne visite him often, and so did manie barons and ntlemen. A gentle woman fearing God, desired him to praise od for the good he had done, and beganne as it were to praise m. He said, "Tongue, tongue, ladie; flesh of it self is too proud, d needeth no meanes to esteeme the self." He protested he did lie clame to the free mercie of God in Christ. He willed her ver to puffe up flesh, which of itself was too prone and readie to e the same, without anie other provocatioun. He exhorted her to I militie, and to cast away stinking pride, and called to her rememlance what a woman had said to her long ago: "Ladie, ladie, the ticke oxe hath never tramped upon your foote."

Upon the Lord's Day, the 23d, which was the first Sabboth o the fast, in time of after noon's sermon, none being present bu suche as did awaite upon him, after he had lyin a long space verice quiet, as they thought, he sayeth, "If anie be present, let them come, and see the work of God,"-for he thought to have departed then, as they judged. His servant Richard sent for John John ston. He burst forth in these words: "I have beene in meditation these two last nights upon the troubled kirk of God, despised of the world, but precious in his sight; and have called to God for it and commended it to Christ, her head. I have beene fighting against Satan, who is ever readie to assault. I have foughting against spirituall wickednesses, and have prevailed. I have been in heaven, where presentlie I am, and tasted of the heavenlie joves.' Therafter he said the Lord's Prayer, and the Beleefe, with a paraphrase upon everie petitioun and article. When he was saving "Our Father which art in heaven," he sayeth, "Who can pronounce so holie words," &c. Manie came to visite him after sermoun. Some perceaving his breath to be shortenned, asked it he had anie paine. He answered, "I have no more paine than he that is now in heaven; and am content, if it please God, to ly heere seven veeres." He said often, "Live in Christ, and lett never flesh feare death." When he would be lying, as was supposed, asleepe, he was at his meditations, and would burst furth in these speeches, or the like, "Lord, grant true pastors to thy kirk, that puritie of doctrine may be reteaned. Restore peace again to this commount wealth, with godlie rulers and magistrats. Lord, mak an end or troubles. Lord, I commend soule and bodie unto thy hands.' That night, Doctour Preston came to him about nyne houres, and asked how he did. He answered, "I have beene tempted by Satan; and when he perceaved he could not prevaile, he tempted me to trust and rejoice in my self, and to boast. But I repulsed him with this sentence, ' Quid habes quod non accepisti?'" nd then went to bed againe. Being asked by the good-man of Cinzeancleughe if he had anie paine, he answered, "No great aine, but suche as, I trust, sall putt end to this battell:"-and said o him, "I must leave the care of my wife and childrein to you, to thom you must be a husband in my rowme." After noone he aused his wife read the 15th chapter of the First Epistle to the Corinthians; and when it was ended, he said, "Is not that a comortable chapter?" A little after, he saveth, "I commend my bule, spirit, and bodie, (pointing up his three fingers,) into thy ands, O Lord." About fivehoures he sayeth to his wife, "Goe, ead where I cast my first anker:" and so, she read the 17th chaper of the Gospell according to Johne, and, after that, some serons of Mr Calvin's upon the Ephesians. About halfe houre to onne, they went to the ordinar prayer, which being ended, Doctor reston said unto him, "Sir, heard yee the prayer?" He answered, I would to God that yee and all men heard them as I heard: I aise God for that heavenlie sound." Then Robert Campbell of inzeancleuche sitteth doun before him on a stoole, and incontinent e saveth, "Now, it is come!"-for he had givin a long sigh and b. Then said Richard Bannatyne to him, "Now, Sir, the time e have long called to God for, to witt, an end of your battell, is me; and seing all naturall powers faile, give us some signe that e remember upon the comfortable promises which yee have 't shewed unto us." He lifted up his one hand, and incontinent erafter randered his spirit, about elleven houres at night.

Upon Moonday, the 24th of November, he rose about nyne of tenne hours, and yitt was not able to stand by himself; put on his hose and his doublett, and satt in a chaire the space of halfe an hours.

After this maner departed this man of God, the light and constrt of our kirk, a mirrour of godlinesse, a paterne to ministers for lie life, soundnesse in doctrine, and boldnesse in reproving vice. The trouble ever came to the kirk, after his entrie in publict preaching, but he resaw the end therof. Manie things in particular did he foretell hich came to passe, as I have specified before in their owne places. adde, how he foretold the queene, becaus she would not come and eare the Word, that she sould be compelled to heare it, nill she bould she: and so she was, at her arraignement. Item, To her husband sitting in the king's seate in the Great Kirk, he said, "Hay vee, for the pleasure of that dame, cast the Psalme-booke in th fire? the Lord sall strike both head and taile." Mr Thomas Smetor in the description of his life and death, sheweth that the death c the good regent, the Erle of Murrey, (whom he calleth "ornamentur et lumen hujus nationis, quo nullus unquam extitit aut religionis obser vantior, aut amantior æqui," the ornament and light of this natiour none better affected to religioun and equitie,) made a deepe impres sion in his heart; but the massacre of Parise did almost exanima him; and giveth him this commendation: "De quo ut vere et in genue dicam, nescio an unquam Deus magis pium, aut majus ingeniun in fragili et imbecillo corpore collocâvit:" I know not if ever God placed in a fraile and weake little bodie a more godlie and greate spirit. Beza calleth him "The Apostle of the Scots," and compre hendeth all his praises in few words, when he calleth him (in hi Icones) "GREAT Master Knox." Before he came furth of Sanc Andrewes, at what time he made his latter will and testament, he wrote these words following:-

"Johne Knox with deliberat minde to his God.

"Lord Jesus, receave my spirit, and putt an end, at thy good pleasure, to this my miserable life, for justice and truthe are not to be found among the sonnes of men. Be mercifull to me, O Lord and call not into judgement my manifold sinnes, and cheefelie these wherof the world is not able to accuse me, in youth, midd age, and now, after manie battells. I find nothing into me but vanitie and corruptioun; for in quietnesse I am negligent, in trouble impatient tending to desperation, and in the midd estat I am so caried away with vaine phantaseis, that, alas! O Lord, they withdraw me from the presence of thy majestie. Pride and ambitioun assault me or the one part, covetousnesse and malice trouble me on the other Breeflie, O Lord, the affections of the flesh doe almost suppresse the operatiouns of thy Spirit. I tak thee, O Lord, who onlie knoweth the secreets of (the) heart, to record, that in none of the foresaid I doe delite; but that with them I am troubled, and that ore against the desire of my owne inward man, which sobbeth for ny corruptioun, and would repose in thy mercie alone, the which [clame, and that in the promise which thou hath made to all penient sinners, (of which number I professe myself to be one,) and in the obedience and death of my onlie Saviour, our Lord Jesus Christ, in whom, by thy meere grace, I doubt not my self to be elected to salvatioun, wherof thou hath givin unto me (unto me,) Lord, most wretched and unthankfull creature) most assured signes. For being drowned in ignorance, thou hath givin me mowledge above the commoun sort of my brethrein. My tongue nath thy Majestie used to sett furth thy glorie, to oppugne idoltrie, errours, and false doctrine. Thou hath compelled me to orespeeke als weill deliverance to the afflicted, as destruction to ertan inobedient, the performance wherof, not I alone, but the olind world hath alreadie seene. But above all, O Lord, thou by the power of thy Holie Spirit hath sealed into my heart remissioun of my sinnes, which I acknowledge and confesse my self to have receaved by the precious blood of Jesus Christ once shed, by whose perfyte obedience I am assured my manifold rebellions are lefaced, my greevous sinnes purged, and my soule made the tabernacle of thy godlie majestie; thou, O Father of merceis, thy Sonne, our Lord Jesus, my onlie Saviour, Mediator, and Advocat, und thy Holie Spirit remaining in the same, by true faith, which s the onlie victorie which overcometh the world. To thee, thereore, O Lord, I recommend my spirit; for I thrist to be dissolved rome this bodie of sinne, and I am assured that I sall rise again in glorie, howsoever it be that the wicked for a time sall trode me und others thy servants under their feete. Be mercifull, O Lord, to thy kirk within this realme: continue with it the light of thy Evangell, augment the number of true preachers; and lett thy nerciful providence look upon my desolat bedfellow, the fruict of ner bosome, and my two deere childrein, Nathanael and Eleazer. Now, Lord, putt end to my miserie."

THE LAST WILL AND WORDS OF JOHNE KNOX, MINISTER OF THE HOLIE EVANGELL OF JESUS CHRIST; PUTT IN ORDER AT SANCT ANDREWES, THE 13TH OF MAY, 1572.

"Lord Jesus, I commend my troubled spirit in thy protection and defence, and thy troubled kirk to thy mercie.

"Becaus I have had to doe with diverse personages of the ministrie, wherinto God of his mercie erected me within this realme, my duetie craveth, that I sall leave unto them now a testimonie of my minde.

"And, first, to the Papists, and to the unthankfull world I say, that although my life hath beene unto them odious, and that often times they have sought my destructioun, and the destructioun of the kirk, which God of his great mercie planted within this realme, and hath always preserved and keeped the same from their cruell enterprises, yitt to them I am compelled to say, that, unlesse they speedilie repent, my departing off this life sall be to them the greatest calamitie that ever vitt hath apprehended them. Some small appearance they may vitt have in my life, if they had grace to see. A dead man I have beene now almost thir two yeeres bypast; and vitt, I would that they sould rypelie consider in what better estate they and their maters stand, than they have done before, and they have heard of long time before threatned. But becaus they will not admitt me for admonisher, I give them over to the judgement of Him who knoweth the hearts of all, and will disclose the secreits therof in due time. And this farre to the Papists.

"To the faithfull. Before God, before his Sonne, Jesus Christ, and before his holie angels, I protest, that God by my mouth (be I never so abject) hath shewed to you his truthe in all simplicitie. None I have corrupted, none I have defrauded, merchandice I have not made (to God's glorie I writ) of the glorious Evangell of Jesus Christ: but according to the measure of grace granted unto me, I have divided the sermoun of truthe in just parts, beating doun the rebellioun of the proud, in all that did declare their rebellioun against God, according as God in his law giveth to me vitt testimonie: and raising up the consciences troubled with the knowledge of their sinne, by declaring of Jesus Christ, the strenth of his death, and the mightie operation of his resurrectioun, in the hearts of the faithfull. Of this, I say, I have a testimonie this day in my conscience before God, how that ever the world rage. Be constant, therefore, in the doctrine which once publictlie vee have professed. Lett not thir scandalous dayes draw you away from Jesus Christ, nather lett the prosperitie of the wicked move you to follow it nor them. For howsoever it be that God appeareth to neglect his owne for a seasoun, yitt his majestie remaineth a just God, who nather can nor will justifie the wicked. I am not ignorant that manie would that I sould enter in particular determination of thir present troubles; to whom I plainlie and simplie answere, that as I never exceeded the bounds of God's Scriptures, so will I not doe in this part, by God's grace. But neerof I am assured, by Him who nather can deceave nor be deceaved, that the Castell of Edinburgh, in which all the nurther, all the trouble, and the whole destruction of this poore commounwealth was invented, and as our owne eyes may vitnesse, by them and their mainteaners, were putt in execuioun, sall come to destructioun, mainteane it whoso list; the lestructioun, I say, of bodie and soule, except they repent. I ooke not to the momentarie prosperitie of the wicked, yea, alhough they sould remaine conquerours till the comming of our Lord Jesus. But I looke to this sentence, that whosoever shedteth innocent blood defileth the land, and provoketh God's wrathe gainst himself and the land, untill his blood be shed again by rder of law, to satisfie God's anger. This is not the first time hat yee have heard this sentence, although manie at all times have tirred at suche severitie. I yitt affirme the same, being readie to nter to give an accompt before his Majestie of the stewardship hat he committed to me. I know in my death the rumors sall be trange. But be yee not troubled above measure, beloved in the Lord Jesus; but yitt again, I say, remaine constant in the truthe, and He who of his mercie sent me, conducted me, and prospered the worke in my hand against Satan, will provide for you abundantlie, when ather my blood sall water the doctrine taught by me, or He of his mercie otherwise provide to putt end to this my battell."

MR KNOX BURIED.

Upon Wednesday after, he was buried, being convoyed by the Erle of Morton, regent, and lords who were in the toun for the time. When he was layed in the grave, the Erle of Morton uttered thir words:—"Here lyeth a man who, in his life, never feared the face of man: who hath beene often threatned with dag and dager, but yith hath ended his dayes in peace and honour. For he had God's providence watching over him in a speciall maner, when his verie life was sought." It was his custome to sitt at table, in his owne house, at the head of it, with his backe to the window. Yitt upon a certan night he satt at a side of the table, when a bullet was shott in at the window, of purpose to kill him. But the conspirators missed, and the bullet lighted upon the chandler, and made a hole in the foote of it, which is yitt to be seene.

THE ERLE OF MORTON, REGENT.

The same day that Mr Knox departed, that is, the 24th day of November, the Erle of Morton was chosin regent. Johne Brand made the exhortatioun in the morning upon the first chapter of the Booke of Judges. After noone, the whole nobilitie, barons, prelats, and commissioners of burrowes, to the number of an hundreth and fourteene, went to the Counsell-hous, where Johne Brand made again another breefe exhortatioun, wherin he informed them how they sould carie themselves in the electioun of the person.

A bill was sent by the Erle of Atholl and Lord Gray, to desire the election to be staved for the present, and siclyke from Grange to that same effect. They thought if the assemblie were dissolved it sould not easilie conveene again. This was perceaved; and. therefore, they concluded all in one voice, that it sall not be delayed. Then Alexander Hay produced the forme and order observed in the election of the last regent, wherin was declared, that first two or three of these who were present sould be putt in list. becaus they must sweare and give oath to accept the charge, whosoever was to be chosin. The Erle of Morton and Alexander Erle of Glencarne gave their oaths, being putt in the list; the Lord Sempill, Chanceller to this action, asked the votes. The most part voted to James Dowglas, Erle of Morton. He accepted the office, and tooke a solemne oath, conforme to the Act of Parliament; and these who were present gave their oaths of obedience and assistance

A parliament was appointed to be holdin in Edinburgh, the 15th day of Januar. The abstinence, which was to expire the sixt of December, was continued till the first of Januar.

THE REGENT'S ANSWERE TO LETHINGTON.

In the moneth of December, Lethington sent out of the castell a memorandum, to be showed to the Lord of Morton, then regent, by the Laird of Carmichaell, to which he answered as followeth:

"I have seene a memour in writt of William Matlan's, sent to ny servant, the young Laird of Carmichaell, to show unto me, wherby I am desired to call to my remembrance the freindship of old betuixt me and the said William. In it also is conteaned a renearsall of his good offices done unto me, and of my alledged evill usage of him latelie; bearing, in end, his intention for releefe of conscience, that the evill causes sould be removed, that the better effects heerafter may follow; seeming the more carefull, becaus of the extreme point he taketh me to be at, and opinioun, that I sall enlaike of my present disease; and that he is likelie, ere it be long, to stand his freinds in steid, and be an evill nighbour to his enemeis; and that his kindnesse will be worth the purchassing. Wherunto I have thought good thus shortlie to answere, for my owne lischarge of the things objected, and that, by my silence, the maters writtin sould not be farther credited nor the truthe is.

"How farre the indispositioun of his persoun impedeth him from travell, himself best knoweth. For my owne part, I thanke my God of his visitatioun, and am not out of hope shortlie to have that habilitie which sall content my self, and serve me to discharge my duetie, so long as God's pleasure is I live.

"It is true, and I deny not, but there hath beene freindship betuixt us, which, as it decayed not in my default, so, during the continuance therof, it was profitable for us both; and his travells were no more valuable for me, but my freindship stood him in als good stead, weyghing how unable he had beene to underly their inimitie that then bare him evill will, if I had not susteaned his querrells, and declared myself partie, to his adversareis, which drew me to the spending of geir which otherwise might have done great things. The chancellarie I had not by his onlie labours, but even my Lord of Murrey (whom now being deid, he would make my competitor) was therin my freind and furtherer. Nather was William Matlane the cheefe instrument of purchassing the securitie of the houses of Angus and Morton, as he would have men to thinke: but therin I had the freindship and furtherance of my said Lord of Murrey, whose travells in the mater of Morton was some part in respect of his brother, the Laird of Lochlevin's interesse, being placed nixt in the tailzie; and I gave the queen a thowsand crownes in a purse, for confirmatioun of Angus. For other good turnes, if they were speciallie noted, I were able to answere them. If he had not thought my kindnesse and good will worth that which he was able to doe for me, I doubt not but he would have both sought and takin geir and recompence at my hands. If he refused what was offered, the default was not in me. If the alteratioun of this freindship proceeded from anie my actioun, and simplie from that which tuiched my self in particular, I were the more blame-worthie. But of that I refere the judgement to God, and all that sall judge indifferentlie in the world.

"Toward his forfaulture,-when it sall be considered who then had the government, for what caus the forfalture past, I thinke they will not esteeme me the cheefe procurer, solister, and setter fordward therof. For the Erle of Lennox, then regent, having the administration of justice in his hands, and the caus being the murther of the king his sonne, it might be weill thought little procuratioun or solistatioun needed. That I knew him innocent in my conscience as my self, the contrare therof is true; for I was, and am innocent therof, but could not affirme the same of him, considering what I understand in that mater of his owne confessioun to my self For that writting, that he was the lesse beholdin to me, of before. indeid, I thought, after inimitie in his owne default declared, I was not debt-bound to shew him farther good will. But like as his travell tended to the overthrow of the king's estate, and consequentlie to my wracke, and the noble men and others who by him were brought in the actioun, so was it no mervell that I wished him to be made unable to annoy us: for I judged it meetter that men of good service and habilitie sould be rather gratified with his possessiouns, the better to beare out their charges in our commoun caus, nor that which was his sould be suffered to come to his owne use, to mainteane the warre against us.

"A greater caus on his part could not be, to move me to change my freindship, nor, when I found him directlie entered in actioun, not onlie of intelligence with the queene, but to overthrow that estat wherof before himself had beene a cheef instrument, and in defence of which, by his perswasiouns, I had drawin all my name that could not have escaped wracke if we had once slipped our ground, which I alwise esteemed to be true and honest, and in that respect could never like of it he calleth his good advice. For, as it was vaine for him to thinke that he could deserve more particular evill will at her hands nor he had alreadie, so was it great presumption to intend by himself that universall reconciliation; and his doing was not without evident suspicioun and danger to them with whom he was joyned in commoun caus.

"If I enlaike, I thanke God that they whom I ought to care for are not destitute of freinds, but are als able to doe a good turne for another to their nighbours, as his successioun. And I see not what greater assurance he hath of his owne life nor I have of myne. Whatsoever place he sall atteane to, I wishe his doings may stand in better stead to himself, his freinds, and his countrie, nor his late actions have declared. For his nighbourheid, such as he will professe inimitie unto must beare it as they may. If the memorie both of his kindnesse and unkindlie behaviour sould be placed in our charter-kists, I thinke the last sould exceed the first. And whether I enlaike or not, I wishe he may consider his offence to God, the king, the noblemen, and others with whom he was joyned in this commoun caus, and that the losses in this troubled countrie, wherof he hath beene the occasioun, may be repaired. And how soone he sall give demonstration of his minde to the repairing therof, none sall be better content, that the memorie of the bypast evill desert be forgott, and he and his restored to that which sometime was his owne."

A BREEFE DECLARATION HOW MATERS HAVE PROCEEDED DURING THE ABSTINENCE, WHICH EXPIRETH THE LAST OF DECEMBER, AND UPON WHAT OCCASION THE WARRE WAS RENUED. PRINTED AT EDINBURGH BY THOMAS BASSANDINE.

"Forsameekle as after the long civill dissensioun and unnaturall warre continued within and about this toun of Edinburgh, by reasoun and occasioun of the treasounable surprising and fortificatioun therof, (abstinence and assurance then standing,) through the defectioun of him to whom the custodie of the Castell of Edinburgh to our soveran lord's behove was committed; at last an abstinence and cessatioun from hostilitie was agreed unto, beginning at the penult day of Julie last by past, to indure for the space of two moneths therafter, within which time it was accorded that the nobilitie and estats of the realme sould be assembled, by their meanes to establishe a good and generall peace: And that so holie a worke sould not be retarded, that during the truce and abstinence, two, three, foure, or five men, or fewer, of either partie, might communicat together in all suretie, to open up the meanes for the more facile atteaning unto a good peace: And that the same abstinence and pacificatioun which sould follow therupon in no wise sould tuiche the king, our soverane lord, or his estat, to the prejudice therof: Yitt, during these two moneths, not onlie was the assemblie of the nobilitie for the part of the adversareis neglected and overpast, and his Highness' late regent, the Erle of Marr, of good memorie, at his comming to Edinburgh, (as place agreed upon for the purpose,) frustrated and disappointed, but als his Majestie's coine was daylie counterfooted and adulterated within the Castell of Edinburgh, and givin out as lawfull money among his Highnesse' liege people; a mater expreslie tending to the violatioun of the abstinence, in so farre as the counterfooting of his Majestie's monev directlie tuiched his Highnesse and his estat, to the prejudice therof; and was also a deid against honestie, and the lawes of all natiouns. And albeit thereby just occasioun was then givin to have revenged that disdaine and that injurie, notwithstanding, suche earnest and true good will was in the regent, and in the nobilitie professing the king's obedience, towards pacificatioun, for the universall commoditie of the realme, (the queen's Majestie of England her ambassaders earnestlie therewithall travelling,) that a prorogatioun of the former abstinence was granted for the space of two moneths, beginning the 8th day of October, to endure till the 6th day of December last, and writtings were subscrived and interchanged therupon, in which, nominatioun was made of certan persons, for triell, and according, upon the redresse of the attemptats, on either side, committed since the former abstinence, and that sould happin to be committed and compleanned upon during the said prorogatioun: As also, for certan noblemen of either partie, who sould conveene the said last day of October, in peaceable maner, to proceed in suche maner and forme as betwixt the parteis conveening sould be agreed upon.

"And farther, it was speciallie accorded and promised by them of the castell, that all melting, forging, printing, or labouring of coine, within or without the same, by anie of their partie, of their command and allowance, sould utterlie cease and be left off, whill the said sixt day of December. But as the last heed was manifestlie contraveened, so was nothing in effect of the other points observed. Onlie some (as directed from them) came to Sanct Johnstoun after the appointed day, howbeit nather of the number of the nobilitie, nor yitt suche as seemed to have sufficient commissioun and instructiouns deepelie and substantiouslie to deale in the maters that were to be intreatted: So as the secund two moneths likewise overpast, without anie intentioun of peace appearing in them of the castell, speciallie in that wrong and injurie which themselves had done, and which consisted in their owne power to amend, as was for forging, printing, and outputting of the said adulterated and corrupt money, they themselves having promised of their honours, and by their solemne oaths, that the same sould utterlie ceasse, and be left off, as said is. And albeit thereby it might be weill perceaved that no sincere meaning of peace was in them, vitt, at the motioun of the queen's Majestie of England her ambassaders, our soveran lord's present regent was content, as before, that the abstinence sould be further prorogated untill the first day of Januar instant, upon some hope that vitt they of the said castell sould have come, in the meane time, to some reasonable and tolerable conditiouns. But that time, in effect, also over-passing, without demonstration of anie suche good-will or intentioun of peace to rest in them, about the end of the prorogatioun the ambassader, according to the directioun and commandement of the queen's Majestie his soverane, willing to doe all good offices that might induce to pacificatioun, he having conferred with them of the castell latelie, moved the said lord regent for a further prorogatioun of the abstinence, to which motioun he was not difficill or contrarious; but after some speeches past at diverse times betwixt him and the ambassader, tuiching that purpose, agreed to the prorogatioun, upon conditioun that the mater sould be putt to suche a point as there sould be some likliehood of a peace to follow; and, or the furtherance of the same, was desirous that the ambassader ould know of them in the castell, for whom they dealt, and upon vhat warrant; that they would nominat certane persons of authoitie, credit, and judgment, for their partie, to meete with others of ike qualitie, for treatting and according upon maters in controversie; as also, to trie and cognosce the violations of the former bstinence, and incace of their discord, that the difference might be submitted to the decision of some indifferent od personage, and uretie made for performance of that which sould be determined: hat the printing yrons might be putt in the ambassader's hands, as andifferent, and the coiners removed out of the castell, upon suretie o be harmelesse: that the prisoners might be sett at libertie, speiallie the Maister of Forbesse, upon band, not of suche as the Irle of Huntlie hath heretofore nominated, seing some of them ould not be perswaded to be oblished, upon feare conceaved, if ney had so done, to be therefore wracked and undone; but that a and under the paine of ten thowsand punds might be receaved of thers, sufficient and responsall noblemen and barons that sould be orth an hundreth thowsand punds: that they of the castell sould ontent themselves with suche daylie and ordinarie provisioun as onvenientlie and reasonablie might susteane them and their numer during the abstinence; and forbeare to tak in anie suche great mantitie of victuals, stuffe, and other furniture, as might confirme ie suspicion conceaved of their intentioun to continue the warre, nd provide the castell for a yeere or two; with assurance of the gent's minde to condescend to the abstinence, on thir condiouns.

"The ambassader past to the castell upon Wednesday, the last ty of December, and having made declaration of the same, they the castell taking advantage of the last heed, tuiching the provision and victualling of the hous, answered, that they could n be content in that point to be controlled; and except the san were first past without conditioun, they would make no answer nor enter in further reasoning upon the remanent heeds, no wi willing, in the said provisioun and victualling, to admitt anie kind of restraint or limitation. It was said by them of the castell privat speech to the ambassader, that he of whom they could li of to be the od personage was the King of France. Thus, u giving reasoun or answere to the remanent, but taking advantage of the last point, as is before said, they have declared their obstin presumptioun above the bounds of reasoun and measure, as u willing of anie good and tolerable peace, but rather desirous th the realme sall continue in civill warre and dissensioun, which h their onlie occasioun is renewed, and of which they may be just compted the verie authors, seing nothing ather unreasonable impossible was of them demanded: for the conditions onlie tender to certan dealing, and furtherance of the pacificatioun and quie nesse, as, no doubt, all honest and indifferent men will judge. Ar considering therewith all, that there was good caus to doub whether the duke and the Erle of Huntlie, with others heretofor of their partie, would allow the dealing of them in the caste. which by their owne deid, speciallie in making and out-putting the said adulterated and corrupt money, had not only controveene their owne obligatioun, but had hazarded the faith and promise the noblemen of that partie, for whom they would doe what the could in things which were to be performed by the noblemen their partie. Indeid, reasoun and good order craved (the cond tioun of them in the castell considered) that they had moderate themselves with suche measure and appointment as the nobleme of their partie could have beene content to enter in, rather nor th noblemen be subject to follow the fortune of them in the castel to whom no mediatioun is tolerable, nor anie advice beside the owne thought worthie. But their conclusioun is, as may wei appeare, to mak their advantage of the trouble, and to continu the warre by themselves, and strangers whom they have procured although they sould be destituted of all other factioun and fellowhip in Scotland,) without feare of God, or zeale that his glorie. and true religioun, (wherof themselves shew them sometimes proessors,) sould remaine among us; against their faith and allegiance. worne and promised to the king's Majestie, our soveran lord, (in erectioun and constitutioun of whose authoritie themselves were theef instruments;) and without compassioun of the present calanitie of this their native countrie, which by their occasioun is thus plagued and unquietted. It may, also, cleerelie appeare, that vithout submissioun of the differences to some indifferent od peronages, incace of discord, there was no intention of peace in them of the castell, but evident prejudice and disadvantage to the king, is regent, nobilitie, and good subjects, who by delay and uncerantie behoved still to be burthenned with the sumptuous charges of the susteaning men of warre, as heeretofore they have beene, ince the first abstinence was accorded unto, without likelihood of he end of the warre; where otherwise, if the differences had beene hus remitted to the decisioun and judgement of some an indiferent personage, and suretie made for performance of the deterninatioun, it had beene in effect a present peace to the greatest part of the realme, and suche charges of men of warre had not seeded, seing all men would have looked to the end of the deciioun, wherin the King of France, in reasoun, could not be thought neetest to be judge, in respect of his farre distance, and misknowedge of the circumstances of the Scotish controverseis, which reuire speedie and summar decisioun. It is also certan, that the principals of both parteis contending avow the professioun of the rue religioun, and, therefore, the rather sould be judged in the aus of their controversie by some personage professing the same rue religioun. And as to the last point, tuiching the provisioun of ictualling of the castell, under pretext wherof they of the castell ave rejected the remanent, it may appeare, if reasoun could have atisfied them, there was occasion in that heed to lett the warre reake up, seing alreadie, in five moneths' space, they have beene ermitted sufficientlie to victuall themselves. It was not meant nor spokin, that they sould be drivin to spend anie part of thei lyand provisioun, during the abstinence; but, without impediment to tak in suche quantitie of all kinde of victuals as, from day t day, might sufficientlie susteane the number they interteanned Indeed, it seemeth no wise to tend to peace, but highlie to the disadvantage of the king, that during a short abstinence, without certantie of peace to follow, they sould be permitted to tak in an ingreat quantitie of new provisiouns of wine, powder, bullet, and munitions, or to have forrane intelligence, by which they might the more facillie draw in strangers, to the destruction of religious the king, and all the whole commoun weale, as their continual travells heeretofore have tended unto.

"And, therefore, seing by their obstinacie all honest and equitable conditiouns were rejected, and the warre renewed, my lord regent's Grace, with advice of the Lords of Secreit Counsell, half thought good to give publict declaratioun therof, that none upon ignorance judge otherwise of the cause of renewing of the trouble nor the truthe is; but that being certified of the veritie, they may be the rather induced to assist, with counsell and with force, in resisting and repressing the treasonable rebellioun and unnatural crueltie, used and intended by them within the said Castell of Edinburgh, so as the realme being releeved of the present mischeefes and inconveniences continuing by their occasioun, justice and policie may proceed, to the honour of God, our soverane lord's obedience, and commoun weale of the whole realme."

M.D.LXXIII.

THE ABSTINENCE EXPIRED.

The abstinence being expired the first of Januar, at six houres in the morning, the captan of the castell warned all men to talked to themselves, by a shott of a peece out of the castell. Ther after, trenches were cast about the castell, where need required and souldiours placed, to stop all ish and entrie.

A PARLIAMENT.

In the parliament holdin in Januar, the Erle of Morton's regenie was confirmed. It was ordeanned, that the lawfull archbishops, bishops, superintendents, and commissioners of diocesis and prorinces, by themselves, and the ministers and readers serving at the cirks respective, note the names of the persons, als weill men as veomen, suspected to be Papists, or that have not participated of he sacraments, as they were then truelie ministred in the reformed cirk of this realme; and with like diligence lawfullie admonishe hem according to the order of the kirk.

Item, That the Papists relapse, and non-communicants remaining betinat, sall be holdin, reputed, and esteemed infamous, and unble to sitt or stand in judgement, persue or beare office, nor sall ot be admitted as privat witnesses or assessors against anie processing the true religioun, ay and whill they have reconciled themselves to the true kirk, submitting themselves to the discipline perof, and obteane testimoniall therupon.

Item, That all ecclesiasticall persons, ministers, or others, who ruike benefices, fruicts, stipend, pensioun, or portioun furth of enefices, sall subscrive the articles of religioun in the acts of our overane lord's parliament.

The act made before, tuiching the true and holie kirk, and suche are declared not to be of the same kirk, was ratified.

BILL OR COMPLAINT CONVOYED IN AND LAYED UPON THE BOORD, BEFORE THE LORDS OF THE ARTICLES AT THE PARLIAMENT, AND READ IN THEIR PRESENCE.

"As most honourable and godlie interprises are ever subject to ost danger and perell, so, when your lordships that are heere asmbled tooke the interprise of the revenge of the king's murther, un actioun most necessar to be undertakin,) for avoiding of the lague of God, that useth plentifullie to be poured furth upon that countrie where the murther remaineth unpunished, of the poores that passeth through the way, lett be of princes; for expiatioun of the which, what diligence is commanded by the mouth of God to the faithfull people of God in his booke, is more than notour. As also, for the honour of your native countrie and natioun, which was abominable to all other natiouns, for the causes and occasions of the same murther, that your poore merchants might not travell in other parts, for the hatred of the name of Scotish men, conceaved upon the bruit of that foule fact.

"And yitt how difficill that ever the mater was, (as there was not little difficultie,) the executer of the murther being growne in that favour with the prince of this realme, the king's mother, I meane who, as she had consented to the doing of the murther, so she premiated and rewarded him, as it had beene for the best act that he could have wrought, with the soveraintie of herself, her realme, and lieges, by taking of him to her husband, and creating him Duke of Orkney, for no other caus, but that, at her desire, he had beene burrio and shamefull murtherer to that nobleman; and as it were, to inarme him with force, with power, with freindship, and with strenth of man against God, the true revenger of suche wickednesse. Whereby they laiked not counsell and device to make force not onlie to resist whosoever would revenge, but to persue, root out, and destroy all suche as feared God within this realme, that no instrument sould be left to unquiett their devilish and damnable securitie.

"At which time, it pleased God, in the middest of her forces and strenth, to make her stoup and yeeld herself to your honours, the executer of the murther taking the crime upon him, and fleeing away, as he that feared to receave the reward of his sinne. At which time, your honours drest her, by honest moyen, to yeeld to our soverane lord the crowne of this realme, so deere bought by him, as by the cruell death of his deere father; and to establishe the administration of this realme in his tender age in the person of certan noblemen successivelie, of whom some part are takin to the mercie of God, and other part are yitt alive; at whose godlie governement, partlie by her aiding out of waird that she was deuted to, partlie by other occasiouns and inconveniences as occurred, iche as the death and untymous taking away of my Lord of Murey, first regent, it is a wonder how some of the partners of the urther and counsellers therto have spurned to reject and abolishe is same, moved likelie, and in a part, by a desire to hold this puntrie in a perpetuall trouble, that therethrough they might have a impunitie of the enorme faults that their cankered consciences yte them to be guiltie therof; as also, on the other part, by the rouble of your native countrie, and civill warre, (that they helpe a suffocat therin,) to spend the most part and best amongst your hopours, that they may heerafter gett promoted; suche as mister rater a tutele of others, than to have charge above others, of whom any may have the government, and consequentlie of this miserple and unfortunate countrie.

"In the which, my lords, your honours sould consider, by suche en's proceedings in times past, what their meaning may be now, nd in time to come, if yee sall receave them among you, speciallie Ir James Balfour and his brethrein, and not give them the remee of their deserving. In the which it will please your honours to Il to minde their former fidelitie at all times, their proceedings ir foure yeeres by gane, their constancie in nothing but all kinde 'evill, both toward your honours and their native countrie. That moved them, after the recent benefite done unto them by e dispositioun of the Erle Bothwel's escheate, the promoting of ne said Sir James in the office of the president in the seate, and thers great benefites done by my said Lord Murrey, then regent, him, (of the which your honours are not yitt out of remembrance;) my said lord's being in England for defence of this good caus, ithout my lord's (that said is) knowledge, and no wise to his mmoditie, to enter in conference with the queene, the king's moer, then at Boltoun, and be so familiar with her at that time, that Scotish man in Scotland receaved more missives from her than the id Sir James? What moved him and his marrowes to enter in ague with the Duke of Norfolke, unwitting of the said lord regent, r promoting of the said duke to the supremacie of the realmes of England and Scotland, subversioun of the true religioun, and ex terminion of your honours, and all that professed God and th truthe in both the realmes? Who also, at my good lord regen the Erle of Murrey's taking away, was so bussie to procure tha great seditioun and intestine trouble, which since that time hat continued in this realme, and hath consumed so manie and able no blemen, and others, that in time of forrane warres with valientness would have done great honour to their native countrie, which be ganne at the counsell commounlie called the Meale Mercat, when unto he was cheefe counseller? A mutation strange to behold and of the which the ambassader for the queen's Majestie of Eng land, for the time in thir parts, Mr Randulph by name, reproving the said Sir James, reported no other answere nor reasoun of the samine, nor Tempora mutantur, et nos mutamur in illis. Which wa als muche in meaning as he could stand content nather with go vernement nor authoritie in this countrie, but that which made fo him: and yitt, whenever he saw time, he could wag as the buss wagged, and tak the way which might make him advancement, how beit that the same were to the destruction of all honest and godlimen, and of his native countrie also. What moved him, bearing office of counseller and president of the seate of the Colledge of Justice of our soverane lord, to passe to Linlithquo, and there make to be proclamed that all men sould obey the queene; and at that time to come out in most warlike maner, with carted ordinance, to the bridge of Evan, to stoppe the one half of your honours to meete with the other, for conference of maters to the weale of this poore commoun weale? Who was the setter fordward of that tratorous proclamation of a parliament to be holdin at Linlithquo, the 2d o August nixt therafter, for deprivation of our soverane lord and his authoritie royall; or who moved him therto? Who cried out faster, that your honours were all English tratours, for the revenge takin by the support of England upon the Hammiltons; for which caus afterward, they led a great part of processe against your honours of forfalture, in their pretended parliament? What conqueist meant they to make upon the king's Highnesse, and his obedient subjects of Mernes, Angus, and Fife, being in the north, in the Erle of Huntlie's companie, and consulting him to manne the place of Brechin, and steeple therof, and be sure of Broughtie? Yea, what warre and trouble thought they to have brought in the bowells of Fife, and, finallie, in thir parts, at that time, if God had not inspired your Honours' hearts to cutt that their interprise, and make it for nought; which journey held off that great trouble that they thought to have begunne, at the inputting of the corne, to the Aprile nixt therafter, in this countrie? Who was the great counseller of the taking of Sanct Giles steeple and kirk? Who beganne the taking up of men of warre? Who beganne the holding and ortifeing of the toun of Edinburgh, in contrare the king and his regents; and to make that noble toun, which was the onlie patron of justice, policie, and good discipline in the religioun of this realme, another Liddisdaill; yea, who was proveist therto, for the rime; and who was made captan of that divelish band, called the Chimney Band? Who fenced that tratorous parliament for annuling of the king's highnesse' authoritie? Who dyted thir words, and commanded the clerks to write them, 'In the parliament of our Soverane Ladie?' Who forefaulted principallie all your Honours? Who was of the counsell to send his brother to the parliament at Stirline, where all your Honours' lives were most cruellie sought, nd my good Lord Lennox, regent, with manie other noble gentleien, were most tratorouslie slaine? Who, after that, caused hang mocent Charles Dowglas, and others true and faithfull servants to ur soverane lord? Who pulled and spoiled the whole goods and eir of them that, for the zeale of God and favour of our soveme lord, left their houses, goods, geir, and livings, within the toun, nd came to Leith, to expone their lives to danger and perrell at all imes for the king's service? Who most cheefelie pulled doun, nzed, and villanouslie cast doun houses, biggings, and policie, the rnaments of this toun and countrie likewise, and that, for despite 1 at suche men whose houses they destroyed would not be, like to 1em, tratours to their native countrie and soverane king? Who t all skirmishes, and other times of pursute of the king and his uthfull subjects, hounded out with strokes, and other suche interteanement, all the poore folke in the toun, that they had holdin in before hungering, to come contrare our soverane lord and his regent, the old preest's deposition at his death, who was hanged for comming against our soverane lord and his said regent, upon the Tuisday, can sufficientlie testifie.

"What needeth moe words? No tongue can expresse the wickednesse of that man and his brother, and the hurt that they have procured to the king and his true subjects, which is so notorious to all your Honours, that probatioun there needeth none; for vee have beene hearing and seeing witnesses to the most part of all the foresaids. Wherefore, my lords, look weill what yee doe, before yee receave them in among you, or consent that my lord regent's Grace, who will use your Honours' counsell, grant them anie par-Consider, first, the qualitie of the men, that, since the time they were condemned to the gallowes, never could be of quiett minde, but ever desperatlie procuring seditioun, lyke as their whole life and conversatioun will beare record. Nixt, they are but precursors and forerunners to all that devilish factioun that hath wasted this countrie, to whom yee can no wise denie the favour and pardoun which yee sall grant them, who are lesse guiltie and faulters than they. Also, yee sall have them (without the whole masse come into obedience) suche as they were in my lord regent my Lord of Murrey's dayes, to the queene and hers. Item, It is said, when they have gottin their purse full again, yee sall have them proceeding to their accustomed fashioun and dealing; and there is no securitie that can be devised, that can make men sure of suche persons. As also, if your Honours sall consent to their remissiouns, your Honours sall procure the greatest skaith to this countrie that ever came: for the youth sall be thereby moved to thinke treasoun, oppressioun, murther, and suche other odious crimes as these men have committed, no faults; nor, with the feare of justice, sall no wise be moved to leave off the committing of the same, but ever hope for impunitie, as they see thir men gett; which sall be the greatest skaith that ever came to this commoun wealth. Secundlie, It sall be judged by all natiouns that sall heare of your proceedings in this part, that it was not the murther of the king that yee have sought, when as yee sall shaike hands with the principall counsellers therof: but your owne promotioun, to the hurt and destructioun of your owne native countrie. Thridlie, How can vee hold up your faces, if God sall fortoun you to live till the king, our soverane, come to perfectioun of yeeres? or what answere can yee give him, when yee have unquietted this his countrie so long with warre, by fire, sword, and slaughter of his subjects? For if yee will say, It was for revenge of the murther, it will be said, That meant vee never, for yee have lettin live the principall doers and counsellers therof. Wherefore your self, or your posteritie, may receave such punishment as disturbers of a commoun wealth, and wrackers of your native countrie, merite. Fourthlie, It is to be supposed, that God remaineth that self same God that he hath beene hitherto, who, by his ministers, exhorted the Lord of Murrey, then regent, to tak away the evill from this countrie, and punishe the authors of the murther. Without that, he would have that answere givin him by God, that was givin to Achab by the servant of God, when he said unto him, 'Becaus thou hath lett him goe, whom the Lord appointed to death, behold, thy life for his life, and thy people for his people.' The admonition being contemned by him, (alas! for pitie,) what followed theron, judge yee, my lords. What now the Lord is able to doe to your bodeis and houses that abide behind, if yee sall committ the like fault, and oversee, at this present, thir wicked men, ordeanned by God to be punished to death for their abominable deeds that no tongue can expresse, I committ to your judgements."-What answere this bill gott I read not.

THE ABSTINENCE CONTINUED WITH THE HAMMILTONS.

The commissioners appointed for the king and his regent, and on the other side for the Hammiltons and Huntlie, were to meet at Sanct Johnstoun, for some order to be takin for the quietnesse and peace of the countrie: for, albeit the abstinence was givin up with them of the castell, it continued betuixt the regent, the Hammiltons, and Huntlie, till the 16th of Februar.

THE CASTELL OF BLACKNESSE TAKIN.

Notwithstanding of sindrie scrolls givin in against Sir James Balfoure, wherin were discovered his treasonable dealings in times bypast, yitt was he takin in protectioun by the regent. He advertised the regent, that Mr James Kirkaldie was come out of France to Blacknesse, with gold to the rebels; and how he had disswaded him to goe to the north, becaus Huntlie would have takin it to himself, at least the most part of it, and give to them within the castell what he pleased. Least Sir James, or the captan, Alexander Stewart, sould be suspected, the regent was desired to send and take it, as it were, by force. The regent sent a band of men of warre, and Carmichaell, with fourtie hors, to ly about the hous, to withhold victuals. The Hammiltons sent Captan Bruce, with tenne or twelve souldiours, who were takin by Carmichael, but sett free again incontinent, becaus, as was suspected, he was privie to the plot. After they had lyin about the castle tenne or twelve dayes for a shew, it was randered upon conditions, to witt, the said Alexander sould continue captan, delivering his eldest sonne in pledge, as he had done before to the rebels within the castell; and that all bygone offences sould be remitted, and some recompence givin to him. So, about the end of Januar, he came in to Edinburgh, with all the gold that Mr James had gottin from their confederats in France, viz. twelve or fyfteene thowsand frankes. Mr James, finding himself deceaved, corrupted the souldiours in his absence, giving to some foure, others five, others six or tenne crowns a peece. SoMr James became captan, and, when Alexander returned, enclosed him and his brother, Mr Johne, in a lockefast chamber. Alexander again intised five or six of the souldiours to sett him at libertie. Whill some of them were convoying Mr James his wife to the gates, others within closed the yron gate; others went to the wall-head, and cried upon Captan Lambie and his band lying neere by; others cast down stones at Mr James in the closse. Captan Lambie cometh in; Mr James is takin and brought to Edinburgh, the elleventh of Februare.

GRANGE BURNETH SOME HOUSES IN EDINBURGH.

None might walke safelie on the streets of Edinburgh for shootting out of the castell. Upon Thursday, the 12th of Februare, betuixt eight and nyne at night, the captan of the castell sallied out, and sett on fire one or two thacke houses before the Castell Wynd, at what time there was a vehement wind. It past from hous to hous, till, by the providence of God, it stayed at Foster's Wynde, notwithstanding of the shootting out of the castell. Beside the houses and moveables that were burnt with the fire, muche was stollin by souldiours, after it was brought furth to the streets to be saved. If the trenches and crosse guarde had beene weill keeped, the captan had not undertakin suche an interprise. He thought to have drivin the regent and all the inhabitants out of the toun that night.

upon, that he had pluralitie of benefices. Item, That he solemnized the band of matrimonie betwixt the Maister of Crawfurd and the Lord Drummond's daughter, without proclaiming of bannes, and out of due time, viz., upon a Thursday afternoone at prayers. To the first, he answered, that he had two vicarages. but reapeth no profite of them; and withall, desired to be disburthenned of the commissionarie of Galloway. To the secund, he answered, he did nothing but at commandement of the sessioun of the kirk, and of my Lord Ruthven in speciall, one of the elders of the said kirk. The Assemblie ordeaned the act made against ministers that solemnize mariages betwixt parteis of other parishes. without proclaming of bannes, to have effect and strenth, against Mr Johne Row, for solemnizing of the foresaid mariage; and to underly the samine, during the Assemblie's will. In the sixt sessioun, the Assemblie ordeaned the Superintendent of Stratherne to passe to Sanct Johnstoun, and tak order with Mr Johne Row, and the sessioun of that kirk, for solemnizing of the mariage betwixt the Maister of Crawfurd and the Lord Drummond's daughter, and to report the order he sall tak therin to the nixt Assemblie.

In the same sessioun, the Assemblie, for certan causes moving them, discharged Alexander, called Bishop of Galloway, to exerce anie function within the kirk till they be further advised, and ordeaneth Mr Johne Row, Commissioner of Galloway, to summoun the said Alexander to compeere before the nixt General Assemblie, to answere to suche things as sall be layed to his charge.

In the seventh sessioun, Johne Areskine of Dun, knight, Superintendent of Angus and Mernes, protested, that in respect the whole diocie of Sanct Andrewes is decerned by the Assemblie to perteane to the Bishop, that he be no more burthenned with anie visitatioun in these bounds perteaning to the said bishoprick; and in like maner, within the bounds perteaning to the bishoprick of Dunkelden, how soone anie bishop sall be provided thereto.

Mr Johne Spotswood, Superintendent of Lothiane, protested for the like. The Assemblie referred both these protestations to the VOL. III. commissioners appointed to confer with my lord regent's Grace and Secreit Counsell, to confer with them upon these also; and what they doe heerin, to report to the nixt Assemblie.

COMMISSIONS.

Commissioun and power was givin to Johne Bishop of Sanct Andrewes, Johne Areskine of Dun, knight, Superintendent of Angus and Mernes, Mr Johne Wynrame, Superintendent of Stratherne, Mr Robert Pont, one of the Senators of the Colledge of Justice, and minister, Mr Johne Row, Mr David Lindsay, Robert Fairlie of Braid, Adam Foullerton, one of the commissioners of Edinburgh, to concurre with my lord regent's Grace and counsell, or with so manie as his Grace sall appoint, to reason with them upon suche heads and articles as sall be propouned by my lord regent's Grace and counsell, or by the Assemblie to his Grace; and to conclude therupon, according to the instructions givin to them by the Assemblie, and to report their conclusions before the end of this Assemblie. In the secund sessioun, the Assemblie appointed the Superintendent of Stratherne, Mr Robert Pont, Mr Johne Row, Johne Johnston, one of the commissioners of Edinburgh, to penne the articles which are to be presented to my lord regent's Grace and Secreit Counsell, etc., that therafter they may be read, etc. In the seventh sessioun it was ordeanned, that the commissioners alreadie appointed to confer with my lord regent's Grace and Secreit Counsell sall continue in their commission; and power also was granted to them to confer with the Lords of Articles at parliament, if anie sall be holdin before the nixt Assemblie; and to report then the heeds concluded upon by them, to the end they may be insert in the register among the rest of the acts.

Item, To choose a collector for the province of Aberdeene, with advice of the ministers of the said province, which advice the Assemblie ordeaneth the saids ministers to send to the forsaid commissioners, before the 24th day of Aprile nixt to come. The Assemblie appointed the Bishop of Sanct Andrewes, the Superintendents of Angus, Lothiane, and Stratherne, Mr Johne Row, Commissioner of Galloway, Mr Andrew Hay, Commissioner of the West, Mr George Hay, Commissioner of Aberdeen, Mr David Lindsay, Commissioner of Kyle, Cariet, Cunninghame, Mr Donald Monro, Commissioner of Rosse, to conveene at what time my lord regent's Grace sall appoint, to heare the collector's compts with the rest of the lords at the exchecker; allow and approve, or disallow, according to their wisdom, and as their conscience sall move them; and after the said compts sall be made, to subscrive the samine, conforme to the order takin, etc.

Full power and commission was givin to the ministers, elders, and deacons of the kirk of Sanct Andrewes, to tak cognitioun, dezide, and conclude upon the rest of Robert Scot his complaints upon the Superintendent of Stratherne, vocatis ad hac quorum in-'erest: and to report their proceedings to the nixt Assemblie. As for the other part of his complaint, the Assemblie had found, that he superintendent had done wrong to the said Robert, in refusing etters testimonialls, conforme to my lord regent's Grace his presenation to the vicarage of Stramiglo, and not addmitting him to be eader at the said kirk, conforme to the presentatioun. Becaus my ord regent was desirous to see the acts of the Generall Assemblie, hat he might consider how manie of them be perpetuall, how manie emporarie, the Assemblie appointed the Superintendent of Lohiane, Mr Robert Pont, Mr David Lindsay, Mr James Lowsone, Johne Brand, ministers, and Mr Clement Littill, advocat, to coneene with my lord regent's Grace and Secreit Counsell to that ffect.

RICHARD BANNATYNE'S SUPPLICATION.

Richard Bannatyne, servitour to umquhile Mr Knox, presented the supplication following:—

"Unto your Wisdoms humblie meaneth and sheweth I your servitour, Richard Bannatyne, servant to your umquhile most deerest brother, Mr Knox, of worthie memorie, that where it is not unknowne to your Wisdoms, that he left to the kirk and toun of Edinburgh his Historie, conteaning, in effect, the beginning and progresse of Christ's true religion, now of God's great mercie established in this realme, wherin he hath continued, and perfytlie ended, at the yeere of God 1564, so that, of things done since that time, nothing by him is putt in that forme and order as he hath done the former: Yitt, notthelesse, there are certan scrolls, papers, and minutes of things left to me by him, to use at my pleasure, wherof a part was writtin and subscrived with his owne hand, and another part by myne, at his command: Which, if they were collected and gathered together, would make sufficient declaration of the principall things which occurred since the ending of his former Historie, at the yeere forsaid, and so sould serve for stuffe and mater to anie of understanding and abilitie in that kinde of exercise, that would apply themselves to make an Historie, even to the day of his death. But, forasmuche as the said scrolls are so intacked and mixed together, that if they sould come to anie hands not used nor accustomed with the same, as I have beene, sould altogether lose and perish; and seing also, that I am not able, upon my owne costs and expences, to apply myself, and spend my time to putt them in order, which would consume a very long time, muche lesse am I able to write them, and putt them in register, as they require to be, without your Wisdoms make some provisioun for the same: Wherefore, I most humblie requeist your Wisdoms, that I may have some reasonable pensioun appointed to me by your Wisdoms' discretion, that thereby I may be more able to awaite and attend upon the samine, least that these things done by that servant of God, who was deere to you all, sould perish and decay, which they sall doe indeed, if they be not putt in register, which I would doe willinglie, if your Wisdoms will provide, as said is: And your Wisdoms' answere," etc.

THE CONTINUATION OF MR KNOX HIS HISTORIE ALLOWED.

By this supplication may evidentlie appeare how untrue it is that is alledged by Mr Spottiswood, Bishop of Sanct Andrewes, that the Chronicle or Historie extant, partlie in writt, and partlie in print, to the middest of the 1564 yeere of God, was not penned by Mr Knox; where as, not onlie the stile and mater, but also his owne privat letters, and this testimonie of his owne servant, doe prove the contrarie; and that he was purposed to continue the same, may appeare by the forsaid supplication, and his scrolls, a part wherof are vitt extant in men's hands, and by letters which past betuixt him and Alexander Hay, for intelligences and materialls to furnish his Historie. The Assemblie appointed some learned men to assist the said Richard to putt the said scrolls and papers in good forme; and allowed to him fourtie punds, to be payed by the collectors of Lothiane, Angus, the West, Galloway, and Murray, of the crop of the yeere 1572, that he might the more easilie wait upon that worke.

ACTS.

Tuiching my lord regent's Grace's desire, craving some learned men of the ministrie to be made Senators of the Colledge of Justice, the Assemblie having at lenth reasouned, whether a minister be able to discharge himself of both vocations, it was concluded by votes that none are able, nor apt to beare the saids two charges: And, therefore, the Assemblie inhibited anie, occupying the calling of the ministrie, to take upon him to be a Senator in the Colledge of Justice, Mr Robert Pont onlie excepted, who is alreadie placed with advice and consent of the kirk.

Becaus sindrie maters were left undone, which might be exped and dispatched, and sindrie maters unresolved, through the untymous comming or departing of superintendents and commissioners to plant kirks, it was ordeanned, that all bishops, superintendents, and commissioners to plant kirks, present themselves in everie Generall Assemblie heerafter, the first day before noone, and remaine till the end of the same, under the paine of losing the halfe of their stipend for a yeere, and to serve, notthelesse of the want of the said portioun.

It was ordeaned, that no collection for the poore be made in time of ministratioun of the Lord's Table, or in time of sermons heerafter, within kirks, but onlie at kirk doores.

It was ordeanned, that all ministers, and others who have receaved benefices since the reformation, make residence at the kirks where their benefice lyeth, and use their office, according to the tenour of their admissioun. And if anie be found to doe the contrarie, that they be called to particular dyetts, before the superintendents or commissioners of the provinces where these benefices ly, to whom the Assemblie giveth power to depose the saids persons in their visitatiouns, for non-residence. And what everie one of the said superintendents or commissioners happin to doe in the premisses, to report the samine to the nixt Assemblie.

The Assemblie ordeanned everie superintendent and commissioner for planting of kirks to appoint ministers, exhorters, and readers to moe kirks than one, according to the necessitie of the congregations, and raritie of ministers, as the superintendents and commissioners forsaid sall thinke meete and convenient, as they will answere to the complaints of the congregations which heerafter sall have just caus to compleane to the Assemblie.

THE ARTICLES OF THE SYNOD OF LOTHIAN RATIFIED.

The brethrein appointed to decide questiouns, and heare complaints, reported their answers and decisiouns. Certan heeds and articles were presented by the Superintendent of Lothiane, and ministers within his jurisdictioun, penned and subscrived by them, and their synodall conventioun holdin at Edinburgh the 6th day of October, presented by the said brethrein, were approved and ratifeid by the Assemblie. The tenour followeth:—

"Imprimis, The brethrein of the forsaid conventioun crave, that the copie of the Acts of the Generall Assemblie be givin to everie exercise, to the end that everie minister may have knowledge what order to observe in their proceedings: for it is most certan that, through ignorance of the forsaid acts, manie faults are committed which otherwise would not be done.

"Secundlie, It is craved by the brethrein, that such maters as fall out betuixt the synodall conventiouns and Generall Assembleis be headed and noted to everie exercise twentie dayes before the Generall Assemblie, that the brethrein may be rypelie advised with the samine; wherethrough manie things may be ended, which, through laike of advisement, suffer delay from Assemblie to Assemblie. At the which time it is craved, that the brethrein have their places in voting, and that no brethrein be defrauded therof, that the weightie maters of the kirk be not concluded by a few, as often times they are, without knowledge or consent of the brethrein.

"Thirdly, That suche maters as are referred from the Generall Assemblie to the particular be penned by the superintendent's clerk, and faithfullie reported to the Generall Assemblie by the said superintendent.

"Fourthlie, That the Generall Assemblie may be frequented with the nobilitie and barons, als weill as ministers, that the face of the Assemblie may be had in reverence, as in former times.

"Fyftlie, It is required, that the whole rents, als weill of victualls as of money, within the collectorie of Lothiane, be made knowne to all the brethrein within these bounds; what is receaved therof, and how it is dispouned. And for this purpose, that the brethrein of all parts be chosin at the synodall conventioun, to heare the collector's compts, als weill of the rests of the former collectour, as also since his owne entrie. Also, that the injunctions given to the collector may be read everie synodall convention, and triell tane how they are obeyed; but speciallie concerning the assignation of victualls to ministers, upon the kirk's processe, and that the collector, according to the libertie granted to everie synodall conventioun, may be alone discharged.

- "Sixtlie, That the collector's officers charge for repairing of kirks.
- "Seventhlie, That all ministers may have assignatioun of their stipends.
- "Eightlie, That the extracts of the superintendent's office, registred in the Booke of Discipline, may be givin to the minister of everie province, to the end that the superintendents may be tried thereby; and that, as they are found diligent, to be continued or changed.
- "Nyntlie, That the procurators of the kirk may be examined, Why they are so slack and negligent in the kirk maters?
- "Tenthlie, That suche ministers as have not wherewith to buy bookes, may have bookes loosed to them by the collector; and to allow the prices therof in their stipends."

QUESTIONS DECIDED.

Questions decided. 1. It is thought reasonable and expedient, that bishops, superintendents, and commissioners, obteane and purchase generall letters, to command all men to frequent preaching and prayers, according to the order receaved in their congregations; and to charge the magistrat to putt the acts, als weill granted by parliament, as freelie condescended upon with uniforme consent of the congregatioun, which concerne the same, in executioun.

- 2. The order to be takin for relapse in adulterie, after repentance, referred to the act of parliament.
- 3. If a man stay out of the countrie seven yeeres, marie another woman, and his first wife marie in his absence, both are adulterers, unlesse the sentence of divorce hath beene pronounced by the judge.
- 4. Whether that the names of excommunicats sould be published in all the reformed kirks of the province or diocie where the xcommunicat dwelleth, that none haunt their companie through retended ignorance, referred to the acts alreadie made.

- 5. It is nather agreeable to the Word of God, nor to the practise of the primitive kirk, that the administration of the Word and Saraments, and ministration of criminal and civil justice, be so concurred that one person beare both the charges.
- 6. If the minister and reader both, making residence at one kirk, ave but one gleebe, the superintendent sall tak order, that the minister be eased in speciall.

PAPISTS TO BE URGED TO SUBSCRIVE.

It is ordeaned, that all and sindrie superintendents and commisioners for planting of kirks proceed summarlie to excommunicaioun against all Papists within their provinces; and that within ight dayes after, they be admonished to joyne themselves to the reigioun presentlie established within this realme, by hearing of the Word, and partaking of the sacraments; subscrive, and give their eath, conforme to the acts of parliament, and acts agreed upon bewixt my lord regent's Grace, the Secreit Counsell, and the Assemolie.

THE CASTELL OF EDINBURGH RANDERED.

The whole countrie being brought under obedience, the captane of the castell, William Matlane of Lethington, and his brother Mr Johne, Pryour of Coldinghame, the Lord Hume, Sir Robert Melville, the Laird of Restalrig, Pittadrow, stand out. The regent appointed Captan Crawfurd, and Captan Hume, to keepe the crenches. Becaus the captan shott often times great ordinance down the street, the regent caused make three traverses, one neere to the tolbuith, two above, neerer to the castell, of fail, divvet, and midding, of suche height as tooke away the sight of the street from the castle, and so thick as could not be pierced by cannon. Captan Mitchell was layed with his band at Sanct Cuthbert's kirk, to stoppe the passage to St Margaret's well, which he made un profitable within few dayes, partlie by povsonning of it, partlie by invading these who came out of the castell. Since the ab stinence expired, there were not above six persons hurt in the trenches; about als manie above the tolbuith. One night, as we have alreadie said, the captan saillied furth, when it was a great wind; skirmished with the regent's souldiours, till he found means to sett some houses on fire. The Castellans continuing in their purpose, the regent procured from the Queen of England assistance to lay siege to the castell. Sir William Drurie, Marishall of Berwick, came with a power of 1500 men to Leith, and joyned with the Scottish nobilitie. The castell was summouned upon the 25th of Aprile. The Laird of Grange was required to rander the castell, with the whole ordinance, artillerie, munitions. jewells, houshold stuffe, and suche other implements within the same, to the said marishall, and to the use of the king, and his regent in his name. If he obeyed, then promised the marishall. in her Majestie's name, that her Highnesse sould travell with the regent, counsell, and nobilitie present, for the safetie of their lives who were within: if he continued in his obstinacie, abiding the cannon, then willed him to look for no farther favour. Grange read the letter of summons, but denyed to surrender the castell: wherupon the pyoners were commanded, with expedition, to cast trenches, and erect mounts, to plant artillerie therupon against the castell. There were five mounts erected about the castell. The first mount or fortresse was allotted to the regent, and had the name of the King's Mount; the secund to Sir William Drurie; the thrid to Sir George Carie; the fourth to Sir Henrie Leis; the fyft to Thomas Sutton, Maister of the Ordinance. Sindrie of the pyoners and souldiours were hurt, some slaine before the trenches and mounts were brought to perfectioun, with shott out of the castell. Upon the 19th day of May beganne the extreme heate of the batterie of the castell. There were threttie shott of cannon discharged against the castell, speciallie against David's Tower, till the 21st day of May. Then the batterie beganne on each side of the castell, from trenches and mounts. Diverse were hurt on both sides. oon the 26th of May, David's Towre was battered down, the ns wherof dammed the passage within the utter gate, the bulrk also, on that part which is over against the gate, and Wale Towre: Captan Crawfurd and Captan Hume scaled the blockus: but it could not annoy them muche within the castell. But ey were skant of water by the losse of the well without, before e batterie beganne. The wells within were filled with stones and me of the ruines. Beside this, there fell a discord betwixt the ptan and the souldiours. He had committed to his wife the arge of the vivers, becaus that she did beare with his unlawful easures. She, being naturallie needie, skanted the victualls, which ere skant eneugh alreadie. These within the castell demanded, a drumme, parlee, which was granted the 28th of May. The aird of Pittadrow was led down by a cord from the castell over e wall, and after him the Laird of Grange, and Robert Melvill, talk with Sir William Drurie and his associats. The captan ked life, lands, honours, bag and baggage, to himself and all that ere with him. It was refused, wherupon he returneth. The reent findeth meanes to lett the souldiours understand that they sall eve libertie to come out with bag and baggage, and their lives sall spaired; wherupon the souldiours shew themselves unwilling to ndergoe anie more paines. So the captan was constrained to surnder the castell upon the 28th or 29th, without anie conditioun, at simplie to come in the Queene of England's will. Her will as, to committ all to the will and wisdome of the regent.

THE PRISONERS DELIVERED AND COMMITTED.

Upon the 16th day of June, Sir William Drurie departed toards Berwick. The prisoners following were delivered by him to be regent, in presence of the English and Scots, viz., Sir William irkaldie, Laird of Grange, the Lord Hume, Lethington, Pittacow, the Countesse of Argile, the Ladie Lethington, the Ladie range, and others, to the number of 164 men, 34 weomen, and tenne boyes. The privat souldiours, and others of meaner sor were suffered to depart with bag and baggage, according to promise. Some citicens of Edinburgh, and the Bishop of Dunkelder were committed to the custodie of some souldiours in the Abbet to whose custodie the regent also committed the Pryour of Coldinghame, Grange, Robert Melvill, and the rest, except the Lor Hume, who was committed to waird in the castell. The Pryou of Coldinghame was after committed to waird in Tantallan, an Robert Melvill to Lethington, under the custodie of David Hum of Fishick, then captan.

THE EXECUTION OF THE LAIRD OF GRANGE.

The Laird of Grange, and his brother, Mr James Kirkaldi James Mosman, and one called Cockie, who had coined fals money in the castell, was brought from the Abbey upon carts, an drawin backward. Mr David Lindsay, Minister of Leith, can to visite Grange before his executioun. He employed him to go to the Erle of Morton, and to offer to him his whole heritage, the band of manreid of all his freinds, and to pass off the countrie exile during his will. Mr David doeth as he is directed. The r gent, after he had consulted with the Commendatare of Dumfern line, and the Clerk of Register, answered, the people could not ! satisfied, nor the caus cleered nor crowned, but by the exemple punishment of that man. Mr David returned with this answer "O then," sayeth he, "Mr David, for our old freindship, and for Christ's sake, leave me not." When he saw the scaffold prepare at the Croce, the day faire, and the sunne shyning cleere, h countenance was changed. Mr David asked, what he was doing "Faith, Mr David," sayeth he, "I perceave weill now that I Knox was the true servant of God, and his threatnings to be a complished." He desired Mr David to repeate Mr Knox h words, which he did, adding, that Mr Knox told him that he was earnest with God for him; was sorie for that which sould befa his bodie, for the love he bare to him, but was assured there w nercie for his soule. He desired him vitt againe to repeate these yords, which he did, whereby he was muche comforted and enouraged, and desired Mr David to accompanie him to the scafold. He said to him, "I hope in God, that after men sall thinke am past and gone, I sall give you a tokin of the assurance of that nercie to my soule, according to the speeche of that man of God." so about foure houres, the sunne being west, about the north-west orner of the steeple, he was thrust off the ledder. As he was anging, his face was sett toward the east; but within a prettie pace, turned about to the west, against the sunne, and so renained; at which time Mr David marked him, when all supposed e was dead, to lift up his hands, which were bound before him, nd to lay them down againe softlie; which moved him with exlamatioun to glorifie God before all the people. He and Mosnan were hanged at one time, and therafter takin doun, and their neads stricken off, and sett upon the highest pricks in the castell. The other coiner of false money, called Cockie, and Mr James Kirkaldie, were hanged the same day, but after them.

William Matlane of Lethington poysoned himself, as was reported, nd ended his dayes the 9th of Julie, in Leith. He lay so long inburied, that the vermine came from his corps, creeping out under he doore of the hous where he was lying. This man was of a rare vitt, but sett upon wrong courses, which were contrived and folowed out with falshood. He could conforme himself to the times. and therefore was compared by one, who was not ignorant of his courses, to the chamæleon. A discourse went from hand to hand, before the siege of the castell, intituled, The Chamæleon, wherin all is wyles and tricks were described, a great part wherof we have remembered in due place, in the preceeding historie. Onlie this nuche shortlie: In this description it is said, that at the first, when re entered in court, he addressed himself to James, after Erle of Murrey, and Gilbert, then Erle of Cassils. Through their good eport, and his owne fained behaviour, he was putt in credite with the queene regent. When she sent him to France, he did his owne curne; deceaved the queene and the Cardinall of Lorane. Within short time after, by moven of suche as gave him credit, he crap in credite again by another doore, and under another colour. Yitt, becaus his new fashioun could have no place, in respect of the old suspicioun, he convoyed himself to Leith, and covered himself with the cloke of religioun, so long as it could serve; yitt never so closse, but he keeped a refuge to some sanctuarie of the Papists, if the court had changed; as to the Bishops of Sanct Andrewes and Glasgow, and others divers, whose causes he mainteaned; and, therefore, Doctor Cranstoun imparted to him largelie of the spoile of Sanct Salvator's colledge, and was mainteaned by him. Before the queene's arrivall, he was contrare to the queene in all her actiouns, and inclinned to her deprivatioun: after her arrivall he applyeth himself to her, and the Erle of Murrey. But at lenth, he alone was heard in secreit maters, and the erle was shaikin off, for the erle was not weill pleased with manie matches attempted by the queene; as with the Prince of Spaine, the Emperor's brother, the Duke of Anjou. But he changed as he saw the queen change, and followed her appetite. When the queene went to the north, and Huntlie sould have slaine the Erle of Murrey by treasoun, he alone could feare no danger, and would never believe that the Erle of Huntlie would take suche interprises in hand; vitt was he one of the readiest to gnaw the bones of the dead, to spoile the quicke, and to make his profite at this mercat. When he went to England after this, he made both Papists and Protestants believe he laboured for them. He practised the mariage of the queene upon Henrie Lord Darly. When the Erle of Murrey, for his plainnesse and austeritie, was in a maner cast out of court, he thought to have gottin the credite of all weightie effaires. But Seigneur Davie was preferred before him. Finding himself in a worse case than he looked for, when the queene sought to mak some alteratioun in religioun, and some cheefe lords went out of the countrie, vitt he held the small grip he had in court He was an instrument to cut off Seigneur Davie. After that, he fell from the king, and nourished the dissensioun betuixt him and the queene. When the Erle Bothwell came in credite, he flattered him, and consented to the murther of the king. After the death of the king, the Erle Bothwell sought his death, knowing his inconstancie and falshood, and desirous to be ridde of suche a witnesse. Then he had no other refuge, but to lurke about the Erle of Morton's wings, At the parliament holdin after the taking of the queene, he, with some others, partakers of the murther, would have had her putt to leath. When that purpose wrought not, he solicited some privat nen to hang her in her owne bed, with her belt, that he, and his partners in the murther, might be out of feare of suche a witnesse. When this counsell was not heard, then he turned himself to flatter the queene, and sent to Lochlevin the apologue of the Ivoun deivered by the mowse out of the snare. Some say, in writt, for he perceaved he could not greatlie profite under the Erle of Murrey is government, therefore he sought his overthrow, and her resticutioun. He maketh a faction among the counsellers and partakers of the king's murther, of men covetous of geare; corrupted my Lord of Murrey's freinds and servants; travelled with Grange, the captan of the Castell. The regent was advertised diverse times of his practises, but loathe was he to mistrust anie whom he had takin in reindship.

THE TWENTIE-SEVENTH GENERALL ASSEMBLIE.

The Generall Assemblie conveened at Edinburgh the 6th day of August. Mr Alexander Arbuthnet was chosin Moderator. It was voted that the place of this Assemblie sould be als sufficient as if it were holdin in Dundie.

TRIELL OF BISHOPS, SUPERINTENDENTS, ETC.

In the triell of bishops, superintendents, and commissioners, sinline complaints were made upon Mr Johne Dowglas, Bishop of Sanct Andrewes, for giving collatioun of a benefice givin before to minister, to another suspected of Poprie; for suffering the exervise of prophecie in Sanct Andrewes to decay; for admitting some to functioun, who were unable, or untried. His defences were naughtie and frivolous.

Mr James Paton, Bishop of Dunkelden, was delated for receaving the name, and not exercing the office, of a bishop within his bounds: for not proceeding against Papists, and cheefelie, against the Erle of Atholl, and diverse others within his bounds; for simoniacall pactioun betuixt him and the Erle of Argile, tuiching the rents of the bishoprick, and suspicioun of perjurie in accepting the said bishoprick, becaus he giveth acquittances, and the erle receaveth the silver of the said bishoprick; for voting in parliament anent the act of divorcement latelie made in prejudice of the Assemblic: for suspending their judgement in that mater, till further advisement, according to the act of the last Assemblie. The act was made in the parliament holdin the last of Aprile. The substance of the act is, that whatsoever persons joyned in lawfull matrimonic divert from other's companie, without a reasonable caus alledged or deduced before a judge, and remaine in their malicious obstinacie by the space of foure yeeres, and in the meane time refuse al privie admonitiouns for due adherence, that then, the husband of the wife sall call and persue the obstinat persoun, offender, before the judge ordinar, for adherence. And incace no sufficient caus be alledged against adherence, but that the sentence proceed agains the offender, the husband or the wife sall meane themselves to the Lords of Sessioun, and sall obteane letters in the foure formes, con forme to the sentence of adherence. If the offender contemne the charge, and be therefore denounced rebell, and putt to the horne then the husband or wife sall require the lawfull archbishop, bishop or superintendent of the countrie where the offender remaineth, to direct privie admonitiouns to the said offender, admonishing him o her, as before, for adherence. Which admonitiouns if he or sh contemne, the archbishop, bishop, or superintendent, sall direc charges to the minister of that parish where the offender remaineth or, incace there be no minister there, or that the minister will no execute, to the minister of the nixt adjacent kirk, who sall proceed against the said offender with publict admonitiouns; and if they be contemned, to the sentence of excommunication; which sentence being once pronounced, the malicious and obstinat defectioun of the partie, offender, sall be a sufficient caus of divorce; and the said partie, offender, sall type and lose their tocher, et donationes propter nuptias.

Mr Robert Pont, Commissioner of Murrey, was delated for non-residence in Murrey; for not visiting kirks these two yeeres bygane, except Innernesse, Elgine, and Forresse; for not assigning manses and gleebes, according to the act of parliament. He alledged, he had no leasure, becaus it behoved him to returne before the last of June.

Mr George Hay, Commissioner of Aberdeen, was compleaned upon for sindrie things, and was ordeaned to give his answeres in writt, after noone.

THE BISHOP OF GALLOWAY'S CENSURE.

Alexander Bishop of Galloway was summouned by Mr Johne Row, Commissioner for Galloway, to compeere before this Assemblie. Certan heeds of accusatioun were givin in against him by the Superintendent of Lothiane, the kirks of Edinburgh, Halyrudhous, and the West Kirk, as followeth:—

"Item, in the first: We the said superintendent, minister, and parochiners of the said kirks, doe compleane, that the said Mr Alexander intruded himself in the office of the ministrie within the said burgh of Edinburgh, where he allured, drew, and perswaded a great part of the saids parochiners in a companie, thereby confounding all good order; wherethrough their owne lawfull ministers were rejected. Secundlie, The said Mr Alexander taught the people most perverse and ungodlie doctrine; but speciallie in perswading, intising, and exhorting to rebell against our soverane lord, and to joyne with manifest rebels and conjured enemeis. Thridlie, The said Mr Alexander, contrare to the act of the Generall Assemblie made for the prayer of our soverane lord, etc.,—most maliciouslie transgressed the said ordinance, not onlie refusing to doe the same, but also avowing in his prayer another authoritie, and accusing and condemning all true ministers that did not the like that he did. Fourthlie, The said Mr Alexander being inhibited in speciall, by an act of the Generall Assemblie, to have anie intromissioun with the parochiners of Halyrudhous, he hath, notwithstanding, compelled them to joyne with his pretended kirk, in receaving the sacrament then abused by him within Edinburgh; causing his pretended bailiffes, by the assistance of the men of warre remaining within the said toun for the time, to oppresse and compell the said poore people to give him obedience. Fyftlie, The said Mr Alexander being sworne by his solemne oath, for due obedience to our soverane lord, and his Grace's regent and authoritie, came in the contrare therof, and violated and brake his said former oath, but speciallie sitting in a pretended parliament, for dispossessing of our said soverane lord of his royall crowne and authoritie. Sixtlie, The said Mr Alexander, being one of the pretended Privie Counsell, after the horrible slaughter of Matthew Erle of Lennox, regent to our soverane lord, of good memorie, gave thanks for the same, and others siclyke, in pulpit openlie to God; and exhorted the people to doe the same, saving, it was God's most just judgement that fell upon him; and as God then beganne to execute his most just judgement upon him, he would not faile to execute the same upon the rest; compairing often times our said soverane lord his regents and true lieges to Pharaoh, and wicked Absolom, and himself to Moses and David, whom God would defend. Last, By reasoun that the haynous faulis of the said Mr Alexander have beene so notoriouslie knowne to all men, not onlie suche as have beene committed before the Reformatioun, but also suche as have beene committed diverse times since, to the great and heavie slaunder of God's true Word and professors therof; wherethrough manie of the saids professors, and others our soverane lord's true and obedient subjects, some time by him perverted, vitt still remaine in their wicked conceaved errour, and can skarse be perswaded in the contrare, except the said Mr Alexander be caused confesse his errour publictlie, in all places where he hath offended; but speciallie in all the forsaid kirks."

"Brethrein, I am verie loath, as God knoweth, to come in reasonning with your Wisdoms, concerning this complaint givin in against me by the Superintendent of Lothian and kirks of Edinburgh, Halyrudhous, and Sanct Cuthbert. Yitt, in respect of the highnesse and weightinesse of the caus that dependeth therupon, I am constrained, with your Wisdoms' pardon, to answere thereto; which is, the priviledge and benefite of the godlie Act of Pacificatioun made by the procurement of the queen's Majestie of England, with consent of my lord regent's Grace, the whole nobilitie and estats of this realme, by vertue of which act my lord duke, his freinds, my Lord Huntlie, I, and our freinds, servants, and dependers, are made * *1 from all transgressiouns, crimes, offences, done by us, or anie of us, during the time of the troubles; to the which act the reformed bishops, abbots, and pryours, having vote in parliament, consented in name of the kirk. So, my lord regent's Grace for the criminall, and your Wisdoms for the spirituall part, have no place to call us, or anie of us, for anie offence during the said time, for the commoun caus, which was, the mainteaning of another authoritie, or anie thing that dependeth therupon. And it is of veritie, that the complaints givin in upon me depend therupon. In speciall, the greatest offence that can be layed to my charge is onlie the preaching of the Word, which I did at command of the other authoritie, and by electioun and admissioun of suche as professed the same. Therefore, your Wisdoms can be no competent judges to us, or anie of us, conteaned in the forsaid Act of Pacificatioun; for, as we were altogether disobedient at that time to the king's authoritie and kirk, tuiching that point allanerlie, in defending another authoritie, so are we, by this Act of Pacificatioun, become obedient subjects to the king and kirk, in all things except the offences forsaids, which are putt in oblivioun by consent of the three estats, as if they had never beene committed. Therefore we, nor anie of us, ought nor sould be troubled anie wise, for anie offence done during that time, as said is. In respect of the premisses, I humblie beseeke your Wisdoms to have regard to our estat, conditioun, and service done by my lord duke, his hous, ours of Huntlie, and dependers, for mainteaning of God's Word, and professours therof; and how we have not spaired, in tymes bygane, our lives and heritages in defence of the same; and that I was the first that publictlie preached Christ, in face of the authoritie: that this our defectioun, so honourablie and lovinglie remitted and putt in oblivioun, be no wise brought in disputatioun againe, to prejudge the said Act of Pacificatioun, ratified and approved in parliament by consent of the kirk, as said is. And if there be anie other offence done by us than is conteaned in the said act, that may anie wise be slaunderous to the kirk, before the 15th day of Junie, anno 1567 yeeres, untill the 24th of Februar 1572,1 we sall answere thereto, as becometh members of the reformed kirk, and true professours of the blessed Evangell. Nather can your Wisdoms have farther jurisdictioun over me, nor over the rest of the communicants conteaned in the said Act of Pacificatioun, for the causes forsaids. Alwise, offers me to your Wisdoms, all things bygane being putt in oblivion according to the said act, to serve in my owne jurisdictioun, or to desist, as your Wisdoms pleaseth to appoint me."

Mr James Balfour, minister of Guthrie, was ordeanned to passe to the regent's Grace, the counsell, and commissioners of the Assemblie who were with his Grace, to shew to him these answeres; to crave his advice tuiching the alledged immunitie and incompetencie. Mr James returning, reported, that his Grace was most willing to observe the heeds of the pacificatioun, not prejudging the priviledge of the kirk; and that he willed, that all notorious open slaunder sould be satisfied, according to the discipline of the kirk.

Mr Alexander Gordoun being summoned and often called upon, compeered not; was again summouned with certificatioun, and would not compeere. Wherupon, and for offences conteaned in the former accusatioun not denved, it was concluded, that he sould make publict repentance in sacke-cloth, three severall Lord's dayes; one in the kirk of Edinburgh, another in Halvrudhous, the thrid in the Queen's Colledge. And for this purpose, two ministers were directed to him, to charge him in name of the Assemblie to underly and performe the said injunctions; and to beginne the Lord's day nixt to come in the kirk of Edinburgh, thereafter in the other two kirks successive, under the paine of excommunicatioun. Becaus, as it seemeth, he could not be personallie apprehended, the Assemblie command Mr Roger Gordon, minister of Quhitterne, to warne him in the cathedral kirk of Quhitterne, upon a Lord's day, in time of divine service, to resort to the saids kirks, and to obey the forsaid injunctions, under the paine of excommunicatioun; with certificatioun, that if he obey not, the Assemblie commandeth the minister of Edinburgh or Halvrudhous to proceed to excommunicatioun against him, and to publish the same at the other two kirks, and in other kirks, as sall be thought expedient. The bishop was injoyned to obey betwixt and the 20th day of September, and Mr Roger to send this ordinance, duelie executed, before the said 20th day of September, to the kirk of Edinburgh, as he would be answerable to the Generall Assemblie.

READERS CENSURED.

George Boyd, reader at Dalry, was injoyned to make his publict repentance upon two severall Lord's dayes, becaus, being discharged from all ministratioun of the Lord's Supper, had not the lesse ministred the same, after his maner, at Kilburnie, the last Easter. It was ordeanned, that this act sall strike upon all readers that sall be found guiltie of the same crime.

Alexander Hay, Clerk to the Secreit Counsell, presented certan heeds propouned by my Lord Regent's Grace to the Assemblie, the tenour wherof followeth:—

"My lord regent's Grace, even as he accepted on him the regiment, beganne to espie and consider the corruptions and abuses entered in the order of the collectorie, and to remember the sindrie sutes made by the ministers of the kirk, in diverse Assemblies, to have certane assignatiouns made unto them of their livings and stipends, in places most ewest and commodious to their residence. And herewith all, being carefull how the articles accorded upon at Leith sould tak effect, viz., that the worthie and qualified ministers and preachers might be planted and distributed throughout the whole realme, and the readers speciallie appointed at everie severall kirk where convenientlie it might be, his Grace sensyne, at sindrie dyetts travelled with the kirk and their commissioners, for perfectioun of this so godlie and necessar a purpose; and by diligent labours, the names and numbers of the parish kirks are collected, and the ministers and preachers present distributed among them, whill it sall be God's good pleasure to raise up moe worthie and qualified persons, zealous and willing to enter in that functioun, who, from time to time, sall, God willing, be sufficientlie placed and provided of competent livings.

"The stipends, by commoun consent, are modified, and certan assignations to be made for payment of the same, out of the rents of the thrids of the benefices; commoun kirks or benefices newlie provided since the king's coronatioun, beginning the ordinar payment of the fruits now growing on the ground.

"The minister sall alwise be first provided: and to that effect, where need sall be, the assumptions of the thrids of prelaceis, and other great benefices altered, and the assignation of the minister's and reader's stipends off the first and readiest dueteis of the kirk and parish where they serve, out of the hands of the taxmen, or suche of the parochiners as they themselves sall choose, to be debtors unto them.

"And incace anie thing now assigned be before dispouned, or provided in pensioun, portioun, or otherwise, wherethrough the payment may appeare uncertane and doubtfull, they sall have another sure and speciall assignation out of some other part of the thrid of that benefice, or otherwise, in some part where it may be most commodiouslie had to their contentment, and letters granted for executioun heerof, in due forme, as effeires.

"Item, My lord regent's Grace mindeth, with all convenient expeditioun, that qualified persons sall be promoved to the bishopricks now vacand, the delay wherof hath not been in his Grace's owne default, but by reasoun some interesses were givin to these livings, in favours of certan noblemen, before his acceptatioun of the regiment. Yitt his Grace, perswaded that qualified persons sall speciallie be presented; and incace of failyie, will not faile without the others' consent to present.

"And, in the meanetime, it was contented, that suche superintendents and commissioners as the kirk sall be content with, or sall appoint, continue in their charges as before, where bishops are not placed; and have their stipends therefore, whill the bishops be admitted to their owne places and offices which sall not be retarded in his default.

"And forsameekle as, since the reformatioun of religioun in this realme, sindrie commoun kirks and commoun lands, and sindrie benefices, are sett by the prince in few and tacks, farre within the just availl and rent which they were worth, and gave before the said reformation, or, ellis, in a pretended maner are freelie givin by the prince in pensioun or gift, upon the inopportune sute of some persons, without consideration of anie ground or right how the same might be done, no law or act of parliament yitt passing, whereby the power of setting, fewing, and dispositioun of the saids commoun kirks, commoun lands, or thrids, were annexed to the crowne, or declared to perteane to the prince; it being good reason that the ministers of the kirk sould be susteaned upon the rents therof, and that the said commoun lands sould be applyed to the helpe of schooles, and otherwise ad pios usus: Therefore, ordeans summons to be libelled, at the instance of the king's Majestie's advocat, and of the procurators of the kirk, for their interesse therof, for reduction of the said fewes, tacks, and dispositiouns, wherethrough the rents of the saids commouns and thrids may be godlie and rightlie applyed, as effeirs.

"It is resolved, that the executions of the sentence of excommunication against persons excommunicated, after the space of fourtie dayes past, shall be presented to my Lord Treasurer, or his clerk, who therupon sall raise letters by deliverance of the Lords of Sessioun, to charge the persons excommunicated to satisfie the kirk, and obteane themselves absolved, under the paine of rebellioun. And incace they passe to the horne, to caus their escheats be tane up, and also to raise and cause execute letters of captioun against them: and that to be done at the king's Majestie's charges.

"Tuiching the escheats of excommunicated persons, where the wives and childrein are faithfull, the law alreadie made is thought good, and worthie to be executed; and all dispensatiouns dangerous, and tending to the increase of contempt and disobedience.

"Tuiching the pecuniall penaltie to be raised on the recepters of the excommunicat, becaus as yitt there is no expresse law, therefore lett an article be formed heeranent, against the nixt parliament; and in the mean time the kirk to use the discipline therof against suche offenders.

"And diligence possible sall be made, for collecting and ingathering of the rests, to the helpe of the ministers standing in doubt. And it is not thought that the uptaking of the escheats of the rebels sall prejudge them.

"The order of upholding of schooles in burgh and to landward would be declared in a more speciall article.

"It is thought meete the multitude of heriticall bookes brought in this countrie sall be burnt, and that proclamation be sett out in strait maner, that none bring home heriticall bookes, nor preasse to sell them, whill they be visited in time comming. And this act to be extended in large forme.

"The law tuiching the manses and gleebs is thought sufficient, if the execution of the same be duelie sought.

- "Tuiching the susteaning and upholding of cathedrall kirks, hich are parish kirks, the same must be done as it had wont to be afore, whill a new or better order be tane theranent by the parliament.
- "For punishment of persons that passe in pilgrimage to wells, tt the discipline of the kirk be used against the users of suche suerstitioun, and the civill magistrat sall also hold hand to the punhment.
- "Lett also an article be formed and givin in to the parliament, r law to be made against suche persons as make commoun buriallaces of their parish kirks, being commanded by the contrarie.
- "Tuiching the heeds and articles presented concerning the justicion of the kirk, they are found verie meet to be reasoned upon; wherunto my lord regent's Grace will appoint some of counsell to conferre with others that the kirk sall depute, to is effect; so that it wherin they agree may be confirmed in parament, and have the force of a law therafter.
- "Item, Seing the most part of the persons who were channons, conkes, or friers, within this realme, have made professioun of the religioun, it is therefore thought meete, that it be injoyned to em to passe and serve as readers, at the places where they sall appointed.
- "To appoint a day for electioun of the Bishop of Murrey.
- "To appoint a day for electioun of the Bishop of Rosse.
- "That the day be keeped for electing the Bishop of Dumane.
- "To appoint a day for electioun of the Archbishop of Glas-
- "Commissioners in all provinces where bishops are not placed.
- "A suffragan for the Bishop of Sanct Andrewes in Lothiane.
- "That everie commissioner tarie, to see the principall assignaoun and order made for payment therof, for the weill of the mistrie within his charge."

COMMISSIONS.

Commission was givin to some superintendents, ministers, barons and commissioners of burghs, to conferre with my lorde regent' Grace, and Lords of Secreit Counsell, upon suche heeds and arti cles as sall be propouned by his Grace and counsell; and to re ceave answere to the articles and heeds which were to be pro pouned by them, in name of the Assemblie, to his Grace; and t report their conference and reasoning to the Assemblie, before th dissolving therof. Some were appointed to penne the article which were to be propouned in name of the Assemblie, and the ir junctions which were to be givin to the commissioners. After that Alexander Hay had presented some articles sent from the regent Grace, and seing the Assemblie could not stay till the finall deter minatioun of suche things as are in treating betwixt my lord re gent's Grace and the Assemblie, tuiching the distributioun of min sters, their placing, and assignation to be made for sure paymen of their stipends, etc.—the Assemblie adjoyned to the forsaid con missioners other twelve ministers and superintendents; givin power to the said brethrein, or anie thritteene of the number, 1 conferre with my lord regent's Grace and Secreit Counsell, tuichin the heeds to be propouned by his Grace and counsell, and the heeds, articles, requeists, supplications, which are to be propound by them in name of the Assemblie, conforme to the instruction which are to be givin to them; and to report their proceeding to the nixt Assemblie, to be registred among the acts therof. I Robert Pont, Commissioner of Murrey, Mr Johne Row, Commi sioner of Nithisdaill and Galloway, Mr Gilbert Gardin, Minister Fordyce, Mr David Cunningham, Minister at Monkland, well appointed to putt in forme the instructions, conforme to which the forsaid commissioners were to proceed.

ACTS.

The Assemblie ordeanned all bishops, superintendents, commissioners to plant kirks, and ministers of particular kirks, to proceed a excommunication against all receavers of excommunicat persons, after due admonitiouns, the receavers be disobedient, conforme the order conteaned in the Booke of Excommunicatioun; and hosoever wittinglie receaveth and interteaneth an excommunicat, their he desist after admonition, that he underly the discipline of the kirk, by making his publict repentance, except suche as are excepted by law. And that none pretend ignorance, the Assemblie ordeaned, that all bishops, superintendents, and commissions, in their synodall conventions, tak up in roll the names of the excommunicats within their jurisdictiouns, and to bring their names the Generall Assemblie, that bishops, superintendents, and commissioners, by the ministers in their provinces, may divulgat the unine in the whole countries where the excommunicats haunt.

- 2. Tuiching the change of the situation of parish kirks, their leebs and manses, for the commoditie of the parochiners, the Asemblie giveth licence to the bishops, superintendents, and comaissioners to plant kirks, with advice and consent of the parochiners and ministrie of the countrie, to change the parish kirks, manses, and gleebs, from one place to another, for the commoditie of the parochiners, providing the change be not hurtfull to the ministrie; and that sufficient suretie be made of the lands, in manualitie and goodnesse, as they were before, to remaine with the irk for ever, with mortification therof by the king's Majestie.
- 3. The Assemblie ordeanneth all bishops, superintendents, and ommissioners for planting of kirks, to call suche persons as sall e suspected to consult with witches, before them, at their particlar visitatiouns, or otherwise; and to caus them mak publict reentance in sackcloath, upon the Lord's day, in time of preaching, nder the paine of excommunicatioun. And if they be disobedient, to proceed to excommunicatioun, due admonitiouns preceeding.

4. It is statuted and ordeanned, that all bishops, superintendents, and commissioners for planting of kirks, sall direct their letters to ministers where the persons dwell that are to be excommunicated, to admonishe accordingly. And, in cace of disobedience, to proceed to excommunicatioun, and to pronounce the sentence upon a Lord's day, in time of preaching; and that the ministers indorse the said letters, making mentioun of the days of their admonitioun, and excommunicatioun, for disobedience and report to the saids bishops, superintendents, and commissioners, according to their directioun conteaned in the said letters

QUESTIONS DECIDED.

The brethrein appointed for answering questiouns reported their answeres as followeth:—

- 1. Noblemen offending in suche crimes as deserve discipline in sackcloath, are als muche subject to the discipline of the kirk a the poorer sort.
- 2. A superintendent or commissioner may not, with advice o anie particular kirk within their jurisdictioun, dispense with the rigour of sackloath, for a pecunial summe, to be employed a pios usus; for he may not dispense with the Acts of the General Assemblie.
- 3. The Assemblie thinketh it expedient, that becaus some hav beene excommunicated without due order, that the caus and orde of processe be sighted by the bishop, superintendent, or commis sioner, before the sentence be pronounced. At this time ther were no presbytere constituted, and the sessiouns of manie particular kirks were verie weake.
- 4. The Assemblie ordeanneth, that the Acts of Parliament im posing pecuniall paines for fornicatioun and breache of the Sab both, be putt in execution. As for drunkennesse, that the drunk rds be admonished; and if they disobey, to be repelled frome he Table of the Lord. Yitt magistrats may inflict a pecuniall aine for the same, whill order be takin in parliament, howbeit the assemblie may not.

5. Ministers may not with safe conscience admitt to the Table of the Lord, and other benefites of the kirk, these who in the late roubles oppouned themselves against the lawfull authoritie, and usteaned the action of them who troubled the estat both of kirk and commounweale, till they submitt themselves to the discipline of the kirk; and that the minister that wittinglie and willinglie dmitteth anie of them be punished by his ordinar, according to the qualitie of the fault, and place where he serveth.

M.D.LXXIV.

MR J. DAVIDSONE SUMMOUNED FOR A BOOKE.

The regent held a justice air in Hadinton, at what time Mr ohne Davidsone, a regent in Sanct Leonard's Colledge at Sanct indrewes, was summouned before the regent and the counsell, to nswere for a booke sett furth by him in maner of dialogue bewixt a clerk and a courteour, tuiching the appointing of one inister to foure kirks; for the regent and counsell had made an ct before, to cast so manie kirks in the hand of one preacher, that me king's revenues, by the superplus of the thrids, might be the reater. Mr Johne was wairded in Clerkinton, and therafter rought to Halyrudhous, before the regent and counsell. But fter earnest intercessioun, he was suffered to goe to Sanct Leoard's till the nixt Generall Assemblie. The Universitie of Sanct Indrewes in the meane time conveened, becaus one of their memers was troubled; but agreed not tuiching the mater itself, beaus the schooles were divided at that time in factiouns. Sanct Leonard's Colledge, and Mr Robert Hammiltoun, minister of the oun, approved it, howbeit afterward, to please the regent, he pronised to reasoun in the contrarie. Mr Johne Rutherfurde wrote a confutatioun, yitt in the end of the confutatioun allowed it, a yee sall heare.

THE COINE ABASED.

Upon the 25th of Februar there was a conventioun holdin a Edinburgh, at which the hardheids wer abased from three half penneis to a pennie, and placks from four penneis to two, whic procured great invy and hatred of the commouns against the Erl of Morton, for the people's hands wer full of that money.

THE TWENTY-EIGHT GENERALL ASSEMBLIE.

The Generall Assemblie conveened in the Neather Tolbuith Edinburgh the 6th day of Marche. In the Assemblie preceeding there were onlie two bishops, Sanct Andrewes and Dunkelder But since that time, their number increassed; and there were, be side the other two present at this Assemblie, Glasgow, Murrey and Cathnesse. George Bishop of Murrey was a whole winter mummilling upon his papers, and had not his sermoun per cœu when all was done. Mr James Boyd was induced by the Lor Boyd to accept the bishoprick of Glasgow, the gift wherof, th said lord being familiar with the Erle of Morton, had purchasse for his commoditie. But within a yeere or two, when he foun not his bishop plyable to his intentions, he caused his sonne, the Master of Boyd, seaze upon the Castell of Glasgow, and gathe up the rents of the bishoprick, to interteene the same, becaus the Tulchan bishop caused not the kow give milk eneugh to my lore Mr James Patoun, Bishop of Dunkelden, gave acquittances, bu the Erle of Argile receaved the money. May we not cleerlie see bishops were not sett up for the weale of the kirk, but for th commoditie of the noblemen? They had said in plaine terms they behoved to leave the kirk, if they gott not the kirk rents So they fought never against the Papists, but against the titular of the tithes and rents of the kirk. If Christ, if religioun, if the inistrie sall reclame the tithes and kirk rents, they sall be to tem Antichrists, Papists, Jesuits. At this Assemblie, Mr Anrew Hay, Minister of Renfrew, and Commissioner of Cliddistail, was chosin Moderator.

TRIELL OF BISHOPS, SUPERINTENDENTS, ETC.

In the triell of bishops, superintendents, and commissioners, the essemblie injoyned the Bishop of Sanct Andrewes to reforme the ollatioun givin to Robert Dowglas, a simple reader, of the permage of Morvington, according to the lawes alreadie made tuiching personages. Item, To produce the processe, wherin he ablived Mr Magnus Halcro, who was excommunicated for adulterie Orkney. Being delated for reteaning the Rectorie of the Universitie, and Provestrie of the New Colledge, he answered, he was entent to dimitt the one and the other, how soone my lord resent's Grace and commissioners sall come to Sanct Andrewes to site the colledges. His not visiting Fife, and not preaching at anot Andrewes, the place of his residence, he excused with insmitie of bodie since he tooke on the bishoprick. The Superindent of Stratherne confirmed his excuse with his testimonic.

Mr James Patoun, Bishop of Dunkelden, confessed his oversight, at he did not execute the sentence of excommunicatioun against e Erle of Atholl and his ladie, according to the Act of Parliaent. And therefore was commanded to confesse his fault pubtlie, in the cathedrall kirk of Dunkelden, upon a Lord's day, in ne of divine service; and that therafter, within fourtie dayes, e erle and his ladie, and so manie of his familie as sall be und disobedient, be excommunicated; and to report the order of c excommunicatioun, and indorsatioun therof, in authentic forme, the regent's Grace, that order might be takin theranent. He mitted one, Sir Walter Robesone, to be reader in the kirk Logyt, who, within twentie dayes therafter, past with a dead corps to e kirk, having the supercloath upon him, in Popish maner. The shop is ordeaned to trie this slaunder.

George Bishop of Murrey was delated for fornicatioun committed with the Ladie Ardrosse, and ordeanned to purge himse before the Assemblie. He craved time to advise till the 10th of this moneth. The Superintendent of Angus, Mr George Hay Commissioner of Aberdeen, Mr Alexander Arbuthnet, Principall of the Colledge, Mr Johne Craig, Minister of New Aberdeen, were ordeaned to summoun the Chapter of Murrey before them, for giving their letters testimonialls to him, without just triell, and due examination of his life, and qualification in literature. He compeered not upon the tenth day, as he promised, and therefore the Bishop of Dunkelden was ordeanned to warne him to compeere the 22d day of this instant moneth.

SUPERINTENDENTS DIMITT.

The Superintendent of Angus, of Lothian, and Stratherne, d mitted their office of superintendentrie, purelie and simpliciter i the Assembleis hand; yitt the Assemblie did not accept of the dimissioun, but continued them. The Bishop of Glasgow bein unable to visite the whole diocie of Glasgow, the Assemblie though good, that there sould be two commissioners appointed to assis him. Mr Robert Pont, Commissioner of Murrey, in respect the George Dowglas, Bishop of Murrey, was admitted to the bishop rick, purelie and simpliciter dimitted his office of commissionarie.

The Assemblie appointed Mr James Lowsone, Mr David Line sey, the Laird of Barganie, the Laird of Thornton, the Commissioners of Edinburgh and St Johnstoun, to present this supplied tioun following to my lord regent's Grace and the Lords of Privi Counsell:—

"Unto the Lord Regent's Grace and Lords of Privie Coursell, with others of the Estats conveened with h Grace, the Generall Assemblie now conveened wisher everlasting health in Christ.

"It is not unknowne that holie mysterie of God, that hath chosin to himself a kirk, and that frome the beginning, which sall continue for ever, and this same is the congregatioun, and companie of the faithfull professours of Jesus Christ. And in his kirk God hath appointed his holie mystereis to be ministred, and calleth men to be ministers of the same, that by the same ministrie the elect of God may be called, regenerated, and nourished to everlasting life. For preservatioun of the holie ministrie and kirk in puritie, the Lord hath appointed assembleis and conventiouns, not onlie of the persons appointed to the ministrie, but also of the whole members of the kirk professing Christ. The which kirk of God hath continuallie used, and useth the same assembleis, sanctified by the Word of God, and authorized by the presence of Jesus Christ. It is also knowne to your Grace, and that since the time God blessed this countrie with the light of his Evangell, the whole kirk most godlie appointed, and the same by act of parliament authorized, that two godlie Assembleis of the whole generall kirk of this realme sould be everie veere, als weill of all the members therof in all estats, as of the ministrie. The which Assembleis have beene since the first ordinance continuallie keeped in suche sort, that the most noble and of the highest estate have joyned themselves by their owne presence in the Assembleis, as members of one bodie, voting, concurring, and authorizing all things there, proceeding with their brethrein. And now, at this present, the kirk is assembled according to the godlie ordinance, and looke to have concurrence of their brethrein in all estats; and wish of God, that your Grace and Lords of Privie Counsell will authorize the kirk, in this present Assemblie, by your presence, or by others having commissioun in your Grace and lords' names, as members of the kirk of God. For as your Grace's presence and the nobiliteis sould be unto us most confortable, and so most earnestlie wished of all, so your Grace's absence is to our hearts most dolorous and lamentable; wherof followeth the want of a great part of the members, which cannot be weill absent from the treatting of these things which apperteane to the kirk and policie therof, to be handled by advice of all together VOL. III.

in the Assemblie; and to which end the Assembleis are appointed, the authoritie wherof your Grace knoweth to be suche, as the contempt of it tendeth to the verie dishonour of God. And, therefore, as yee esteeme yourselves to be members of Christ and of his kirk, show the fruicts therof; of the which it is not the least to revne your self to the kirk, not onlie by hearing the Word, and receaving the sacraments, but also in conveening with your brethrein in the holie assembleis. The which to doe, we give you admonitioun in the name of the Lord; extending this our admonitioun to everie person, of whatsoever estat, that are present with your Grace and lordships; and speciallie we admonishe the bishops, and suche as are of the ministrie, to jovne themselves with us, according to their duetie, otherwise they will be thought unworthie of the office they beare. The time that the Assemblie will sitt will be short, and time would not be neglected; vitt the Assemblie is not so rigorous but that men may, after their presence givin in the Assemblie, have libertie, as time requireth, to await upon their lawfull bussinesses. And this admonitioun we give your Grace with all reverence and humilitie, and that cheefelie, in respect that your Grace, by your owne articles and questiouns sent to the Assemblie, desireth first to be admonished charitablie, whensoever offences arise, before the samine be otherwise traduced."

THE REGENT'S ANSWERE.

In this petitioun they make mentioun, that, since the Reformatioun, the kirk appointed, and that by act of parliament it was authorized, that there sould be two Generall Assembleis in the yeere, consisting not onlie of ministers, but also other members of all estats, and almost never conveened moe than at this Assemblie. The answere to this petitioun was verie hard. The regent asked, Who gave them power to convocat the king's lieges without his advice, who was in authoritie? The commissioners, being abashed at this suddane questioun, held their peace a long time, till it pleased God to strenthen the heart of one of them with courage.

"We are conveened at commandement of our Master and Head of the kirk, Christ Jesus, who hath commanded, when his kirk was in anie trouble, the members therof to conveene, and sett the kirk at rest and quietnesse, and purge the same of all filth and corruptioun." Alwise, they gott not that answere to their supplicatioun which they expected.

COMMISSION.

For answere to the last articles sent to the Assemblie by my lord regent's Grace, tuiching the substantiall caus, if anie be, of mislyking the order agreed upon for payment of ministers' stipends, and assignation of the same, and what better order can be propouned and devised for the same, the Assemblie appointed some superintendents, ministers, and barons, to consider the forsaid article, and penne an answere thereto, and to report again to the Assemblie. In the fyft sessioun, the Assemblie appointed Mr George Hay, Commissioner of Aberdeen, and Mr Alexander Arbuthnet, Principall of the Colledge, to present the answere of the Assemblie to my lord regent's Grace's article concerning the order of assignation of ministers' stipends, and to report his Grace's answere to the Assemblie.

A COMMISSION CONCERNING THE JURISDICTION OF THE KIRK.

The Assemblie appointed the Bishop of Glasgow, the Superintendents of Angus and Stratherne, Mr Robert Pont, one of the Lords of Sessioun, and preacher of God's Word, Mr Johne Row, minister of Perth, Mr Robert Matlane, Deane of Aberdeene, Mr Alexander Arbuthnet, Principall of Aberdeene, and Johne Duncansone, minister to the king's hous, to conveene and write the heeds and articles which concerne the jurisdictioun of the kirk; to present the same to the Assemblie, that resolution may be had from the regent. Power and commissioun was givin to the Superintendents of Angus and Stratherne, Mr Robert Pont, Mr Johne

Row, Mr George Hay, Mr David Lindsey, Mr James Lowsone, Johne Duncansone, to confer with my lord regent's Grace and Lords of Secreet Counsell, upon heeds which concerne the jurisdictioun and policie of the kirk, and suche other heeds and articles as sall be propouned by his Grace and counsell to them; and upon the heeds, articles, and requeists which are to be propouned to his Grace and counsell, in name of the Assemblie presentlie conveened; and concerning all and sindrie other things tending to the setting fordward of the glorie of the eternall God, mainteaning the preaching of his Word, the king's Majesteis authoritie, and commoun wealth of this realme, firme and stable holding, &c.

ACTS.

The Assemblie ordeaneth all commissioners of touns and provinces to searche and seeke out the whole rentals of the hospitals within their bounds respective, and give the samine up to their bishops, superintendents, or commissioners, shewing how the same are used or abused, to the effect my lord chanceller may receave the same, and report to my lord regent's Grace; and this to be done betuixt and the tenth of Aprile.

2. Tuiching the jurisdictioun of bishops in their ecclesiasticall functioun, the Assemblie hath concluded, that the same sall not exceed the jurisdiction which superintendents have heretofore had, and presentlie have; and that they sall be subject to the discipline of the Generall Assemblie, as superintendents have beene heretofore in all sorts, as members therof. That no superintendents or commissioners to plant kirks sall give collatioun of benefices, or admitt ministers, without the assistance of three qualified ministers of the province, and their testimonialls subscrived with their hands, in signe of their consents. And, in like maner, that no bishop give collatioun of anie benefice within the bounds of superintendents within his diocie, without their consent and testimoniall subscrived with their hands; and that bishops within their owne dioceis visite by themselves where no superintendents are; and give no collatioun ordinar upon benefices, without consent of three weill qualified ministers, as said is of superintendents and commissioners to plant kirks.

3. As concerning the appointing of sindrie kirks to one minister, to the end the mater may be plainer, and the minde of the Assemblie knowne to all men heerin, the Assemblie hath declared, that howbeit sindrie kirks be appointed to one man, yitt sall the minister make his residence at one kirk, which sall be properlie appointed to his charge; and he sall be called and reputed principallie the minister of that kirk. As concerning the rest of the kirks to which he is nominated, he sall have the oversight of them, and helpe them in suche sort, as the bishop, superintendent, and commissioner sall thinke expedient, and as occasioun sall serve, from his owne principall charge; the which, in no wise, he must neglect: And that this order remain till God, of his mercie, thrust moe labourers into his harvest.

Some brethrein were appointed to consider the bills, complaints, requeists, and questiouns which could not be resolved in synodall conventiouns of provinces, and to report their judgement. But we find no questiouns or answeres. It appeareth there hath beene no reference of questions from synods.

Mr Johne Davidsone was summouned to compeere before the regent and counsell, upon Saturday the sixt of Marche, in Haly-rudhous, where manie of the nobilitie were present. The Justice-Clerk demanded, if he had made the booke entituled, "The Dialogue betwixt the Clerk and the Courteour;" and if anie man had counselled him to mak it? He stood at his former marke, and denied not that he made it, or that anie counselled him; for appearandlie, they would have beene content if he had denied. He proved that it was a famous libell, becaus the name of the author was not expressed. Mr Davidsone denied the sequele. Then said the Justice-Clerk, "To a privat man to write against the conclusions of princes is damnable, and the writter worthie of punishment." He denied that he had writtin anie thing against the conclusioun of prince or princes, or that it was damnable. Then said the Justice-Clerk, "Ne sutor ultra crepidam." "My lord," said he, "what will yee mak crepidam to a schollar?" "Marie, sir," sayeth the Justice-Clerk, "yee sall get your owne crepida." The regent interrupteth, and sayeth, "My lords, yee heare this man's kinde of answering: I would yee sould looke to it, and looke what he hath deserved." The night approaching, they said they would resolve at the nixt meeting.

Mr Johne went to the Abbot of Dumfermline, who was sovertie for him, and asked what he sould doe. "Yee have entered heere now at your day," sayeth he; " yee may stay in the toun, and heare what the Assemblie sayeth to you, for I thinke there sall be no more of it." So he went up to the toun, and upon Tuesday he declared to the Assemblie how he had beene summoned before the counsell, and troubled a long time for a booke which was not unknowne to their wisdoms; and what was his minde, and the whole processe of it; and desired them to examine it. And if they find it dissonant with the Word of God, condemne it; if consonant to the truthe, approve it, and that with expeditioun, becaus his staving was chargable, and noble men's sonnes, his schollers, were defrauded by his absence. Manie approved his requeist, and applauded, not without murmure. Some informed the moderator, that Mr Johne Rutherfurde had made an answere to it. The Assemblie thought good it sould be presented. He shifted, saving, he could not produce his ineptias, and that he had writtin but one copie, which the regent had. Mr William Skeene, commissar, alledging himself commissioner for the universitie of Sanct Andrewes, protested the priviledge of the universitie sould not be prejudged, and that he might be judged before the universitie. So said the bishop also, who was rector for the present. Mr Johne desired Mr William Skeen's commissioun to be produced in writt, according to the custome. "He is admitted alreadie," sayeth the moderator, "and hath voted as commissioner of the universitie, so that now we cannot call it in doubt." "Weill," said Mr Johne, "he was not chosin by the universitie conveened, as they use to be for suche purposes;" and caused aske the principall of their colledge of Sanct

Leonard's, Mr Nicoll Dagleish, and Mr William Collesse, two regents, if their colledge was warned to conveene with the rest for the said purpose. They answered, "No." Then said the bishop, "Yee are in the wrong to the universitie, that seeketh triell of your booke heere." "I have beene," said Mr Johne, "als weill bent to keepe the priviledge of the universitie as anie other suppost of the same; and sall be als loath to hurt the priviledges therof as anie of you sall be." "Why, then," said the bishop, "sute vee not before us a triell but heere?" "I see God worketh weill," said the other: "that which vee did for my hurt, God hath turned to be a defence for me this day. When I sought your judgement, vee denved it; and when we sought the priviledge of replegiatioun of the universitie from the civill judgement, yee would not grant it to us. God be praised, that maketh you to be trapped in your owne devices!" Then the moderator injoyned them silence, and desired Mr Johne Rutherfurde vitt againe to produce his booke. But he vitt still refused, and said, that Mr Johne had called him "crused goosse" in his booke; that he had little Latine in his booke, and that was false; with manie other brawling words. Silence being injoyned, it was voted, whether he sould be compelled, under the paine of excommunicatioun, to present his booke? and in end it was concluded, that both Mr Johne Rutherfurd, Proveist of Sanct Salvator's Colledge, and Mr Johne Davidsone, sould present their bookes the day following.

Mr Johne Davidsone presented his booke in writt, to be sighted and considered by the brethrein appointed thereto, and alledged the same was printed without his advice and command. Mr Johne Rutherfurde compeered not till the thrid sessioun, after he had beene again warned. He protested for the jurisdictioun of the rector, seing it was but a free conference; that it sould not be prejudiciall to him, and that the rector be immediat judge. He alledged his booke to be imperfyte, and therefore that he could not produce it, nor would produce it, till he advised with his immediat judge, the rector; and so went out of the Assemblie. The Assemblie, notwithstanding of the said protestatioun, appointed Mr

Robert Hammiltoun, and Mr James Melvill, ministers, to warne him to produce it to the brethrein deputed to sight and trie it. At lenth he brought his booke, and one with him to read it. Being demanded what moved him to write it, he answered, that the other had called him a crused goosse. The other answered, he named no man in that booke; and appealed his conscience, if ever he gave him occasioun, by word or deid, to write against him. The other could alledge none. The author was ashamed at some parcells of it, and desired them to be scraiped out. In the end of the booke he concluded, that he found no fault in the mater and substance of the dialogue, but in the forme and maner: yitt was he dealing with the arguments, and so was contradictorie to himself. The brethrein deputed to trie would nather damne nor allow, but passed over with silence, least the regent sould be offended, pretending their number was not full.

Sindrie gentlemen who were at the Assemblie were offended with their proceedings, speciallie Robert Campbell of Kingzeancleuch. He, perceaving their trifling in the mater, said to Mr Davidsone, "Brother, looke for no answere heere: God hath takin away the hearts from men, that they darre not justifie the truthe, least they displease the world; therefore, cast you for the nixt best." So he went with Kingzeancleuch to the west, where he saw suche a good exemple of pietie and holie exercise, in his familie, that he thought all his lyfe-time before but a profane passing of the time. In the meane time, Kingzeancleuch and he wrote to Ormeston and Braid, to travell with the regent for libertie to him to returne to his calling at Sanct Andrewes; but it could not be obteaned. In the meane time, Kingzeancleuch tooke his deadlie disease at Rusco, a place belonging to the Laird of Lochinvar. Among manie other heavenlie speeches, he said to Mr Johne, "A packe of tratours" (meaning some ministers) " have sold Christ als manifestlie as ever Judas did, and that to the regent: what whole heart can conteane itself unbursting?"-and with that he burst furth in roaring, so that he might have beene heard a good space without the chamber.

Mr Johne, being advertised that he was to be summouned to inderly the law the thrid day of June, must tak good night of Kingzeancleuch. The same day he went from Rusco. About the 17th of Aprile he was summouned at Sanct Andrewes, to find sovertie, within six dayes, to underly the law the thrid day of June, inder the paine of horning. So he was putt to the horne the thrid lay of May. Some gentlemen of Kyle conveened at Mauchline cirk, and sent to the Laird of Carnell, who was then in Edinburgh. lesiring him to be sovertie, and promising to releave him of the penaltie. So he did, upon their writt, having conjunct with him Andrew Ker of Fadownside. Wherupon he was relaxed the seventh lay of May, upon hope that some good meanes might be wrought or his libertie in the meane time. He came to Lothiane. Lairds of Lundie and Ormeston travelled with the regent for him, out could find nothing but rigour. In the mean time, the Lord Boyd, moved by the gentlemen of the west, had writtin to the regent in his favours. When Mr Johne returned to Air, the 29th of May, the gentlemen of Kyle conveened, where the regent's anwere to my Lord Boyd was read. The effect of the answere was his—that he had beene requeisted by manie to continue the day, but and refused; yitt, for his lordship's requeist, he would doe it, providng he came in single, without convocatioun. As for the Assemblie, ie would not have them to judge of that mater anie more, becaus, when he had committed it unto them, he found nothing but mockie. The Lord Boyd advised them, by his letter, to move him to accept the conditiouns; but he no wise could be content. At last. he day being continued till the 17th of June, his soverteis solisted he regent for a new continuatioun. But for no solistatioun made. ther by noblemen, ministers, or soverteis, would he grant that fayour. Therfore some brethrein advised Mr Johne to flee, which e did, and his soverteis payed the penaltie.

AN APOLOGIE OR DEFENCE MADE BY MR JOHNE DAVIDSONE, FOR NOT ENTERING THE 17TH DAY OF JUNE, 1574, IN THE TOLBUITH OF EDINBURGH, TO UNDERLY THE LAW.

"Becaus diverse men may diverslie judge of me, that I entered not to underly the law, as they terme it, at the day appointed, have thought good to declare the caus of my non-compearance in writt: that als weill the godlie, who, perchance, might have been somwhat moved with the mater, may be satisfied, as the mouth of the adversareis, who ever rejoice, and beginne to sing the triumphe, at the least appearance of overthrow of the truthe, or o God's servants, may be stopped. Which being knowne, nathe sall the one, the godlie I meane, have caus, I trust in God, to b discouraged anie white, nather the others, that is, the enemeis have anie caus to rejoice, or to thinke themselves in better cacthrough my absence; seing I absented not my selfe for that I dis trusted, or beganne to mislyke my caus more than of before, c that by so doing, I purpose to denie, or recant anie jote or sylla writtin in that booke, untill the time the adversareis be able t convict it by the Word of God, or good reasoun, (to the which ever submitted myself;) which I trust in God sall be found diff cill to them to doe, notwithstanding the great bragging of som doctors, who have opened their packe, (as we-say,) and sold sma wairs. Nor yitt absented I myself, for that God had not grante unto me sufficient strenth to have biddin the uttermost that coulhave beene used against me; the Lord make me thankfull for i who leaveth me not in the day of my trouble. For, as He put the worke in my hands, (most vile wretche,) so granteth He strent (praised be his name,) to susteane whatsomever can be layed 1 my charge for the same; letting me feele by experience the swee nesse of that loving promise, 'I sall be with thee;' which, indei is more confortable to me nor if I were guarded with a thou sand men of warre. None of these things spokin, I say, staye me from entering at the day appointed, but thir causes which follow:—

The First Cause.

"And, First, we are taught in the Scriptures of our God not to tempt the Lord our God; which we may doe sindrie and diverse waves, and cheefelie when we cast ourselves in present danger, without the expresse command of God: as, if Christ sould have east himself down over the pinnacle of the temple, at the intysing of Satan, he had tempted God. And if Paul sould have entered in the tolbuith of Ephesus, among the enraged craftsmen stirred up by Demetrius, he sould have tempted God; becaus there was present danger, and he had no commandement of God to enter in mong them. So, if I had entered that day, where there appeared present danger, not having the command of God for my warrant, I sould have done nothing ellis but have tempted God, which never entered in my heart. As for the danger, it might have beene greater nor ather the pursuers, or vitt the favourers looked for: and, altogether, it wanted not an outward face of danger. To me, a single man, without all force worldlie, to have entered where, on the other part, were conveened a number of armed men of warre, to have convoyed me at their pleasure where ever they had beene appointed, and that at commandement of the supreme power, I thinke no man could have justlie commended me, or approved my fact; but altogether have compted it foolishenesse, and a tempting of God on my part, if so I had entered, not having the reveeled will of God for my warrant. For he that hath the command of God for him, ought not to stay for anie danger, howbeit never so imminent or perellous. For Paul's journey to Jerusalem and to Rome was not without extreme danger, as the end declared; for he was caried prisoner from Jerusalem to Rome, where he suffered death by Nero, as histories doe report: which great troubles he also foresaw in the Spirit; yitt left he not off to go thither, becaus he had the will of God reveeled to him to that effect: and, therefore, in obeying the will of God, he no wise could be said to tempt his God; for, as it is the Word of God that sanctifieth all the actiouns of our life that are framed to the same, so, nothing that we doe beside this Word can be acceptable or pleasant to our God. So now, I think, it is evident that I had just caus of non compeering that day.

"But vitt, it may be said, it is the will of God, (as we have it Peter,) that men be readie to give accompt of their faith, and c that hope that is in them, when and wheresoever they are charge thereto. I answere, though the mater wherewith I am charged b not directlie a mater of faith, vitt so it dependeth and proceedet of faith, that I am bound to give a reckoning of it. But my com peering that day was not to have givin a reasoun of my doing but to have underlyed the censures of suche as altogether wer ather enemeis to my caus, or, at the least, had little or no judge ment at all concerning the mater wherof I was to have been ac cused. For I gave accompt of the arguments of the booke, and c what minde I made it, five times before, in presence of the regen and counsell. Where, if my faithfull and simple confessioun, yes and purgatioun, might have had place, to witt, how I made it fo discharge of my conscience onlie, and for the profite and liberti of Christ's kirk within Scotland, and not to defame anie person of persons, or to raise anie seditioun within the bowells of this com mounwealth, (as most unrighteouslie by some I am accused;) say, had this my simple and faithfull purgatioun takin place, the mater might have takin an end, ere it sould have come to such an heed, as to have preassed me with entering to a day of law, a I had beene a stubborne malefactor. But no purgatioun or con fessioun upon my part was able to stay their proceedings. And therefore, seing suche extremitie used against me, who, in m judgement, deserved not the same, I could not have assurance ou of the Word of God to enter, to underly their censures, whos proceedings in judging could not be without vehement suspiciour unlesse I would have tempted God; which be ever farre from me "The Secund caus of my non-compeerance was, the avoiding c n inconvenience which, appearandlie, might have ensued upon av entering, howbeit not offered on my part. That was, a stirre nd tumult among the people, which, God is my witnesse, was the hing I most feared; howbeit I be most wrongouslie accused and urthenned by some, (God grant them repentance, if it apperteane nto them,) that I meane nothing but seditioun and tumult among he subjects of this realme. And, at the least, my worke is to no ther thing. But I must be content to be in the ranke of my brethein, who have spokin the truthe from the beginning; who, peeking the truthe, have ever beene called and reputed authors f seditioun, and troublers of commounwealths. For who (I pray ou) troubled Israel, in Achab's judgement and Jesabel's? None ut Elias, and the servants of God. And vitt, we are assured, he pake nothing but the word of the Lord, and did nothing but as ne Lord commanded. Why sould he be called a troubler? Who as called the author of seditioun and tumult that was at Ephe-18? Who but Paul? And what did he? He said, they were ot gods that were made with hands. And was this the caus, or ould it be the caus, of that tumult? I thinke, no man in thir ayes will say it; but rather, that Demetrius and his marrowes who would not suffer this to be said) were to be compted worthie the authors of that seditioun and tumult. Manie like exemples e there; but thir are sufficient to prove how God's servants, for beeking the truthe, have ever beene compted seditious, and trouters of the estat of realmes. And this is a great confort to me this 1y, who, having spokin nothing but truthe, (as I understand,) am empted a seditious person.

"But least the adversareis object and say, I would be faine felw to good men, (as we say,) and would reckon my self in the amber of these who have suffered injurious calumneis for rightpusnesse, lett us examine what I have done; and so it sall more silie appeare, if rightlie I have reckonned myself in the number the servants of God or not. I have writtin, that foure parish rks are over great a charge for one minister; and, therefore, the der that would appoint so manie, or moe, to one man, to be evill, and consequentlie devilish. If this be true or not, men ma easilie discerne. But if no other reasoun nor argument can l able to move men to believe that this is true, I thinke they wi not be so senselesse and voide of understanding, but they will give place to that invincible and most strong argument, called exper ence. But lett the ministers who have travelled since the appointing of this order at foure or moe kirks be demanded, bon fide, how they have profited in their doctrine since, and I think yee sall receave a resolutioun to all arguments of interim, an that he sall have the charge but of one kirk, and oversee the reas he may, with the rest of these frivolous clokes that are brough for establishing of this order; and, on the other part, aske at the auditors what they have learned, or what good order or discipling hath beene among them since this order tooke anie place; and, thinke, my maisters, debaters of this order, sall find it suche a insolubile, that all the solutions of Scotus Subtilis sall not be abl to loose it. So, I think now, except men will not confesse th plaine truthe which they see with their eyes, they must confess that I have spokin the truthe; for so it hath pleased God to justif his truthe, though uttered by the penne of a sober instrumen This reasonning, I grant, is not down, but by, from the effects an experience; and not from the causes and deepe grounds that ma weill be brought out of the Word. And yitt, for writting of thi which experience teacheth to be true, I have beene proclamed : mercat croces an arrogant, ignorant, and seditious person: bu how justlie, lett the whole world judge.

"Yitt because the clocke of interim appeareth to make somethin for them that accuse me, by digressioun I would tuiche it a little And, first, I would speare at thee, who devised this interim, ho long ordeanned thou this interim to last? Thou will say, Whill me ministers will be gottin. If I speare, When will that be? I think thou sall have thy answere to seeke, except thou will say, Who God sall stirre them up. And if I speare, When God sall stirre them up? I thinke, meta non loquendi, sall be the last refuge; for it is plaine mockage of God to thee to say, thou will wait whill Go tirre them; and, in the meane time, whill God giveth thee power. you doeth not provide the ordinarie meanes which God hath apointed to make their number increasse, but rather stoppeth thy ves when the true way is showin. God sall be avenged of this tocking of his Majestie, except true repentance speedilie follow, despite of Satan, and all the pride and craft of man. But I linke the libertie of conscience in France, granted by an interim, nd manie suche like slights of Satan, under colour of an interim, ight teache us sufficientlie what good stuffe this interim hath ever rought to the kirk of God. For, grant to the devill once an inche, and he will clame to him a span, and will be loather to losse his ossessioun nor the rankest robber in Annerdaill. As for them at answere, that the minister sould be called minister but of ne kirk, and oversee the rest as he may, latet anguis in herba. thou would eschew the gravitie of the sicknesse, principiis obsta, hich was ay a good rule of medicine.

"In this apologie, some things are added to the words of the first oke; but lett them be assured, howbeit the first booke be burnt, it were, and buried in oblivioun, Baruch sall gett another booke write, wherin all the words—not onlie the mater, but the verie ords—of the first booke sall be writtin, without amendment follow, nerunto moe words sall be added nor were written in the first oke. Which, when it sall be done, I trust in God, what trouble Il ever follow, the writter may justlie say, with the prophet, t is not I that trouble Israel, but thou and thy father's house.' , now, I thinke, by this discourse it is manifest, that the booke ittin by me can not be called justlie the cause of anie tumult, ing there is nothing conteaned in it but truthe, which this day, experience, is found to be over true. And as for my behaviour, th before, at the day, and sensyne, I trust no man can esteeme to have beene seditious; for, indeid, I left off meanes which ere lawfull unto me, and that for avoiding of occasioun to the cked to speeke against me: for, as the apostle sayeth, 'Though things be leasome to me, yitt all things are not expedient.' For, leed, it becometh the servants of God to be very war and cir-cumspect, that they give no occasioun to the wicked to speek against them; or rather, to blaspheme the truthe in their person seing they are so readie to ascribe the occasioun of all trouble an seditioun to the servants of God; howbeit of all men they lov peace and tranquillitie best. Peace, I say, in God; for to shak hands with the devill is no peace at all, lett men terme it peace s oft as they please. And, therfore, that I might avoide even the appearand occasioun of slaunder, I did not enter, seing so evider arguments of a tumult to have followed; howbeit, as God knowet I had beene wytelesse of the same. For the rigorous persute of me, on the one part, by the magistrat supreme, and the raisin of the hearts of the godlie at the same, whispering of tumu among the multitude on the other part, could not have ended wit quietnesse, if I had entered. So farre as in me lay, I tooke awa all occasioun of appearance, on my part, that any tumult sould fo low:—which was the secund caus of my non-compearance.

"The Thrid and Last caus was, the expresse command of or Maister, Christ, saying, 'When they persecute you in one citi flee into another;' the practice of which commandement we fin in the most deere servants of God; as in Jacob, from the face his brother Esau; in David, Elias, Paul, yea, and in Christ himse But one might say to me, Call ye the executioun of justice pers cutioun? Yee were summouned to underly the law, according justice, which cannot be called persecutioun. I answere, I call n the due executioun of justice (which all good men ought to mai teane) persecutioun; but I call the persute of an innocent ma under the forme of executioun of justice, (when nothing lesse the justice is meant to him,) a most craftie and mightie kind of pers cutioun; becaus the outward face of justice deceaveth manie, as maketh the partie persued the more to be abhorred; and so, I persecutioun to be the more greevous. And this kinde of persec tioun was not invented of late yeeres by Satan against the servar of God. For Daniel, that faithfull man of God, as we may rea was cast in the lyons' denne, becaus he had transgressed the and statute made by the king and counsell; Elias was putt to flig becaus he was thought a seditious person, and troubler of Israel; Christ, our Maister, was condemned to death, by an externall forme of judgement and law, as a seditious mover of the subjects against Cæsar. How, (to be short,) the apostles, as we may read in the Acts, and the servants of God, from time to time, as among ourselves, Mr George Wishart and Walter Mylne, were most cruellie persecuted, and that under forme of justice, is more nor manifest. Wherefore, it is not to be thought strange, that I call the summoning of me to underly the law, (as they terme it,) persecuting of me, as if no wrong could be done to anie, under colour of justice; for, as I have declared, there is no meeter meane to oppresse innocent men.

"But heere it may be said, God forbid that we sould thinke that the magistrats present, and the counsell, who have beene, and are professors of the Word of God, would meane anie persecutioun of you, by this summoning of you to underly the law. It becometh rather to judge weill, that they sute nothing but justice indeid to be executed, as effeirs, which no wise can be called persecutioun, as yee meane. I answere, It becometh us to judge weill of all men, and cheeflie of the magistrat. And God knoweth, and good men, with whom, hitherto, I have beene conversant, how I have ever judged of the magistrat present, as became a Christian subject, and also of all other magistrats that have beene in this realme. But howbeit, (as the Searcher of hearts knoweth,) greevous it is to me, yea, most greevous, that suche a cative worme as I sould caus my mouth to speeke of that most worthie and excellent estat of princes and magistrats; and how loath I am unto it, and what a battell my fearefull flesh hath with it, my conscience beareth me witnesse; yitt darre I not conceale that which is patent to the sunne and to the moone, since so it is offered by the mater to me to speeke, that I cannot passe by it. And heere I tak heaven and earth to witnesse, that from my heart I wish that I had not the occasioun to speeke, which (alas!) to all men is too manifest. God amend it at his good pleasure!

"Then, to declare the mater ab ovo, (as we say,) so truelie and so shortlie as I can, first, I shall show what hath beene my part in YOL, III.

the mater; and then, their proceedings against me I leave to be judged by the discreet reader, if the processe used against me may be justlie called executioun of justice, or rather persecutioun. The questioun being in this countrie concerning foure kirks to one minister, and they that had the affirmative part likelie to prevaile, but no finall conclusioun tane in the mater, (as the voting of it again at the Generall Assemblie last holdin at Edinburgh, the yeere of God 1573, plainlie proveth;) the mater, I say, thus being in deliberatioun, and so disputable, moved of conscience, after long delay, with incalling of the name of God, that I sould write nothing but that which tended to his glorie and the weale of his kirk, I putt my hand to the penne, and wrote the reasouns of both sides, so farre as God ministred unto me knowledge; and that in poesie, in our owne naturall tongue, under the forme of a dialogue, which kinds of writting are least subject to sharpe and rigorous censure. For the poet sayeth, Pictoribus atque poetis quidlibet audendi semper fuit agua potestas; and Plato, we know, wrote all his works almost in forme of dialogues, that he might tuiche things the more freelie, as Erasmus weill observeth. So, after reasoning on both parts, according to my sober knowledge, I made one of the interlocutors to conclude on the part which, by reasoning, he had obteaned, and to which my heart and conscience inclynned, where, in the end or epilogue, aliquot motus vehementiores, were interlaced, ad excitandos auditorum animos, according to the custome of orators, as they find occasioun. Against which stile, I thinke it sall be hard (if they will handle me schollasticallie) to find anie law of schooles. And if they will seeke anie civill or municipall lawes to convict me by, I thinke they must sitt down and write them of new; for I believe the law be to write yitt, whereby they may convict me or my booke.

"But to proceed: After I had writtin it in the maner forsaid, I conferred with some godlie and learned men upon it, who liked it weill. Therafter, willing to doe all things with order, I copied some copies of it, and sent them to foure severall learned and godlie men to judge upon; and with that, purposed to have writtin a copie authentick, and have presented to the Assemblie Generall nixt following, that they might understand by writt what I thought of the mater, before they sould conclude anie thing, thinking then, my conscience to have beene discharged, howsoever they proceeded therafter. And this I thought lawfull to me, seing I was no preacher, to utter the mater in pulpit, nor might not be present at the Assemblie my self, for my daylie vocatioun wherin I was occupied. But when I had used all the ordinar meanes I could, God would have it otherwise come to light nor I proponned; for becaus, often times in ordinar working, man useth to impe a peece of his owne device and policie, which would stay the will and purpose of God; therefore, ere his will sould be undone, he will rather use meanes extraordinarie to bring the same to passe; as we plainlie may see in the slaughter of Agag, who had not been slaine, if that he had abiddin, whill the judge ordinar, that is, Saul and his counsell, had concluded the same. But God made his will to be executed, although by extraordinarie meanes. So, it might have beene, that the booke had beene unprinted vitt, if the counsell of the Assemblie had gone on before. But God, who foresaw the hearts of men, preveened the mater by his owne working, without the counsell of man; for I am assured, the verie printing of it was a worke of God, which sall tend to his glorie and weale of his kirk, as alreadie we have some experience, and, I doubt not, sall have more.

"Nather let anie thinke, that this way I would excuse my negligence in the mater; for I am assured I used all meanes ordinar, as could be thought meete for my lawfull defence in the mater. For both I committed the booke to suche a trustie bearer as I would have wished, or as anie man would have devised; and also, I directed it to suche trustie persons as nather rashlie nor negligentlie would have handled the mater. And yitt, for all this surenesse that I thought on everie side, God would have it otherwise; which can be ascribed to no other thing, nather to my will to have it printed, nather to my negligence in handling the mater, but onlie to the good providence of God, who put the worke in my hands; and so it came to print, and was printed without my expectatioun or knowledge: after which, I being summouned, and compeering before the regent's Grace and counsell, five severall times, where I exponed the mater at lenth as it stood indeid, and what was my minde and purpose in the same; notwithstanding of which, I could find no favours, but first was putt in the guardhous in Hadinton, where the justice airs were keeped for the time; therout of, convoyed by southland borderers to waird in Clerkington; out of waird by the self-same borderers, also convoyed to Edinburgh, where it behoved me to find sovertie to enter at the nixt Assemblie. Entering there, receaved no answere, but holdin in suspense. After this, again summouned to underly the law, the thrid of Junie, not knowing of it, becaus I was not personallie apprehended, being in the meane time in Galloway with Robert Campbell of Kingzeancleuche, that singular servant of God, where he departed this life. not wishing to live anie longer, from the time he saw suche handling of God his servants in this realme, where God had reveeled himself so manifestlie. Therafter, putt to the horne, was relaxed from the same, the Laird of Carnell in Kile, and Andrew Ker of Fadownside in Tiviotdaill, two faithfull and zealous gentlemen, being soverties for me, to enter the said thrid day of June in the toun of Edinburgh, the Laird of Carleton also a sovertie for me; whose great travells, costs, and expenses in the mater, I doubt not but the Lord, for whose caus they did it, sall recompence abundantlie. So, being relaxed, thir gentlemen, with sindrie other nobles, erles, lords, barons, and gentlemen, conveened to have the mater tane up, or, at least, the day continued, but could obteane nothing at all; till at lenth, when the day approached, God found the moyen that moved his Grace's heart to continue the day unto the 17th day of the said moneth of Junie, I entering in the Tolbuith of Edinburgh the thrid day, and finding the same gentlemen soverteis who were before; thinking, in this meane time, to have gottin some good appointment in the mater. But for no sute could the day be gottin continued anie longer, muche lesse, the mater finallie tane up; but the day must hold fordward, the regent's Grace professing himself partie against me, poore worme, desiring to understand what he was in Scotland would mainteane me; not suffering anie man to enter with me in my defence in anie wise, as the custome is, that they who sould underly the law sould have their freinds present, and men of law to debate the caus; but it behoved me to compeere simplie, as his owne writtings beare. As for members of court, suche as Justice-Clerk and Advocat, they were my conjured enemeis in this cace, and damned my booke both privatlie and publictlie. And last, my assise was chosin of the most suspected Papists of the realme, for the most part, against whom, being erles, lords, and landed men, I doubt if my lawfull exceptioun sould have had place. What justice was meant by choosing of suche an assise, lett men of anie judgement consider.

"To amplifie this heed, and aggredge it as I might, I will not, onlie leaving it to be judged of all of indifferent judgement. So now, what my part hath beene in this mater on the one side, and what proceeding hath beene used against me hitherto on the other side, I have declared; leaving it to be judged by the discreit reader, first, if I have deserved, that summum jus sould be used against me or not, and suche rigour as is shortlie forespokin; and nixt, if the proceedings used against me may worthilie be called the executioun of justice, or rather persecutioun. For suche proceeding of justice against me, a scholler, writting for discharge of my conscience onlie, and great offenders, yea, perturbers of this commoun wealth escaping all judgement, cannot want vehement suspicioun of injurie. But vitt, some say, What sall be done in the mater? All meanes have beene used for triell of the booke, and yitt sufficient declaratioun of it could not be had; for it hath beene before the counsell, and also was remitted to the kirk. So, having no resolutioun of them, there resteth nothing but the law to discusse it. In answere, All that maketh the mater more suspicious, that nather the kirk nor the counsell finding me culpable, that yitt, the persuers could not be satisfied, but would use all extremitie. For I believe few of the counsell of Scotland damned me or my booke, or yitt found fault with it, except some Gratoes, who cheefelie medled with it; who, if they were weill examined themselves what hath beene their part hitherto, since religioun entered in among us, both in the king's caus, and all other good actiouns, skarslie would they be suffered to come in the king's palace; much elesse to be one of his Grace's Secreit Counsell, or judge upon maters concerning his royall crowne. And so, howbeit they have damned it, it is not the more damnable, nather like I it the worse. As for the kirk, it is plaine they damned it not, but rather approved it; howbeit they thought by oversight of it, as it were, not plainlie justifeing it, to mitigat the anger of the magistrat; as the nixt Generall Assemblie, holdin at Edinburgh the sixt of August 1574, manifestlie beareth witnesse, where the booke was justified, and all the arguments of the same. So, it may be seene how just caus there was to intend actioun of law against me. If they will object to me, that I, a privat man, have published a booke against the acts of counsell and kirk, I answere, I nather published the booke, nather was there an act contraveened by the booke."

"Seing it hath pleased the goodnesse of my God, by meanes of the troublous estat which I almost have susteaned now a veere bypast, for writting and speeking of that which is the truthe, to thrust me out, an unworthie worme among worthie brethrein, to beare the glorious message of his deare Sonne to this unthankfull generatioun that hath begunne to forsake God, and follow their owne wayes, I have thought good, before I find fault with your Grace's proceedings publictlie, first privatlie by writt, (becaus, otherwise, presentlie I have not accesse to your Grace,) to desire your Grace earnestlie in the name of God, to call to minde how that God, in all ages, and in all places, hath powred furth his terrible judgements upon all these that have oppouned themselves to his kirk, or otherwise troubled the same. For howbeit God, for the triell of his owne, hath suffered the wicked, at sindrie times and in sindrie places, to trouble and vexe the kirk, which is understood by Jerusalem, yitt in the end it hath happenned unto them, which useth to happen to putters of a heavie stone which exceedeth the strenth of the put-ters; which, howbeit some lift to their knee, some to their hainche, yea, some to their shoulder, as they are of strenth and abilitie, vitt are they not able to deliver it from them, but are bruised with it: and the higher they hease it, the more suddanlie are they bruised in powder by the same. But becaus your Grace hath heard oft times this heed of doctrine, and also hath seene and heard the truthe of it by experience in your owne Grace's time, both at home and in forrane natiouns, I will not trouble your Grace, by amplifeing the same with examples of Scripture, as I might at lenth. The end wherefore I writt this is, that your Grace may be plainlie admonished, for the discharge of my conscience, to desist in time from troubling the Kirk of Christ within this realme, wherewith your Grace (I darre not flatter) hath begunne to tig (as we say) too roughlie, als weill in calling the authoritie of the same in doubt, which God hath established by his Word, as also in troubling and persecuting me, a member of his kirk, for truthe and righteousnesse' sake. For, had I not beene assured that my actioun was just and upright, yea, and had I not beene assured of the defence of my God in the same, I had recanted everie word at my first examinatioun. Wherefore, I exhort your Grace, in the name of the eternall God, to desist in time, whill God mercifullie calleth your Grace to repentance, from farther medling with the poore Kirk of Christ, in suche maner, or with anie member of the same. Which if your Grace obey, there is mercie sufficient in store for your Grace. But if your Grace stubburnelie or disdainfullie will refuse, trusting ather in riches, wisdom, or confederacie, (which God forbid,) God sall provide for his owne; and destructioun both of soule and bodie sall follow, upon the contempt, and that but tareing. So, this farre have I privatlie writtin for discharge of my conscience, taking heaven and earth to witnesse, what plague that ever sall follow your Grace is plainlie forewarned. Thus, committeth your Grace to the protectioun of God; craving God daylie, that it will please him to grant your Grace a sight of your estat, and zeale to sett out God's glorie, howbeit some soullesse flatterers would perswade the contrare of me to your Grace. And your answere, if it be your Grace's good pleasure."

THE REGENT OPPONETH TO EXECUTION OF DISCIPLINE.

About this time, Robert Gourlay, an elder of the kirk of Edinburgh, was ordeanned to mak his publict repentance in the kirk of Edinburgh, upon Fryday, the 28th of May, for transporting wheate out of the countrie. The regent being advertised, answered for him when he was called on to utter his confessioun, and said openlie to the minister, Mr James Lowsone, "I have givin him licence, and it apperteaneth not to you to judge of that mater."

MR A. MELVILL HIS RETURNE.

Mr Andrew Melvill came home a little before Lambmesse. He went to France, after he had past his course of philosophie, and heard Turnebus, Petrus Ramus, Mercerus Salignacus, Baldvinus the lawyer, and other professors. He grew so expert in the Greeke, that he declamed in Greeke with suche readinesse as was mervellous. From Parise he went to Poictiers, where he regented in the Colledge of St Martiall three yeares. From Poictiers he went on foote to Geneve, careing with him onlie an Hebrew Bible at his belt, leaving the rest behind him. Beza perceaved him a scholler, and the toun having need of a professor of humanitie, he was putt to triell within two or three dayes, and without further delay placed. He remained in Geneva five yeeres, where he heard Beza, Cornelius Bonaventura, professor of Hebrew, Chaldaick, and Syriack, Portus, a borne Grecian, Professor of the Greeke tongue, and Hottomann, the renownedest lawyer in his time. When the Bishop of Brechin and Mr Andrew Polwart had stayed a while in Geneve, with great difficultie did Mr Andrew purchase dimissioun to come with them. Beza, in his letter to the Generall Assemblie of Scotland, wrote, that the greatest tokin of affectioun the Kirk of Geneve spoiled of Mr Andrew Melvill, that thereby the Kirk of Scotnd might be enriched. He came to Edinburgh a little before ugust, bringing with him to his countrie a plentifull treasure of nod letters, wherewith he enriched the nation, within few yeeres, greater measure than ever it was since it was a kingdome. The mmer following, his librarie was brought home, riche with the rest authors in arts and sciences. The instruments declared what e craftsman was. So God blessed the travells and studies of this un, left the youngest of nyne brethrein, when their father, Richard elvill of Baldovie, was slain at the feild of Pinkie, in the Erle of ingus his avant-guarde.

MR A. MELVILL REFUSETH TO BE THE REGENT'S DOMESTICK.

Soone after that Mr Andrew Melvill returned to this countrie, regent directed Mr George Buchanan and Alexander Hay to ale with him, to be content to be my lord regent's Grace his domesk instructor, and to give some few notes upon the chapter when it s read, for which service he sould be honourablie advanced at the t occasioun. The regent's intention was, to have him and his ts framed to his purpose, that is, to restraine the freedom of apatioun in preaching, the authoritie of the Generall Assembleis, I to bring in conformitie with England in the church governent and injunctiouns, without which, he thought, he could not verne the countrie to his phantasie, nor that agreement could and long betwixt the two countreis. He tried men of best gifts t at court; and if he found they would serve his purpose, his entioun was to advance them to bishopricks. Howbeit, Mr Anw was not acquaint with his purpose, yitt was not willing to ve at court, but rather to professe in some universitie. At the semblie following, the Commissioners of Fife made sute for him be sent to Sanct Andrewes. But by the earnest dealing of Mr nes Boyd, Bishop of Glasgow, and Mr Andrew Hay, he was moved to goe to Glasgow, and heare what conditiouns sould be of fered to him.

THE TWENTIE-NYNTH GENERALL ASSEMBLIE.

TRIELL OF BISHOPS, SUPERINTENDENTS, &c.

In the triell of bishops, superintendents, and commissioners, the Bishop of Glasgow granted he had not exactlie done his ductie; a ledging the caus thereof to have beene, his occupation in temporal effeires of the bishoprick, and hearing ministers preache at the owne kirks; but promised amendment in time comming.

The Bishop of Dunkelden being compleaned upon for simoniace pactioun with umquhile Archibald Erle of Argile, answered, the my Lord of Argile had compelled him to give certain pension furth of the bishoprick, which he had revocked sensyne. As for not excommunicating the Erle of Atholl, as he was injoyned in the last Assemblie, he could alledge no lawful excuse.

In the secund sessioun Mr John Keith, Parson of Duffus, a Deane of the Chapter of Murrey, was demanded, whether he know in conscience that the approbatioun and testimonie givin to the Bishop of Murray of his life, doctrine, and good behaviour, where the setting is as it was sett down in the processe, and of what assured knowledge they gave it? He answered, that onlie upon report and bruthey gave testimonie of his conversatioun. Being demanded, where all these who subscrived to his admissioun were present gether, and heard his doctrine, and tried his conversatioun? He asswered, that the triell continued three dayes, but all were a present everie day at the triell of his doctrine. But the last day when they subscrived, all were present, except Alexander We hester. Mr Andrew Simsone, minister in Forresse, one of the said hapter, being demanded, answered, that upon the Lord's day, the Oth of December, the first of the three dayes, the whole chapter was resent, except Mr Alexander Gordoun, chanceller of Murray, Donald Dow, and Alexander Wenchester: and upon the thrid day f his examinatioun all were present, except Donald Dow and Alexnder Wenchester; and these that were present subscrived toether. Mr George Hay, Mr Alexander Arbuthnet, and Mr Johne raig, minister of Aberdeene, produced the processe exhibited by he Deane and Chapter of Murrey, the 26th of May 1574, concernig the admissioun of the Bishop of Murrey to the said bishoprick. ogether with their animadversions upon the said processe, which ney desired to be registred in the bookes of the Assemblie. The ssemblie appointed Mr Johne Keith, Mr Andrew Simsone, and ne rest of the chapter, to answere to these animadversiouns. Tenne cre appointed by the Generall Assemblie to pronounce their deverance, and answers upon the impugnations produced by Mr eorge Hav and his collegues, against the processe of admissioun and election of the Bishop of Murrey, and upon the replyes made vereto. The Assemblie, notwithstanding that the said bishop hath peciall interesse in the said caus, ordeanned, in the eight sessioun, citatioun to be directed to summoun the said bishop, deane, and lapter, to the nixt Assemblie, and appointed John Durie, minister Edinburgh, and Mr George Mackesone, solicitor for the kirk, to avell with the procurators of the kirk for libelling of the sumouns against them, and to see that diligence be used for raising the same.

In the same sessioun, the Bishop of Dunkelden was ordeanned to onounce the sentence of excommunication against Johne Erle Atholl, within fourtie dayes, under the paine of suspension om his office; which he promised faithfullie to doe. It was so thought good, that he forbeare the ministratioun of the Suprupon warke dayes. The Assemblie ordeanned Johne Brand, inister of Halyrudhous, under paine of deprivatioun from his ice, to pronounce the sentence of excommunicatioun against Alexander Bishop of Galloway, conforme to the act of the Assembli made before, if he satisfie not the kirk betwixt and the first of August. By these, and sindrie like examples mentiouned before we may see that bishops, brought in by the court, were of small accompt with the kirk; and als weill subject to the discipline and censure of the Generall Assemblie as the meanest minister in Scotland.

SUPERINTENDENTS AND COMMISSIONERS WILLING TO DIMITT.

The Superintendent of Lothiane dimitted again in the hands of the Assemblie his office of superintendentrie, partlie becaus he wa unable to travell, partlie becaus he receaved no stipend the space of two veeres bygane. The Assemblie requested him to continu till the nixt Assemblie, without hurt or domage to his persour and appointed Mr David Lindsey, minister of Leith, or anie tw within his bounds he liked, to concurre with him; promising t procure for him, and others having the like charge, provisiou from the regent. The Commissioner of Cliddisdaill, Renfrew, and Lennox, resigned over to the Assemblie his commissioun, requeist ing the Assemblie to provide another. The Assemblie desire him to continue till the nixt Assemblie. The offices of superir tendentrie and commissionarie in these days were burthensome and craved great paines, which bishops now would not willingli undertake, if the Generall Assemblie had the same power over them now which they had then over bishops, superintendents, an commissioners.

THE FORME OF COMMISSION GIVIN TO COMMISSIONERS.

That the reader may perceave what was the power of commissioners, I have heere sett down the tenor of the commissioner givi to Mr Johne Robertsone and Robert Grahame, Commissioners Cathnesse, in the nynth session of this Assemblie.

"At Edinburgh, the elleventh day of August, the yeere of Go 1574 yeeres, the whole kirk presentlie assembled, in one voice an minde giveth full commissioun, speciall power, and charge to thei oved brethrein, Mr Robert Grahame, Archdeacon of Rosse, and Ir Johne Robertsone, Treasurer thereof, conjunctlie and severallie, o passe to the countreis of Cathnesse and Sutherland, and there o visite kirks, colledges, and schooles, and other places needfull, vithin the said bounds; and in the samine to plant ministers, eaders, elders, and deacons, schoolmasters, and other members ecessar and requisite for erecting a perfyte reformed kirk; susend for a time, or simpliciter deprive suche as they sall find unvorthie, or not apt for their office, whether it be for crimes comnitted or ignorance; abolish, eradicat, and destroy all monuments f idolatrie: establish and sett up the true worship of the eternall rod, als weill in cathedrall and colledge kirks, as in other places ithin the said bounds, conforme to the order tane and agreed pon in the Booke of Discipline; and als, to searche and inquire ne names of all these that possesse benefices within the saids ounds, at whose provisioun they have beene; and if anie vaike, r happin to vaike, within the commissionarie, to confer and give he samine to the persons qualified, and being presented by the ist patrons of the samine, due examinatioun preceding; to reject nd refuse suche as they shall find unable, and not apt thereto, as nev will answere to God and the kirk thereupon: Their diligence be done therein, with thir presents, to report them to the nixt ssemblie Generall, where it sall happin to be for the time. Givin the Generall Assemblie, and nynth sessioun thereof; subscrived y the clerk of the same, day, yeere, and place forsaid."

COMMISSIONS.

Mr Robert Hammiltoun, minister at Sanct Andrewes, not comearing as was ordeanned, but sending his answeres to the Modeutor, the Assemblie gave commissioun to the Superintendent of othian, Mr Robert Pont, Proveist of the Trinitie Colledge, Mr David Lindsey, minister at Leith, and the sessioun of the church f Edinburgh, together with anie three of the forenamed persons onjunctlie, to summoun the ministers, elders, and deacons of Standrewes to compeere before them, and to trie why the Fast was not keeped among them, according to the act of the Assemblie; and the violatioun of the Lord's day by prophane playes, and such other things as they sall inquire of them at their comming; an what sall be done by them heerin, to certifie the brethrein in the nixt Assemblie. By this commissioun we may see how profar playes upon the Sabbath day were mislyked.

The Superintendent of Angus, Mr George Hay, Commissions of Aberdeene, Mr Alexander Arbuthnet, Principall of the Colledge of Aberdeen, Mr Johne Craig, minister of Aberdeen, Robert Failie of Braid, James Heriot of Trabrowne, or anie three of them had power and commissioun givin them to passe to my lord regent Grace, and present to his Grace the heeds and articles which the Assemblie had putt in writt, to confer therupon; to require he Grace's answere, and to report the same to the nixt Assemblie, the Assemblie firme and stable holding, and for to hold whatsoever the saids commissioners, or anie three of them, doe righteouslie in the premisses, to the glorie of God and his kirk.

THE TENOR OF THE ARTICLES OF THE GENERALL ASSEMBLIE PROPONED TO MY LORD REGENT'S GRACE.

"In the first, that stipends may be granted to superintendents all countreis destitut therof, whether it be where there are no bishop or where there are bishops and may not discharge their cure; sucl as the Bishop of St Andrewes and Glasgow.

"Item, That in all burrow touns, where the ministers therof a displaced, and serve at other kirks, that their ministers who serve them of before be restored again, to await on their cures, and the be not oblished to anie other kirk; or ellis, that others be place in the said touns.

"Item, That his Grace will give commissioun to certane gent men in everie countrie, that incest, adulterie, witchecraft, and sucl odious crimes wherewith the countrie is replenished, may be puished.

In the tenth sessioun, the commissioners deputed to confer with the regent produced their conference hinc inde, in writt, which conference the Assemblie caused deliver to Mr George Mackesone solicitor for the kirk, to be givin out in copeis to bishops, superint tendents, commissioners, and ministers, as he sall be required, upor their reasonable charges. Being involved also in the persecution raised against the Protestants in that kingdom, the dispersed traffickers in heretical publications were to be found even in Scotland, where they we called "crammers," from the Polish word kramarz, a pedlar.

berlanrie, under bishops and other beneficed persons, wherethrough they are avocated from their cures, and give occasioun of slaunder, it is ordeanned, that from hencefurth no minister use or exerce the said office of chamberlanrie or collectarie, under whatsomever beneficed persons, least they be abstracted from their vocations; and that the controveeners be deprived of their office.

- "2. Forasmuche as it is understood by the Generall Assemblie, that there are sindrie who committ adulterie with others men's wives, and, after decease of their owne wives, marieth them whom they had before polluted with adulterie, it is ordeanned, that bishops, superintendents, and commissioners of provinces, charge all suche persons so joynned to separat themselves, and to absteane from other, till it be decided by the judge ordinar if the said mariage be lawfull or not, under the paine of excommunicatioun to be executed against the disobeyers.

- "4. It is ordeanned, that bishops, superintendents, and commissioners, that sall be found negligent in their office, not to execute their debtful charge in their visitatioun and teaching, or culpable in life, sall be punished and corrected according to the qualitie of their offences, ather by admonitioun, publict repentance, deprivatioun for a time, or deprivatioun simpliciter, as the Assemblie sall thinke good.
- "5. ents, that the superintendents may report to the Generall Assemblie, to the end they may be delivered to suche as sall be appointed by the lords for receaving the same.

A COMMISSION TO REVISE BOOKES.

Forasmuche as, by printing and setting furth to light of work repugnant to the truthe of God's Word, or conteaning manifest er rour, the weake may be seduced, the Assemblie gave power to Mr Robert Pont, Mr James Lowsone, Mr David Lindsay, David Fergusone, Johne Brand, ministers, and Mr Clement Littill, one of the Commissioners of Edinburgh, or anie three or foure of then conjunctlie, to visite and oversee all maner of bookes or worke that are offered to be printed, and to give their judgement there by their subscriptioun and hand-writt, for benefite of the reader and this commissioun to endure till the nixt Assemblie. Mr Georg Buchanan, Keeper of the Privie Seale, Mr Peter Young, Pede gogue to the King, Mr Andrew Melvill, Mr James Lowsone, wer appointed to revise Mr Patrik Adamson's paraphrase in Latir verse upon the Booke of Job, and, if they finde it consonant to the truthe, to authorize the same, with the testimonie of their hand writt and subscriptioun.

Mr James Ritchie was chosin to be Clerk to the Assembli their scribe Johne Gray being deceased.

COMMISSION TO INDICT AN ASSEMBLIE.

Becaus it was necessar, that incace there be a parliament, the Assemblie be resolved a space before in such things as they are propone, or incace of anie other weightie caus requiring necessar lie the conveening of the Assemblie, it was thought good that the Superintendent of Lothiane, Mr James Lowsone, and Mr David Lindsey, advertise the brethrein to conveene within a competent space before, as they sall thinke needfull, which convention sall be accompted an Assemblie.

MR A. MELVILL PRINCIPALL IN GLASGOW COLLEDGE.

Mr Andrew Melvill went to Glasgow about the first of November, where he found Mr Peter Blekburne, latelie come from Sanct Andrewes, entered in the colledge, and begunne to teache, conforme to the order of Sanct Andrewes. But Mr Andrew entering Principall, all the order was submitted to him. He permitted Mr Peter to have a care of the colledge rents, which then were verie small, consisting onlie of some annuells, and sett himself onlie to teache. He taught usuallie twise in the day. Beside his ordinar professioun of Divinitie and the Oriental tongues, he taught the Greeke Grammar, Ramus' Dialectick, Talæus' Rhetorick, Ramus' Arithmetick and Geometrie, the Elements of Euclide, Aristotle's Ethicks, Politicks, and Physicks, some of Plato's Dialogues, Dionysius' Geographie, Hunterus' Tables, and a part of Fernell. M.D.LXXV.

THE THRETTIETH GENERALL ASSEMBLIE.

TRIELL OF BISHOPS, SUPERINTENDENTS, ETC.

In the triell of superintendents, bishops, and commissioners, the Bishop of Murrey being removed, it was remembred by some bre-threin that his electioun and admissioun must be first acknow ledged, which was vitt undecided, before he be tried in life and doctrine as a bishop. Mr Johne Wynrame, Pryour of Portmooke etc., Mr Andrew Hay, Commissioner of Renfrew, etc., Mr David Cunninghame, Mr Andrew Melvill, Principall of the Pedagogie o Glasgow, were appointed to trie the processe of his electioun and admissioun. They gave their judgement in the fourth sessioun The bishop was called for, and demanded, if he had satisfied the act of the Assemblie concerning the purgatioun of the slaunder He answered, that he compered before the Bishop of Sanct An drewes, now resting with the Lord, and satisfied the act; bu could alledge no witnesses to prove his assertion. The General Assemblie, therefore, gave commissioun to Mr Johne Wynerame Mr James Wilkie, Rector of Sanct Andrewes, Mr William Cocl Commissioner of Sanct Andrewes, to take the same purgatiou which he sould have made before the Bishop and kirk of Sanc Andrewes. Becaus he was presentlie under medicine, and migh not travell, to give a prooffe of his qualificatioun, Mr Johne Wyr rame, Mr George Hay, and Mr Andrew Melvill, were appointe to confer with him upon the heeds of religioun, and to report the judgment to the Assemblie. Mr Johne Wynrame, superintene ent, reported, that the bishop was content to purge himself befohim and the kirk of Sanct Andrewes, if it be not found in the bookes that he hath purged himself of fornicatioun before ar since his inauguratioun; and becaus he is sickelie, and under m dicine, so that he cannot presentlie give specimen doctrina, crave a delay. The Assemblie appointed the same commissioners to ta his purgatioun upon the slaunder before his inauguratioun, and conferre with him upon the heeds of religioun. The bishop him self being present in the tenth sessioun, the Assemblie ordean him to purge himself before the commissioners deputed to the effect, and them to report his purgatioun, and their judgement his knowledge in the Scriptures.

The Bishop of Brechin compleanned upon the Bishop of Dukelden, that in the last Assemblie he sould have alledged he w compelled by the umquhile Erle of Argile, now resting with God, to give out pensiouns, and desired it to be proved. The other offered in writt to give in his declaratioun, wherin he was preassed; and if he hath failed in termes, he sall referre to the Assemblie. The Assemblie appointed him to exhibite the declaration in writt.

The Bishop of Dunkelden being delated for not excommunicating the Erle of Atholl, answered, that the erle desired conference with some of the ministrie, for resolving of his doubts. The Assemblie granted. They reported, that he was not fullie resolved in sindrie heeds of religioun, and desired that he might have some farther conference; promising, upon his honour, that he sould assist the Bishop of Dunkelden, for punishing of offences within his bounds, and setting fordward of his synodall assemblies, and that no slaunder nor offence sould be found within his hous. The Assemblie assigned unto him betwixt and Midsommer to be resolved; otherwise, ordeanned the Bishop of Dunkelden to proceed against him with excommunication, under the paine conteaned in the Assemblie preceeding made therupon; and in like maner to proceed against his ladie.

The Bishop of Glasgow was compleaned upon, that sindrie Papists within his bounds joyned to the kirk outwardlie, but did not communicat. He promised to execute suche discipline against them as the Assemblie sould prescrive. Becaus the bounds belonging to his jurisdiction were so large that one man was not able to visie all the kirks, the Assemblie appointed Mr Patrik Adamsone and Mr Andrew Hay to visite certane parts and bounds limited in their commissioun.

The elect Bishop of Dumblane, Mr Andrew Grahame, sonne to the Laird of Morphie, presented to the chapter of Dumblane by the regent, the Assemblie desired him to give prooffe of his doctrine before the brethrein in the Counsel-hous, upon the text which sall be appointed by them to him. Some were appointed to trie him by questiouns. Becaus he was presented under name of a preacher, and yitt had not beene one, some moved a doubt. The Assemblie findeth, that it is not yitt decided that all bishops sould be first preachers. Alwise, if he be qualified, that the presentatioun is to be obeyed. And yitt, for further triell, appointeth to him to exercise in the Magdalene Chappell, before the bishops, superintendents, and ministers, that may be present, and speciallie the ministers of Edinburgh, and so manie of the chapter as may be there, upon the beginning of the fyft chapter of the Epistle to the Romans.

Mr Alexander Hepburne, elect of Rosse, after visitatioun of the processe of his electioun, was ordeanned to give a new prooffe of his doctrine and literature, in presence of the Assemblie, upon the last part of the thrid chapter of Zacharie. He exercised before the greatest part of the brethrein, and his doctrine was approved with one consent.

Mr George Hay, Commissioner of Aberdeene, being compleanned upon, that he executed not discipline against haynous offenders, referred himself to his bookes of visitatioun.

Mr Patrik Adamsone, Commissioner of Galloway, confessed he had not used that diligence which lyeth to the full executioun of his office, becaus no stipend was appointed for the same, and yitt did, pro virili. This man could not worke without wages.

The Bishop of Galloway, Mr Alexander Gordoun, gave in a supplicatioun, wherin he declared, that he might not compeere before them when they had ordeanned him to be excommunicated; and craved to mak satisfaction without sackcloath, in anie kirk, speciallie within his owne jurisdictioun. It was disputed, whether, in respect of the alledged impediment, he ought to be heard to answere to the heeds of his accusatioun. In end, it was granted. The heeds of his accusatioun were read in his presence. swered to the First, that he was compelled by the authoritie that then was to accept the ministrie, and was chosin by the flocke To the Secund, he granted he preached the queen's then present. authoritie to be lawfull, but ought to injoy the priviledge of the To the Thrid, that he made prayers for her, or pacificatioun. otherwise, would not have beene suffered to preache. To the Fourth, he denied the condemning and accusing of the ministers.

To the Fyft, confessed that he, with certane others, protested in parliament in the first regent's time, that incace the queene were sett at libertie, that their promise and faith were freed. The Sixt he denyed. After he had answered, he besought them to consider his cace, seing, in God's presence he damned his former offence. He was removed; and after long reasonning it was concluded, partlie upon consideratioun of his owne submissioun, partlie for the regent's requeist, he sould confesse his offences, in presence of the congregatioun conveened in the Abbey kirk, upon the Lord's day nixt to come, without sackcloath.

MR THOMAS MAKCALZEAN'S SUPPLICATION.

Mr Thomas Makcalzeane, one of the Senators of the Colledge of Justice, was debarred from the Lord's Supper by the kirk of Edinburgh, becaus he had remained in the toun in time of the late rebellioun, and had not submitted himself to their discipline, he being an elder. He gave in his supplicatioun, protesting he remained upon just feare, which might fall in a constant man, and upon compulsioun. Upon this declaration of his conscience, the Assemblie ordeanned him to compeere before the pulpitt of Edinburgh, in his owne gowne, to confesse his offence, and so to be receaved.

COMMISSIONS.

Becaus it was generallie compleaned by the brethrein, that the generall acts of the Assemblie, and sindrie questiouns decided, had not come to their knowledge, that none sould pretend ignorance, the Assemblie willed their brethrein, Mr Robert Pont, Mr Robert Matlane, Deane of Aberdeene, Johne Brand, Mr James Carmichaell, to peruse the acts of the Generall Assemblies, marke suche as are generall, that therafter they may be extracted out of the booke.

The Assemblie appointed Mr Robert Pont, Proveist of the Tri-nitie College, Mr Andrew Hay, Commissioner of Cliddisdaill, Mr Patrik Adamsone, Minister at Pasley, Mr Johne Row, Minister at Sanct Johnstoun, Johne Duncansone, Minister to the King's Hous, Mr Andrew Melvill, Principall of the Pedagogie of Glasgow, Mr Johne Spotswood, Superintendent of Lothiane, or anie two of them whom it sould please my lord regent's Grace to nominat, to conferre with his Grace's commissioners upon the jurisdictioun and policie of the kirk, and to bring the copies of the said conference with them, that all provinces may have the use of the same, that they may be better resolved when maters sall come to open reasoning.

Forasmuche as a parliament is to be expected shortlie, the Assemblie giveth power to the ministers of Edinburgh and Leith to warne the bishops, superintendents, and commissioners of countreis, that they may warne the rest of their brethrein, to conveene and consult upon suche things as sall be thought good to be propouned in parliament, which conventioun sall be holdin for an Assemblie.

ACTS.

For redressing of the neglect of the exercise of prophecie, and negligence of bishops, superintendents, and commissioners not attending, the samine being so necessar a meane to the furtherance of sound doctrine, it is statuted and ordeanned, that all bishops, superintendents, and commissioners, within their bounds, be carefull and diligent to interteane the said exercise upon the dayes appointed thereto, and speciallie the Superintendent of Fife.

2. For a smuche as the greatest part of the interpreters of the Scriptures have commented in the Latine tongue, the Assemblie hath concluded, that from this time furth none sall be admitted to the function of the ministrie by bishops, superintendents, and commissioners of countries, but suche as understand the Latine tongue able to interpret Latine commentars, and to speeke congruous Latine: except suche as, by examination of the Generall Assemblie all be found able, by reasoun of their singular graces and gifts, to xerce that functioun, without knowledge of the Latine tongue.

- 3. Seing it becometh the true messengers of the word of salvatioun, not onlie to beare in their conscience a good testimonie of nfained humilitie and simplicitie of heart, but also, in externall abite and behaviour, to represent the sobrietie and humilitie of acir mindes, that the mouthes of this godlesse generatioun, which re opened to blaspheme the godlie calling of the ministrie, may be nutt up from just occasioun of slaunder, it is ordeanned by the eterminatioun of the whole Assemblie, that all that serve within the kirk, apparell themselves in a comelie and decent maner, as becometh the gravitie of their vocatioun; and that they conforme neir wives and families therto, that no slaunder nor offence arise to be kirk of God therethrough. Johne Areskine of Dun, Mr Antew Hay, Mr James Lowsone, Mr Johne Wynrame, Mr George lay, were appointed to advise upon the particulars which were to be eschewed in apparell.
- 4. Forasmuche as it is considered that the playing of clerkayes, comedeis, or tragedeis, upon the canonicall parts of the criptures, induceth and bringeth with it a contempt and profanaoun of the same, it is thought meete and concluded, that no clerkayes, comedeis, or tragedeis, be made upon the canonicall Scriptures, ather New or Old, in time comming, ather upon the Lord's ay, or upon a worke day: that the contraveeners, if they be misters, be seeluded from their functioun, and that others be corted by the discipline of the kirk. It is likewise ordeanned, that an ticle be givin to suche as confer upon the policie, that comedeis, agedeis, and other profane playes, which are not made upon autentick parts of Scripture, may be considered before they be eted publictlie; and that it be not acted on the Lord's Day.
- 5. The Assemblie referreth to bishops, superintendents, and ommissioners of countreis, against ministers proceeding to the ariage of parteis, lawfull impediment being propouned, which after is found to have been truelie alledged.
- 6. The Assemblie ordeanneth an article to be givin in to them that reasoun upon the policie and jurisdiction of the kirk, that law be made, that no bishop be elected to a bishoprick by the chapter before he give prooffe of his doctrine before the General Assemblie, and triell to be takin by them of his doctrine, life, and conversation. The brethrein that had travelled in the policie and jurisdictioun of the kirk were appointed to confer their travelle and after, present the same to the Assemblie. In the meane time the Assemblie dischargeth and inhibiteth all chapters to proceed to the election of anie bishop without triell takin before of his doctrine and conversation before them, and testimoniall of their report, that therafter the chapter may proceed.

7. Forasmuche as sindrie who were Papists have, since the act of parliament, made confessioun of their faith, and yitt have not participat of the Lord's Supper, pretending vaine excuses, whereby it appeareth they were never truelie converted, it is ordeanned, that bishops, superintendents, and ministers, in all parts, admonishe the saids persons to participat with the rest of the congregatioun; and if they disobey, to proceed against them, as relapsed, with the ser tence of excommunicatioun.

THE HAMMILTONS' SITHEMENT TO ANGUS.

Upon the seventh of Marche, the Lord Hammiltoun, and Claud Abbot of Pasley, made publict sithement¹ to the Erle of Angus, i the palace of Halyrudhous, comming the whole bounds of the inner court bare-footted and bare-headed; and, sitting down of their knees, delivered him the sword by the point, for the slaught of Westerraw. This reconciliatioun greeved speciallie William Dowglas of Lochlevin, who desisted not from persute of the slaughter of his brother, the Erle of Murrey. He persued the Lor Hammiltoun, comming from Arbrothe, so that he was constrained to retire to Arbrothe. Another time, when he was ryding through Fife, he constrained him to flee to Dairsie, and lay about it to the regent sent and charged them to depart.

A DAY OF TRUCE.

Upon the seventh of Juliè there was a day of truce holdin: Reddinburne, where the wardans of both marches mett, but puld not agree. From words they fell to strokes, and manie were) slaine on both sides. There was another meeting appointed by the Queene of England and the regent the 23d of August. hey agreed, seing the slaughter was equall on both sides, and the agent promised to rander the goods demanded, or the persons demselves, who were bound to rander.

THE THRETTIE-FIRST GENERALL ASSEMBLIE.

TRIELL OF BISHOPS, SUPERINTENDENTS, ETC.

In the triell of bishops, superintendents, and commissioners, ohne Durie, one of the ministers of Edinburgh, protested that e triell of a bishop prejudge not the reasons which he, and other ethrein of his minde, had against the name and office of a bishop. he Bishop of Glasgow, before negligent in preaching, was experted to be diligent.

The Bishop of Dunkelden was compleanned upon, that he made residence within his diocie; that there is no exercise keeped ere; that he wrote a letter to George Lundie, Minister of Craund, to serve equallie foure kirks, by course, upon the Lord's day, der the paine of deprivatioun; that the ordinance concerning e Erle of Atholl was not obeyed; that he had dilapidated the trimonie of the benefice. He answered to the First, That he ade little residence in anie one place, as may appeare by his soke of visitatioun; and was ofter in Dunkelden, since the last Assemblie, than in anie other place. To the Secund, That the meetting of brethrein for exercise was holdin, and the ministrie r sorted thither. To the Fourth, Granted he had not excommun cated the erle, but produced two of his bills. To the Last, I answered, That he had sett a part of the benefice in few to the po sessors of the ground, without diminutioun of the rentall, and con fessed that he had sett a nynteene yeere tack of threttie-six cha der of victuall of teind, for six shilling eight penneis boll, to the Erle of Argile. The Assemblie ordeanned him to mak residence at Dunkelden betwixt and the nixt Assemblie, under paine of e communicatioun. They continued the determination of their cer sure for dilapidatioun of his benefice, till the Acts of the Assembl be considered. They decerned that he had incurred the pair conteanned in the act and ordinance of the Assemblie, for not e communicating the Erle of Atholl. In the secund sessioun th Assemblie appointed some brethrein to reasoun with him, as suche as he would associat to him, tuiching the dilapidatioun of l benefice, and to consider why the said dilapidatioun be not a ca of deprivatioun. He desired that Mr Johne Grahame might had to reasoun for him. The Assemblie rejected this novelt and injoyned him to answere in his owne persoun, and choose ar brother of the ministrie to reasoun for him. In the fyft session he confessed that the setting of the tack of threttie-six chalder victual to the Erle of Argile was not done voluntarlie: that dive times he repented, and was willing to have it reformed, ather favour or good-will, or by processe of law, wherin my lord reger Grace had promised him his assistance, and to travell with Erle of Argile that it may be reformed. He sought also the gent's advice, that all processe against him might be intermit to the nixt Assemblie. The Generall Assemblie, willing to satis the regent's requeist, and looking that, by his Grace's travells, procurement of the said bishop, the mater sould be reformed, c tinued their processe in the same force and effect, till the first of the nixt Assemblie, to which the bishop was wairned. Bec he was presentlie suspended from his office for not excommunic.

ing the Erle of Atholl, the Assemblie ordeanned a letter to be directed to the Erle of Atholl and his ladie, requiring them, if they sute anie conference, to choose three or foure of the brethrein, and Mr Johne Row, Commissioner appointed for these parts, whom the brethrein command to meete in Dunkelden and St Johnstoun, to that effect. Which conference being had, and they not resolved betwixt and Martimesse, ordeaneth Mr Johne Row, and the said persons, to pronounce the sentence of excommunication against them. And if they refuse the said conference, ordeaneth, that Mr Johne Row, with assistance of the Superintendents of Angus and Fife, William Christesone, Minister at Dundie, pronounce the sentence in Dundie, or, if they be stopped, in St Johnstoun.

Alexander Bishop of Galloway presented to the Assemblie the tenor of his satisfactioun, and desired to know, if he had satisfied the sentence pronounced by them. They found it satisfied and fulfilled in all points. As for the interpretatioun of his suspensioun, they declared that they would find no fault that he preache the Word truelie, albeit he stand suspended from commissioun of visitation. Alwise, exhorted him to concurre and assist the Commissioner of Galloway in his visitatioun, for keeping good order and discipline within these bounds.

Mr Thomas Howesone produced an act of the Synodall Assemblie of Murrey, bearing that there was no questioun moved at the Bishop of Murrey his electioun, and what purgatioun he would make of the slanderous bruite raised upon him; and, farther, excused the said bishop his absence, becaus he was slaundered in the last Assemblie by Mr Walter Balcalquall, as a fornicator with the Ladie Ardrosse. The Assemblie judgeth the excuses frivolous.

The Superintendent of Fife was compleanned upon, that the exercise is takin from St Leonard's to the parish kirk of Sanct Andrewes, and yitt nather preaching nor exercise keeped that day. He answered, there was an order sett down for the exercise, and a roll for the exercisers, and not the lesse no exercise hath beene keeped since Easter bygane a yeere. The Assemblie ordeanned the exercise to be restored again to St Leonard's Colledge, and the Fryday preaching to be keeped, yitt Mr Robert Hammiltoun, M nister of Sanct Andrewes, to be heard when he cometh to the Assemblie.

The Commissioner of Aberdeen was compleanned upon, that the readers and ministers in the countrie keeped certan patron and fee tivall dayes; conveened, prayed, preached, and so fostered the people in superstitioun. Item, That there was no discipline keeped within his diocie. To the First, he answered, That some ministers of the countrie thinke it lawfull; and, for his owne opinious he wished it sould be takin away by an ordinance of the Assemblie. As for the Secund, referreth him to his bookes of vistatioun.

Mr Robert Grahame, Commissioner of Cathnesse, was conpleanned upon, that he was not diligent in his visitatioun: that I gave a warrant to marie the Earl of Cathnesse' daughter, divorce for adulterie from her husband, upon the Laird of Inneis; and he moe offices nor he was able to discharge. He answered, he we compelled to come hither foure times in the yeere; that he gave to her suche libertie as the kirk giveth to others, she having made her repentance bare-headed and bare-footed; that he was no Cormissioner of Rosse, howbeit, he supported the countrie this yee The Assemblie discharged him his commissioun, and ordeannet that he be not admitted again till farther advisement.

NON-RESIDENTS AND DILAPIDATORS DELATED.

James Nicolsone, collector-clerk, exhibited to the Assemblie roll of the ministers that had waisted their benefices, and made residence at their kirks; of which number was Mr George Raisay, Minister of Foulden, Mr Johne Colvill, Chanter of Glagow, and Minister of Kilbryde, Mr Patrik Adamsone, and Mandrew Polwart, Ministers at Pasley, George Sinclair, Chancell of Cathnesse. The whole number were eight-and-twentie. So of them compeered in the sixt sessioun. Mr George Monro lexcuse, that he might not travell to his kirk for deadlie fead, w accepted. Mr Patrik Dowglas confessed he made no residence, by reasonn he had gottin nothing to serve for. Mr Andrew Polwart was ordeanned to serve at Pasley.

CHRISTMAS KEEPED AT DUMFREIS.

Mr Peter Watsone, Commissioner of Nithisdaill, compleanned that the toun of Dumfreis, at Christmasse-day last bypast, seing that nather he nor the reader would nather teache nor read upon these dayes, brought a reader of their owne, with tabret and whissell, and caused him read the prayers; which exercise they used all the dayes of Yuile. The Assemblie thought good this complaint sould be intimated to my lord regent's Grace.

ARTICLES FOR SUPPLICATION.

Some brethrein were appointed to visie the bookes of visitatiouns of bishops, superintendents, and commissioners, according to the custome; others to read and answere bills, complaints, and questions. Others were appointed to penne the articles which are to be presented to my lord regent's Grace, and to produce them to the Assemblie, to be considered. Commission was givin to the Bishop of Glasgow, the Superintendents of Angus and Lothiane, Mr Johne Row, and Mr David Lindsey, to present unto his Grace these articles, to confer with him upon the same, and to report his Grace's answere against the 12th day of this instant, before the Assemblie be dissolved. The tenour of the articles followeth:—

"Imprimis, For planting and preaching of the Word throughout the whole realme, it is desired, that so manie ministers as may be had, who as yitt are unplaced, may be receaved as weill in the countrie, to releeve the charge of them who have manie kirks, as otherwise, throughout the whole realme; with superintendents or commissioners within these bounds where bishops are not, and to helpe suche bishops as have over great charge: and reasonable livings to be appointed to the forsaids, as also payment to them that have travelled before, as commissioners, in the yeere of God 157 and 1574, and so furth in times comming, without which the trave of suche men will cease.

"Secundlie, That suche impediments be removed away as ma hinderance to the progresse of doctrine; as abundance of vice in a parts of this realme unpunished, mercats upon the Sabboth-day and ministers troubled in execution of their office.

"Thridlie, That the order alreadie tane toward the poore mabe putt in full execution; and, to that effect, that a portioun of the tithes, which is their owne patrimonie, als weill of the two parts of the thrid part, may be imployed for their sustentatioun, according as necessitie craveth. And to this effect, that the hospitals which have beene of old, may be restored to their owne use, notwithstancing anie title made therof to other persons; and also, that such ordinar almous as hath beene appointed furth of abbeyes or oth benefices, by long consuetude, may be payed to the poore, as before.

"Fourthlie, Becaus the schooles are the fountane from whice ministers must flow, that provisioun be made for them, not only for such as remaine within the realme, but also for men of goingyne, who by the kirk sall be found meet to visite other country and universiteis, for their furtherance in learning; and cheefe for Glasgow, becaus it is but newlie erected, and hath not such provisioun as other universiteis.

"Fyftlie, That suche assignations as have been appointed the prince and the kirk, and are altered without advice of t kirk, may be repaired; and that, in times comming, suche assign tiouns as sall be appointed be not altered, without advice of t kirk, otherwise no minister sall be sure of his assignation.

"Sixtlie, Where ministers produce letters of horning to the ger rall upon suche persons as are assigned to them for payment, t said collector may be caused to mak payment to the said ministe

"Item, That all dayes that heeretofore have beene keeped he beside the Sabboth-day, suche as Yuile-day, Sanets' dayes, a suche others, may be abolished, and a civill penaltic ordean against the keepers therof, by ceremoneis, banketting, playing, feasting, and suche other vaniteis.

"Item, That suche ministers and readers as ather by infirmitie or age become unable, may have their stipends during their lyfe-times.

"Item, That the clerk of the Assemblie be answered of the ordinarie stipend appointed to the clerk of before, namelie, in respect of his labours, multiplied by writting of the whole ministers' and readers' letters, als weill for answering them of their stipends, as of their gleebs and manses, gratis; and that his name may be inserted in the booke of the assignation, with his stipend, as use was; and siclyke to be answered of the yeere bypast that he hath served."

The commissioners directed with these articles reported to the Assemblie in the sixt sessioun, that his Grace was minded to ryde shortlie to the borders: and becaus some of the articles craved the advice of the counsell, which could not presentlie be had, desired that the Assemblie might give commission to some of the brethrein to await upon his Grace and counsell, to confer upon the said articles, and receave answere. The Assemblie ordeanned the same commissioners to await, or so manie as may be present, speciallie, at the first day of November nixt to come.

The Assemblie ordeanned an article to be presented to the Lords of Sessioun for ministers and readers, that their actions persued before them may be exped with diligence, least they be abstracted from their charge. Mr James Lowsone, James Bishop of Glasgow, Mr Andrew Hay, Mr George Hay, were appointed to conveene with Alexander Hay, clerk of the Privie Counsell, to conceave an urticle in writt concerning the unioun of parish kirks.

ACTS.

It appeared to some of the brethrein, that the long continuance of commissioners in their offices would breed ambitioun and inconveniences; therefore, it was thought a mater to be consulted upon, whether it were expedient the commissioners of provinces sould be changed from yeere to yeere, from the countreis where they travell, to other countries. After long reasonning, the greatest part of the Assemblie thought best, where able men might be had, that a veerelie change be made; and for the present, Mr George Hay was appointed to be Commissioner of Cathnesse, and Mr Johne Craig, Minister of Aberdeene, to be Commissioner of Aberdeen in his rowme. Mr David Lindsey was appointed to visite Murrey, and to consider the bishop's diligence, and complaints of ministers in the countrie against him, during his residence there. Mr Johne Row was appointed to visite the bounds apperteaning to the Bishop of Dunkelden's jurisdictioun, upon the bishop's charges. Some commissioners were continued till the nixt Assemblie, that they advised upon fitt men. The Superintendents of Fife and Lothian were continued in their offices respective. It is to be observed, that Mr Johne Wynrame, Superintendent of Stratherne, is, and hath beene again, Superintendent of Fife since the death of the last bishop; and hence it is, that in the Assembleis he is called sometime Superintendent of Fife, sometime Superintendent of Stratherne.

2. Becaus the apparrelling of the ministrie was omitted in the last Assemblie, the brethrein appointed before to forme the act were again desired to goe apart, which they did, and presented the same to the Assemblie, which was found reasonable, and all the brethrein serving in the ministrie ordeanned to conforme themselves and their wives therunto. The tenour wherof followeth: "Forasmuche as a comelie and decent apparrell is requisite in all, namelie, ministers, and suche as beare functioun in the kirk, first, we thinke all kinde of browdering unseemlie; all begaires¹ of velvet, in gowne, hose, or coat, and all superfluous and vaine cutting out, steeking with silkes, all kinde of costlie sewing on pasments,² or sumptuous and large steeking with silkes; all kinde of costlie sewing, or variant hewes in sarkes; all kinde of light and variant hewes in clothing, as reid, blew, yellow, and suche like, which declare the lightnesse of the minde; all wearing of rings, bracelets, buttons of silver, gold, or other mettall; all kinde of superfluiteis of cloath in making of hose; all using of plaids in the kirk by readers or ministers, namelie, in the time of their ministrie, and using of their office; all kinde of gownning, cutting, doubletting, or breekes of velvet, satine, taffatie, or suche like; and costlie giltings of whingers and knives, and suche like; all silk hatts, and hatts of diverse and light colours: but that their whole habite be of grave colour, as blacke, russett, sad gray, sad browne; or searges, worsett, chamlett, grogram, lylis worset, or suche like; that the good Word of God, by them and their immoderatnesse, be not slandered. And the wives of the ministers to be subject to the same order."

QUESTIONS DECIDED.

Tuiching the question propouned by certan brethrein, whether if bishops, as they are now in the Kirk of Scotland, have their functioun grounded upon the Word of God or not; or, if the chapters appointed for creating of them ought to be tolerated in this reformed kirk; the Assemblie appointed Mr Johne Craig, minister of Aberdeen, Mr James Lowsone, minister of Edinburgh, and Mr Andrew Melvill, Principall of the Colledge of Glasgow, for the one part, Mr George Hay, Commissioner of Cathnesse, Mr Johne Row, minister of Perth, and Mr David Lindsey, minister at Leith, on the other part, to reason and confer upon it, and to report their judgement to the Assemblie before the dissolving therof, if they be resolved. They reported their judgement in the tenth sessioun in writt, as after followeth; viz. They thinke it not expedient presentlie to answere directlie to the first questioun; but if anie bishop sall be found who hath not suche qualiteis as the Word of God requireth, that he be tried by the Generall Assemblie de novo, and so deposed.

THE POINTS WHERIN THEY AGREE CONCERNING THE OFFICE OF A BISHOP OR SUPERINTENDENT.

"First, The name of BISHOP is commoun to all them who have a particular flocke, over the which they have a peculiar charge, als weill to preache the Word, as to minister the sacraments, and execute ecclesiasticall discipline, with consent of their elders. And this is their cheefe function of the Word of God. Attour, out of this number may be chosin some, to have power to oversee and visite suche reasonable bounds beside their owne flocke, as the generall kirk sall appoint; and in these bounds to appoint ministers, with consent of the ministers of that province, and with consent of the flocke to whome they sall be appointed: also, to appoint elders and deacons in everie particular congregation where there is none, with consent of the people therof; and to suspend ministers for reasonable causes, with consent of the ministers forsaid."

The brethrein appointed to decide questions reported their judgement as followeth:—

- 1. Ministers solemnizing the band of mariage betwixt parteis who were refused by their ordinar minister, becaus they keeped hous together uncontracted, and wounded him to death when they were desired to obey the discipline of the kirk, notwithstanding of no satisfactioun made, are to suffer the same censure which Mr Patrik Creigh suffered.
- 2. It being demanded, whether if the contract of mariage sould be made before the proclamatioun of bannes, by words of the present time, the man saying to the woman, "I take thee to my wife," and the woman saying, "I take thee to my husband;" or sould there be no contract or promise made, whill the instant time of solemnization of the mariage? it was answered, "Lett the order observed in the Kirk of Scotland be keeped, that the parteis come before the Assemblie, and give in their names, that their bannes may be proclamed, and no further ceremonie used."
 - 3. Ecclesiasticall judicatoreis have, by the law of God, power to cognosce and decerne upon hereseis, witchecraft, blasphemie of the name of God, and violation of the Sabboth day; speciallie upon the quidditie therof, without prejudging the punishment of the civill magistrat.

- 4. Two parteis maried publictlie by the reader, and having mutuall cohabitation together at bed and board after, if the minister of the same kirk, at the woman's desire, caused her sweare that her husband had never carnall copulatioun with her, and therupon, without asking farther questioun at the man, decerneth them divorced; the man alwise disassenting, and still claiming her to be his lawfull wife, the divorcement is not lawfull; and the minister meriteth suspension, and to mak his publict repentance.
- 5. It is not convenient that an officer of arms be admitted to be a reader in the kirk.
- 6. No law established, that a young man, after he hath had carnall deale with a woman esteemed a virgin, no mariage preceding, nor yitt alledged by her, may be compelled by anie particular kirk, at the sute ather of the woman or the parents, ather to marie her, or to pay her dowrie.
- 7. A bishop may not transport ministers from one kirk to another, without their owne consents and of the kirks where they serve, but with advice of the Assemblie.
- 8. Barnes gottin before mariage, lawfull mariage following, are lawfull.
- 9. The minister that baptized a murtherer's bairne, not of his owne parish, upon a Moonday, without repentance of the murtherer remaining at the king's horne, deserveth depositioun.
- 10. Where Easter-day is superstitiouslie keeped, it is not thought meet that the communioun be ministred that day, notwithstanding privat persons profane the Lord's day in privat houses.

The regent, according to his promise, sent the Laird of Carmichaell, wardane, to England, becaus he had offended first at the day of truce, as was alledged. But he went no farther than Yorke, where he remained the space of five weekes, and returned, after he had submitted himself to the Queen of England.

A JUSTICE AIR.

The regent held a Justice Air in Februar. Sindrie theeves were hanged, and others were compelled to pay a great fyne. He caused the toun of Edinburgh pay a thousand merks for bullion.

THE THRETTIE-SECUND GENERALL ASSEMBLIE.

The Generall Assemblie conveened in the Upper Tolbuith of Edinburgh the 24th of Aprile 1576. Mr Johne Row, minister at Perth, was chosin Moderator.

TRIELL OF BISHOPS, &c.

In the triell of bishops, superintendents, and commissioners, the Bishop of Glasgow being removed, was compleanned upon for not preaching in the toun of Glasgow since he entered in his office, and rare preaching ellis where. 2. That no injunctions were givin to adulterers delated to him, nor they summouned to receave injunctions. 3. That kirks within his diocie were not repaired. 4. That he had no particular flocke. 5. That, being required before his removing, by the Moderator, to rander the commissioun of visitatioun which he had in the hands of the Assemblie, he answered not directlie. Being called in again, he answered to the First, that to preache was the good gift of God, which is not equallie bestowed on all; and excused himself, that he was not so able, nor so liberallie doted with understanding as others: Alwise, it could not be denied but he preached, speciallie at Givven, and other kirks, and was willing to doe his duetie. To the Secund, that he remembreth not he hath failed: if the particulars were expressed, he could answere further. To the Thrid, he compleaneth as they doe. To the Fourth, that he receaved no particular flocke in the entrie of his office, nor no questicun was then moved therupon: but if the Assemblie thinke that he sould be astricted to a particular flocke, he sould ather obey the ordinance of the Assemblie heerin, or give place to others. To the Fyft, if the Assemblie findeth that the commissioun which he hath sould endure onlie from yeere to yeere, he is content with the censure of the Assemblie.

The Bishop of Dumblane being removed, was compleanned upon, that he had not taught since his entrie to his office; nor maketh residence, nor hath a particular flocke. When he was called in again, he answered, he had not as yitt receaved anie fruicts of the benefice, had beene diseased these three weekes bygane, and promised amendment in time comming. Being asked if he would dimit the commission of visitatioun, answered, he was content, if the Assemblie thought it good.

The Bishop of Murrey was delated, that he had no particular flocke. 2. Nixt, was charged by Mr Patrik Balfour, that his stipend was changed by negligence of the bishop, and his name left blanke in the rolls, and a dead person putt in the rowme of another. 3. That he was not able to edifie the flocke. Answering to the First, he granted he had no particular flocke: to the Secund, promised to tak order with the clerk, that if anie wrong be done, it may be reformed; and said, there was no dead man's name in the bookes. Farther, he declared that he was presentlie under processe of horning, and by the regent's tolerance come this day to present himself to the Assemblie. The Assemblie understanding, by his owne confession, that he was at the horne, ordeanned him to be removed till he were relaxed.

The Bishop of Rosse being required to dimit in the hands of the Assemblie the commission of visitation which he had of the Assemblie, condescended, and was exhorted to be diligent in visitatioun.

Mr James Paton, Bishop of Dunkelden, being inquired what he had done since the last Assemblie for repairing of the tack made to the Erle of Argile, answered, that after the regent had conferred with the erle, he had promised to his Grace and to himself to satisfie the Assemblie. He desired delay till his comming, and till he conferred with the brethrein appointed to that effect in the last Assemblie. The Assemblie refused, in respect he had time sufficient, and willed him to propone his defences. The act made the nynth of Marche 1570, in the eight session of the Assemblie, against diminutions of the rents and fruitts of benefices, was read publictlie. The bishop alledged, there was obscuritie in that claus of the act, where the contraveeners are decerned to be deprived of their benefice, and craved the interpretatioun of the Assemblie. The greatest part of the Assemblie interpreted it thus: That the contraveeners of the said act sall be deprived of their offices, and all that they have of the kirk therethrough, so farre as it lyeth in the power of the kirk. The bishop alledged the act was unknowne to him; never came to his eares, nor was ever published; that it was an ordinance, that all the acts sould be revised, and suche as were unfitt to be abolished, of which number, he knoweth not if this may be one: that the act meaneth onlie of ministers, and of the setting of manses and gleebes, and not of bishops; and, last, that his fact proceeded from a most just feare, which might fall in a most constant man, his hous being besieged, and his sonne takin away. All his defences being heard and considered at lenth, the Assemblie, for the most part, resolved and concluded, that the bishop hath contraveened the tenor of the act, and therethrough, to incurre the penaltie therof, to witt, deprivation from his office, and that which he hath from the kirk therethrough, so farre as lyeth in their power, for ever. The bishop appealed from this sentence verbo to the Lords of Parliament. The Assemblie directed Mr David Lindsey and Mr Patrik Constan to intimat their proceedings to the regent. They returned with his Grace's answere, that the Assemblie had proceeded against him, and deprived him worthilie for his offences, and he could find no fault therin. Yitt his desire, that a policie and universall order might be established in the kirk, for suche and other proceedings; and to that effect, that suche hings as were penned upon that argument in the last conference ould be revised; or, if the heeds conceaved before misliked them, ney sould sett down, with some of the counsell, and penne other eeds; or ellis, that they sett down themselves, and devise the said olicie, to be presented to his Grace, that lawes may passe therpon. In the meane time, in cace the bishop compleaned to the ounsell, he desired that some might be deputed by the Assemblie await upon the counsell, to reason the mater formallie.

In the seventh session, the Bishop of Murrey was required to ive prooffe of his doctrine before the brethrein. He answered, a was content to give prooffe in Aberdeene, Dundie, or Murrey, afore Mr Johne Craig, Minister of Aberdeen, and Mr Alexander routhnet. The Assemblie ordeaned him to give prooffe before tem in the nixt provincial Assemblie, which is to be holdin in aberdeen, and that the said brethrein report their judgement to the nixt Assemblie. The Superintendent of Lothian was commeanned upon, that he had inaugurat the Bishop of Rosse in the behavior of Halyrudhous, being admonished by the brethrein not to be it. He granted his fault.

NON-RESIDENTS AND DILAPIDATORS CENSURED.

Conforme to the order takin in the last Assemblie, with persons elated for non-residence, and dilapidatioun of their benefices with-everie province, and for suche as were then present and delated, e bishops, superintendents, and commissioners, declared what der they had takin. What was yitt undone, the Assemblie com-anded to be accomplished; and commanded Mr James Hering, en present, ather to serve and make residence at his kirk, or ellis dimitt his benefice.

COMMISSIONS.

Commission was givin to some brethrein to advise, what answere uld be givin to my lord regent's Grace's desire, propouned by Mr David Lindsey and Mr Patrik Adamsone. Some were an pointed to read and answere bills and supplications, and to view and consider the bookes of visitations. Commission was givin t some to visite the Universitie of Sanct Andrewes, and what the find, to report to the nixt Assemblie. Some were appointed to re vise Mr George Hay his booke against Tyrie, and to report the judgement to the nixt Assemblie. Becaus of the great and intoler able burthein lying to the charge of bishops, superintendents, an commissioners of countreis, wherethrough the kirks within the bounds cannot be duelie visited, nor discipline executed, it we thought meete that suche bounds be appointed to everie commis sioner and visiter, as may be duelie visited by everie one of then To this effect, the Assemblie appointed the commissioners of cou treis, with the persons nominated by the Assemblie, and joyne with them, to conveene apart at extraordinarie houres, to make divisioun of the whole bounds of the realme, and to give in the opinions, how everie bounds may be best visited. The brethre were nominated who sould conferre together, and their province assigned to them, to divide, ather two, three, foure, five, or six fe a province; and foure brethrein were directed to the regent, to it forme him of their proceedings. As for the parts of Argile, N Andrew Hay was desired to requeist the erle himself to be pr sent. They gave in their judgement the day following, how tl bounds committed to the visiters of countreis might be best ar most commodiously visited, limiting the bounds which were to l committed. The Assemblie being advised therewith, divided the bounds to the visiters, assigning to Mr Gilbert Towssie, and I James Annand, Orkney and Zetland; and so furth, appointing ather two, or three, or one for the limited bounds, as they thoug expedient. For making an overture of the policie and jurisdiction the kirk, and uttering the plaine and simple meaning of the Asser blie therin, the Assemblie requested the brethrein under-named tak paines, reasoun, confer, and deliberat gravelie and circumspec lie, upon the heeds of the said policie, and to report their opinio advisedlie to the nixt Generall Assemblie: for the west countri he Bishop of Glasgow, Mr Andrew Melvill, Mr Andrew Hay, Mr James Greg, Mr David Cunninghame: -- for Lothiane, Mr Robert Pont, Mr James Lowsone, Mr David Lindsey; and advoates, Mr Clement Littill and Mr Alexander Sir -for Fife, the Superintendent of Fife, the principall ministers of the Universitie of Sanct Andrewes:--for Mernes and Angus, the Laird of Dun, William Christisone, Mr Johne Row, Mr William Rynd, Johne Duncansone: -- for Aberdeen, Mr Johne Craig, Mr Alexander Arbuthnet, Mr George Hay; and to conveene as followeth:-the orethrein of the west in Glasgow, of Lothian in Edinburgh, of Angus in Montrose, of Fife in Sanct Andrewes, the first Tuisday If Junie nixt to come, to conferre and reason upon the said mater, and to conveene together, two or one at the least of eache companie bove writtin, in Stirline, the last of Julie therafter, to communicat heir labours takin heerin, and to confer together heerupon; and to eport what they have found and conceaved in the said mater, to the ixt Assemblie, which is appointed to be holdin in Edinburgh, the 4th day of October nixt to come. And in cace there be a parliament indicted in the meane time, the Assemblie ordeaneth the miisters of Edinburgh to mak intimatioun therof to the bishops, suerintendents, and visiters of countreis, that the Assemblie may be onveened foure dayes before the said parliament; and that the arons and gentlemen be exhorted to be present, with the commisioners appointed in the provinciall Assembleis.

"Forasmuche as the great and intolerable burthein lying to the harge of bishops, superintendents, and commissioners of countreis, and hath beene, the verie caus, that all the kirks within their ounds could not be duelie overseene, and consequentlie good disipline was neglected for lacke of visitatioun; therefore, it is thought neete, that suche bounds be appointed to everie commissioner or isiter, as may be duelie visited and overseene by everie one of nem. The brethrein appointed to conceave and forme the power and jurisdictioun which sall be givin by the Assemblie to visiters f countreis, gave in their judgement and advice, in articles which were allowed and approved by the whole Assemblie, the tenou wherof followeth:—

"That he call the ministers together within the bounds of hi visitatioun; as also to hold synodall Assembleis; to be moderato there; to trie ministers and the oversight of schooles, and he to b tried by this Assemblie; to propone maters that are to be con sulted upon, to gather the votes, and declare what is found b votes. He sall have the oversight of all the particular kirks within the bounds of his visitation and ministrie therof, that everie one c the ministers exerce their owne vocation diligentlie, with their own congregations. And in the bounds of his visitatioun, to appoin ministers, with advice of the ministrie of the province assemble in the provinciall Assemblie, at the least six of the best learne within his bounds; or enlaiking that, of the nixt adjacent, to b chosin in the synodall Assemblie, with consent of the people, t whom he sall be appointed minister, and that becaus the power standeth not in the visiter, but in the kirk. As to the suspension or deposition of anie minister from his office, the samine sall b done by the visiter, and the ministrie in the said synodall Assem bleis, the caus being there tried, particular intimatioun being mad to his particular congregation to be present; except some urgen caus occurre, that it be necessar to doe the same with short ad vice; as if the minister committ some notorious crime, whereb he cannot longer be reteanned in his office. In the which caus the visiter may conveene these that are upon the exercise in tha province, and they, with him and the sessioun of the particula kirk, to proceed to suspensioun, by lawfull triell of the offence Upon the presentations of the patrons to the visiter, he, with consent of the synodall Assemblie of his province, sall give his letter testimoniall to him that is presented, lawfull impediments bein tane away, at least with advice of six ministers within his bounds r inlaiking that, of the nixt adjacent, to be chosin in the synodall ussemblie; providing alwise, that the consent of the flocke where e sould be appointed be had, or ellis a reasonable caus by them hewed, why not. And incace he hath beene a minister before, e to receave his letters testimonialls upon the presentatioun, with dvice of the ministers of the exercise within that province; and one to give collatioun of anie benefice without the bounds apointed to him by commission of the kirk. That an admonitioun e made to all ministers, that unadvisedlie they proceed not to exommunicat; and if difficultie arise heerin, that the visiter and the est of the countrie be advised with. And siclyke in absolutioun. Vhere there is not ecclesia bene constituta, that he travell to conitute it. That he tak heed to the keeping of exercise, repairing f kirks, kirk-yards, designatioun of manses and gleebs, and all ther charges perteaning ad decorem ecclesia, and granted to the irk by the lawes of the countrie.

"2. Tuiching the advice and opinioun of the brethrein, givin in ne last Assemblie, concerning the question moved, Whether if bilops, as they are now in Scotland, have their function out of the Word of God? the whole Assemblie, for the greatest part, after asouning and long disputatioun upon everie article of the said rethrein's opinioun and advice, absolutlie affirmed and approved ie same, and everie article therof, as the same is givin by them, herof also the tenor is heere repeated. First, the name of a bi-10p is commoun to all them who have a particular flocke, over the hich he hath a peculiar charge, als weill to preache the Word as minister the sacraments, and to execute the ecclesiasticall displine, with consent of his elders. And this is his cheefe funcoun of the Word of God. Attour, out of this number may be nosin some to have power to oversee and visite suche reasonable ounds, beside his owne flocke, as the Generall Assemblie sall apoint; and in these bounds, to appoint ministers, with consent of ne ministers of that province, and consent of the flocke to whom ney sall be appointed; als weill to appoint elders and deacons in verie particular congregatioun where there is none, with consent of the people therof; and to suspend ministers for reasonable causes with consent of the ministers forsaid. And to the effect the said articles, condescended to by the said kirk, may be the better fol lowed out, and readie executioun ensue therupon, as apperteaneth ordeaneth the bishops who have not as yitt receaved the charge caparticular congregation to condescend upon the morne, who particular flocke they will accept to tak the cure of.

"3. Forasmuche as it is heavilie deplored and lamented by som of the brethrein, that the countrie, and all the quarters there is miserablic divided in factions and deadlic feed, in so much that the parochiners, for feare and suspicion which they have others, darre not resort to their parish kirks, to heare the Word Unitie preached, nor to receave the sacrament and seales of the salvatioun, wherof riseth a shamefull and unsufferable slaunder t the Kirk of God, and his true religioun within this realme; it i therefore, thought good and concluded, that the visiters of comtreis, in all parts, sall zealouslie endeavoure themselves, and trave with parteis, to reduce and bring them to Christian unitie, an brotherlie concord, as becometh the brethrein and members Jesus Christ: exhorting them, as they tender the salvatioun an weale of their owne soules, to be at a heartie concord one wit another, that the blessing which is pronounced for the peaceab may be imparted and givin to them, and slaunder and offend arising to the kirk, through the occasioun of their ungodlie faction may be cutt off and removed."

QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

To the questioun moved, If a bishop, superintendent, or con missioner of a countrie, may remove a reader from the kirk, beir lawfullie placed therat, without a just caus? it is answered by the Assemblie, that he may not be removed by them without a jucause.

2. It being demanded by Mr Andrew Hay, Minister at Referew, if everie visiter within his owne bounds hath like power at urisdictioun to plant ministers, suspend or depose for reasonable auses, the Assemblie answered affirmative, that they have alike ower and jurisdictioun in the same, as is expressed in the partiular articles premitted, tuiching the jurisdictioun of visiters.

3. The questioun being moved in the Assemblie, whether if the Assemblie may proceed against the unjust possessors of the patrinonie of the kirk and the poore, or not; and if they may proceed, ow farre they may? it was first reasouned and disputed, if the Assemblie may proceed against suche persons; and, after reasonig, the whole Assemblie concluded affirmative, that they may proeed against them, in respect of the notorious slaunder, and as pon slaunder. And, siclyke, that they may proceed against them v doctrine and admonitioun. And last of all, if there be no reredie, with the censures of the kirk. And, further, that the parimonie of the kirk, wherupon the kirk, the poore, and schooles, ould be mainteanned, is ex jure divino; leaving further disputation f this mater to the first day of May; and that then, the descripoun of the patrimonie of the kirk be enquired, and further reasoun e had for full resolutioun of the questioun. Forasmuche as there re diverse questions and difficulteis propouned to this Assemblie, herof the full and finall resolutioun, for shortnesse of time, cannot resentlie be had, it is thought meete that the copie of the saids uestions be delivered to the bishops, superintendents, and visiters f countreis, to be propouned and advised in their provinciall conentiouns, and reported again to the nixt Generall Assemblie.

BISHOPS URGED TO ACCEPT PARTICULAR FLOCKES.

The Bishop of Glasgow being inquired, if he would accept a parcular flocke or not, gave in his answers in writt to the Assemblie, hat he is content till the nixt Assemblie, unbound, to travell in ome severall parish, as his leasure and other necessarie occasions ill permitt, providing he be not astricted to the said congregaoun; and at the nixt Assemblie he sall give his answere, whether e will accept a particular flocke or not: and if he refuse, the Assemblie not to reprove him for his last promise; and if he accept one, the samine sall be in his owne optioun: and he sall have and ther to assist him in the ministrie and cure of the said flocke, be caus of his visitations, and other charges. And also, that he sa not be precluded of his office, as the custome is, in the rest of the parts of his diocie, and service of the king, conforme to his first admissioun: and desired these things to be allowed by the Assemblie now presentlie conveened. The Assemblie continued his in his office of visitatioun of the bounds which he had before, to the nixt Assemblie. The Bishop of Murrey promised to be content: the sight of the Assemblie to accept a particular flocke. The Bishop of Rosse had assigned to him for his particular kirk, with his owne consent, the Channonrie of Rosse. The kirk of Dunblane was assigned to the Bishop of Dumblane, to be his particular kirk, with his owne consent.

THE CONFERENCE UPON THE POLICIE IN THE WEST.

The brethrein appointed by the Assemblie to confer upon the heeds of policie conveened at Glasgow in Mr David Cuningham hous, then Sub-deane of Glasgow, and Deane of Faculteis, a material of good accompt at that time. None was so franke in the cause he. He moderated the reasouning, gathered up the conclusiour and put all in writt and order, to be reported to the Assemblia But suche was the sagacitie of Mr Andrew Melvill, that he deemse that nather he nor Mr Patrik Adamsone would prove freinds the cause in the end. And so it proved indeed. Mr Patrik, afthe had insinuated himself in favours of the ministers of Edinburg and of Mr Andrew Melvill, left Paisley, and went to court, whe he became minister to the regent.

MR A. MELVILL CONSTANT IN THE CAUS AGAINST BISHOPS.

About this time, the personage of Givvan, beside Glasgow, vai ed, a benefice paying twentie-foure chalders of victuall by year This benefice is offered to Mr Andrew, providing he would not insist in the course against bishops. But he refused. He dealt earnestlie with the regent by all meanes, speciallie by Mr Patrik, that it might be annexed to the Colledge of Glasgow, becaus the rents of the colledge were not able to susteane two maisters, lett be bursars. The regent keeped the benefice in his owne hand undispouned almost two yeeres, alledging, that Mr Andrew would defraud both the colledge and himself of suche a benefice, becaus of his new opinions, and over-sea dreames tuiching discipline and policie of the kirk. At last, when the regent could not breake him with threatnings, by advice of Mr Patrik he assayed to winne him by some benefite, and maketh a new erectioun and reformation of the Colledge of Glasgow. The regent's intent was, to caus Mr Andrew relent of his earnestnesse against bishops.

THE THRETTIE-THRID GENERALL ASSEMBLIE.

The Generall Assemblie conveened at Edinburgh, the 24th of October. Mr Johne Craig, Minister of Aberdeene, was chosin Moderator.

THE REGENT'S PRESENCE CRAVED.

Mr Johne Row, Mr David Lindsey, Mr Patrik Adamsone, were lirected to the regent, to crave his Grace's presence in the Assemblie, or some commissioners to be authorized by his Grace. They reported this answere, that the warning came so suddanlie to him, hat he could not be present himself, nor direct a commissioner; but if the Assemblie thinke meet, he sall appoint some of the councell to conveene with the commissioners that the Assemblie sall proint, at suche time as sall be thought good, to confer upon uche things as may serve for furtherance of God's glorie.

The Assemblie, remembring the Bishop of Murrey his admisioun to stand yitt under question; and that he, with his chapter, vas ordeanned to have been summouned to sindrie Assembleis, to have heard triell takin of the said processe, with certification, is they compeered not, the samine sould be declared null and voide in the self, in times comming; and yitt, nothing done, hath ordeanned summouns to be directed, summouning him, with the chapter forsaid, to produce the said processe, and heare triell taiking therin, the secund day of the nixt Assemblie; with certification if they compeered not, the samine sall be declared null and voide in the self, in times comming, to be executed by their brethrein Mr George Hay, &c. James Bishop of Glasgow being required to give his answere, if he will accept the charge of a particular flocke and visitation of suche bounds as the Assemblie sould appoint to him, conforme to the articles concluded in the Assemblie, the bishop being present, exhibited his answere in writt, as followeth:

"Forasmuche as it is not unknowne to their wisdoms, that the gave commissioun and charge to certan learned, godlie, and dis creit brethrein of the ministrie, and others, elders of the kirk, to commoun, treate, conclude, and agree with certan other noblemen commissioners from the king's Majestie, Johne, umquhile Erle o Marr his regent; at which conference it was agreed by the wholcommissioners, als weill of the king as of the kirk, tuiching the name, stile, power, and jurisdictioun of bishops, with the forme and maner of their instituting, ordeanned to stand and remaine whil the king's Majestie's yeeres of minoritie, or, at least, whill a par liament sould otherwise decide and conforme to the order thericonteanned, he was receaved to the said bishoprick of Glasgow and made his sermon to the king's Majestie, in things perteaning to his Highnesse. And so, if he sould change or alter anie thing in things perteaning to the order, maner, priviledges, or power c the samine, he sould be affrayed to incurre perjurie, and might b called by the king's Majestie, for changing of anie member of hi estat. But to the effect their wisdoms may know he desireth no to be exeemed from travell, and bestowing of suche gifts as Go hath communicated to him, he is content, at their command, t haunt to a particular kirk, and teache thereat, when he dwelleth i the shirefdom of Air, and that by discretioun and sight of th brethrein of that countrie; and when he is in Glasgow, to exercise likewise at some part, where the brethrein there thinke most necessar; and to abide their judgements of his diligence in that behalf. without binding him anie way, or prejudging the power and jurisdiction which he receaved with the said bishoprick, untill the time prescrived in the said conference, that farther order be tane by the whole estats theranent; at which time he sall be content with all good reformation, as sall be found expedient."—"Which answere being read, the Assemblie continued, and continueth the said bishop in visitatioun of the bounds which he had before, to the nixt Assemblie. And as to the particular flocke, the Assemblie is content he take the cure of a particular flocke, as is mentiouned in his answere, till the nixt Generall Assemblie." It is to be considered, that the Assemblie could not use their full authoritie, becaus the regent bearing rule for the time was earnestlie sett for the estat of bishops.

In the thrid sessioun, some brethrein propouned, that seing the regent's Grace had presented Mr Patrik Adamsone to the bishoprick of Sanct Andrewes, he might be tried before them, seing, by the ordinance of the Assemblie, bishops sould be tried before the Assemblie, before they be admitted by the chapter. Mr Patrik being present, answered, that my lord regent's Grace had discharged him to proceed farther in this mater, in respect the said act and ordinance of the kirk is not accorded upon; and, therefore, he would not meddle farther, nor make instance therin. The Assemblie thought good, this answere sould be givin to my lord regent's Grace, by the chapter. In the seventh sessioun, the brethrein of the chapter of Sanct Andrewes declared, that my lord regent's Grace had presented Mr Patrik Adamsone to the bishoprick of Sanct Andrewes, and they, being members of the chapter, in respect of the act and ordinance of the General Assemblie, delayed heir proceedings therin, and desired the Assemblie to proceed to is triell, conforme to the said act. Mr Patrik being present, and equired if he would submitt himself to the triell and examinatioun of the Assemblie, and receave the office of a bishop, according to the injunctions of the same, and conditions registred in their bookes, he answered, he could not.

MR R. HAMMILTON CENSURED.

Tuiching the doubts and difficulteis propouned in the mater concerning Mr Robert Hammiltoun, minister of St Andrewes, and proveist of the New Colledge therof, to witt, which of the two offices, provestrie or ministrie of St Andrewes, he sould reteane and injoy, seing it is found and thought he may not bruike both, the Assemblie and commissioners present, after long and prolixe reasoning had in the mater, considering the said Mr Robert's first entrie in the functioun and office of the ministrie of St Andrewes, wherunto, without advice of the Assemblie, he had unite the said provestrie: And seing, by the act of the last Assemblie, the saids two offices are not found compatible in his person, decerneth and ordeaneth the said Mr Robert to remaine still with the ministrie and pastorship of St Andrewes, and to watche and attend zealouslie and diligentlie upon the cure and charge therof, as becometh a faithfull and vigilant pastor to doe to his flocke: And in the name and feare of God, to leave and cast off the said office and charge of provestrie, as an impediment, stay, and hinderance to his office and calling of the ministrie, under the paine of the censures of the kirk. Mr William Skeene, Commissioner of St Andrewes, in name of the New Colledge therof, and electors of the said Mr Robert to the said provestrie, disassented from this sentence, wherunto the said Mr Robert adhered, in respect, as he alledged, the Assemblie could not discharge him of the provestrie, and that he could not beare the whole burthein of the kirk of St Andrewes in his owne persoun.

Mr George Hay, Commissioner of Cathnesse, at the desire of the semblic, randered up his commissioun, as also did the rest of the commissioners who were present. Mr Andrew Hay, Johne Duncansone, Mr Peter Watsone, Mr Johne Row, were not onlie willing to resigne their commissions, but also craved to be exonered therof. All the commissioners which were appointed in the last Assemblie were continued in their office till the nixt Assemblie, except Mr George Gardin. Mr Andrew Hay protested that he be not oblished further nor he may reasonablie doe on his owne charges, otherwise, accepteth not the commissioun.

MR T. HEPBURNE CENSURED.

Mr Thomas Hepburne was accused for mainteaning, that no soule entereth in heaven, where Christ is glorified, whill the latter judge-He answered, he would not contumaciouslie stand to his owne opinioun, but would yeeld to better reasoun; and to that effect, desired privie conference with some brethrein, which was granted, and sindrie testimoneis of Scripture alledged by them, to confute his errour. Yitt he affirmed he was not satisfied. Yitt, if the Assemblie would damne the said article as erroneous and hereticall, he would give place to their judgement, and leave his opinioun. The Assemblie, after reading publictlie the said article, all with one minde and voice damned and detested the said article. and judged the same to be hereticall, false, and erroneous; repugaant and contrarious to the plaine and evident Word of God reveeled in his sacred and holie Scriptures; founded and grounded onlie upon the curiositie of men's witts, without assurance of God's aw. And, therefore, inhibiteth all and whatsomever persons, pubictlie or privatlie, to mainteane and defend the said errour, under paine of the censures of the kirk: leaving alwise the said Mr Thonas to privie conference with suche brethrein of the ministrie as he thinketh good, to resolve him in the said mater; and alwise, for considerations presentlie moving the Assemblie, dischargeth the said Mr Thomas from entering in the ministrie, whill the Assemblie oe farther advised.

COMMISSIONS.

The Assemblie thought meet that Mr Patrik Adamsone, Mr Johne Row, and Mr David Lindsey, notifie to the regent the order to be takin for visiters of countreis: and what number the Assemblie thinketh needfull, the divisioun of the bounds, and names of the visiters if he sall require; and to desire that provisioun be made for them. They returned with this answere, that he would be advised with the rolls, and with the collector. Forasmuche as the Assemblie preceeding had givin commissioun to some of the brethrein, to consult upon the policie of the kirk, and to report their judgement formallie, in writt, to this Assemblie, wherin some travells have beene takin by the brethrein, and something penned: It is thought good by the said Assemblie, that suche things as are alreadie penned be revised, and other things which sall be presentlie givin in considered, and putt in good forme and order. And to that effect, the Assemblie requeisteth my Lord Chanceller, the Laird of Lundie, Mr Andrew Hay, Mr Andrew Melvill, Mr James Lowsone, Johne Durie, Mr Robert Pont, Mr James Wilkie, Rector of St Andrewes, Mr Johne Row, Mr George Hay, Mr Clement Littill, to conveene daylie during the time of the Assemblie, at suche houres as they can agree upon; conferre upon the things alreadie penned, with others which sall be givin in, and advise therupon; collect together in good forme, and present the samine to the Assemblie, before the dissolving therof. Alexander Hay, clerk of the Secreit Counsell, presented in the fyft sessioun certan questiouns, wherof he craved decisioun, for the better expedition of the platt, declaring it to be my lord regent's Grace his will, that at least so manie as may, goodlie, may be solved; that others of greater importance and difficultie may be reserved to better opportunitie. In the sixt sessioun, for better solution of the questions givin in by Alexander Hay, clerk of the Secreit Counsell, and expeditioun of the mater of the policie, the Assemblie and commissioners present. nominated and ordeanned their beloved brethrein, Mr Johne Craig, William Christesone, Mr George Hay, Johne Duncansone, Mr Andrew Melvill, Mr James Melvill, Mr Andrew Hay, Mr David Cuninghame, Mr Johne Row, Mr James Greg, Mr James Lowsone, Mr David Lindsey, Mr Robert Pont, David Fergusone, Mr Robert Hammiltoun, Mr Johne Robertsone, Johne Areskine of Dun, one of the visiters of Angus and Mernes, if he be present, to conveene the nixt day after dissolutioun of this Assemblie, and consider the heeds of the policie, advise and consult diligentlie upon the same, and upon the said questiouns, and to report their judgement formallie, in writt, to the nixt Assemblie.

ACTS.

Becaus of the multitude of the bookes of the commissioners which are to be examined in the Generall Assembleis, and the large time spent therin; beside, suche as are deputed thereto know not the proceedings of the said commissioners so weill as their synodall assembleis: Therefore, it is decreed and statuted by this present Assemblie, that the books of visiters or commissioners be tried and surveyed in their synodall assembleis, and subscrived by the clerks therof, and the most part of the said assemblie, and reported again to the Generall Assemblie by the commissioners, that the Assemblie may consider their diligence in their offices.

2. Forasmuche as the dishaunting and intermissioun of the exercise, almost everie where, is greatlie lamented, and the cheef occasioun is laike of punishment of suche as ather sould prophecie themselves, or occupie the secund place of additioun; therefore, the Assemblie present hath thought meet, and ordeanned, that all ministers and readers within eight myles, or otherwise at the discretioun of the visiter, sall resort to the place of exercise eache day of exercise, and namelie, the ministers that sould prophecie and adde; wherin, if either of the two faile, that for the first fault they sall confesse their offence upon their knees, in presence of the brethrein of the exercise; for the secund, that they make the like submissioun before the synodall assemblie; for the thrid, that they be summouned before the Generall Assemblie, and receave discipline for their offence; for the fourth, that they be deprived of their offices and functions in the ministrie.

- 3. The Assemblie hath concluded, that all readers within this realme sall be examined and tried de novo, in their synodall assembleis. And if, after examinatioun, they be found to want the qualiteis prescrived in the Booke of Discipline, to be deposed and removed from their offices. And sielyke, that no reader within this realme minister the holie sacraments, except suche as have the word of exhortation in their mouths.
- 4. Mr Henrie Kinrosse, advocat, in name of our soverane lord's sessioun, putt the Assemblie in remembrance of an act made for inbringing of the names of the defunct; and desired to know what had beene done therin. The Assemblie and commissioners present, understanding by the greatest part of the brethrein, that the said act was not putt to executioun, becaus manie understood not of it; after publict reading therof, ordeanned the said act and ordinance to be keeped and observed against the nixt Assemblie; and the names of the persons deceased, since the date therof, to be exhibited to the Generall Assemblie, conforme to the said ordinance. And to the effect the same may be universallie keeped and observed in times comming, it is thought meete, that in everie parish there be persons appointed to break the earth, and make sepultoures, who sall notifie the names of the persons deceased to the readers, that they may present the same to the commissioners, to be reported to the Generall Assemblie.
- 5. Forasmuche as the Assemblie and commissioners present have advisedlie considered the great prejudice and hurt done to the Kirk of God by beneficed persons of the ministrie, who sett fewes and tacks of their benefices and ecclesiasticall livings, lands, rents, tithes, and fruicts of the same, defrauding not onlie their successours of that wherupon they ought to be susteanned, but also, bringing upon the kirk, by their inordinat and corrupt dealing, great slaunders and inconveniences, hath, with uniformitie of votes and mindes, resolved and concluded, that no beneficed persons within the mi-strie, bishops or others, sall sett fewes or tacks of their benefices ecclesiasticall livings, lands, rents, tithes, and fruicts of the same, of anie part therof, to whatsomever person or persons, without vice and consent of the Generall Assemblie. And siclyke, that ne after subscrive or give their consents to the said fewes or ks, till they see the consent of the Assemblie.

THE SOLUTIONS OF QUESTIONS.

Questions decided by the Assemblie.

- 1. Salt-panns, mylnes, and other labours, which draw away inmerable people from hearing of the Word, sould not be permitupon the Sabboth day; and the violaters ought to be debarred me the benefits of the kirk, whill they make their repentance:

 If the continuers therin ought to be excommunicated.
- 2. The Assemblie presentlie will not resolve, whether if a man a woman, divorced for adulterie, ought to be admitted to the und mariage, in respect of the great inconveniences that flow lie therof; namelie, that some forge causes of adulterie, some a causes indeid, and some by collusioun corrupt judgements, and in hope of new mariage; but inhibiteth all ministers and readers narie suche persons, under the paine of deprivatioun simpliciter, hout anie restitutioun in times comming; and ordeaneth the sons so joynned to separat themselves, conforme to the act of Assemblie in August 1574.
- . A man committing both adulterie and incest sould incurre
- A minister or reader tapping aile, beare, or wine, or keeping a taverne, is to be exhorted by the commissioners to keepe forum.
- . Buriall ought not to be in the kirk; and the contraveeners od be debarred from the benefits of the kirk, whill they make be republic trepentance.

M.D.LXXVII.

THE THRETTIE-FOURTH GENERALL ASSEMBLIE.

The Generall Assemblie conveened at Edinburgh, in the Counse hous, the first day of Aprile. Mr Alexander Arbuthnet, Prince pall of Aberdeen, was chosin Moderator. Becaus he was not make acquaint with the references of the last Assemblie, in respect his absence, the Assemblie, at his desire, appointed their below brethrein, the Laird of Dun, Mr James Lowsone, Minister of Ediburgh, Mr Robert Pont, Proveist of the Trinitie Colledge, Marylander David Lindsey, Minister of Leith, Mr Andrew Hay, Commission of Cliddisdaill, Mr Johne Craig, Minister of Aberdeene, Mr Adrew Melvill, Principall of the Colledge of Glasgow, to concur with him the morne at seven houres in the morning, in the Nether Tolbuith, to conferre and advise upon suche maters as sall thought good to be treated in this Assemblie.

COMMISSIONS.

Mr Patrik Adamsone had, since the last Assemblie, beene presented to the bishoprick of Sanct Andrewes. Als soone as gripped the bishoprick, Mr David Cuninghame left Glasgow, f frome the good caus, and became the regent's minister, and with a yeere after was advanced to the bishoprick of Aberdeene, be had nather the wealth, honour, nor estimation he had before Heerupon it was ordeanned as followeth, in the fourth session:

"Tuiching the accusation led against Mr Patrik Adamsor called Bishop of Sanct Andrewes, that he had entered to the sabishoprick against the acts and ordinances of the Generall Asserblie, and usurped the office of visitation within the bounds Fife, unauthorized by commission or power of the Assemblie, at left his ordinar office of ministrie, the Generall Assemblie, respect of his absence to answere heereto, giveth full power at ommissioun to their brethrein, Mr Robert Pont, Mr James Lowme. David Fergusone, and the Superintendent of Lothian coninctlie, and, incace of the said superintendent's inhabilitie, Mr lavid Lindsey and Johne Brand, to direct out summouns against e said Mr Patrik, summouning him before them at suche day or wes as they sall thinke good, within the toun of Edinburgh, to ie and examine his entrie and proceeding to the said bishoprick, surpatioun of the said office of visitatioun, and deserting his ordier office of ministrie which he had of before; with power also to mmoun the chapter of Sanct Andrewes, or so manie of the chapr as sall seeme to them expedient, if neede require, and the ordius or inaugurers of the said Mr Patrik, as they sall thinke good, r better triell of the premisses; and what heerin they find by ocesse of examinatioun, to report again to the nixt Generall Asmblie: and, in the meane time, in name of the Assemblie, to disarge him of farther visitatioun of the said bounds, whill he be mitted by the Assemblie."

The particulars of suche things as are desired to be ordered my lord regent's Grace, before the worke of policie come furth, ere delivered in few articles to Mr David Lindsey, Mr Andrew olwart, and Johne Duncansone, to be propouned to his Grace: z. First, That provisioun may be had for visiters of countreis. nat order may be tane, that persons deprived by the kirk for not ing their offices may be deprived of their benefices. That his cace will putt order to suche as receave benefices, and therafter wp1 them. That when benefices vaike, they may be dispouned ther to suche as have served at the kirks therof, then to others t so weill qualified. That the acts of parliament made against ulterers may be putt to executioun; namelie, against William ochrane, notorious adulterer. That his Grace will discharge the tyes of Robinhood, King of May, and suche others, on the Sabth day. Because there are diverse readers not entered in the lokes of assignatioun, partlie by reasoun of enlaike of commisoners, and partlie by their negligence, that order may be proprovided therefore. The commissioners appointed to wait on m lord regent's Grace his answere reported, becaus they had no con missioun in writt, his Grace gave no answere to them.

THE HEEDS OF POLICIE DISPUTED, AND REFERRED TO FARTHER TREATIE.

Forasmuche as the cheef and principall argument to be treate and reasouned upon in this generall conventioun is, the policie the kirk, referred by the last Assemblie to be treated and dispute at this, the brethrein deputed to the conceaving and forming the heeds therof, being desired to give accompt of their diligence and industrie, presented the heeds of the policie, as they had made partitioun of the same at Stirline, with the judgement of the la bours of the whole brethrein takin therin. Therafter were pr sented the heeds penned by Mr Johne Row and Mr James Lov sone, which were read, and nothing was oppouned, except that or of the said Mr Johne his articles was referred to further disputs tioun, all men being required, that had anie good reasoun or argu ment to propone in the contrare, to alledge the samine; or, if the would not publictlie reasoun upon the said heed, to resort to the saids commissioners, and travell sould be takin to satisfie them leaving to them libertie also, before the heeds be collected and o dered in one bodie, to make argument, as they thinke good, again the samine. The heed givin to the Laird of Dun, conforme the order of distribution forsaid, being, in his judgement, obscur and mystick, the Assemblie desired him to conferre with the re of the commissioners, to the effect he may be resolved of the mean ing therof. It was thought good, the remanent heeds writtin b the commissioners, being prolixe and ample, sould be contracted; short propositiouns and conclusiouns, to be presented to public reading therafter. The heed committed to Mr Andrew Hay we read in audience of the Assemblie, in the secund sessioun. No thing was oppouned against the same, but that the article tuichin suspensioun of ministers was referred to further reasonning. The eeds givin to David Fergusone were read likewise. The 18th rticle was referred, and nothing spokin by anie against the rest. Jothing was alledged against the heeds committed to Mr Andrew Ielvill, Mr Robert Pont, Mr David Lindsey. It was desired, nat some things in the heeds committed to Mr Craig sould be ontracted, and others referred to further reasoning.

The whole labours of the brethrein takin upon the mater and arument of the policie, being read in publict audience of the Asemblie, in the thrid sessioun, it was thought good and expedient, neir whole travells, now divided, be revised and perused by some rethrein, digested and disposed in good and convenient order, to a therafter presented to the Assemblie. And for that effect, the ssemblie appointed their brethrein, Mr James Lowsone, Mr Ancew Melvill, Mr Johne Craig, Mr George Hay, to conveene toother, till the mater be brought to an end; and, in the meane me, if it please anie man to reasoun with them in the mater, to the accesse to them.

In the sixt sessioun it was thought expedient, that certan of the rethrein be directed to the regent's Grace, to informe him, that the Assemblie is travelling in the mater and argument of the posie, and that his Grace sall receave advertisement of anie further receding, before the end of the Assemblie: and becaus sindrie conveniences may fall out before the samine be perfyted, that it ould please his Grace to consider the same, and provide remedie. In the order of this effect, were directed from the Assemblie Mr David indsey, Johne Duncansone. At their returning, they reported, as Grace liked weill of their travells and labours takin in that atter, and required expeditioun and haste. "As for the particutes they meane of, lett them be givin in, and they sall have good swere." The particulars were directed with some commissioners, depresented in articles, which are above specified, and receaved swere as we have alreadic mentiouned.

In the tenth sessioun, the brethrein appointed to collect the eds of the policie presented before, reported the same collected order, and digested in one bodie; and all men were required, that had anie good reasoun or argument in the contrare, to pro pone the same. Three heeds were called in doubt by some. On De Diaconatu, another, De Jure Patronatus, the thrid, De Divortii wherin they were not resolved nor satisfied. As to the rest, there was no oppositioun. The three heeds standing in controversi being publictlie disputed and reasouned in utranque partem, vi farther disputatioun was reserved to the day following, that an man, if he pleased, might reasoun against the said heeds. At las becaus the matter of the policie of the kirk, collected by the broaden threin, is not vitt in suche perfyte forme as is requisite, and sindr things largelie treatted which would be more summarlie handle and others require farther dilatatioun; for collecting and puttir the same in good order and forme, for avoiding of superfluitie the one part, and obscuritie on the other, the substantialls beir keeped, the Assemblie willed their beloved brethrein, Mr Robe Pont and Mr James Lowsone, to travell in the premisses. Ar to the effect the worke may be better compleit and in readines again at the nixt Generall Assemblie, which is to hold at Edi burgh, the 25th of October, the Assemblie ordeanned their br threin, the Laird of Dun, Mr Alexander Arbuthnet, Mr Andre Melvill, Mr Johne Craig, Mr Andrew Hay, Mr George Hay, 1 Johne Row, Mr David Lindsey, Johne Duncansone, to assemb and conveene together the 19th day of October nixt, in Edinburg to revise and consider the travells of their brethrein, that the san may be the more advisedlie propouned in publict, as said is. In the meane time, that suche as please to reasoun in the mater ha accesse to the said brethrein. And likewise ordeanned the visite of countreis to intimat to the barons, that this work is in hand and to be treatted in the nixt generall conventioun; and to desi their presence and concurrence.

THE BISHOP OF GLASGOW CONTENT TO ACCEPT A PARTICULAR FLOCKE.

In the fyft sessioun, it was found by the testimonie of sindrie, at the Bishop of Glasgow had fed a particular flocke, as he proised in the last Assemblie. The Assemblie required farther, that would accept a particular flocke in time comming, conforme to the order and acts of the Assemblie; wherunto he agreed willing-

VISITERS CONTINUED.

The Assemblie requeisted the commissioners of countreis to connue in their commission and office of visitation, till the nixt enerall Assemblie; and to use suche diligence and travells as they ay, goodlie, for the confort of the kirk. The Generall Assemblie of this realme, considering the gre abundance of iniquitie overflowing universallie the whole face this commoun wealth, now, in so great light and revelatioun of t true and Christian religioun, justlie provoking and stirring up t justice and equitie of God to tak judgement and vengeance in tl unworthie and unthankfull natioun; seing also the manie and per lous stormes and rage of persecutioun daylie invading the kirk a spous of Jesus Christ, the sore and extreme troubles of the tr and zealous members therof in the parts of France and ellis when professing our Saviour, Lord, and Messias; the worke also of est blishing a perfyte order and policie within the kirk, being preser lie in hands; hath thought it good, meet, and expedient, for t same reasons and good causes, that earnest and speedie recour sall be had to God, with commoun supplicatiouns and prayers: a to that effect, that a generall fast be observed and keeped universallie through all the kirks of this realme, with doctrine and i structioun to the people; to beginne the secund Sunday of Jur nixt to come, which is the nynth day therof, and to continue to t nixt Sunday therafter; using in the meane time exercise of do trine, according to the accustomed order: and to that end, the intimation be made heerof by the commissioners of countreis, the ministers within their bounds, as apperteaneth.

THE THRETTIE-FYFTH GENERALL ASSEMBLIE.

A PREPARATIVE CONFERENCE.

Becaus of great confusioun which fell out heertofore, by casting in of purposes not foreseene, it was thought meete by this Assemblie, that certan brethrein sould conferre with the moderator, upon maters to be treatted at this conventioun; to witt, Mr Johne Row, Mr Alexander Arbuthnet, Mr Andrew Melvill, William Christesone, Mr James Lowsone, Mr Robert Pont, and conveene with the moderator at eight houres in the morning, and at halfe houre to two after noone, during the Assemblie. And siclyke, it is thought good that the acts concluded in the Assembleis be considered by the said brethrein, and therafter read in open Assemblie.

THE REGENT'S PRESENCE CRAVED.

The Assemblie directed two brethrein to the regent, to desire him to be present, in proper person, at the Assemblie, or to direct his commissioner. But they returned immediatlie with this answere, that his Grace had not leasure to talke with them, for his occupations. Other two brethrein were directed again. They returned with the like answere, that his Grace was so occupied in earnest effaires of the counsell, that he had no leasure to conferre with them. They were directed again, the thrid time. Johne Brand reported his answere in the thrid sessioun, that, in respect of sindrie important businesses, and that he could not have the councell so soone conveened, he could not satisfie the petitioun of the Assemblie; desiring the brethrein who were sent to him before to ome down and speeke with him; and becaus he understandeth the Assemblie was labouring in the policie, prayed them to goe fordward, and to putt it to an end. The Assemblie willed their brethrein, Mr James Lowsone and Mr Johne Row, to passe to his Grace the day following, according to his desire.

TRIELL OF VISITERS.

In triell of commissioners of countreis, Mr Peter Watsone was delated for mareing Garleis in a privat hous. He alledged Mr Willocke had done the like there. The Assemblie, in respect of the acts made, prohibiting privat celebratioun of mariage, ordeanned Mr Peter to confesse his offence, in transgressing the said acts, upon a Sabbath day, in the parish kirk of Disdeir, where the parteis sould have beene maried, in presence of the congregatioun, and Mr James Beton, minister: which acts he sall also read in presence of the people; and to report a testimoniall from the said Mr James of the performance of this ordinance to the nixt Assemblie.

A READER CENSURED.

James Blaikwod, Reader at Sawline, for celebrating the mariage betwixt the Commendatare of Dunfermline and his wife, without testimonial of the minister of the parish where they made residence was found guiltie of transgressing the act made the 27th day of December 1565. Therefore, the Assemblie decerned that the painest therof, viz. deprivation from his office, and losse of his stipend be inflicted upon him; and other paines, as the Generall Assemblie sall therafter thinke meete to be injoynned.

COMMISSIONERS CHOSIN TO THE COUNCELL OF MAGDEBURG.

Mr Patrik Adamsone presented, in the thrid sessioun, a letter directed from the Queen's Majestie of England to the regent, informing him of a certane councell which was to be holdin at Magdeburg, for establishing of the Augustan Confessioun, with a letter writtin from Casimire to her Majestie, of the same purpose; desiring in his Grace's name the Assemblie to advise, if they thought meete, that anie of the learned ministers sould repaire thither, and whom they would name. In the fyft sessioun the Assemblie judged it verie necessar that some be directed to the said councell; and nominated some brethrein, of which number the regent might choose one or two, to witt, Mr Andrew Melvill, Mr Patrik Adamsone, Mr David Cuninghame, Mr George Hav, Mr David Lindesay, William Christesone, Mr Alexander Arbuthnet, Mr Robert Pont. Mr Patrik reported, in the seventh sessioun, that in his Grace his opinion, Mr Andrew Melvill, Mr George Hay, and Mr Alexander Arbuthnet, are meetest for the purpose; alwise, desired the advice and judgement of the Assemblie, that after, he may take resolutioun with the counsell. The Assemblie willed Mr Patrik, Johne Duncansone, and William Christesone, to travell with his Grace, to know further of his minde in this mater: and siclyke, to desire his Grace to appoint the modifiers to conveene, at the orlering of the rolls of the ministers; and to report his Grace his answere againe to the Assemblie. They reported, in the eight sessioun, that he liked weill that Mr Andrew Melvill and Mr George Hay sould be directed to the councell of Magdeburg: alwise would snow the advice of the councell therin, of which he sould caus them be informed; and, concerning the rolls, had appointed the Abbot of Dumfermline, George Auchinfleck, Mr Nicoll Elphinston, James Nicolsone, to tak order therewith. This motioun came to no effect. It appeareth the regent would have had these two out of the way, becaus the course of Episcopacie was like to faile. Yitt, want of expences and charges was a hinderance of their journey.

THE HEEDS OF POLICIE REVISED AND DISCUSSED.

Becaus the mater of the policie and jurisdictioun of the kirk reerred to the collecting, forming, and disposing, of some brethrein, was presented by them in the secund sessioun, it was thought expedient to be treatted the day following. After reading the generall heeds therof, the brethrein were required to advise with themselves, if they found anie other heeds necessar to be disputed than these, and to significe the samine to the Assemblie the morne. The sixt sessioun was whollie occupied in reasoning upon the heeds of the policie and jurisdictioun of the kirk, and an ordinance made to prosecute the reasoning the day following. In the thritteen sessioun it was concluded as followeth:—

" Forasmuche as the heeds concerning the policie and jurisdiction of the kirk being whollie read in audience of the whole Assemblie, and thought good and expedient that the samine sould be presented to my lord regent's Grace, as agreed upon, by reasoning among the brethrein, saving the heed, De Diaconatu, which is or deanned to be givin in, with a note that the samine is agreed upor by the most part of the said Assemblie, without prejudice of farther reasoning; to the effect the saids heeds may be putt in mundo, disposed, and sett in good order, according to the minde of the Assemblie: The Assemblie hath willed their brethrein, Mr James Lowsone, Mr Robert Pont, Mr David Lindsey, and the Clerk of the Assemblie, to travell with diligence therin; and the samine being putt in mundo by them, according to the originall, to be seene and revised by their brethrein, Johne Duncansone, David Fergusone the Laird of Dun, if he be present, Mr James Carmichaell, and Johne Brand: and being found by them to be according to the originall, to be presented by the said Mr James Lowsone, Mr Rober Pont, and Mr David Lindsey, together with a supplication penned and delivered to them by the Assemblie, to my lord re gent's Grace. And incace that conference and reasoning be sough by his Grace upon the saids heeds presented to his Grace, the As semblie hath ordeanned their brethrein under-writtin, viz.: Mr Pa trik Adamsone, the Laird of Dun, Mr Johne Craig, Mr Johne Row Mr Alexander Arbuthnet, Mr Andrew Melvill, Mr James Low sone, Mr Robert Pont, Mr David Lindsey, Mr Andrew Hay, M. George Hay, and Johne Duncansone, to concurre and await upor the said conference, as they sall be advertised by his Grace."

THE REGENT'S QUESTIONS.

Certane questions were sent from the regent, ather to this Assemblie, and presented by Mr Patrik Adamsone, or ellis to the Assemblie holdin in October last, and presented by Alexander Hay, Clerk of the Counsell: for there we find, in the fyft sessioun, that Alexander Hay presented certane questiouns, wherof the regent craved decisioun. But the questions themselves are not extant in the register. I have heere sett them down, as I found them in Johne Johnstoun of Elphinston his scrolls, a cheefe actor in the effaires of the Assemblie at some times.

A FACTION STIRRED UP AGAINST THE REGENT.

During all these Assembleis and earnest endeavoures of the ethrein, the regent was often required to give his presence to the ssemblie, and further the caus of God. He not onlie refused, but treatned some of the most zealous with hanging, alledging, that Morton was not an unlikely person to execute such an arbitrary threat. In 172, being publicly rebuked by Mr Andrew Douglas, minister of Dunglass, for livin adultery with the widow of Captain Cullen, the earl caused him to be appre-

His dom ticks were invved and hated for their wealth, men esteeming the they acquired it by taking budds from suche as had sutes to hi to gett accesse. If there were anie mariages fell in his hands, domesticks gott them: if the escheat of bastardrie or other casualt they fell in their hands. The nobilitie fretted, becaus they seem to be despised, as though he had no need of them. He irritat t Erle of Argile by a particular; for he sent to him for the jew called the H, becaus the precious stones were sett in the forme of t letter H, signifeing Henrie. When he could not obteane it by requeist, he caused char him by an officer to rander it, because it belonged to the king. randered it, but his affectioun was alienated.

A CONSPIRACIE REVEELED.

Johne Sempill, sonne to the Lord Sempill, conspired the reger death. The conspiracie was revealed by one of his complices, (briell Sempill, who avowed it before the counsell, and offered fight with him at the single combat. The other confessed, subscrived his confessioun with his owne hand, but fell a-swow and could not hold the penne in his hand, when he subscriv After that he recovered, he asked mercie, but was convicted by assise, and condemned to be hanged, drawin, and quartered: y at the intercessioun of freinds, he was committed to waird in castell of Edinburgh, to remaine during the regent's pleasure; remained there till the regent resigned the regiment.

KING JAMES THE SIXT.

M.D.LXXVIII.

THE REGENT RESIGNETH HIS AUTHORITIE.

Upon the 4th of Marche 1578, a number of the nobilitie coneened at Stirline, and with the king's advice concluded, that sames Erle of Morton sould be deprived; and that the young ing take the government in his owne hand, and a new counsell o be chosin, to direct him. They sent the Lord Glames, Chaneller, and the Lord Hereis, to him, to desire him to resigne, and ive over his office simpliciter in the king's hand. There was no aus randered, nor could be pretended. The yeere sett doun in he act of the queen's dimissioun, for the time of the administraioun of regents, was the 17th yeere of the king's age, who was ot as yitt fullie past the twelve yeere. When he perceaved that he Commendatar of Dumfermline, Secretar Tullibardin, Comproller, and others in whome he trusted, had forsaikin him, he triveth not over time, till he gather his freinds to make resistance, out cometh from Dalkeith to Edinburgh upon the twelve of Marche; nd after that an herald, a trumpeter, and a messinger, had prolamed at the Mercat Croce of Edinburgh his deprivatioun, and he entrie of the king in his owne person to his government, he esigned his authoritie in presence of the people, at the Croce, and ook instruments therupon. He governed the realme as regent we veeres, three moneths, and two dayes. The time of his reginent was esteemed to be als happie and peaceable as ever Scotand saw. He was wise, stout, and ever upon the best side. The name of a Papist durst not be heard of; no theefe nor oppresser lurst have beene seene. But he could not suffer Christ to raigne reelie, the rebooking of sinne, but made oppositioun to the ministers of Edinburgh in publict. He mislyked the Generall Assenbleis, and would have had the name changed, that he might tak away the force and priviledge therof; and no questioun he hastayed the work of policie that was presentlie in hands, if God hanot stirred up a factioun against him. Becaus he punished the most part of offenders by purse, he was compted covetous. The day after he resigned the government, the Lord Boyd chided with him, and he himself also repented that he had given place so rashlito his enemeis, using the bare name of the king against him who was clothed with the authoritie with their own consents, which sould have continued yitt five yeeres. His partie was strong; Argile, Athol, Crawfurd; yea, which astonished him most, his friend Glames, Lindsey, Ruthven, the Secretar, the Comptroller. The burghes, Edinburgh in speciall, were alienated from him, and gave him no countenance.

THE CASTELL OF EDINBURGH AND PALACE OF HALYRUDHOUS, ETC., RANDERED.

Upon the 15th of Marche the Lord Glames and Lord Hereis or, as others report, Maxwell, were sent to him, to crave that the Castell of Edinburgh, the Palace of Halyrudhous, the coine-hous and jewells therin, sould be delivered. He randered the bare wall of the palace and the coine-hous, with the printing yrons, upon th 16th of Marche; but as for the castell, he caused his brother, the captan, furnish it with victuall, both secreitlie and openlie. But th toun of Edinburgh stayed him what they could. Upon the 17th o Marche the constable of the castell, Archibald Dowglas, brother to John of Tilliquhillie, at direction of the captan, issued out, and cam doun neere to the Butter Trone, where the toun held their guard discharged three hacquebutts among them, before they were awar slue two men and hurt one, and retired backe again to the castell The toun riseth in armes, and watcheth all that night. After that none within the castell durst come furth, and therefore were force to rander the castell, which was randered upon Tuisday, the first o Aprile.

GLAMES SLAINE.

Upon the 17th of Marche the Lord Glames, Chanceller, comning down from the castell of Stirline, to his owne loodging in the oun, and the Erle of Crawfurde going in to the castell, they mett ogether in a narrow wynd. The Lord Glames biddeth his comanie give way to the Lord Crawfurd, and Crawfurd biddeth his ive way to the Lord Glames. As they were going by other, their ervants touched other, and after drew out their swords. Their nasters turned; their parteis joynned. Manie were hurt on both ides: the Lord Glames slaine with the shot of a pestolet: the Irle of Crawfurd takin, and committed to waird, till farther order ould be taikin. The Lord Glames was a learned, godlie, and ise man. He sent to Beza when the work of policie was in ands, and craved his judgement in some questions of policie; herupon Beza wrote the booke De Triplici Episcopatu, Of the Threefold Bishoprick, divine, humane, and devilish, and his answeres his questiouns. Mr Andrew Melvill made this epigramme upon im after his death :__

"Tu leo magne jaces inglorius: ergo, manebunt Qualia fata canes? qualia fata sues?"

A NEW COUNSELL CHOSIN.

It was concluded there sould be a counsell chosin to the number f twelve, and that foure of them sould subscrive with the king, iz., the Erles of Argile, Athole, Montrose, Glencarne; Lords tuthven, Lindsey, Hereis, Newbottle, the Commendatar of Dumermline, the Pryour of Sanct Andrewes, the Bishop of Orkney, as Erle of Cathnesse; extraordinars, Mr George Buchanan and Ir James Mackgill. The Erle of Atholl was made Chanceller, and a parliament was proclaimed to be holdin the tenth of June in Edinburgh, and articles sett down to be concluded in it. The Erle of Morton went over the water to Lochlevin, and the necounsell came to Edinburgh the nynth-of Aprile.

THE HEEDS OF A PROCLAMATION.

Upon Moonday, the fourteenth of Aprile, a proclamatioun was made at the Croce of Edinburgh, the heeds wherof were the following:—

- 1. For avoiding of dearth, that all cornes be threshed before the tenth of June nixt, under the paine of escheating.
- 2. That none keepe more victuall in girnell than to serve hi and his familie a quarter of yeere, and that the rest be presente to the mercat within twentie dayes after.
- 3. That all customes, new and old, belonging to the king or the toun of Edinburgh, be discharged till October; and that all strangers bringing in victuall be favourablic interteanned, and than fullie payed.

- 5. A discharge of all licences granted before for transporting victuals, and all other unlawfull and forbidden goods.
- 6. That none eat or prepare flesh upon Wedinsday, Fryday, Saturday, till Michaelmesse.

In the secund sessioun, Mr Andrew Hay, Mr Johne Craig, and ohne Duncansone, were directed to the Lords of Secreit Counsell, require that some of them might be elected as commissioners om his Hienesse, to assist the Assemblie with their presence and unsell. They returne with answere, that in regard of urgent efires, they could not be present this day, but sould direct two the xt day. In the nixt day, the Lord Hereis and the Abbot of eir were present.

ARTICLES PRESENTED TO THE COUNSELL.

The brethrein appointed in the last Assemblie to present the soke of Policie to the late regent, declared, in the thrid sessioun, at they presented it, together with the supplicatioun, and that a y was appointed for conference. But the alteratioun of the autoritie interveened. Yitt, to stay corruptioun in the entrie of the lag's Majestie's government, they presented to his Hienesse his tunsell a supplicatioun and foure articles: one, for observing the tof parliament which concerneth suche as beare offices within realme; another, to tak order with the late murthers committed is Stirline and Edinburgh; the thrid, for the policie of the kirk; to fourth, for support of the poore and countrie in this appearand in the intervence of the poore and countrie in this appearand in the intervence of the poore and countrie in this appearand in the intervence of the poore and countrie in this appearand in the intervence of the poore and countrie in this appearand in the intervence of the poore and countrie in this appearance of the poore and countries in this appearance of the poore and countries in this appearance of the poore and countries o

- 1. That substantiall remedie be found out for releefe of the poore mouns in this present dearth.
- 2. That none be admitted in publict office or counsell, but suche have givin confessioun of their faith, subscrived the articles of religioun, and communicated at the Lord's Table, conforme to tl act of parliament made at Edinburgh, the 15th of December 156

- 3. That the Booke of Policie might be advised upon, and cor missioners chosin by the Secreit Counsell, to reason and conf with the commissioners of the Generall Assemblie; and a time se to that effect, in the king's presence, before the holding of the parliament.
- 4. That the Sabbath day be universallie observed; mercal playes, and all other impediments which may hinder the people conveene to heare the Word, be discharged.
- 5. That adulterie, incest, murther, and other haynous offence speciallie that late murther of the Chanceller at Stirline, be p nished.
- 6. That no generall collector be chosin without advice of the Assemblie; but that the kirk may intromet with their owne thricaccording to the act of parliament.

The Assemblie thought it meete that the same articles sould presented again to the counsell; and desired the Lord Hereis at the Abbot of Deir, who were present, to give their opinioun co cerning the said articles. They answered, they came not to voor conclude, but were directed by the counsell to heare and o serve the proceedings of the Assemblie. They promised to inswith the counsell for answere to these articles.

In the fourth sessioun it was thought meete that Mr Andre Hay and Mr David Lindsey sould be directed to the Lo Hereis and the Abbot of Deir, to putt them in remembrance of t answeres to be givin to the articles presented to the counsell; a likewise to require them to demand of the counsell, whether the directed to the Assemblie, to give their advice in all thin tending to the glorie of God and weale of his kirk, or to heare a lanerlie; and if they find it expedient, to propone both the one at the other themselves to the counsell. They returned incontine with this answere, that there were some difficulteis in the article and had appointed two of the counsell to reasoun upon them, wi suche as the Assemblie sould appoint, the morne, at eight houre

As to the persons directed to the Assemblie, they gave them no power, as commissioners for the king, to vote in the Assemblie, for they had not spokin the king in that mater: Alwise, as brethrein and members of the kirk, they sall give advice, counsell, and vote. There had beene hote reasoning betweene Mr David Lindsey, boldlie defending the libertie of the kirk, and Mr James Mackgill, unswering as mouth of the counsell. Good men beganne to looke for little good of this new counsell; yitt the Assemblie appointed Mr Robert Pont, Mr Johne Row, Mr James Lowsone, Mr Andrew Hay, Mr Andrew Melvill, and Mr David Lindsey, to conferre with the deputeis of the counsell, and to reason upon the articles.

In the fyft sessioun they reported, that the said deputeis willed he Assemblie to name the persons whom they suspected of Papisrie, and to direct from their number some brethrein, to admonishe hem to subscrive the articles of religioun approved and confirmed ov act of parliament, and to communicat; and if they find disobetience, to intimat the same to the counsell, and to proceed against hem with the censures of the kirk. The Assemblie nominated the Chanceller, the Erles of Cathnesse and Montgomrie, and the Lord gilvie, and ordeanned Mr Johne Row and Mr James Lowsone conferre with the Chanceller, and to try him in the premisses: Mr ohne Craig and Johne Duncansone to conferre with the rest, and report their answeres at five houres to the commissioners of ountreis in the Great Kirk. As to the secund and thrid articles, o full resolutioun givin, but delayed till five houres. The obsertioun of the Sabbath, taking away of mercats, and suche like, the eputeis thought meet that a supplicatioun sould be givin to the ounsell, together with the judgement of the Assemblie theranent. he Assemblie appointed Mr David Lindsey and Johne Duncanne to penne the suppplication betwixt and five houres. As for e Collectorie and Booke of Policie, they sould tak order before the ne of the parliament. It was answered, that it belonged to the rk to provide for the collectorie, according to their owne libertie anted by act of parliament. As to the policie, it was required, at instantlie time and place may be appointed, and persons chosin VOL. III.

to conferre with their commissioners, that all things may be duelie advised upon, before the holding of the parliament. They promised to advise with the counsell.

The brethrein appointed to travell with the lords suspected o Papistrie reported, in the nynth sessioun, that the Erle of Cath nesse desired to see the articles of religioun which he was desired to subscrive, and he sould give his answere. Ogilvie answered, he had subscrived the articles of religioun, and communicated before he departed out of Scotland; and if anie man doubted of his pro fessioun, was content yitt to subscrive and communicat. Th Chanceller and Lord Montgomrie were not in the toun. Th Assemblie commanded the ministers and sessioun of the church c Edinburgh, or the minister of the castell of Stirline, to urge them t subscrive and communicat, in cace they resort within their bounds otherwise ordeanned, that the ministers and sessioners of othe touns where they sall happin to repaire, to admonishe them in lik maner; and if they find them disobedient, after due admonitious to proceed against them with the censures of the kirk.

THE POLICIE TO BE RENEWED AND PRESENTED TO THE KING.

In the fourth sessioun it was intimated as followeth:—" For muche as the heeds of the policie being concluded and agreed upon in the last Assemblie, by the most part of the brethrein, certange the brethrein found some difficultie in the heed, De Diaconatu, whe upon farther reasoning was reserved to this Assemblie, it is ther fore required, that if anie of the brethrein have anie reasonable doul or argument to propone, that he be readie the morne, and then so be heard and resolved." In the sixt sessioun, Aprile 26th, according to the ordinance made the day before, all persons that had an reasonable doubt or argument to propone was required to propose the same. But none offered to propone anie argument in the contrare.

It was concluded in the eight sessioun, as followeth:—" For muche as the Generall Assemblie hath thought meete, that the travells takin by them upon the policie be presented to the king's Majestie and his Hienesse' counsell, it was found good, that before the copies therof were delivered, they sould vitt be reviewed and sighted by their brethrein, Mr Robert Pont, Mr James Lowsone, and Mr David Lindsey, and, being written over conforme to the originall, a copie to be presented by them to his Hienesse, with a supplicatioun penned by them to that effect, with another copie to the counsell, the time to be at the discretioun of the brethrein, so that it be done before the generall fast: And incace conference and reasoning be craved upon the heeds of policie, the Assemblie hath nominated Mr Johne Craig, Mr Alexander Arbuthnet, the Laird of Dun, William Christesone, Mr Johne Row, David Fergusone, Mr Robert Pont, Mr James Lowsone, Mr David Lindesey, Johne Duncansone, Mr Andrew Melvill, and Mr James Greg, to concurre and conveene at suche time as sall be appointed by the king and counsell, and as advertisement sall be givin them before by the saids three brethrein; and that the said commissioners, at the said onference, reasoun upon the heed of the ceremoneis, and how farre ministers may meddle with civill effaires; and if they may vote in counsell or parliament."

ACTS.

It was ordeanned in the thrid sessioun, that all bishops, and others pearing ecclesiasticall function, be called by their owne names, or Brethrein, in time comming.

2. In the seventh sessioun, it was ordeanned as followeth:—
'Forasmuche as there is great corruptioun in the estat of bishops, so they are presentlic created within this realme, wherunto the Asemblie would provide some stay in time comming, so farre as they nay, to the effect that farther corruptioun may be bridled, the Asemblie hath concluded, that no bishops sall be elected or admitted seerafter, before the nixt Generall Assemblie; and dischargeth ll ministers and chapters to proceed anie wise to electioun of the aid bishops in the meane time, and that this mater be propouned first in the nixt Assemblie, that it may be consulted, what farther order sall be takin therin."

- 3. The Assemblie hath ordeanned, that no visiters of countreis give collectioun of vacant benefices, where there is qualified ministers serving the cure, but to the minister of the kirk wherof the benefice vaiketh, till the nixt Assemblie, under paine of deprivatioun from their offices; and if they be urged by the prince's letters, to shew this ordinance for their defence; and that this mater be motiouned again in the nixt Assemblie. This act was made by occasioun of complaint made by George Johnston, minister of Ankrome, who compleanned that Mr James Boyd, Bishop of Glasgow, upon a presentatioun directed to him, gave collatioun to Mr Hector Dowglas, of the Personage of Ankrome, where he had served the cure these five or six yeeres bypast; and that howbeit the benefice lyeth not within the bounds committed by the Assemblie to his visitatioun, and without consent also of the visiters of the bounds where the benefice lyeth.
- 4. That suche as violat the universall fast make their repentance two severall Sabboths; and according to the contempt, that the paine be aggravatted.

A FAST TO BE KEEPED.

The Generall Assemblie finding the universall corruptioun of the whole estats of the bodie of this realme, the great coldnesse and slacknesse of a great part of the professors in religioun, the day lie increasse of all kinde of fearefull sinnes and enormiteis, as incest adultereis, murthers, and, namelie, recentlie committed in Edinburgh; cursed sacriledge, ungodlie sedition and divisioun within the bowells of this realme, with all maner of disorders and un-godlie living, which justlie have moved and provoked our God. although long-suffering and patient, to stretche out his arme in his anger, to correct and visite the iniquitie of the land, and, namelie, by the present penurie and famine, joynned with the cruell and domestick seditions, wherupon doubtlesse greater judgements must succeed, if these corrections work not reformation or true amendement in men's hearts: seing also, the bloodie conclusions of the cruell councels of that Roman beast, tending to extermine and raze from the face of all Europ the true light of the blessed Word of salvatioun; for these causes, and that God of his mercie would blesse the king's Highnesse and his regiment, and make him to have a godlie and prosperous government, as also, to putt in his Highnesse' heart, and in the hearts of his noble estats in parliament, not onlie to mak and establish good and politick lawes, for the weale and good government of the realme, but also to sett and establishe suche a policie and discipline in the kirk, as is craved in the Word of God, and is conceaved and penned alreadie, to be presented to his Highnesse and counsell, that in the one and the other God may have his due praise, and the age to come an exemple of upright and godlie dealing; the Generall Assemblie, therefore, hath concluded that an universall fast sall be keeped throughout all the kirks of this realme, to beginne the first Sunday of Junie nixt to come, and to continue till the nixt Sunday therafter, inclusive, keeping the accustomed use of exercise according to the booke of publict fasting. And that this act be intimated to the king's Majestie and counsell, and his Grace and counsell humblie required to discharge, by proclamatiouns, all kinde of insolent playes, as Robinhood, King of May, and suche like, in all persons, als weill schollers as others, under suche paines as they sall thinke good.

MR THOMAS SMETON'S TRAVELS AND RETURNE.

Mr Thomas Smeton, having returned latelie to this countrie, was at this Assemblie. He went to France about the beginning of reformatioun, at what time he was removed from the Old Colledge of Sanct Andrewes. He was desirous to know the right way to salvatioun, and left no meane untried. Understanding that the order of Jesuits was the most learned and exquisite order in Papistrie, he resolved to enter in their order during the yeeres of probatioun; and at the end therof, if he found all his doubts removed, he would continue a Jesuit; if not, he would yeeld to that light which his loving freinds, Mr Thomas Matlane, Mr Andrew Melvill, and Mr Gilbert Muncreif, shewed him when he was in France. So he entered in the Jesuits' Colledge at Parise. Mr Edmund Hay, a loving freind to him, perceaving him addicted to learning, and worthie to be wonne, directed him to Rome. By the way, he went in to Geneve; communicat his purpose with Mr Andrew Melvill, Mr Gilbert Muncreif, and craved their prayers. Of his purpose they could see no good warrant. They promised to pray for him.

He went fordward to Rome, and was weill receaved in a Jesuit's colledge. In this colledge there was a father, esteemed the best for witt and learning, who was ordeanned to travell with suche as were deteanned in prison for religion, to convert them. Mr Thomas craved to accompanie him at suche times as he went to the prisoners, which was granted to him. By the way, as they returned from the prison-hous to the colledge, Mr Thomas would tak the argument of the prisoners, and mainteane it against the Jesuit, for reasoning's caus, but indeid to be resolved. The more he insisted, he found the truthe the stronger. Thus he continued about a yeere and a half in Rome, till at lenth he became suspected, and therefore was remitted backe to Parise, through all the colledges of the Jesuits by the way; in all which he endeavoured more and more to have his doubts resolved, but found himself ever farther and farther confirmed in the truthe. Within a space after he came to Parise, he could not but discover himself. Mr Edmund Hay, perceaving his minde alienated from their order, ceassed not to counsell him freindlie and fatherlie, and suffered him to want nothing, and laboured to keepe him quiett, that he kythe not an adversarie against them. Perceaving the young man to be addicted to his booke, he advised him to goe to a colledge situated in a pleasant and wealthie part in Lorane, where he sould have nothing to doe but to attend upon his booke. No greater allurement could be offered unto him. By the way, as he went toward Lorane, the Lord layed his hand upon him, and visited him with a hote fever. He was cast in perplexitie both of bodie and minde, and fought a fearefull battell in his conscience. At last, he determined to abandoun that damnable societie, and discover the falshoods, hypocrisie, and craft of the enemeis of the truthe. He returned backe to Parise, tooke his leave of Mr Edmund. Mr Edmund kythed nothing but love and freindship, and counselled him not to believe ministers, but to read and studie the ancient doctors. He manifested himself to the professors of the reformed religioun, till the massacre which ensued shortlie after; at the which, being narrowlie searched, he came to the English ambassader, Secretar Walsinghame, lying at Parise, whose hous was a girth to manie. He came with the secretar to England, soone after, where he remained schoolemaster at Colchester till his comming to Scotland.

When he came he was placed minister at Pasley, for Mr Andrew Polwart had left Pasley, and entered in the Sub-deanrie of Glasgow, when Mr David Cunninghame was made Bishop of Aberdeene. Not long after, Mr Andrew Melvill, Principall of the Colledge of Glasgow, putteth in his hand Mr Archibald Hammiltoun the apostat's booke, De Confusione Calviniana Secta apud Scotos, and moved him to confute the same. He was painfull, and skarse tooke time to refreshe nature; frugall, grave, modest, sweet, and affable in companie. He ceased never publictlie nor privatlie to warne ministers and schollers to be diligent in their charges, and reading the controverseis: he would insinuat himself in the companie of noblemen, to wairne them to bewar of evill companie, and to disswade them from sending their sonnes to dangerous parts. Mr Andrew Melvill and he were the first motionners of a colledge to be erected in St Andrewes for Divinitie, and ceased never, at Assembleis or court, till the worke was begunne and sett fordward.

MARR AND MORTON SEAZE UPON THE CASTELL OF STIRLINE.

After that the Erle of Morton went over the water to Lochlevin, he seemed to doe nothing but to make alleyes and gardins: yitt was he contriving deeper maters. He sent for the Erle of Marr, and perswaded him to remove the Maister of Marr, Alexander Areskine, his father brother, and to tak the keeping of the castell of Stirline, and the king's person, in his owne hand. The erle returning backe to the castell of Stirline upon Saturday the 26th of Aprile, riseth tymouslie in the morning; calleth for the keyes of the castell, as if he were to ryde furth to hunt.1 The Maister of Marr, not suspecting anie evill, came to lett him furth. The erle assisted with his owne base brethrein, the Abbots of Cambusken neth and Dryburgh, putt furth the maister and his servants, and suffered none to come in but whom they pleased. The lords that were in Edinburgh, hearing what was done, road to Stirline. Bu Marr suffered none to enter in the castell but one at once. The lords held their counsell in the toun of Stirline, and by proclamatiou charged that no nobleman sould come to Stirline but in this order an erle with twentie-foure, a lord with sixteene, a baron with six but, in the meane time, intended they to gather their owne forces The Erle of Morton seemed to be ignorant of all things, as if the controversie had beene proper to the hous of Areskine; vitt, per ceaving what the other factioun intended, returned from Lochlevin to Dalkeith. The lords were affrayed that the Erle of Angus and Marr were masters of the toun; yitt the Humes and Kers repair ing thither, encuraged them. The mater was composed, as migh be, for the time, viz., that the Erle of Marr sould keepe the king till the parliament, and find foure erles cautioners for his fidelitie The lords returned to Edinburgh the eight of May. Upon the 23d of May, foure of eache factioun mett at Cragmillar, apar from their companeis; embraced other, dynned and supped in Dal eith, and came after supper to Edinburgh. But the Erle of Moron riseth earelie in the morning, and rydeth to Stirline, without heir knowledge; where as they looked to have riddin all together stirline, and there to agree upon all things before his Majestie. and it seemed this was the onlie agreement that was made at raigmillar. When the Erle of Morton came to Stirline he innuated himself in Tullibardin's favour, and, as was reported, buded him, to perswade the young Erle of Marr, to whom he was note, to suffer him and his followers to come into the castell; which as obteaned. After he had gottin in his freinds and followers at ndrie dyets, the young erle durst doe nothing but as Morton ommanded, fearing that he sould have removed him, and takin the eeping of the castell in his owne hand.

THE COUNSELL AND PLACE OF PARLIAMENT CHANGED.

Upon the tenth of June, the nobilitie conveened at Stirline to a ounsell. The Erle of Morton craved that a new counsell might e chosin, that he might be one of the cheefe; and had procured a tter from the Queen of England in his owne favours, wherat some the counsell were offended. Yitt manie assented, and he obaned his intent. The Bishops of St Andrewes, Glasgow, and berdeen, his owne creatures, furthered his course. At this coun-Il, or rather conventioun, Morton remained in the castell, the rest the nobilitie in the toun. Both factiouns were strong, and stood aw of other. Loath was Morton to leave the king, or to come the parliament in Edinburgh: therefore he procured that the urliament sould be holdin at Stirline, howbeit manie assented gainst their hearts. Proclamations were made in the king's name, at erles, lords, barons, commissioners, sould come to Stirline to e parliament, without conventioun of the king's lieges, under e paine of death. At this conventioun certan of the counsell ere appointed to reasoun with certan of the ministrie upon the eds of policie.

THE PARLIAMENT FENCED.

In the beginning of Julie, Argile, Atholl, Montrose, Lindse Ogilvie, Maxwell, Hereis, and the rest of that fellowship, conveend in Edinburgh, as was thought by manie, to have stopped the fending of the parliament. But it was fenced the tenth of Julie, in the Tolbuith of Edinburgh, and continued till the 25th of Julie, at transferred to the castell of Stirline; for so had the king commanded. The lords resolved not to goe to the parliament, sein the Erle of Morton had both the king and castell in keeping; an as they alledged, there could be no free parliament, seing it wholdin in a strenth, where men might not declare their mind freelie. In the meane time, the king wrote to Edinburgh, Dundi St Johnstoun, Glasgow, for a certan number to be sent in arm to attend upon the parliament; who were sent, according to the number prescrived.

THE THRETTIE-SEVENTH GENERALL ASSEMBLIE.

The Generall Assemblie conveened at Stirline the elleventh Junie. The number was not frequent, becaus the indictioun the of depended upon the holding of the parliament, which was progued and transferred; and the time was so short, that all counot be advertised. After it was reasouned, whether this Assemblie was a continuation of the last, or a new Assemblie, it was coluded to be a new Generall Assemblie. Mr Johne Row, mir ster at Perth, was chosin Moderator. That maters might be avisedlie propouned, and more convenientlie handled, the Assemblic appointed Mr Robert Pont, Mr James Lowsone, Mr Andrew Me vill, Mr Johne Craig, and Mr Andrew Hay, to give their counse to, and communicat with the moderator, in suche maters as are the treatted in the Assemblie.

ACTS.

In the thrid sessioun it was concluded as followeth:—" Tuichig the act made in the last Assemblie, the 28th of Aprile 1578, accrning electioun of bishops and superintendents till this present Assemblie, and further order reserved thereto, the Generall semblie all in one voice hath concluded and provided, that the dact sall be extended to all times to come, ay and whill the cortioun of the estat of bishops be alluterlie takin away; and that bishops alreadie elected be required particularlie to submitt temselves to the Generall Assemblie of the kirk, concerning the formation of the corruption of the estat of bishops in their persents: Which, if they refuse, after due admonitioun, excommunication to proceed against them." The Bishop of Dumblane willinglie over this submission to the Assemblie.

- 2. Tuiching the act made in the last Assemblie, concerning clation of benefices to other persons than to the ministers of the last where the benefices vaike, and farther order to be takin in its Assemblie, the kirk and commissioners present have further nolved and concluded, that nather bishops, visiters, nor others bring commission from the Assemblie, give collation of benefices beside or against the tenor of the said act, under the paines thrin conteaned, till the nixt Assemblie, at which time, this mater be propouned again, that farther order may be takin therin.
- 3. Tuiching the punishment of bishops, ministers, and others being functioun, that sett fewes and tacks of their benefices at ecclesiasticall livings, or of anie part therof, or ministers and of pters that give their consent therto, without the consent of the Cherall Assemblie, against the tenor of the acts made of before, the Assemblie hath concluded that the persons which sall contravene the said act, sall be deprived from their offices and functiouns in time comming. And, becaus no lesse interest and hurt is wought to the church, by suche as have no function in the kirk, at yitt possesse kirk livings, the brethrein have willed Mr Robert Pont, Mr David Lindsey, Mr John Craig, the Laird of Lund and Mr Andrew Hay, to forme the act and order meete to be us against suche persons.

The brethrein appointed in the last Assemblie to present to king's Highnesse and counsell the heeds of the policie of the ki reported that, according to their commissioun, they exhibited to king's Majestie a copie of the heeds of the policie, with the suppli tioun to his Grace, who gave a verie confortable and good answe that not onlie would he concurre with the kirk in all things the might advance true religioun, presentlie professed within this real but also would be a procurator for the kirk; and that, theraft his Grace presented to the counsell the said supplicatioun, who minated persons to conferre in the mater; and by his Majest procurement obteanned, that they might choose so manie minist to conferre as was at lenth agreed upon. Which conference l with the commissioners appointed by the king's Majestie and cosell, was thought meete to be read over before the Assemblie. As the supplicatioun devised in the beginning of the conference, tui ing these that sall vote in parliament in name of the kirk, the semblie thought the advice good, and appointed Mr Johne R and Mr Robert Pont to penne the same. Concerning the rer nent observations, the Assemblie proceeded orderlie as follo eth :-

Cap. 1. The 18th article therof tuiching conference, was desi to be made plain. The Assemblie thinketh it sensible eneugh.

Cap. 2. The thrid article agreed, conforme to the conference.

Cap. 3. The seventh article to be farther considered. The te article thought plaine in the self. As to the twelve article, agreto be framed according to the conference.

Tuiching the advice craved, what paine sall be putt to the n residents, the Assemblie thought meete that civill law be crav decerning the benefices to vaike through non-residence.

The nynth article agreed, conforme to the conference, and nalteis of the persons excommunicated decerned to be horning a captioun, by a speciall act of parliament, to be executed by the easurer, or others whom the king's Majestie and his Hienesse' unsell sall please to appoint.

Cap. 5. Agreed, with the two supplicatiouns desired.

Cap. 6. The perpetuitie of the persons of the elders agreed, nforme, &c.

Anent order to be takin for visitatioun of colledges, schooles, and spitals, and the saids articles, with other articles to be givin in the brethrein, to be seene and corrected by David Fergusone, ir Andrew Hay, and the Commissioner of Kyle, Carict, and Cunninghame.

A PARLIAMENT HOLDIN AT STIRLINE.

Upon Tuesday, the 15th of Julie, the parliament was fenced, td sutes called in the great hall of Stirline. Upon the 16th day, te king was convoyed, after dinner, about ellevin houres, in his royall to the hall. The Erle of Angus bare the crowne, Lenox the scepter, and Marr the sword. Everie man being placed reording to their degree, compeered the Erle of Montrose, Lords Indsev and Orkney, as commissioners from the Erle of Argile, holl, and their adherents. My Lord Lindsey, after leave asked al granted, presented some letters to the king's Majestie, desiring tem to be read publictlie in that conventioun, and to be insert in to bookes; and then beganne to protest in their names, that noing be done there that might prejudge the nobilitie, their heyres, s cessors, and posteritie, of their liberteis granted by his predec sors, becaus it was not a free parliament, it being holdin whin a strenth and eastell; and that it sould not have the strenth oa parliament, but be null and of no effect; and protested for riedie of law, in cace it were otherwise. But they were comn nded by the Erle of Morton, who occupied the Chanceller's pce, to take their owne places. The Lord Lindsey answered, h would obey, if the king commanded. The king commanded, a! they obeyed, and tooke instruments that they did so at th king's command. After exhortation made by Johne Duncansone, upon the first of Joshua, verses 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, the Erle of Morton made an harang upon the causes of setting the parliament, to witt, the glorie of God, preservatioun of the king's person, and authorizing him in the government in his owne person; for approbation and acceptation of the authoritie dimitted by him, and the discharge of all things bypast in his regencie; beside other particulars, which sould be propouned to the Lords of the Articles.

The Commissioners of Dumbar, Hadinton, Kelso, Jedburgh. Hawick, Selkirk, Sanct Andrewes, Aberdeen, and sindrie other burrowes, conveened the day following in the tolbuith of Stirline. and, after consultatioun, compleanned that they gott not entrie within the barr to their places, where as others having no place to vote gott entrie. The Erle of Morton excused himself with the ignorance of the keepers of the barr, and promised it sould be mended. The names of the Lords of the Articles were these: The Erles of Morton, Angus, Lennox, Buchan, Eglinton; Lords Boyd, Ruthven, Uchiltrie: Abbots Dryburgh, Cambuskenneth, Glenluce; the two Commissioners of Edinburgh, Alexander Udward, and Henrie Nisbitt; the Proveists of Perth, Dundie, Aberdeen, Glasgow, Stirline, and Air. At the choosing of the Lords of the Articles, my Lord Lindsey made protestatioun, and likewise after the choosing. Morton said to him, "Yee may thanke God the king is young." He answered, he had made als good service to his Grace in his minoritie as anie there; and was readie to serve him in his majoritie, as he had done in his minoritie. After that Morton rounded in the king's eare, the king said blushing, and somwhat stootting: "Least anie man sould judge this not to be a free parliament, I declare it to be free; and these that love me will thinke as I think." Upon Fryday, the 17th day, a charge was proclamed with sound of trumpet at the croce of Stirline, that no person that sould give lawfull sute and presence in parliament depart; and a declaratioun that it was a free parliament, and sall be free to all the lieges that are absent to resort therunto.

hall, where the Booke of Policie was read over: for at the last conventioun at Stirline, certan appointed to conveene at Edinburgh, the 23d of June, to witt, Morton, Hereis, Ruthven, Lindsey, Lundie, Caprinton, the Tutor of Pitcur, the Abbots of Newbottle and Deir; ministers, Mrs Robert Pont, Andrew Melvill, Andrew Hay, David Lindsey, and James Lowsone, the Bishops of Sanct Andrewes and Aberdeen, to visie the Booke of Policie exhibited to the king's Maestie, who agreed in all things, except in foure heeds, which were explained in the last Assemblie. Therefore, the twelve commissioners appointed by the Assemblie to attend upon the Parliament desired that the booke be ratified and approved in parliament. Lords of the Articles alledged the mater was weightie, and rejuired a long time for consultatioun, and that the whole bodie of the parliament could not stay so long; and, therefore, thought meet to lepute some persons to conveene at a certane day to that effect. The commissioners of the kirk tooke this answere for a shift, or raher a refusall, becaus the booke was allowed before by these who coneened in Edinburgh, except in foure heeds, which craved not muche disputatioun. The Bishops of Sanct Andrewes and Aberdeen gave ccasion of suche an answere; for they denyed that there was anie onclusioun at Edinburgh, but onlie conference and disputatioun. The commissioners desired, that so manie as were agreed upon night be concluded, confirmed, and established by law, and comiissions givin to some to reasoun upon the rest; yitt that was not ranted. The Erle of Morton would have had some points seected, to be established by law. It was answered, their commission yould not suffer them so to doe. After delay from day to day, he Erle of Buchan, Lord Ruthven, and Bishop of Glasgow, were ppointed to conferre with the commissioners of the kirk; to hoose twelve, out of which number the parliament might choose ix. The Commissioners of the Assemblie answered, they had no ommissioun to that effect: that it became the Assemblie to colect out of the booke of God a forme of discipline and policie eclesiasticall; to propone it to the prince; and to crave it to be onfirmed, as a law proceeding from God; and that it became not the prince to prescrive a policie to the kirk; and if they would appoint anie, they would not consent to it. The lords tooke it is evill part, and thought the king might call whom he pleased, and with their advice mak a law. So they choosed and appointed Erles Morton, Lennox, Buchan, Glencarne; Lords Boyd, Uchil tree, Ruthven; Bishops of Sanct Andrewes, Aberdeen, Glasgow Barons Caprinton, Whittingham; Burgesses, the Tutor of Pitcum and Johne Arnot; Clerks, Mr George Buchanan, and Mr Peter Young, Mr Alexander Arbuthnet, Mr Clement Littill; Ministers Messrs James Lowsone, David Lindesay, Johne Row, William Christesone, Johne Duncansone, and Mr George Hay, to conveen reasoun, and conclude, or, at least, eighteene of them conjunctlies and the conference to be reported and considered in the nixt par liament.

It is to be remembred by the way, that when the Booke of Polici was agreed upon in the Assemblie, and Mr Andrew Melvill, M. Andrew Hay, and some others, desired it to be subscrived by the whole brethrein, Mr Patrik Adamsone said, "Nay, we have a honest man, our clerk, to subscrive for all; and it were to deroga from his faithfulnesse, if we sould all subscrive severallie." "Weill, said Mr Andrew Hay, "if anie man deny this heerafter, he is no honest;" and to Mr Patrik he said, before three or foure brethrein "There is my hand, Mr Patrik: if yee come against us heerafter I will call you a knave, howbeit never so publictlie." Mr Patril accepted the conditioun. When Mr Patrik alledged before th lords, he refused to subscrive, as if he had denied all approbatioun Mr Andrew Hay leadeth him by the hand to the nobleman who had informed him, and layed the blame upon him, and said to him in presence of the nobleman, "O knave, knave; I will crowne the for the knave of all knaves!" Siclyke at this time he denied, that at the last meeting at Edinburgh there was anie suche agreemen as was reported.

Upon the 17th day, the Erle of Montrose, Lord Lindsey, and Bishop of Orkney, were sent for by the Lords of the Articles, and accused as authors of noveltie, seditioun, and molestatioun of the parliament. Being demanded, if they would stand to their commissioun and protestatioun, the bishop passed from them for his owne part. The other two adhered to their protestations, and were charged by the counsell to keepe their loodgings. Montrose obeyed for certane dayes, but after went without licence to Edinburgh. Atholl had left Edinburgh, and appearandlie the caus. But being advertised by a post sent after him, he returned. The Lord Lindsey stayed some few dayes, and then departed without licence, but, as was deemed by manie, inclynned to Morton's factioun. There was some controversie betwixt the Erle Bothwell and the Erle of Arroll, about their prioritie of place and vote in parliament. It was decerned, that Bothwell sould have the first place, wherupon Arroll refused to vote.

Upon Fryday, the 25th of Julie, the last day of the parliament, these persons following being present, the Bishops of St Andrewes, Glasgow, Aberdeen, Murrey, and Orkney: Abbots and Pryours, Glenluce, Dryburgh, Cumbuskenneth, Inchaffrey, Culrosse, Monymusse, Pluscardie; Erles Morton, Angus, Lennox, Marr, Bothwell, Eglinton, Glencarne, Buchan; Lords Ruthven, Yester, Boyd, Uchiltrie, Sinclare, Cathcart, Oliphant, Saltoun, and Somervell; the Commissioners of Burrowes, except some few in the south, the acts were voted and concluded, viz., the ratificatioun and establishing of the authoritie in the king's person, a declaratioun that the parliament was lawfull and free, a discharge givin to James Erle of Morton of his regiment, a ratificatioun of the dimissioun of his authoritie, together with the acceptatioun of the same in the king's owne person; a nominatioun and electioun of a new counsell to the king, to witt, the Erles of Morton, Argile, Lennox, Rothesse, Glencarne, Eglinton, and Buchan; Lords Boyd, Uchiltrie, Cathcart; Abbots, Dryburgh, Cumbuskenneth, Atholl, and other the king's officers, which sall indure, till farther order be takin after by a parliament, and sall conveene at Stirline, or where it sall happin the king to be resident: that foure, at least, sall remaine with the king, by course, for two moneths, and three sall subscrive anie thing needfull with the king; and in absence of the secretarie, Mr George Buchanan and Mr Peter Young sall subscrive suche things as belong to his office: that it sall be leasome, not-withstanding, to anie of the rest to remaine all the yeere, if they please. The foure appointed to remaine the first two moneths were Morton, Lennox, Boyd, and Cumbuskenneth. Their oathes were taikin, and their hands holdin up, to give faithfull counsell, and the king promised, in the word of a prince, to follow the same. A commissioun granted for visiting the Majestie and Lawes collected in commoun places by Mr James Balfoure and Mr Johne-Skeene. A commission for the Policie of the Kirk. The rest of the things concluded may be seene in the acts of parliament extant in print.

PREPARATIONS OF THE FACTIONS ON BOTH SIDES.

Upon the 26th of Julie, the toun of Edinburgh's men of warrecame from Stirline to Leith, and upon the Lord's day, the 27th, came to Edinburgh about sermon time, and assisted the publishing of two proclamations; the one, charging to stay all waging of men of warre, without commissioun from the king; to apprehend and imprisson suche as were alreadie taikin up: another, to keepe their toun free from entering of great companeis of men, under all hiest paine. The lords were offended, becaus the proclamation was made without their advice. Mr James Lowsone in sermoun exhorted the lords to concord. He granted, that the ambitioun and avarice of one man was intolerable; that it was not eneugh that one sould occupie the king's eare: "Yitt," said he, "that is not a sufficient provocatioun to divide the countrie, to hazard the liberteis of the realme for the same, to cast the king's person in perell, and religioun in danger." Upon the Moonday following. Argile, Atholl, and their adherents, sent for the counsell of the toun, and sessioun of the kirk, and desired them to joyne with them for the king's deliverie; at least, to have secure remaining among them, and incace they went to Stirline, to have free accesse at their returne. The citicens were divided among themselves, yitt at length, by moyen, their desire was granted. When the drum was beattin, and the trumpet blowin, for leveing of souldiours to Captan Hume, the lords caused breake the drum. and take the trumpet from the trumpetter. Upon the 29th of Julie, Angus was proclamed lieutenant to the king, and all men charged to obey him. Some were sent to touns and villages of the countrie, to wage men to Captans Hume, Crawfurd, Prestoun, and Lambie, but came no speed; and for a hundreth horsemen to Carmichaell and Captan Montgomerie. Preparatiouns were made on both sides. Mr Bowes, the English ambassader, Mr James Lowsone, Mr David Lindsey, Mr Robert Pont, went to Stirline, to travell for agreement. They desired the Erle of Morton to goe to his owne dwelling-places, and offered, that Atholl and Argile sould doe the like. They desired likewise that the king might be delivered to Alexander Areskine, to be keeped in the castell of Edinburgh. But they could effectuat nothing. Wherupon Atholl, Argile, Montrose, and their adherents, encouraged to sett fordward, made a proclamatioun, the tenor wherof followeth :-

A PROCLAMATION MADE BY ATHOLL'S FACTION.

"Forasmuche as it pleased the king's Majestie, upon the 12th of Marche last, to conveen the most part of the nobilitie and estats, to take deliberatioun and advice in all things that concerned the weale, quietnesse, good rule, and policie of this countrie, and most speciallie, for reformatioun of suche enormiteis and extortions as were committed in the regiment of the Erle Mortoun, which by time could not eshew (through the manifold greefes and displeasures of the nobilitie) an open hostilitie and civill warre, the messinger of a lamentable decay and ruine to this kingdome; wherin, of good providence and foresight, it pleased the king's Majestie, for diverting and appeasing of the troubles and perturbations appearing, to re-establish a perfyte love, union, and concord, among the whole subjects, to accept and receave the government in his owne person, (and that upon the Erle of Morton's voluntar dimissioun of his authoritie;) craving onlie, that in his tender age and minoritie, he might be supplied by the good counsell, wisdome, and experience of an ordinarie counsell of his nobilitie, which being lawfullie chosin and sworne of the most sufficient and best able for that functioun, their sessioun and residence was commanded to be at Edinburgh, where, in ministring justice to the complaints of the people, and ordering the publict effaires of the commoun weale, they abode till the Erle of Morton, emboldenned through ambitioun and hatred, and impatient of the prosperous rule and generall good order that ensued upon their diligent care and vigilant conventioun, by his apostat and suborned instruments, surprised in plaine hostilitie the king's hous and person, injuriouslie displaced the keeper, and commanded his tryne and familie, with others the king's Majestie's servants, to the gates, and all under the pretended and heritable title of the young and innocent Erle of Marr, by the craft and perverse counsell of his unnaturall kinsmen addressed to that treasoun; the fearefull and dangerous report wherof being certified to the counsell, they resorted, at their possible diligence, to Stirline; and to lett passe all occasiouns that might disturbe the quiett estat of the countrie, or devolve the king's person in further perrell or hazard, they permitted the keeping and administratioun of the king's hous to the said Erle of Marr, trusting, through moderatioun and lenitie, to mitigat and restrain all further attempts prejudiciall to the king's Majestie and his realme.

"But defacing the ancient fidelitie and reputatioun of their hous, to the great regrate of all men, they persist, being blinded by the detestable and unhappie counsell of their great oracle, the Erle of Morton, who will prescrive them no stay, till he have drivin them in extreme perdition, and made them the miserable instruments of their owne destruction. And yitt he would pretend himself innocent, and by his absence excusable of their seditious interprise, if the progresse of his actions sensyne did not prove him to be the verie patron and deviser of that odious and treasonable conspiracie. For frome his admissioun in counsell, and entresse in the king's hous, wherefra he will not be removable, he hath so disordered all things according to his appetite, so farre thralled and subdued the king's Majestie's will and pleasure, that all free and liberall accesse. all secreit purpose and communicatioun with his Majestie, is utterlie denied unto his Highnesse' most loyall and obedient subjects. He hath, with his adherents, usurped the lawfull jurisdictioun of the king's Majestie's chosin and lawfull counsell. He hath, against the king's Majestie's proclamations and inviolable edicts, against all consuetude, justice, and law, reduced and translated the seate of the parliament and assemblie of the estats from Edinburgh, the capitall toun of this realme, to their castell and strenth of Stirline, in manifest abrogatioun and diminutioun of the libertie and power of the three estats, the onlie stowpes and pillers of the crowne. He had wairded the Erle of Montrose and Lord Lindsey, for their lawfull protestations in their imprissouned parliament. And now, to absolve his whole designe and enterprise, he waged an armie at the king's cost and charge, to mainteane this his usurped authoritie, to worke the utter wracke and exterminioun of the king's Majestie's faithfull and obedient subjects.

"Wherefore we, the Lords of Secreit Counsell, and others of the nobilitie, upon the great and weightie respects moving us, having considered, that the continuance of thir calamiteis can import nothing ellis but the ruine and desolatioun of this kingdome; seing, that long suffering and notorious patience hath emboldenned and augmented their outrageous insolence and presumptioun, we have sworne and resolved (all difficulteis postponned) to withstand and resist all disorder, extortioun, and violence, as under the abused name and authoritie of the king's Majestie sall be exercised by the Erle of Morton upon his Hienesse' innocent and obedient subjects; and to spend and hazard to the uttermost of our lives, lands, and power, for the king's Majestie's deliverance and libertie, wherof, we are assured some day to receave a joyfull and gracious recompence. But becaus the successe of a civill warre is alwise greevous and dammagable, through the lamentable inconveniences which theron ensue, we protest before God and man, that we putt our selves in armour, and prepare our selves to defend, with greefe and displeasure of our mindes; and most heartilie desire, that suche great calamiteis and misereis as are like to fall out upon this civill warre, might be averted and pacified with our onlie blood, if so we might please God. But seing all our reasonable requests are rejected, and our adversars will be judges in our caus, we protest again, that our onlie purpose and intent is, to restore the king's Majestie to his former libertie, to bring the governement of this realme into his owne power, and to deliver the kirk of God and commoun weale from the tyrannie and oppressioun of them that ever sought, and now seeke, the lamentable overthrow of religioun and policie; having nather regard to our owne privat commoditie and gaine in this caus, nor led by ambitioun, avarice, nor anie malicious desire of revenge, as knoweth the Lord, whose glorie and truthe we seeke to defend and mainteane, with the king's dignitie, peace, and tranquillitie of this realme.

"Therefore we, the chosin counsellers of the king's Majestie, and remnant of the nobilitie heere assembled, ordeane, command, and charge officers of armes, to passe to the mercat croces of the burghes of Edinburgh, Hadinton, Cowper in Fife, Dundie, Perth, Glasgow, Irwing, Stirline, Air, and all other head burrowes within this realme; and there, by open proclamatioun in our soverane lord's name and authoritie, command and charge all and sindrie our soverane lord's lieges, within the age of sixtie and sixteen yeers, that they, and everie one of them, prepare and addresse themselves in their most substantious and warlike maner, with fyfteene dayes' provisioun, to accompanie us, the said chosin counsellers and nobilitie, toward the burgh of Stirline, the tenth day of August instant; there to remaine during the said space, to obteane the king's Majestie's libertie and deliverance, under all hiest paine and charge that after may follow: With certificatioun to them, if they faile, they sall be reputed partners, and guiltie of the king's Majestie's thraldome and detention. August 1578."

GATHERING OF FORCES ON THE OTHER SIDE.

The Erle of Angus, generall lieutenant, made a proclamation upon the fourth of August, declaring his commissioun to convocat his Grace's lieges in warlike maner, for persute of certan disobedient persons, their assisters and partakers, by fire and sword, and all other kinde of hostilitie, who have putt themselves in armes, and levied certane bands of men of warre, minding to attempt farther forces against our soverane lord's deerest person, and the estat and quietnesse of this realme; and charging in his Hienesse' name, to conveene and passe fordward, for persute of the saids persons, and to addresse themselves to Stirline, against the tenth day of August, in warlike maner, with provision of fyfteene dayes' victuall. The Erle of Morton caused send missives through the countrie, subscrived by the king, requiring particular persons to repaire, with their freinds, houshold servants, and dependers, boddin in feare of warre. The Erle of Morton his owne missive was sent soone after to some particular freinds, wherin he purgeth himself of the reports that went, that maters were done without the king's advice; willing them to repaire to Stirline, to know his Majestie's owne minde.

FORCES ON BOTH SIDES GATHERED AT STIRLINE.

Upon the elleventh of August, at nyne houres in the morning, the Erles of Atholl, Argile, Montrose; Lords Maxwell, Seton, Livingston, Innernieth; the Maister of Lindsey, Coldingknowes, Cesfurd, went out of Edinburgh to Linlithquo; and upon the twelve went to Fawkirk, accompanied with a thowsand men, hors and foote. The Erle of Angus came out of Stirline, after noone, with eight hundreth or nyne hundreth hors. Both parteis were readie to fight; but the Erle of Morton willed Angus to retire vith expeditioun. There was no skirmish, but onlie a provocation of a singular combat, betwixt James Johnston, a follower of the Erle of Angus, and one Tait, a Tiviotdaill man, attending on the Laird of Cesfurd. They ranne together with speares. Tait was slaine, Johnston was somwhat hurt. The Erle of Angus, at the Erle of Morton's desire, retired upon the thritteenth day. The forces of the other partie increassed; for there came to the Erle of Argile, 2500 foot men, to the Erle of Montrose, 300 men, to the Erle of Atholl, 1600 men. After this, everie lord and baron brought in their forces, till the number amounted to 7000 men, or thereby. The forces on the other side increased to the number of 5000, of which number, manie resorted rather for obedience to the proclamatioun, than favour to Morton, and affirmed, they would not strike one stroke against the other partie. After some skirmishing betwixt the two parteis, the English ambassader, Mr Bowes, Mr James Lowsone and Mr David Lindsey, ministers, travelled betweene them; and, after communing, it was agreed as followeth :-

THE AGREEMENT.

"James, by the grace of God, King of Scots, to all and sindrie to whose knowledge thir present letters sall come, greeting. Witt yee, for the tender love and affectioun we beare to all our subjects, forseing the wracke and calamitie with which our realme sall be afflicted, if the present division and appearand trouble sall be suffered further to proceed: Therefore, with advice, consent, and mature deliberatioun of the Lords of our Secreit Counsell, to the pleasure of God, and publict quietnesse of our realme and subjects, at the earnest travells of our deerest sister, the Queen of England, our cousin, by her ambassader resident with us, we have pronounced, declared, statuted, and ordeanned, and by thir our letters pronounce, declare, statute, and ordeane, as followeth:-First, That all hostilitie sall, without anie delay, ceasse; all forces be dissolved, except some bands of horsemen alreadie reteaned upon our charges; which bands, we will, sall be onlie imployed for the quietnesse of our borders, and others our effaires, and not against the lords at Linlithquo, or anie their adherents in this late actioun. Forasmuche as we understand, and are throughlie perswaded, that the lords conveened at Edinburgh tooke arms for the love and tender affectioun they bare to us, we accept and allow the same, since the tenth of Junie last, as good services done; and all the parteis and adherents in the same are accepted by us as good subjects and servants. We will, that our right trust cousin and counseller, the Erle of Argile, sall remaine with our counsell, and be loodged within our castell at Stirline, with the like number as anie other noble man is loodged therin, saving the Erle of Marr, who hath the custodie therof: and that the said Erle of Argile sall have the like accesse unto us and our eare as anie other noble man about us sall have. We will likewise, that the Erle of Montrose and Lord Lindsey sall be added to our counsell, as two of the three appointed by our late act of parliament, and the thrid to be nominated when we thinke time. We will call eight noblemen, with advice of our deerest sister and cousin, the Queen of England, and by their counsell and assistance, God willing, before the first day of May nixt, we will tak order for reconciliatioun of our nobilitie to be united, for all actions and greeves fallin among them by occasioun of thir troubles, and finall ending of the same. We will, that our keepers of Edinburgh and Dumbartane sall reteane the sustodie and possessioun of the samine, untill we, with advice of the eight noblemen to be called unto us, have givin order in the aus remembered, so as the samine may be made before the first lay of May forsaid, at the farthest. Our will and pleasure is, that Il the noblemen, barons, and gentlemen, our subjects, comming to us, to doe their dutifull services and good offices, sall be admitted o our presence and free speeche, as to good subjects apperteaneth. Our will is also, that the Laird of Drumquhassill sall be relaxed rom his horning, to the effect he may make his compts, and therfter returne to his charge. Givin under our signet, and subscrived y us, with advice of the Lords of our Secreit Counsell present. at Stirline, the 15th day of August, and of our raigne the twelve JAMES R." eere, 1578.

"At Stirline, the 14th of August 1578.

"That all forces dissolve after the king's proclamation, the men of warre with their ensignes folded and undisplayed.

"The forces being dissolved, the Erle of Angus sall immediatlie give up his lieutenantrie, which lasteth but for the king's will onlie.

"The gentlemen of my Lord of Argile's companie, to the number of threttie or fourtie, sall have accesse to his Majestie's presence.

"My Lord of Atholl's companie may safelie passe home by Stirline Bridge; but none come within the toun, saving some gentlemen, to the number of threttie or fourtie, who also may have accesse to see the king.

"None in their returning sall doe injurie to the countrie folkes through whom they passe, or tak anie of their cattell or goods, but with their good wills, and for thankfull and readie payment, for whom their lords and maisters sall answere.

"All prisoners, horse, and armour takin, sall be sett at libertic and restored. If the Laird of Cessford's man's hors was tane in the Burrow Mure, by anie that served in this action for the king the hors sall be restored, otherwise, lett the restitution be suted by order of law.

"The Proveist of Edinburgh's waird sall be discharged, that he may enter home."

The meaning of the fyft article of the king's declaration is, that the lords that conveened at Linlithquo sall have the nomination and appointment of foure of the said noblemen; and that they sould be called by the king's Grace and his counsell to treate upon the causes mentioned in the article.

THE THRETTIE-EIGHT GENERALL ASSEMBLIE.

The Generall Assemblie conveened at Edinburgh, in the Neather Counsell-hous, the 24th of October 1578. David Fergusone. Minister at Dumfermline, was chosin Moderator. For better ex-peditioun of maters in this Assemblie, it was thought meet, that the moderator conveene with Mr James Lowsone, Mr Andrew Melvill, Mr Johne Row, Mr Andrew Hay, Mr Thomas Smeton, Mr Johne Craig, Mr Robert Pont, everie day, at seven houres in the morning, and two afternoone, in Mr James Lowson's galrie; confer and advise upon suche things as sall be thought meete to be propouned to the Assemblie.

REQUESTS.

In respect that, at the desire of the Assemblie, some of the nopilitie were conveened, viz., my Lord Chanceller, the Erle of Monrose, my Lord Seton, my Lord Lindsey, it was declared and hewed to them by the moderator, in name of the Assemblie, what are and studie the Assemblie had takin, to keepe and intertean he puritie of the sincere Word of God unmixed with anie invenioun of their owne heeds, to reserve it to the posteritie heerafter. and seing that the true religioun is not able to continue and enure long without good discipline and policie, in that part have hev also imployed their witt and studie, and drawin furth of the ure fountans of God's Word, suche a discipline and policie as is neete to remaine within the kirk; which they presented to the ing's Majestie, with their supplicatioun; at whose discretioun, ertane commissioners were appointed to reasoun with suche as ere deputed by the Assemblie: where the mater being disputed, as resolved and agreed to a few heeds, and therafter presented gain to the Lords of the Articles, that the said discipline might ke place, and be established by the lawes and acts of the realme; here not the lesse, their travell hath not succeeded. Praying, rerefore, the nobilitie present, als weill openlie to mak professioun the Assemblie, if they would allow, affirme, and mainteane the ligioun presentlie established within this realme, as also, the pocie and discipline alreadie spokin of, and labour at the king and ounsell's hands for an answere to the heeds after following:-To itt, That his Grace and counsell would establishe suche heeds of the policie as were alreadie resolved and agreed upon by the sa commissioners; and caus suche others as were not agreed und finallie to be reasouned, and putt to an end: And that his Grace ar counsell will restore the kirk to the benefite of the act of parliamer concerning the thrids; and that none vote in parliament, in nan of the kirk, except suche as sall have commissioun of the kirk that effect: And that presentations of benefices be directed to tl commissioners of countreis where the benefice lyeth. And to tl effect that the mater may be the better and sooner exped, th their lordships would appoint suche times convenient thereto they may best spaire, that suche brethrein as sall be nominate thereto may attend upon their honours. The noblemen answere that some of them had made publict professioun of before, and waves and now declare they professe the religioun presentlie est blished within this realme, and sall mainteane the samine to the power. As to the rest, they thinke good the king and his counse be suted, and they sall assist with the Assemblie for an answer The time to that effect they sall notifie the morne to the Assembli These were the noblemen who had drawin a factioun against tl Erle of Morton, a great opposite to the Booke of Policie. So pleased God to worke.

THE BISHOP OF GLASGOW HIS ANSWERE TO THE ASSEMBLIE.

Mr James Boyd, Commissioner of Kyle, Carict, &c., we desired to submitt himself to the Generall Assemblie, for reformation of the corruption of the estat of a bishop in his personaccording to the acts of the Assemblic. Farther, he was delate for negligence in his visitation, negligence in preaching at the kirk of Oswald, which he had takin to be his particular kirk slackenesse in discipline, and for giving collation to Mr Hetor Dowglas of the benefice of Ankrome, with command to the reader to give him institution therof, there being another ministe there actuallie serving the cure at the said kirk. To the first be answered, that he understood not the meaning of the said act concerning submissioun: alwise, was content to offer such reasons to the moderator and brethrein that are to confer with him, as ather they may be satisfied, or he may be perswaded by their better reasons to yeeld. As to his non-visitation, he granted he had not visited Kyle and Cunninghame, for deadlie feeds there; and desired to be disburthenned of that charge, and his visitatioun to be limited to him about Glasgow. As for preaching, he had preached in the kirk of Oswald, when he was in the countrie, and other times in Glasgow, and craved at the Assemblie that he might travell at Glasgow. As to the last, answered, it is the commoun forme of collatioun that he keeped.

In the fyft sessioun, the moderator and brethrein appointed to onferre with him thought best he sould publishe his owne answere o the Assemblie. He gave in his answere in writt as followeth:-'First, I understand the name, office, and modest reverence borne to bishop, to be lawfull and allowable by the Scriptures of God; and eing elected by the kirk and king to be Bishop of Glasgow, I eseeme my calling and office lawfull. As tuiching the execution of he charge committed to me, I am content to endeavoure, at my ttermost abilitie, to performe the same, and everie point therof, nd to abide the honorable judgement of the kirk from time to me, of my offending, seing the charge is weightie; and in laying nie thing to be layed to my charge, to be examined by the canon ft by the Apostle to Timothie, 1 Ep., cap. iii., seing that place as appointed to me at my receaving, to understand therefra the ueteis of a bishop. As toward my livings and rents, and other lings granted by the prince to me and my antecessors for my rving of that charge, I recke the same lawfull. As to my duetie the supreme magistrat, in assisting his Grace in counsell or parment, being craved thereto, I esteeme I am bound to obey the me; and that it is no hurt, but a weale to the kirk, that some of ir number be at the making of good lawes and ordinances. In ing wherof, I protest before God I intend never to doe anie thing it that which I believe sall stand with the puritie of the Scriptures and a weill reformed countrie; as also, a good part of the liing which I bruike hath beene givin for that caus."

This answere being read in open Assemblie, and considered, after voting, the whole brethrein judged it to be no answere to the action nor to satisfie the intent therof. Alwise, he was required, at after noone, to return with better advice, as the Assemblie prayeth to God he might doe. What his answere was cannot be found in the Register, because there wanteth two leaves rivvin out by the sacriling gious hands of the bishops, in the yeere 1584.

MINISTERS CENSURED.

"Imprimis, The Assemblie craveth of the king's Majestie that becaus manie young schollers are sent out of this realme to Parise and other universiteis professing Papistrie, wherethrough the yout of this realme is corrupted by pestilent Poprie, in place of godli vertue, that therefore his Majestie would mak generall prohibitiour that none of the inhabitants of this realme send their childrein t Parise, or other universiteis or tours professing Papistrie, unde suche paines as his Highnesse and his counsell sall thinke expedent, to the end that the youth of this countrie be not brought u in Papisticall superstitioun and idolatrie, contrare Christ's religioun.

"Item, The Assemblie craveth of his Highnesse, that becaus is thought meet the Universitie of Sanct Andrewes be reformed that his Hienesse would caus and compell the provests and master of colledges of the said universitie to produce and exhibite the foundations and erections of the colledges within the said universitie, to be considered by his Hienesse, and suche as his Grace sa appoint; also, that the saids foundations may be sighted, and reformation made theranent, as effeires.

"Item, Becaus some Jesuits are presentlie within this countrie, hat order may be takin with them as effeirs, seing they are the restilent dregs of most detestable idolatrie.

"Item, Becaus one minister is not sufficient to await at all times pon his Grace' and his Hienesse' hous, to preache, exhort, admoishe, and preserve perfyte discipline within his Majestie's hous, herefore the Assemblie craveth, that his Hienesse will be content o name anie other minister within this realme, of best qualiteis, to e joynned with Johne Duncansone, his Hienesse' minister for the resent, that they may both with mutuall consent await upon his lirace, and the whole ministrie of his hous.

"Item, Becaus, in the last conference holdin at Stirline, at his lirace his command, concerning the Policie of the Kirk, certan articles theranent remaine yitt unresolved, and referred to farther conference; therefore, the Assemblie craveth his Majestie, that persons unspotted with suche corruptions as are desired to be reformed, may be nominated by his Majestie, to proceed in farther conference of the said Policie, and time and place to be appointed for that effect.

"Item, Becaus the Assemblie understandeth that his Majestie, with advice of his Secreit Counsell, directed letters often times to any the executioun of the acts of the Generall Assemblie, as also, immouned ministers to take triell of excommunicatioun produced by them, according to the Word of God and discipline of the kirk, to stay the pronouncing of the samine, as the commissioners of the kirk in particular will declare, that therefore his Majestic perafter would suffer the acts of the Generall Assemblie to be att in executioun; and namelie, that excommunicatioun being conounced, may have due executioun without controlling therefore his Majestie and the Secreit Counsell."

It was thought meet, that supplication be givin to the king's ajestic and counsell, for provision to commissioners or visiters of ountreis, ather out of the thrids of the benefices, or out of the two arts.

COMMISSIONERS CHOSIN.

Commissioners were chosin de novo for countreis or provinces.

ACTS.

The brethrein thought meete, that the late conference holdin a Stirline by such as the king appointed thereto, sould be read ar seene, and conferred with the Booke of Policie, to see wherin the said conference agreeth with the former conclusiouns of the Assemblie.

The First Chapter.

Concerning the doubt made upon the secund article of the sal chapter, the Assemblie explaneth that article, and declareth, it understood both of the particular presbyterie and generall kirk.

- 1. The fourth article is thought plain eneugh.
- 2. Agreed to the delatioun conteanned in the sixt article.
- 3. The nynth article the Assemblie thinketh meet to stand as is in the booke.

And the twelve siclyke.

The Assemblie eeketh to the word "government" this word "discipline."

The tenth article to remaine unaltered.

II. It was concluded and ordeanned, that commissioners of previnces enquire diligentlie if Jesuits resort within their bounds; an if anie be found, to charge them to give confessioun of their faitly revocke their errors, subscrive the articles of religioun presentlies established by the mercie of God within this realme; and if the refuse, to proceed with the sentence of excommunication against them, beside the civil punishment to be craved of the king's Highest and that this act be executed against Mr Johne Hay.

III. The Assemblie ordeanneth, that commissioners of countrei and their assisters trie within their bounds suche ministers as hav pluralitie of benefices and offices, and to report their reasons to the nixt Assemblie, together with their names, that the Assemblie may tak order for remedie of the same.

IV. That the act concerning apparrell of ministers and their wives be putt in executioun in all points, according to the tenor theref.

V. That the act made 12th August 1575, concerning bishops and commissioners of countreis absenting themselves from the Generall Assemblie, be executed against them, namlie, against Sanct Andrewes, Murrey, and Aberdeen, all absent; and that this act be understood, als weill of bishops that have not the office of visitation, as these that have.

QUESTIONS PROPONNED BY THE SYNODALL ASSEMBLIE OF LOTHIANE TO THE GENERALL ASSEMBLIE, AND THE ANSWERES OF THE ASSEMBLIE THERETO.

Question. In the first, in respect of great inconveniences which thave ensued, and daylie doe ensue, by readers in using of their offices, the whole brethrein have inhibited all readers from ministring of the sacraments, and solemnizatioun of mariages; permitting nothing unto them but proclamatioun of bannes, and simple reading of the text: desireth an uniform order to be established by authoritie of the Generall Assemblie through all other provinces.

Answere. So manie readers as the commissioners of the synodall assemblie findeth unmeet to solemnize mariage, to be inhibited by them.

Quest. Secundlie, craveth of the Generall Assemblie an universall order to be established concerning ministers, as the synodall assemblie of Lothiane hath concluded alreadie, that everie minister sall await everie Sabboth day at that kirk where he is bound to nake residence; and the supporting of other kirks to be onlie upon worke dayes; and the commissioners in everie province, in their viitatioun, to accuse the ministers contraveeners of the samine.

VOL. III. 2 F

Ans. Alloweth this order for Lothiane.

Quest. Thridlie, in respect that sindrie brethrein, beside their ministrie, have particular benefices, whereby their kirks where their benefices ly are disappointed of service, that an uniforme order may be takin, that men may serve ather at the kirk where the benefice lyeth, or provisioun to be made for the samine.

Ans. Agreed thereto.

Quest. Fourthlie, a generall order to be takin for erecting of presbytereis in places where public exercise is used, untill the time the Policie of the Kirk be established by law.

Ans. The exercise may be judged a presbyterie.

QUESTIONS PROPOUNED BY THE SYNODALL ASSEMBLIE OF SANCT ANDREWES TO THE GENERALL ASSEMBLIE, AND THE AN-SWERES OF THE ASSEMBLIE THERETO.

Quest. In the first, the brethrein of the said Assemblie require, if anie ought, or may be suffered to read within the kirk in time of necessitie, without admissioun, although they be elders or deacons?

Ans. To the first article-negatur simpliciter.

Quest. Item, If all kirks have not the same equal power to marie on a weeke day, beside the Sabbath day, having a sufficient number, and joynning preaching thereto, as certan particular kirks alreadic practise?

Ans. To the secund, it is agreed, that he may marie on feriall dayes.

Quest. Item, What order sall be putt to them who byde from the communioun, alledging invy they beare toward their nighbours as the caus therof, &c., and others, that nather will speeke, salute, nor beare familiar companie with their nighbours; being required by their ministers, will not obey; if they ought to be admitted? &c.

Ans. Ordeanneth the persons lying under invy to be admonished; and the other not to be suffered without reconciliation, and testification of brotherlie love.

Quest. Last, What ought to be done to suche persons that, after admonitions, will passe to May playes, speciallie elders, deacons, and others, who beare office within the kirk?

Ans. They ought not to be admitted to the sacrament without satisfactioun, speciallie elders and deacons.

QUESTIONS.

Quest. A certan maried man slandereth himself of adulterie with another man's wife: the woman denyeth the fact, but granteth that he intised her sindrie times thereto. Item, The woman slandereth the man, that he perswaded her to putt down her owne husband, and to goe furth of the countrie with him, promising, as she alledged, to doe the like with his wife: the man granteth that he intised her to goe with him out of the countrie, but denyeth that he perswaded her to doe anie evill to her husband; of which shamefull alledgences, no small troubles are raised, and the kirk heavilie slandered.

Ans. Referreth this question to be further tried in all circumstances by the commissioner of the countrie, the minister of the parish, and other ministers nixt adjacent, suche as the commissioner sall convocat, at what time and place it sall seems best to them; and that both parties, interim, be debarred a sacra cæna.

Quest. Becaus there are some ministers that will not solemnize mariage but onlie upon Sunday, and other some use the samine on weeke dayes, wherof ariseth no small slander among the people, we crave an universall order to be keeped, ather to appoint the Sunday preciselie, or that all dayes be alike, after due proclamatioun.

Ans. Bannes being three severall Sundayes lawfullie proclamed, the mariage may be anie day of the weeke solemnized, so that a sufficient number and witnesses be present.

Quest. What order sall be takin with these persons that passe to a Popish preest and marie, their bannes not being proclamed? Sall they be esteemed as maried persons? If not, what discipline sall be used against them?

Ans. The Assemblie will not acknowledge this conjunctioun for mariage, and, therefore, ordeaneth the persons to be called before their particular assembleis, to satisfie as fornicators, and upon new proclamatioun, to be maried, according to the order of the reformed kirk; and the Popish preest to be punished.

In all these Assembleis wherin the Policie was discussed, there was no suche thing as careing away of anie point with a number of votes, one or moe; but maters indifferentlie propouned, and after begging light from God, searching the Scripture, conference and reasoning a large and sufficient time, all with one voice, in one consent and unitie of minde, determined and concluded.

Upon the tenth of Julie, the commissioners of the Generall Assemblie presented a supplication to the king, the first part wherof concerned the printing of the Bible by Alexander Arbuthnet. The other part concerned the Policie of the Kirk as followeth:—

"These, and manie other things more particular, (the ample discourse wherof we remitt to the historeis,) as they testifie to us the bountifull goodnesse of God, both toward your Majestie and this realme, so ought they to stirre up all hearts to thankfulnesse. and cheerfullie encurage you to passe fordward in this great work of reformatioun of religioun, and building of the spirituall temple of the Lord, the foundation wherof being alreadie layed by publict universall preaching of true doctrine throughout the whole realme, it resteth, that the work may be prosecuted, and the building brought to a great perfectioun, by establishing of discipline and meete policie in the kirk of God, not taikin out of the cisterns of the traditions of men, but of the pure fountans of God's holie Word. Which thing wiselie begunne in your Highnesse' name, by your first regent, of godlie memorie, and ordeanned by Act of Parliament to be followed furth, hath beene diligentlie preassed for from time to time, but speciallie now, since the acceptation of the government in your owne person, when as, not onlie most lovinglie and willinglie yee did receave the Booke of the Policie of the Kirk, offered by them who were directed to your Majestic in name of the generall kirk, but also, was verie carefull to find out men meete for conference upon the heeds of the same, lamenting for the raritie of suche kinde of persons as were desired to conferre therupon; and hath appointed diverse times and places, where suche conferences in your name, and at your commandement, have beene had, not without fruict and agreement, in manie heeds to be passed in lawes, but with expectatioun of greater things after to follow, upon further conference, providing suche men be appointed thereto as your Hienesse wished, and we most earnestlie crave. Wherinto, we doubt not of your owne good will as of before. For it sould be but lost travell whatsoever hath beene bestowed therin, if the warke sall not be followed furth, and broght to good issue and good end, wherunto we exhort your Grace most effectuouslie. For nothing can be found more proper, wherin a Christian prince of suche expectation as yee are, sould give a true prooffe of the good and sound affectioun which he beareth to the advancement of God's glorie, and of the kingdom of Jesus Christ.

"Truthe it is, that Satan ceaseth not, nather will cease heerafter, to object manie and great impediments to the hinderance of this godlie interprise, of bringing this spirituall building of the hous of God to perfection, which we alwise are in good hope (adjoyning thereto our continuall prayers) your good and heroick zeale sall overcome, albeit, not without some hard difficultie, and wearisome letts, even of them who ought, of duetie, to putt their hand to the work. We read in this booke, how manie and difficill imbediments were offered to Zorobabel and the Jewes, to stay the bigging and repairing of the temple of Jerusalem. Sometimes hey were expreslie contramanded by the edicts of the great nonarch, sometimes by the threatnings of their adversareis round bout them, sometimes by domesticall enemeis, hypocrits, craftie vorldlings, and oppressors of their brethrein. Yitt against all these he prophet opponned the commandement of God, and promise of is assistance to performe the worke. The like, or rather greater, mpediments be objected this day against the spirituall building of fod's hous. The kings, and great monarchs of the earth, threattin racke and destruction to all these that sall meddle with this worke. The false-named kirk men that pretend to be biggers up. demolishe, and, if they had power, would cast down all to the ground, as their wicked conspiracie concluded at Trent doeth specifie. In what coldnesse the former zeale of manie is now changed. yea, what carelesnesse of maters of religion in all estats, it may more than evidentlie appeare. The insatiable covetousnesse of everie one to apply and appropriat to themselves the commoun rents of the kirk, doeth over truelie declare what consciences men have, and speciallie, the greatest, (whose ancestors lived more honorablie upon their owne.) to be manifest transgressers in deed of that religioun which, in word, to their shame, boldlie they professe. And last of all, the manifest corruption of our lives in all estats, the licentious and godlesse living of the multitude, the impunitie of sinne and wickednesse, the cruell and unnaturall murthers, haynous and detestable incests, adultereis, sorcereis, and manie suche like enormiteis, with the oppressioun and contempt of the poore, almost universall corruptioun of justice and judgement, and manie other evills which overflow this commoun wealth, beare evident witnesse, how slender and small successe hitherto followed the reformation of religious within this realme, and doe provoke the judgements of God, alas! over sore against us.

"And yitt, none of these impediments, nay, not they all conjoyned together, sould discourage your Highnesse to goe fordward in this godlie worke. But the hope of God's assistance, who is able to move heaven and earth when pleaseth Him, the promise of His presence and grace, and happie end to follow, ought rather to enflamme and raise up your royall heart, more constantlie to fight and overcome all the letts that Satan and his craftic supposts can devise. It appeareth weill, that God hath chosin you as a singular instrument, to be as a paterne and ensample to all other princes in your time, in offering you so faire occasioun to putt the kirk of God in full libertie, to purge it frome corruptioun, to establishe suche decent and comelie policie within the same as his Word crayeth, and to provide for the long during and perpetuitie therof, seing it hath pleased Him to make your Grace, from your tender youth, to be brought up in the true knowledge and feare of His name, to make the pure doctrine of the Gospell in perfyte unitie, without anie schisme or controversie, to be plainlie and peaceablie published through all the bounds of your dominiouns; and, finallie, to make this policie of the kirk to be humblie and earnestlie craved to be established by your Highnesse, by the most part of the true subjects of your realme. Suche perclare occasiouns ought not to be omitted, remembering how all kings are commanded to embrace and kisse the Sonne of God, and to be nourishers of his kirk, (Psalm ii.) Therefore, against all impediments, propoune and oppoune the earnest zeale of David, who could tak no rest nor sleepe to his eyes, untill he had found the place where the Lord sould have his resting-place among the people, (Psalm exxxii.) Call for the wisdome of Salomon, to indue your Grace with a spirituall spirit, als weill as in the outward policie, in advancing the spirituall policie of his kirk, (1 Kings iii, 9.) Imitat the fervent faith of Jehoshaphat, putting his whole trust in the Lord, and believing his prophet: the diligence of Jehoash, in repairing the hous of the Lord, (1 Chron. xx.) Follow the godlie Ezekias, in rootting out all monuments of idolatrie, and depending firmelie upon the Lord, (1 Chron. xii.:) the faithfull young Josiah, in making the booke of the law of God, a long time down smored and keeped in silence, yea, utterlie tint and forgottin, to be publictlie read, accepted by the people, and recommended to the posteritie, (1 Chron. xxix.) To suche diligence as this did the prophets Haggai, Zacharie, and Malachie, exhort the princes of the Jewes. And shortlie, suche godlie interprises as these have made the great Constantine, the gentle Gratian, the godlie Theodose, and suche others, to be worthie of eternall memorie and commendatioun. Nather is it eneugh to beginne weill, as did some kings of Judah, and afterward fainted in their proceedings: but heere cheefelie is required constancie, and perseverance without shrinking, till things be brought to a good order and stable state.

"Nather ought your Grace onlie looke how muche is done, but rather, how muche resteth unperformed; ever thinking, that great diligence is required to goe fordward, and great attendance to be givin, that things done may abide, and continuallie increasse, till they come to due perfectioun. This is a mater worthie to your royall heart; a purpose, for the exercise of the vivacitie of your divine and high ingvne. This is a most faire feild to runne in. and exercise the course of your youth, and a thing most meete to make knowne what ought to be the principall studie of a Christian prince; declaring, how nather we, your naturall subjects, nather the godlie and faithfull of forrane nations, have in vaine so long looked for some notable and excellent worke to proceed from your Maiestie's authoritie, for promoting of God's glorie, and establishing of his true religioun, the which, no doubt, sall be an exceeding honour and perpetuall renowne that sall follow your Highnesse. All other glorie at last sall decay, and all commendatioun that resulteth of other princelie acts ather is not of long endurance, or hath commounlie mixed therewith suche things as be also worthie of blame. But the honour of this act sall endure for ever, and sall be fullie approved by Him whose judgement can no wise be but equall and right: who is the eternall Lord of Lords, and King of Kings; whom, with most humble hearts and instant prayers, we beseeke to blesse your Majestie with continuall and daylie increasse of his abundant blessings, als weill spirituall as temporall; and to mainteane in wealthie prosperitie your princelie estat, to the praise and glorie of his holie name, your assured salvatioun, comfort, and quietnesse of this countrie, the overthrow of the power of Satan, and advancement of the kingdome of Jesus Christ. From Edinburgh, in our Generall Assemblie, the 10th day of Julie 1579."

MONSIEUR D'AUBIGNEY COMETH TO SCOTLAND.

Howbeit the queen's factioun was overthrowne, and yeelded to the acknowledging of the king's authoritie, the Castell of Edinburgh randered, Lethington and Grange deceased, yitt rested not the rest of that factioun who were alive from devising alterations, viz., Mr Johne Matlane, sometime Pryour of Coldinghame, brother o the Laird of Lethington, Robert Melvill, uncle to the Laird of Frange, the Laird of Pittadrow, but speciallie, Mr Johne Matlane nd Robert Melvill, both haters of the Erle of Morton. Howbeit hey were pardonned, vitt they keeped still their minde, interteanag mutuall freindship and intelligence, waiting upon all occasiouns. 'hey advanced indirectlie and secreitlie, as they could, the queen's aus, that is, the associatioun with her sonne in the government. t behoved to remove Morton out of the way.1 Seing they wanted tholl, their head, they sent for Monsieur d'Aubigney. He was orthered, and sent with instructions, by the Gwisians. This geneman, Esme Stewart, the sonne of Johne Stewart, brother to Tathew Erle of Lennox, stiled Aubigney, of a toun in Berrey, hich Charles VII., King of France, gave to Johne Stewart of the milie of Lennox, and ever since belonged to the younger brother that hous, arived at Leith the eight of September, and was onorablie convoyed by the magistrats of Edinburgh. He preinded that he came onlie to congratulat the young king's entrie to -s kingdome, and was to returne to France within a short space. e brought with him one called Monsieur Mombirneau, a mirrie llow, able in bodie and quick in spirit; but his (Aubigney's) mother as a religious ladie. She informed Mr Nicoll Dagleish of the Guiuns' intentioun in sending them to Scotland, wherupon Mr Nicoll nt advertisement to the ministers of Edinburgh. Within few ves after his arrivall, he was honorablic convoyed to Stirline.

THE KING CONVOYED FROM STIRLINE TO HALYRUDHOUS.

The king was convoyed from Stirline to Linlithquo, upon Tuisy, the 29th of September, and the day following to Halyrudus, accompanied with Morton, Angus, Argile, Montrose, Marr, ndsey, Uchiltrie, the Maister of Livingston, and the Maister of ton, two thowsand hors or thereby. The Humes and the Kers, but three hundreth hors, mett him at Corstorphine. The burgesses of Edinburgh stood in the Long Gate, in their armour, where the king lighted, and saw the cannons of the Castell shott. The toun of Leith mett him at the Quarrell Holes, and made a volie of shotts with the artillerie of the ships, and so the king came to the Abbey.

ALEXANDER CLERK CHOSIN PROVEST AT THE KING'S COMMAND.

Upon Tuisday, the seventh of October, the counsell of Edinburgh was charged, under paine of horning, to choose, within three houres, Alexander Clerk, Proveist, in place of Alexander Stewart The counsell went down to the king, and regrated the breache of their priviledges. The king answered, It sould not hurt their priviledges. They returne, and receave him proveist, with protestatioun, that it sall not be prejudiciall to their libertie in times to come. With him were chosin bailiffes, Johne Adamsone, William Littill, Robert Ker, younger, Henrie Nisbit.

THE KING'S ENTRIE TO EDINBURGH.

The king made his entrie in Edinburgh at the West Port, upon Fryday the 17th of October. He was receaved by the magistrats of the toun, under a pompous pale of purple velvet. That port presented to him the wisdome of Salomon deciding the plea between the two weomen who contended for the young childe, and the servant that presented the sword to the king, with the childe. After he had entered in at the port, Mr Johne Scharpe made an harang in Latine. The proveist, bailiffes, treasurer, dean of gild, rode with foote mantles; the rest of the counsell, and other honest men of the toun, about three hundreth, clothed in velvet, satine, and silkes, and twentie-four officers, clothed in blacke, were there also at his entrie. At the old port of the Strait Bow hang a glorious globe, which opened artificiallie as the king came by, wherin was a young boy presenting the keys of the toun to his Majestie, all made of massive silver, and were presentlie receaved by one of the Lords of the Secreit Counsell. The musicians song he xx. Psalme, and others played upon the viols. When he came joun to the Old Tolbuith, the fore-face wherof was covered with painted dailes, there he saw the crafts' standards and pinsells' sett, nd foure faire young maides representing the foure cardinall verues, Justice, Temperance, Fortitude, and Prudence, or, as others eport, Peace, Justice, Plentie, and Policie. Everie one of them ad an oration to the king. The wheele of Fortune was burnt ith powder. When he came down over against the Great Tirk, Dame Religion desired his presence; so he lighted at the deis steppes, and went in to the Great Kirk. Mr James lowsone made an exhortation upon Psalme ii. ver. 10, and exorted the king and the subjects to doe their duetie, to enter in ague and covenant with God, and concluded with thanksgiving. fter sermon was sung the xx. Psalme. When he came to the roce, there Bacchus satt on a puncheon, with his painted garent, and a flowre garland. He welcomed the king to his owne oun, and dranke manie glasses, and cast them among the people. there were there runne three puncheons of wine. At the Salt Frone was described the genealogie of the Kings of Scotland: a umber of trumpets sounded melodiouslie, and crying with a loude Dice, "Weele fare to the king!" At the Neather Bow were reesented the conjunctioun of the planets, as it was in the time of s nativitie, and Ptolemæus describing his beautie and fortunes beowed upon him by the influence of the starres. Frome the West ort to the Neather Bow, all the staires on the High Street were vered with tapestrie, cards, and brods. Manie were hurt in the reets through throng. From the Neather Bow he went to the bbey. The toun of Edinburgh presented him with a cupboord orth 6000 merks.

A PARLIAMENT.

A parliament was holdin at Edinburgh, and beganne the 20th by of October. Upon the 23d day, the king came in person to parliament. Angus caried the crowne, and Argile the scepter Johne Lord of Arbroth, and Lord Claud, Commendator of Pasley with sindrie other of the Hammiltons, were forfaulted. At this parliament, the act made in the first yeere of the king's raigne wa explaned, and suche were declared to be members of the Kirk o Scotland as professed the doctrine conteanned in the Confession of Faith, and did participat of the sacraments as they were the ministred, and whosoever did not approve the heeds of the said Con fessioun, or did not participat of the sacraments, as they were the ministered, to be no members of the reformed Kirk of Scotland, so long as they keeped themselves so divided. The jurisdiction granted to the kirk is declared to stand in preaching of the Word ministratioun of the sacraments, and correctioun of maners; vitt, in this parliament it was made indifferent whether the President o the Colledge of Justice be one of the Temporall, or one of the Spirituall estat.

AUBIGNEY'S COURSES.

Monsieur d'Aubigney purchassed, within tenne dayes after the parliament, a dispensatioun for holding mercats in Tranent upor the Sabboth day, notwithstanding of the act made in the last parliament. He purchassed likewise a supersedere from being troubled for a veere for religion. Sindrie vehement presumptions there were that he was a privat legat from the Pope, the Guisians, and the King of France, to work alteratioun in religion and estat. Before he repaired to Scotland, he had conference with the Bishop of Glasgow and the Bishop of Rosse, tending to these purposes following: First, to dissolve the amitie with England, by removing from the king suche as were weill affected to the same. Secundlie, to procure an associatioun betuixt the young king and his mother in the government. Thridlie, to alter the state of religioun. He was accompanied to the ship, and six hours in the ship, with the Duke of Guise. His yeerlie rent surmounted not ten thowsand frankes, and, beside that, his lands were ingadged; yitt brought he with im fourtie thowsand peeces of gold, in crowns, pistolets, and anrels, which could not be purchassed but from the Pope, the King of France, and the Guisians. The end could be no other but to orrupt sindrie of the nobilitie. The Ladie Argile gott a part, to oring her husband in freindship with him. He came in simplicitie. s if he would meddle with nothing. But within short time he ott the Abbacie of Arbrothe, the Erledome of Lennox, and the eeping of the castell of Dumbartane, whither he might allure the ing, and transport him to France at his pleasure, or receave forces ut of France. Under his wings crap in craftie fellowes, who made he work of reformatioun of religioun, and all the good service done the king, turbulent, and no lesse than treasonable dealing. gainst these devilish slanders, the ministers of Edinburgh, like withfull watchemen, made loude and tymous warning. His course as, to overthrow noblemen one after another, as yee sall see in ne progresse of the Historie. Phairnihirst, howbeit vehementlie aspected guiltie of art and part of the murther of the king's faher, obteaned, by his mediation, licence to returne, and stay two eere, to travell for his owne peace.

M.D.LXXX.

ARGILE AND MORTON RECONCILED.

After the king had stayed all winter in the Abbey of Halyrudous, he went to Linlithquo the 15th of Februar. Aubigney yed behind, and was banketted by the counsell of the toun. The Erle of Morton was reconciled with the toun of Edinburgh, son the 24th of Februar. There was great bragging in the caly, two dayes, betuixt the Erle of Morton on the one side, Argile d Aubigney on the other side. Morton sent to Argile to underund if he would avow that which he had said, to witt, that he indeed to take the king, and send him to England. Argile stayed t, but went with Aubigney to Stirline. Upon the 26th of Aprile, there was a conventioun of the nobilitie at Stirline, where Morton and Argile were brought to agreement by the king and some of the nobilitie. But Argile's heart was not upright toward him, as time declared.

SKIPPER LINDSEYE'S HARANG.

The king entered in his progresse through Fife and Angus th 20th day of May, and returned to Stirline the 15th of August. Thi progresse was devised, becaus the Lord Ruthven, treasurer, alledge the treasurie was exhausted, and the king in debt of fourtie thow sand punds to him. When the king was at Sanct Andrewe in the moneth of Julie, in the time of his progresse, the gentleme of the countrie had a guise or fence, to play before the king. Th play was to be acted in the New Abbey. Whill the people is gaz ing, and longing for the play, Skipper Lindsey, a phrenetick man steppeth in to the place which was keeped voide till the player come, and paceth up and down in sight of the people with grea gravitie, his hands on his side, and looking loftilie. He had manlie countenance, but was all rough with haire. He had grea tufts of haire upon his browes, and als great a tufte upon the ne of his nose. At the first sight the people laughed loude. Bu when he beganne to speeke, he procured attentioun, as if it has beene to a preacher. He discoursed with great force of spirit, and mightie voice, exhorting men of all ranks and degrees to hear him, and to tak exemple by him. He declared how wicked an ryotous he had beene, what he had done and conqueissed by see how he had spended and abused himself on land, and what Go had justlie brought upon him for the same. He had witt, he had riches, he had strenth and abilitie of bodie, he had fame and esti matioun above all others of his trade and ranke; but all was vani tie, that made him miskenne his God. But God would not b miskenned by the highest. Turning himself to the bosse window.

where the king and Aubigney was above, and Mortoun standing beneath, gnapping upon his staffe, he applyed to him in speciall, as was marvellous in the eares of the hearers; so that manie were assonished, and some moved to teares, beholding and hearkening to he man. Among other things, he wairned the erle not obscurelie, hat his judgement was drawing neere, and his doome in dressing. and in verie deed, at the same time was his death contrived. The ontrivers would have suspected a discoverie, if they had not nowne the man to be phrenetick, and bereft of his witt. The erle has so moved and tuiched at the heart, that, during the time of the play, he never changed the gravitie of his countenance, for all me sports of the play.

THE FORTIETH GENERALL ASSEMBLIE.

The Generall Assemblie conveened at Dundie, the 12th day of ulie. Mr James Lowsone was chosin Moderator. He desired at some brethrein, whom he sould nominat, may conferre with m, and give their advice in suche maters as are to be treatted and asouned during this conventioun, to the effect the proceedings may the more formall, and the expeditioun quicker. Some brethrein ere offended with the order of assessors, which were wont to be vnned to the moderator, to give their advice to him, as though me tyrannie or usurpatioun might creepe in thereby, or libertie ight be takin frome the brethrein. That all occasioun of mururing might be takin away, all that pleased were required to reaun, why the said order might not be continued. At last, the ssemblie concluded the said order to be good and necessarie, and be keeped as it was before, without anie prejudice or hurt the libertie of the brethrein; and for conference with the modetor, the Assemblie appointed their brethrein following, at his 'ne nominatioun; to witt, Mr Robert Pont, Mr Thomas Smeton, r Andrew Melvill, Mr George Hay, William Christesone, David ergusone, Mr Johne Young, Mr Patrik Auchinfleck, Mr Thomas chanan, the Laird of Braid, Johne Johnston, Commissioner for Edinburgh, to conveene at extraordinarie houres, seven in th morning, and two after noone, in the Assemblie place.

THE KING'S LETTER TO THE ASSEMBLIE.

Mr Johne Craig, one of the ministers of the king's hous, prosented his Hienesse' missive directed to the Assemblie, the tend wherof followeth:—

"Trustie and weill-beloved freinds, we greete you weill. W have directed toward you our trust freinds, the Pryour of Pittir weeme and Laird of Lundie, instructed with our power to that effect, for assisting you with their presence and counsell, in a things which may tend to the glorie of God, and preservations out and our estat; desiring you heartilie to accept them, and out good will committed to them for the present, in good part. So we commend you to God's blessed protection.

(Sic subscribitur) "JAMES R.

"From our palace of Falkland, the 12th day of Julie 1580."

TRIELL OF VISITERS.

In the triell of visiters of countreis, Mr Andrew Grahame bein removed, it was delated, that he had no ordinar flocke: that ther were manie Papists and excommunicats dwelling in Dumblane, an no order takin with them: that he had sett his benefice to M William Stirline, without consent of the Assemblie: that the reade at Mutchell ministred the sacrament at Easter last: that the sacraments are commounlie sold and boght in Auchterardure. Re-entering, he answered to the first, That his speciall flocke was Dumblane, where he taught, howbeit, not so diligentlie as his duetie anoffice required. He granted the secund. The Assemblie ordeanner him to proceed with the censures against some of the Papists, and with letters of captioun against the excommunicat. To the thrid he granted he sett his benefice, but with restrictioun, that Mr William purchasse the consent of the Generall Assemblie; and desired that the moderator and his assessors might cognosce upon it, which was granted. As to the two last, he answered, order was takin with them in the synodall assemblie.

COMMISSIONS.

Becaus Mr Johne Row, Commissioner of Dunkelden, had not execute the commission given to him, to charge Mr James Paton to dimitt the bishoprick of Dunkelden, under the paine of excommunicatioun, the Assemblie ordeanned the commissioner that sall be appointed for visitation of these bounds to putt the said commissioun, in all points, to due executioun, according to the tenor therof, under the paine of suspension of the said commissioner from his function and ministrie. And becaus there have beene decreets alreadie givin by the Assemblie against him, for dilapidatioun of the patrimonie of the kirk, and yitt he hath provided no remelie, the Assemblie giveth their full commissioun and power to the same commissioner to charge the said Mr James, to repaire the nurt done by him to the kirk, by his dilapidatioun and unjust alientioun of the patrimonie therof, under the paine of excommunication. And if he disobey, after admonitions, to pronounce the sentence against him with diligence, betwixt and the nixt Generall Assemolie, under the paine of suspensioun of the said commissioner from he said functioun of the ministrie: And farther, to trie if the said Ir James hath usurped the pretended office of a bishop upon him, ince the giving furth of the sentence of depositioun by the Geneall Assemblie. Charge and commissioun was givin to Mr Robert Montgomrie to warne the Bishops of Argile and the Iles, Mr Johne Hepburne to warne the Bishop of Brechin, Johne Brand to warne he Bishop of Orkney, Mr Thomas Buchanan to warne the Bishop of Cathnesse, to compeere before the nixt Generall Assemblie, and hrid day therof, to answere to suche things as the Assemblie sall nquire of them, as they will answere upon their obedience to the assemblie. The moderator and his assessors were appointed to forme the articles which sould be presented to his Majestie; namelie, an article that the kirk may be restored to the benefite of the act of parliament made concerning the thrids. In the tenth sessioun, commission and power was givin to a certane number, or to anie six of the number, to passe with all convenient diligence to the king's Majestie and his honorable counsell, to present the articles delivered to them by the Assemblie; to require an answere, and, if need be, to conferre and reason upon everie article. The beginning of the articles and supplications is wanting in the register, reavin out, as appeareth, by the same sacriligious hands that plucked out the rest of the wants, in the yeere 1584. The tenor and abrupt beginning followeth thus:—

ARTICLES.

* * * * " unto them. Farther, the commissioners appointed for visitation of countreis that are destitut of stipend for their labours. Item, They that are assigned to the generall collector's payment are not answered by him; beside manie other and weightie causes, wherupon our commissioners, if need be, will reasoun before your Majestie and counsell. And this libertie being granted to us, to gather up the revenues of the kirk according to the first assumptioun of the thrids, by faithfull men to be appointed thereto, wherin your Majestie sall have a sufficient superplus for susteaning of your Highnesse' publict effaires, all pensiouns being revocked, which are not necessar to be granted, and your Majestie sall be releeved of these importune soliciters. Farther, please your Majestie and counsell, we have givin in diverse articles before, concerning the effaires of the kirk, which have receaved no resolut answere, but long time drifted therin; beseeking your Majestie and counsell to lett us receave determined answere to everie article, namelie, concerning the heeds following:-

"First, That order may be takin with suche as putt violent hands in ministers, or trouble them in exercise of their office.

- "Item, That they who for just causes are deposed frome the ministrie, may lose als weill their benefices, as other qualifeid persons being provided thereto, the kirk may be served.
- "Item, That punishment be appointed for suche as passe in pilgrimage to kirks or wells; and that order may be takin with them that past in pilgrimage latelie to the holie roode of Pebles, and suche other places.
- "Item, That no presentation of benefices be directed to anie person but suche as beare commissioun from the Generall Assemblie, according to the act of parliament; and if anie be otherwise receaved, that their admission be declared null.
- "Item, That all benefices vacand where ministers are planted, be givin to the minister serving the cure where they vaike, they being able therefore; and that no presentation givin to anie other person be receaved, unlesse the minister serving the rownes be first found unable.
- "Item, That order be takin with Alexander Arbuthnet that the Bibles be delivered according to his receipt of money from everie parish; and to that effect, that he and his soverteis may be commanded, by letters of horning, for deliverance therof; and no suspensioun to be granted, without the samine be delivered.
- "Item, That in respect of the good and godlie zeale of James Lord Arran, alwayes showed in defence of God's caus and commoun wealth, it will please your Hienesse and counsell to resolve upon some good and substantiall order, which may serve both for health and curing of his bodie, and comfort of his conscience.
- "Item, That the Booke of Policie may be established by act of Privie Counsell, till a parliament be had, at the which the samine may be confirmed.
- "Item, Becaus there is great necessitie of a printer within the countrie, and that there is a stranger, banished for religioun, called Vautrollier, who offereth to imploy his labour in the said vocatioun, for the weale of the countrie, it will please your Grace and counsell to tak order heerin, as your Grace thinketh good; and to give licence and priviledge to him to that effect, if it sall be thought expedient to your Grace and counsell."

The commissioners of provinces were continued in their offices of visitatioun and planting of kirks to the nixt Assemblie, except Mr James Boyd, in whose place was appointed Mr Johne Young. Mr David Lindsey and Johne Duncansone were appointed to visite Galloway, conjunctlie or severallie, till the nixt Assemblie.

William Stewart, brother to the Laird of Traquare, presented a letter to the Assemblie in the seventh sessioun, directed from the Erle of Lennox, conteaning faire offers; but to cover deepe designes, as time declared afterward. The tenor of the letter followeth:—

THE ERLE OF LENNOX' LETTER TO THE ASSEMBLIE.

" Salute with peace through Jesus Christ our Lord.

"It is not, I thinke, unknowne to you how it hath pleased God, of his infinite goodnesse, to call me by his grace and mercie to the knowledge of my salvatioun, since my comming in this land; wherefore I rander, most earnestlie, humble thankes unto his Divine Majestie, finding my voyage toward thir parts most happilie bestowed, in this respect. And, although I have made open declaratioun of this my calling, first by my owne mouth, in the kirk of Edinburgh, and, secundlie, by my hand-writt, in the king's kirk at Stirline, where I subscrived the Confessioun of Faith, yitt I found it was my duetie, yee being generallie conveened, to send this gentleman, my cousin and freind, accompanied with my letter towards you, to make you, in my name, free and humble offer of due obedience, and to receave your will in anie thing it sall please you I doe farther anent the accomplishement of my said confessioun: assuring you that I sall be readie to performe the same, with all humilitie; as also, to procure and advance all other things that may further the glorie of God and increasse of his kirk, the commoun wealth of the countrie and of the king's Majestie's service, at my utter possibilitie. And so, hoping to be participant, in all times comming, of your godlie prayers and favour, I salute you most lovinglie in Jesus Christ, our onlie Saviour.

"Your humble and obedient at all power,
"LENNOX.

"From St Andrewes, the 14th day of Julie."

His servant, Mr Henrie Keir, compeered in the eight sessioun; confessed that he had lyin long in blindnesse, and acknowledged the religioun professed publictlie within the realme to be the onlie true religioun, and was readie to subscrive when the Assemblie thought good.

ACTS.

In the fourth sessioun, the office of bishops was damned, as followeth:—

"Forasmuche as the office of a bishop, as it is now used, and commounlie takin within this realme, hath no sure warrant, authoritie, nor good ground, out of the Booke and Scriptures of God, but brought in by the follie and corruption of men's inventioun, to the great overthrow of the true kirk of God, the whole Assemblie of the kirk, in one voice, after libertie givin to all men to reasoun in the mater, none oppouning themselves in defence of the said precended office, findeth and declareth the samine pretended office, used and termed as is above said, unlawfull in the self, as having nather fundament, ground, nor warrant in the Word of God; and ordeaneth that all suche persons as bruike, or heerafter sall bruike, the said office, to be charged simpliciter to dimitt, quite, and leave off the samine, as an office wherunto they are not called by God: And siclyke, to desist and ceases from all preaching, ministratioun of the sacraments, or using anie way the office of pastors, whill they receave, de novo, admissioun from the Generall Assemblie of the kirk, under the paine of excommunicatioun to be used against them: wherin, if they be found disobedient, or controvene this act in anie point, the sentence of excommunicatioun, after due admonitioun, to be executed against them. And, for better executioun of the said act, it is statuted and ordeanned, that a synodall assemblie sall be holdin in everie province where anie usurping bishops are, and beginne the 17th day of August nixt to come, whereto they sall be called and summouned by the visiters of the said countreis, to compeere before their synodall assembleis: And namelie, the Bishop of Sanct Andrewes to compeere at Sanct Andrewes, the Bishop of Aberdeen at Aberdeen, the Bishop of Glasgow at Glasgow, the Bishop of Murrey at Elgine, to give obedience to the said act. Which, if they refuse to doe, that the said synodall assemblie sall appoint certane brethrein of the ministrie, to give them publict admonitioun out of the pulpit, and warne them, in cace they disobey, to compeere before the nixt Assemblie, to be holdin at Edinburgh the 20th day of October nixt to come, to heare the sentence of excommunication pronounced against them for their disobedience." To this act the Bishop of Dumblane agreed, submitting himself to be ruled thereby. As to the order to be takin with the patrimonie of the kirk, bruiked and possessed by the said bishops, the Assemblie referreth the reasonning therof to the nixt Assemblie.

2. Albeit there have beene diverse acts made in sindrie Assembleis before, to bridle and stay the unjust alienation, dispositioun, and wasting of the kirk rents, and patrimonie therof, by beneficed ministers; and not the lesse, nather respect nor feare of God, nor reverence to his kirk or good lawes, have restrained their insatiable and cursed avarice, the Assemblie hath concluded, that all persons within the ministrie, als weill these who usurpe the stile of bishops, as others that sall be tryed heerafter, to diminishe the rents of their benefices, ather by diminution of the old rentall, by setting of victuall for small prices, and within the worth, or otherwise un-justlie dilapidating, and putting away the rent therof, by the judgement of the Generall Assemblie, sall underly the sentence of excommunication without farther processe.

- 3. Tuiching the office of Readers, that have no farther gift of God nor simple reading of the Scripture, the Assemblie concluded in the sixt sessioun that their office is no ordinar office within the Kirk of God. In the seventh session the Assemblie concluded as followeth: "That all readers within this realme sall be tryed and examined, de novo, by the commissioners of countreis, with advice of their assessors, so farre as possiblie may to be done, betuixt and the nixt Generall Assemblie; and so manie as sall be found to have travelled in reading the space of two yeeres, and have not profited so farre as to be able to be pastors, and to preache the Word of God, sall be deposed from their reading by the said commissioners; and that the commissioners report their diligence to the nixt Assemblie. Siclyke, becaus readers have no ordinar office within the Kirk of God, the Assemblie declareth, that no simple reader sall be capable of anie benefice, or bruike or possesse the same in time comming; nor vitt bruike or injoy the manse or gleebe, where there is anie minister actuallie serving."
- 4. Forasmuche as, by the confusion and misorder of the pluralitie of kirks, susteanned in the person of one pastor or minister, the flockes of Christ universallie throughout the realme are destitute of the true food of their soules, discipline and good order alluterlie neglected, and the consciences of pastors burthenned with heavier charges than they may comport with, whereas, by the Word of God, everie severall congregation ought to be provided of their owne pastor, it is therefore, by vote of the whole Assemblie, after long disputation, resolved and concluded, that it is not lawfull, by the Word of God, that a minister or pastor be burthenned with the charge of feeding of moe particular flockes or congregations than one.
- 5. The Assemblie ordeanneth that commissioners of countreis call suche persons, everie one within their owne bounds respective, before their synodall assembleis, who, before their departure out of the countrie, professing the religioun presentlie established, have declynned to idolatrie or Poprie, or gone to the masse, in France, or other parts; and if it be found they have made defectioun, to charge everie one to make his repentance, under paine of excommunication: and if they disobey, to be excommunicated by suche persons as sall be appointed by the synodall assembleis to that effect, lawfull admonitioun preceding; and if they offer obedience, to superseed their publict repentance, till the forme of it be advised upon in the nixt Assemblie: suspending them, in the meane time, from participatioun of the Sacrament till the said Assemblie, and to report their diligence, as they will answere to God: and that the same order be observed by them that willingly acknowledge their defectioun, and offer their repentance.

- 6. The Assemblie ordeanneth, that the act made in the last Assemblie, concerning the suspension of visiters from giving collatioun of benefices to others than serve actuallie at the kirks where the samine vaike, under the paines expressed in the said act, stand in full strenth and effect; with this additioun, that, if anic collatioun or admissioun be givin by anic visiter, against the tenor thereof, it sall be null and of none availl, force, nor effect. And siclyke, declares all collations or admissions that sall be givin heerafter, by anic pretending the stile of bishops, sall be voide in the self, null and of none effect in time comming.
- 7. Forasmuche as, through a great part of this countrie, the after noon exercise and doctrine upon the Sabboth day is not used, and speciallie out of burghes, and so the people are not duelie instructed in the catechisme and rudiments of religioun, the Assemblie hath ordeanned, that all pastors and ministers sall diligentlie and zeal-ouslie travell with their flockes, als weill with these that are in the rurall countrie, as these that are in burghes, as they will answere to God.
- 8. It is concluded, in everie provinciall assemblie there sall be certan assessors nominated by them, to concurre with the commissioner of the countrie, who sall subscrive with him in all weightie and great maters.

For purging of the kirk of God from slander, the Assemblie requireth, and in the name of God desireth all men, als weill gentlemen as others, conveened at this time, if they know anie in the ministrie slanderous in life, unable to teache, unprofitable or curious teachers, negligent in preaching, non-residents or deserters, possessors of manie benefices or offices, dissolute in maners, clothed with the power of mixed jurisdictiouns, givers of pensions out of penefices, or receavers therof, to give in their names in a ticket to the moderator and his assessors, that present order may be taking with them by the moderator and his assessors, if it may be had, wherewise that they report to the Assemblie.

A CONVENTION.

There was a conventioun holdin in Edinburgh in September. If Bowes, directed ambassader from England, when he came bette the king and counsell to deliver his commissioun, craved the irle of Lennox, who was sitting in counsell as a counseller, might a removed, in regard he was a stranger, otherwise he would not now his commissioun in his presence. The king refused. The inbassader removed without anie farther discharge of his commissioun; but stayed in Edinburgh till he understood from the queen, is mastresse, what was her pleasure.

THE FORTIE-FIRST GENERALL ASSEMBLIE.

The Generall Assemblie conveened at Edinburgh, in the Upper albuith, the 20th day of October. Mr Andrew Hay was chosin oderator. Becaus some were offended at the choosing of assessors, concurre with the moderator at extraordinarie houres, and to be him advice in maters to be proponed and treatted during the semblie, it was required, if anie man had anie reasoun to propone if the contrare, that he would propone it. No man oppouned, and, therefore, the brethrein, in one vote, desired him to nominat the sons whose conference and concurrence he craved. He nominate the sons whose conference and concurrence he craved.

nated Mr Robert Pont, Mr James Lowsone, Mr Andrew Melvil Mr Thomas Smeton, David Fergusone, Mr David Lindsey, M George Hay, Mr Thomas Buchanan, Mr William Rynd, and the commissioners of Edinburgh.

COMMISSIONS.

Some brethrein were directed to the king's Majestie, to require of his Highnesse, humblie, that he would direct some persons, authorized with his Highnesse' commissioun, to concurre with them it their Assemblie. Item, To crave answeres of the articles givin it latelie by the Assemblie to his Hienesse and counsell; and if a delaying answere be givin, to crave that the platt be superseeded till they receave the said answere. Item, To crave some order to be takin with Mr Nicoll Browne. Item, That order be takin with Papists in the king's hous, and to insist with his Hienesse and counsell, and for recalling of the letters wherewith the commissioners are summouned before the counsell. They reported their as swere in the thrid sessioun, that his Hienesse and counsell premised to give resolut answere to their articles, the 15th day of the nixt moneth, and to stay the platt till that time.

Commissioun was givin to Mr Thomas Buchanan to summor the Bishop of Cathnesse, and Mr Johne Hepburne to summor the Bishop of Brechin, to compeere the nixt Generall Assemblie, give their submissioun and assent to the speciall heeds conferred and agreed upon by the Bishops of Sanct Andrewes, Glasgow, are of the Isles, with the Assemblie, to be content expresslie with the same; certifeing them, if they compeere not, the Assemblie we proceed with censures against them. And incace the said Merchanan and Mr Johne execute not this ordinance, the Assemble decerneth, that they sall make public repentance openlie, in face the whole Assemblie. Commissioun was givin to the brethrein of the exercise of Edinburgh, and Mr Johne Craig, minister of the king hous, if he be present, to call the Bishop of Orkney before them and to charge him, in name of the Assemblie, to give submissioun at assent to the articles and heeds agreed upon betwixt the Bishops of Sanct Andrewes, Glasgow, and the Isles, on the one side, and them on the other side; and to receave his answere therupon, to be reported, with the whole proceeding therin, to the nixt Assemblie. There wanteth in the register a part of the thrid sessioun, the fourth, fyft, sixt, and a part of the seventh, reavin out, as the cest of the wants, by the same sacrilegious hands, in the yeere 1584, where the submissioun of the Bishops of Sanct Andrewes, Glasgow, and the Iles, were sett. Yitt I find in Mr James Carmichael's obserations, who was present as commissioner at the same Assemblie, that they agreed to accept everie one a particular kirk; not to surpe the office of visitatioun farther than the Assemblie sall inoyne, pro re nata; not to tak upon them to ordeane or depose pinisters, but to committ the same to the whole brethrein of the province, in their synodall assemblie; and last, not to use the cenures of the kirk, namelie, excommunicatioun, but to forbeare that, elonging, as the rest, ad presbyteria bene constituta.

Commissioun was givin to Mr Andrew Hay to summoun the isiter of Argile to compeere before the nixt Generall Assemblie, answer upon his usurpation of the office of visitatioun within the aid bounds, under the paine of disobedience. Commissioun was ivin to foure brethrein to penne and sett doun in writt their dgements concerning the diverse ranks and degrees of aposits, with the order of discipline to be followed out against em; and to be presented to the full Assemblie. Commissioun was win to some brethrein of the ministrie, and other commissioners, to anie six of them, to compeere before the king's Majestie d his counsell, the 15th day of November nixt to come, and ith all humilitie and reverence crave answere to the articles givin since the last Generall Assemblie to his Highnesse and honorble counsell; to reason and conferre therupon; with power givin them, or the most part of them, to resolve, decerne, and finallie nclude, in name and behalfe of the Assemblie, with the king's ighnesse and counsell therupon, and farther, as sall be most necesr and expedient for the advancement of the glorie of God, interteanement of the Evangell, and weilfare of the whole kirk, siclyke and als freelie as if they were personallie present; firme and stable holding, and for to hold whatsomever their said brethrein, or the most part of them, in the premisses, righteouslie leid to be done.

Forasmuche as it was considered by the Assemblie, that it is a corruptioun tending to tyrannie, that the power or office of visiters sould stand in the person of one man, which sould flow from the presbytereis, and notthelesse, the state of time, and want of present order for establishing and constituting of presbytereis, sur fereth not the present alteratioun of visiters, it is thought mee that the Clerk of Register be requested to concurre with the Lair of Dun, Mr Robert Pont, Mr James Lowsone, Mr David Lindsey Mr Johne Craig, and Johne Duncansone, or anie three or foure of them, to devise a platt of the presbytereis, as seemeth best in their judgements, to be reported again by them to the nixt General Assemblie. As for the present, the Assemblie appointed visiter to severall bounds. Commissioun was givin to some brethrein an barons to see Mr Andrew Melvill placed in the New Colledge of Sanct Andrewes; and to call the Papists that are within the univer sitie before them, and to tak order with them, according to the act of the kirk. It was thought meet that Mr Thomas Smeton soul occupie Mr Andrew his place in the Colledge of Glasgow.

TRIELL OF VISITERS.

The commissioners of provinces being tried, Mr Andrew Black hall was delated, for admitting an unqualified man to the ministri at Ettlestone. Answered, he admitted him onlie to be an exhorter and that with the advice of certan brethrein: alwise, he is not discharged of his ministrie. It was answered, that the Assembli acknowledgeth no suche office in the kirk of God, nor will not acknowledge anie suche in times to come. Mr Patrik Gaits wa found fault with, that Mr Thomas Cranston had ministred the sa crament without examinatioun preceeding, and without his own parish: that at other times he committeth the examinatioun of the people to readers; baptizeth childrein privatlie; that he had celebrated the communioun in Innerleith on Easter day. He answered, he had takin order with him for baptizing of childrein privatlie, but understood not of the rest before. The Assemblie giveth commission to the brethrein of the exercise of Edinburgh to call Mr Thomas before them, and after due triell and examinatioun, to tak order with him, according to the qualitie of his offence, and acts of the kirk; and what sall be done heerin, to report to the nixt Generall Assemblie.

LENNOX HIS OFFERS.

Mr Henrie Keir declared to the Assemblie, that the Erle of Lennox was most willing to have a minister in his hous, for exerise of the true religioun: that it is true, that he promised, at the subscriving of the articles of religioun, to send for a minister that and the knowledge of the Frenche tongue. Yitt becaus Mr Bowes and promised to provide one, or becaus his desire was, that rather he Assemblie sould choose a sufficient pastor to him, the mater ath beene delayed. Desired, therefore, the Assemblie to write to ome paster of the Frenche kirk at Londoun, of whose provisioun e sould be carefull; and promised, in his name, that in the effaires f the kirk, ather in generall or particular, he sould imploy his traells as he sould be charged: desiring, that no other opinioun be onceaved of him, than of anie man that meaneth truelie toward jod. The Assemblie willed their brother, Mr James Lowsone, write to the ministers of the Frenche kirk at Londoun to this Weet.

ACTS.

It was ordeanned, that the act made in the last Assemblie, herin was damned the pluralitie of kirks in the person of one man, e putt in executioun by the commissioners of provinces, according the tenour therof, under paine of disobedience.

2. In respect the order sett down in the last Assemblie to be takin with the Bishops of Murrey and Aberdeene hath not been followed out according to the tenor therof, the Assemblie ordean ned the commissioners of countreis to putt the said act in execution in all points, so farre as concerneth their part therof, and the ministers, in so farre as is appointed by the said act unto then under paine of making publict repentance in presence of the whole Generall Assemblie, incace they be found to contraveene the said act; and that the Bishop of Murrey be warned publictlie in the kirk of Elgine.

- 3. It is ordeanned, that the commissioners of countreis putt i executioun the act of the last Assemblie against apostats, in a points, and to use the forme of discipline against them which used against adulterers.
- 4. It was considered to be a corruptioun, tending to tyrannic that the power of visiters sall stand in the person of one man, whice sould flow from the presbytereis.

QUESTIONS DECIDED.

The questioun being propouned, If anie minister might be removed by the Generall Assemblie from his particular flocke, with out consent of his flocke? it was answered affirmative, that the might be removed by the Generall Assemblie, without their consents, for good and necessarie causes.

- 2. The questioun being propouned, If, in respect of the preser necessitie, when there are no doctors within this realme, a ministe or pastor may lay aside the exercise of his pastorall function for the time, and use the office of a doctor? it was answered by the Assemblie, he may, upon good considerations, at the command of the Generall Assemblie.
- 3. The questioun being propouned, If a minister serving divers yeeres in the function of the ministrie, and after deserting hi calling, and applying himself to a civill office, may be admitted t be an elder within the kirk? it was answered by the brethrein a pointed to decide questions, that this man is Desertor gregis, and sould not be admitted to be an elder in a kirk, but ought rather to be censured for his deserting.

MR J. ROW DECEASSED.

The Commissioners of Perth gave in a supplicatioun for a minister, in respect their late minister, Mr Johne Row, was now at rest with the Lord. This man was a wise and grave father, and of good literature, according to the time. After he was rightlie informed by Mr Andrew Melvill, he cleered all the heeds of Dissipline, in his doctrine at a Generall Assemblie, to the great concentment of all men, and advanced the same according to his power of the end of his life. He thundered out mightilic against the state of bishops, howbeit, in the time of blindnesse, the Pope was of him as an angel of God.

LORD RUTHVEN PERSUED BY THE MASTER OF OLIPHANT.

In October, the Lord Ruthven coming from Kinkardin, where e had been at the Erle of Marr's mariage, the Lord Oliphant, ofended that he sould ride so neere his dwelling-place, to witt, Dipne, inimitie standing betwixt them for a certant teind, the Maister Oliphant came furth and persued him. The formost fleing, the st followed in suche misorder, that they could not be recalled by te Lord Ruthven's crie, wherupon he fled himself also. Alexander tewart, a brother of the hous of Traquare, his kinsman, staying shind the rest, partlie to hold off the persuers by resistance, partlie mollifie their rage with faire speeches, was shott with a hacquett, and slaine by one that knew him not, to the Maister of Oliant's great greefe. The Lord Ruthven persued the Maister of liphant before the Justice-Generall. The Maister was assisted · William Dowglas of Lochlevin, his father-in-law. The Erle of orton would gladelie have reconciled them; but seing he could t effectuat the agreement, he assisted the partie persued, wherupon the Lord Ruthven was not a little offended at the erle. M Johne Matlane and Robert Melvill, who depended upon him, blev the bellowes. The Stewarts were no lesse offended for assistin one accused for the slaughter of a Stewart.

MR W. BALCALQUALL AND J. DURIE CALLED BEFORE THE COUNSELL.

The seventh of December, Mr Walter Balealquall inveyghe vehementlie in his sermoun against the Frenche courteours. H shewed what evill fruicts proceeded from them. Papists flocke under their wings; Papists were defended in toun and countrie the king's eare was polluted with a Frenche ruffian, meaning Mor birneau; the Cannogate, and some houses of the High Toun, wer defiled with whoordome, and plagued with the Frenche poke great vanitie in apparrell, and foolish pastyms. He feared w sould repent that ever the Frenche court came in Scotland. John Durie confirmed upon the 9th of December all that Mr Walte had said. They were called before the Secreit Counsell, and con manded to give in that part of their sermoun in writt. Johr Durie was charged to waird in the Castell of Edinburgh, before I would grant. In end, they gave both in that part in writt,1 wit protestation, the counsell sould not be judges. Mr James Lov sone had said als muche a little before, to witt, that the Englis had sett us at libertie, both of bodie and soule, from the tyrannie the Frenche: what they could not atteane unto by force, the seeke now to compasse by slight, and had sent in wicked Monsieu to this countrie, when the king had now gottin in his young yeer. the authoritie in his owne hand, to subvert religion, and to breal the amitie betwixt the two realmes. The sentence of wairdir was recalled, for they had an aime at greater persons.

MORTON ACCUSED OF TREASON.

Upon Saturday, the last of December, whill the Erle of Morton was sitting in counsell, he was accused by James Stewart, a secund brother of the hous of Uchiltrie, of fore knowledge of the king's murther. He answered thus: "It is not unknowne to your Majestie, and to your honorable lords now conveened, what good service I have done since your Majestie's coronatioun; and have persevered in the same to this day, and with severitie have persued the committers of this fact, which, this day, is layed to my charge. I wounder upon what occasioun or probabilitie this accusatioun is now moved against me, who am innocent of the same. But to the effect no kinde of suspicioun or evill opinioun be conceaved of me, I am readie to answere to this crime, or anie other that sall be laved to my charge, ather before the lords heere presentlie conveened, or before anie other judge it sall please your Majestie to appoint." Captan James Stewart, sitting all this while on his knees, answered, that it not onlie pitied him to see suche a corrupt member as Morton to be one of his Majestie's privie counsell, but also, was greeved that there was another of the same surname, a member of the Colledge of Justice, als culpable of this odious crime as the other, whose name is Mr Archibald Dowglas. parteis were removed, and the counsell presentlie decerned Morton to be committed to waird, to be keeped there, till he were tryed by his peeres. Morton was commanded to keepe his loodging that night, and the day following. He obeyed, howbeit he might easilie have escaped, but remembred not his predecessor's old dictum, 'loose and living," as he had just reasoun; for he might easilie have seene his enemeis seeking his destructioun. Alexander Hume of Manderston was directed secreitlie to apprehend Mr Archibald, vho was then resident with his ladie at the Castell of Morran. But George Dowglas, younger of Languidrie, bursted two horse, o give him tymous warning. So he escaped, and fled to England, ymouslie in the morning, upon the day following, that is, the VOL. III.

Lord's day, the first of Januar. Manderston came at five houres in the morning to Morran, accompaneid with threttie hors, to seeke him, but he was gone.

M.D.LXXXI.

MR A. DOWGLAS PUTT TO THE HORNE.

Barnbougall, without all order of law, intrometted with all Mr Archibald his movables, which were in his loodging in Edinburgh; but was constrained to restore all to his wife, at the king's command. He was putt to the horne within six dayes after. His escheat was bought for two thowsand merkes, and he had libertie to call Barnbougall for wrongfull intromission. But Mintoe's sonne gott the personage of Glasgow.

THE ERLE OF MORTON COMMITTED TO THE CASTELL OF EDINBURGH.

Upon Moonday, the secund day of Januar, betwixt ellevin and twelve, before noone, the Erle of Morton was commanded to enter in waird in the Castell of Edinburgh, and was convoyed up the street by the captan, Alexander Areskine, Alexander Hume of Manderston, and Coldingknowes. As he passed by the Butter Trone, a woman, who had her husband putt to death at Stirline, for a ballatt, intituled, "Daffing dow nothing," sitting down upon her bare knees, powred out manie imprecations upon him. After he had entered in at the utter gate, he tooke acts and documents in the hands of three notars, that he most willinglie and obedientlie had entered himself, whole in bodie and spirit, at the king's command; protesting, that he might be delivered again to his freinds in als good a cace, after triell of his innocencie. As for his freinds, he craved nothing of them, but as their leasure served, to solist the king, that he might be putt to triell, and if he be found guiltie, never to open their mouth for him. He protested, he was so innocent, that he would never aske forgivenesse of the crime laved to his charge. He confessed, if he had beene als upright to his God, as he was faithfull to his prince, he had not beene brought to this pinche. This spectacle was acceptable to suche as had particular querrells against him. Coldingknowes was offended, becaus the Wardanrie of the East Marches was takin from him, and givin to George Hume of Wedderburne, when he guided the court. The Lord Ruthven was alienated from him, for his assistance of Lochlevin at a day of law, the 20th day of December before, when as, in effect, he was a neutrall, and stayed with the king in the Abbey all the time, and was not content that Lochlevin sould have cast off his old kinsman for new allya. Argile was alienated, for the jewell of which we made mention before. nox, Argile, Newbottle, St Colme, Seton, Lord Robert, were banded together: William Naper, Alexander Udward, and Henrie Nisbit, whom he had committed to waird for rash speeches and other offences, were glade of this spectacle. It was a pitifull sight o manie, to see him who had done so muche for establishing of eligioun, and had hazarded his life, lands, and goods, in setting up nd mainteaning the king's authoritie, to be overthrowne by suche s had never givin a sincere prooffe of their professioun, yea, laoured to advance Poprie. Captan James his insolencie, above I, is to be remarked; for when he mett him comming up the reets to the castell, as he was going to the Abbey, he said to the le and his companie, "Faire yee weill, Sirs!" None had accesse speeke with him without the king's licence, and in the hearing the Captan of the Castell and the Constable.

The Erle of Angus gave in a bill to the Secreit Counsell upon it thrid of Januar, wherin he craved from the king and counsell keeping and guiding of my Lord of Morton's houses and living the time that he was in waird, or till the time of triell, which was granted. The day following, he tooke up an inventare of all his movables that were in Dalkeith.

MORTON'S FREINDS DISCHARGED OUT OF EDINBURGH.

The weeke following, after the committing of the erle, the names of certan of the Dowglasses were givin in to the king, with a requeist, that they sould be discharged to come neere the place of the king's residence. The king would have Angus and Lochlevir scraipped out, yitt were George Fleck, Archibald and Johne, his brother, Archibald Dowglas, constable, James and Archibald Dowglas, base sonnes to the Erle of Morton, George Dowglas some time captan, Archibald Carmichaell, and others, to the number of fyfteene, charged to depart out of the toun.

MORTON TRANSPORTED TO DUMBARTAN.

Upon Wednesday, the 18th of Januar, the Erle of Morton, a was concluded before, upon Moonday in counsell, was committed t the Erle of Glencarne, Lord Robert, Lord Seton, Barganie, Ble guhan, Lochinvar, the Master of Cassils, Coldingknowes, Drun guhassill, Manderston, to be convoyed to Dumbartan castell. The night before, Archibald Dowglas, called the Constable, cried to the watchemen in the castell (of Edinburgh,) and asked how the Er of Morton was? He brought a commissioun, as was alledged, fro the Erle of Angus, Marr, and Lochlevin, to the captan, Alexand Areskine, not to let the Erle of Morton furth, assuring him, if an danger came to him, it sould be layed to his charge. He answere he had receaved him at the king's command; he would not refu to deliver him again at the king's command. Archibald Dowgl had said likewise, that the Erle of Angus was desirous to spee with the Erle of Morton, which, if it were denied, he sould spee with him the morne, if he came furth, whatsoever anie man won say in the contrare. They were minded, ather that night, or early lie in the morning, to transport him, least he sould be takin out their hands; but upon these words they staved, till they were encouraged by the Good-man of Manderston, his great adversarie. When he was brought down, at three afternoone, to the utter closse. seing the forenamed persons, he saluteth them, and tooke them everie one by the hand, except Manderston, and asked what they would doe with him? The captan answered, it was the king's will that he sould be delivered to these noblemen. He answered, he was glade to come in their hands, and tooke instruments that he and obeyed, and would gladelie goe whether so ever the king's Grace pleased; protesting, that he might be delivered unto that place in safetie. It was answered by Lord Robert, or Lochinvar, re sould be als safe as his owne heart, if his freinds invaded them ot by the way, and, therefore, desired him to advertise his freinds. The Erle of Angus had convocat together about two thowsand ors. His father-in-law, the Erle of Rothesse, went to Dalkeith o him, upon Friday, the 20th of Januarie, to perswade him to ome in, and not to stand out against an established and crowned ing. He answered, he would come when and where his Majestie leased, if he had pledges of equal degree with himself delivered Dalkeith: becaus his guiders had vowed the destruction of him nd his whole name. This was not granted; yitt did he interprise othing in time of Morton's convoy, least his life sould be in haz-He was convoyed upon Wednisday to Linlithquo, with three undreth harquebusiers, and the day following to Dumbartane. indrie causes were conjectured of his transportatioun. Some susected the greedinesse of the captan's wife, and the captan's facilie, that they might easilie be corrupted by the Erle of Morton; thers, becaus he was neere his freinds, and might be releeved by ome privat practice: a thrid sort, becaus the king and counsell ere vexed with licences to speeke with him about sindrie effaires. he likliest caus was, that the Stewarts thought they could not be tre eneugh of him.

MR BANDULPH'S COMMISSION.

Mr Randulph, English ambassader, gott presence upon Thursday, the 19th of Januarie. His commissioun, as was supposed, was to desire the league betuixt England and Scotland, made at Leith, to be renued; nixt, that the Erle of Morton might be putt to a triell. The king answered to the secund, that he medled not with the Queen of England her subjects, nor execution of justice upon them. The answere to the rest of the heeds of his commission was delayed. The ambassader would not acknowledge the Erle of Lennox, by salutation, nor yitt he him.

ANGUS WELLL RECEAVED BY THE KING.

Upon the Lord's day, the 22d of Januar, the Erle of Angus went in to Edinburgh, contrarie to the English ambassader's advice, and was weill receaved of the king. Lennox had a sufficient number of his servants in the king's utter chamber, incace Angus had brought in manie. After that the Erle of Angus had returned to Dalkeith, he caused transport the gold and best movables that were there and in Aberdour to Tamtallan.

THE MERCHANTS OFFENDED AT LENNOX.

Upon the 26th of Januar, upon a report of some shipps taikin, comming from France and Flanders, a grudge arose among the merchants against Lennox, and Morton's unfreinds, becaus they assured themselves, it was done by the English for the regard they had to Morton.

Upon Friday, the 27th of Januarie, George Dowglas of Langnidrie, younger, and Archibald Dowglas, called the Constable, were putt to the horne.

Upon the Lord's day, the 29th, there were running at the ring,

LIBELLS.

Upon the 1st of Februar, libells were spread in the king's chamber, and other places, wherin Lennox was called a feeble sow, that saw his wife deflowed before his eyes; Argile, an Hieland kow, with his clovin feete; Lord Robert and others nicknamed.

A PROCLAMATION.

Upon Friday, the elleventh of Februar, a proclamatioun was made, charging all men betwixt sixtie and sixteene to be readie in feare of warre, upon six dayes' warning, with pavilliouns and other provisioun, to follow the king, or his lieutenents which were to be appointed by him, whither they sould be charged, at the nixt proclamatioun, under paine of losse of life, lands, and goods. The pretence was, to represse the theeves. But the true intent was, to be in readinesse, if there were anie invasioun made by England, becaus there was the like proclamatioun made before in Berwick.

A CONVENTION.

Upon the 20th day of Februare, there was a conventioun of the estats. A taxatioun was craved for maintenance of two thowsand footemen and eight hundreth horsemen, interteaning of ambassaders, &c. It was answered, they would serve by themselves, after the old fashioun of the realme; yitt, for the king's pleasure, fourtie thowsand pund was granted, if there were anie warre; ten thowsand if peace continued. The utter gate of the Abbey Closse was keeped by Captan James Stewart, and some waged men. None were suffered to come in, but two or three with an erle, lord, or baron. The nobilitie grudged to be thus controlled by him, or that the king's palace sould be made a warrehous. Angus satt in counsell upon Wednesday and Fryday; but upon Saturday, at night, departed, without licence, to Dalkeith, becaus he was informed that he was to be warned. At this conventioun the English ambassader, Mr Randulph, desired to be heard before the estats. The burrowes were removed, wherat they (were) offended. The king desired them to tak (it) in good part at that time, becaus he would not have the ambassader to know that the estats were conveened. Yitt was it weill eneugh knowne to him. Howbeit the ambassader could not gett suche an answere as he wished, yitt he stayed upon a better.

THE INTENTION OF THE QUEEN'S MAJESTIE OF ENGLAND AND HER OFFERS TO THE KING OF SCOTLAND, HER DEEREST BROTHER AND COUSINE, AND TO HIS NOBLEMEN AND GOOD COUNSELLERS NOW ASSEMBLED, AND SO, CONSEQUENTLIE, TO THE WHOLE NATION OF SCOTLAND, PRESENTED BY HER AMBASSADER, AT THE ASSEMBLIE GENERALL OF THE ESTATS THERE.

"Her Majestie having had, by manie assured good meanes, within these two yeeres, knowledge of the Pop's intentions and resolution, with certan of his cheefest cardinalls, and with others, speciall ministers of some kings, and other potentats of Italie and ellis where, professing the Roman religioun, and being sworne to the executioun of the Councell of Trent, for abolishing and rootting out, through all parts of Christendome, the Christian religioun reformed: And for that intent how, by the said Pope and his confederats it was, by way of decree, resolved and determined, that there sould be preached, speciallie in England and other her Maestie's dominions, by meanes of certan English rebels and Papists, but cheefelie by certan, called Jesuits, some secreet defectioun of her people, by little and little, from their naturall obedience; and therewith also, there sould be forces gathered in the dominions of the King of Spaine, and other potentats of Italie, in name of the Pope, to invade some part of her Majestie's dominions, onlie upon requerrell of religioun; and that also, there sould be farther ractise used in Germanie, to make a divisioun among the princes refessing the Gospell, upon a difference betweene the Lutherans and the Calvinists, for the mater of the Sacrament, and so to eaken the partie of the Protestants, as the Papists and the Calolicks might the easier subdue both the other; and that also here sould be farther practised meanes to dissolve the amitie bevixt Scotland and England, greatlie invyed by manie, and that by recuring some mariage for the king, in time thereby to induce m to alter his religioun: And in the lyke sort, by sending into cotland some persons to work the overthrow of suche as of long me have beene most serviceable, and hazarded their lives for his fence and safetie, in his adverse time and tender age, and for the aintenance of amitie betwixt the two realmes.

"Forasmuche as her Majestie had evidentlie seene the most ert of the said Romish resolutions and intentions putt alreadie in recutioun, as, namelie, the secreit working in her owne realmes of ligland and Ireland, by Jesuits, messing preests, rebels fugitives, id suche other papisticall instruments, that for the space of these to veeres, in disguised maner, have dispersed themselves into since corners of her realme, and have, by fained holinesse, with certhe bulls and pardons from Rome, entised a number of her people t be reconciled to Rome, and obedience to the Pope, with a plaine r ouncing allegiance to her Majestie, and professioun to serve the I pe, or anie other forrane prince sent by him against her Majuie, and against the religioun established in her realme; wherof h Hienesse hath had most manifest prooffe, not onlie by appreh sioun of some of the said rebellious Jesuits, confessing the size, (for which some of them have, as tratours, worthilie and o nlie suffered death: some have also openlie confessed the same, h e beene pardonned, and doe vow to remaine good subjects;) b also, by discoverie of great multitudes of her people being reciciled to the Pope, confessing the same, and wherof, a great pis, by better instructions, have publictlie, in their kirks, acknowleged their faults in great numbers together: And yitt, some neverthelesse remaining obstinat, and are therefore committed 1 prisons, ather by good instructions to be winne, or by justice to b cutt off. And how these practises have takin roote in England, b the seductioun of a great sort of her Majestie's people there, ar these of the best sort and calling, attempting to tak armes, and open feilds withstand her Majesfie, fighting under the Pop's bar ner, as his vassalls. It is manifest, and also proved true, that d verse men of warre, shippes, victuals, munitioun, money, had beer massed and gathered together under the colour of the Pop's namboth in Italie, Spaine, and other places. The world hath see the overthrow, by God's speciall goodnesse, of some of the sa forces, which being stronglie fortified, and having arived in Ir land, have made the same more than manifest; besides, the co tinuall amassing still of new forces of men, shippes, munitioun, ar victuall, weill knowne at this present, both in Italie and Spain not onlie, as it is to be thought, to renew their enterprises in Ir land, and continue the rebellioun, onlie raised up for the peopl but also to offer some troubles to England: With this also, th her Majestie had certanlie discovered, that part of the said force now preparing, sall light upon some part of Scotland, by or meanes or other.

"And considering all these determinations and platts layed, ar manie of them putt in executioun, and her Majestie carefull ho the same might be withstand in seasonable time, had first, for howne realme of England, prepared and putt in readinesse men, f defence of the same, against forrane enemeis, als weill by sea as land; and hath also sought, and doeth seeke, all ordinarie go meanes, to recover her people, alreadie seduced, and to stay the rest that might in like maner heerafter be corrupted. And f the mischeefe stirred up in Germanie, she hath used sindrie meane sent ambassaders, to her great charges, to the best affected prince Protestants, there to stay the fire kindled among themselves, be joyning together against the commoun enemie.

minations, and labouring to meete the same, and to contraveene them in tyme, least, otherwise, the generall danger of all countreis and people professing Christ, against that Antichrist of Rome, might grow and passe recoverie by anie worldlie meanes: And when also it had beene discovered by sindrie meanes unto her Maestie, that the Pope and his adherents have concluded, as a thing necessar to the generall enterprise, to attempt the recovering of Scotland to his obedience, and, in some part, the maner therof, low they meant to proceed, had beene also unto her Majestie reeeled; and that she had seene some part therof begunne alreadie, vhich was, by sending Monsieur D'Aubigney, a profest Papist, ino Scotland, under colour of his kinred to the king, that these wentie yeeres past never offered anie service to the king, when as e had most need; partlie by dissimulatioun and courting with he king, being young, and of a noble and gentle nature, and part. ie by nourishing and making factiouns among the nobilitie, but peciallie, to oppose himself to suche of the nobles as were knowne ffectionat, to mainteane amitie betwixt her Majestie and the King f Scots, and were earnest to continue the love betwixt the naiouns, thereby to make some readie way, by colour of divisioun nd factioun, to bring strangers, being Romanists, into the realme, or his partie, and, consequentlie, by degrees, to alter religioun, ea, in the end, to bring the person of the young king in anger; which is seene verie easie to be done, by colour of his fice, being now, without anie prooffe of service done to the king r his countrie, made his principall chamberlan, and possessor of is person: and so to make himself, by the greatnesse of his auporitie, and by his banding in factiouns, but speciallie by pretence his neerenesse in blood to the king, to gett the crown also, in ae end, to himself.

"When her Majestie had seene and considered this perell, and the progressions therof, from degree to degree, and therewith had und how even since Monsieur D'Aubigney came to this great and singular credit, there hath beene some alteration and diminuous of the effects and former sincere amitie in the king towards her Majestie, though, as she thinketh, not of the king's owne dispositioun, but being, by abuse, indirectlie led thereto: And in like sort, what unkindnesse and discords have beene stirred and nourished, yea, manie murthers suffered, betwixt the people upon the frontiers; and all good meanes that were continuallie by her Majestie, for the space of two veeres, offered to reforme the same, refused or delayed: Everie man of anie good and sincere devotioun toward the religioun of Jesus Christ, or of anie sound understanding to consider the withstanding of these dangerous and generall platts of the Pope and his adherents, ought greatlie to allow and commend, yea, to further and assist these her Majestie's provident, princelie, and Christian cares, and therewith to interpret in good part her late sindrie messages, letters, advertisements, and counsells to the king, and not to be induced, by words onlie, of the Lord D'Aubigney and his adherents, to sett light of the same, and frivolouslie to demand of her Hienesse, as it were, demonstrative prooffes, without regard to her Majestie's sinceritie in all her proceedings with that king, all wayes to his privat benefite, where plaine maters doe burst out, to show his secreit intentioun to atchieve this his interprise. For how may this his late strange fact be otherwise interpretted, in conspiring to have accused so great a person, and grave counseller of the realme, that had bruiked the place of a counseller, and that, for the king's suretie, at her Majestie's requeist; one that had hazarded his life for safetie of the king, and never favoured anie factioun contrarie to the king, as the Erle of Morton is, and of a mater so long keeped in silence; and therewith, to attatche his person in the court, where he was duetifullie to serve the king; and then also, without anie prooffe, to committ him to prisoun, and in the end, not contented to have him neere to the accustomed place of the seate of justice, at Edinburgh, where the king is resident, but to convoy him to a castell farre off, on the sea side, newlie procured to the custodie of Monsieur D'Aubigney, (without anie triell of him,) his adversarie, to be ather murthered, poysouned, or convoyed by sea, at his pleasure, out of the realme, without suche triell as, by the lawes of the land, belongeth to induce noblemen? A mater (all circumstances weill considered by the noblemen) sufficient to confirme the just suspiciouns of Monsieur D'Aubigney's intentioun to become the principall minister of the Pope and his adherents, for to reduce that realme to the servitude of Rome, wherof himself from his birth had beene a profest vassall, that now by policie, (though some of his companie brought with him, and vitt secreitlie cherished by him, doe remaine still Papists,) he himself, to colour his dissimulatioun, affirmed by words, to be somwhat otherwise changed. mater, being weill considered, that served his turne the better, to atchieve his interprise; and suche a device, that (as it is confessed by sindrie) the Pope doeth manie times give dispensations to diverse for some notable respects, to dissemble not onlie in bare words and with oathes, but also in outward facts to proceed to be of the reformed religioun, onlie to have more commoditie to worke heir further practise. And of this kinde had beene discovered nanie in England, and also in France, that had confessed suche lispensations so to dissemble; yea, they are taught, that they, vithout hurt to their Popish conscience, by oath, before anie Proestant magistrat, may denie their faith, and dissemble, and breake nie promise made to a Protestant.

"Now, all these things considered, and her Majestie seing this langerous progressioun in Scotland by Monsieur D'Aubigney; nd that, by making his factiouns as he doeth, he may procure by is comming suche a divisioun there, especiallie among the nobilitie, a suche as be knowne most sound in religioun, most serviceable nd loyall to the king, most devote to keepe the countrie at libertie rom accesse of Papisticall and strange forces, and, last of all, most effectionat to mainteane the good amitie betwixt her Majestie and he king, and the profitable intelligence, love, and concord, betwixt he people of both the realmes, and that also have tasted and mankfullie acknowledged her Majestie's great and manie chargable enefites to their king, their religioun, and liberteis; may be brought like danger by Monsieur D'Aubigney, as the Erle of Morton manifestlie is, which her Majestie evidentlie seeth, to be the greatest perell, and most readie way to consummat the Pop's forsa intentions, in that realme. And, therefore, besides her Majesti warnings, admonitiouns, and counsells givin by sindrie her lette and messingers, in this behalfe, to the king, her deere brother, a to his privie counsell, she hath thought it verie necessar to ha this her Christian and princelie intentioun knowne to moe of t nobilitie there, at this assemblie. And, therewith, she doeth mo earnestlie require them in God's name, and by the love which they beare to the continuance of the Gospell, and by the duet and allegiance they owe to the preservatioun of the person of the king, her brother, from the dangerous practisings and s ducings of all cunning Papists, and by the naturall band the owe, by birth, to the libertie of their countrie and to the owne posteritie, to injoy the use of lawes, and not to be su ject to the tyrannie of some few persons seeking ambitiousl their privat greatnesse, that they will accept her Majestic advices in suche good part; and so gravelie, like true, nobland wise men, informe the king to accept the same; as in the presence of God she meaneth, principallie, for the weale of the young king, her deare brother, and his countrie; and therupoby their assistance in counsell, to provide suche speedie remed against all these dangers, as to their wisdome sall seeme needful and that without delay: that being the onlie intentioun of he Majestie, wherewith, without other respect, she sall be greatly both conforted and quietted, and thereby she sall the better attend as she hath great caus, to defend her owne countreis and king doms; which she sall the more hardlie doe, if the commoun enemisall, ather by force or by cunning practise, procure divisioun in the realme, to the oppressioun or weakening of suche of the realme are knowne most humble, most devote to mainteane the amitie an concord betuixt the two princes and their people.

"And if the greatnesse of Monsieur D'Aubigney at this time, a it seemeth verie great outwardlie by the late actions, seeme to stathem from their free consultations or free suffrages, for the due reformation of him; her Majestie doeth offer most willinglie he ide, as heeretofore she hath done, alwayes for that king and his galme, without regard of her charges, not onlie with money, but ith force of men, if needfull be, to assist suche of them in their ctions as sall be found disposed to reforme Monsieur D'Aubigney: nd that to be principallie for confirmation of religioun, for safetie f the king's person, and for the libertie of their countrie, and narall amitie betuixt the two realmes: And namelie, als for the furperance of justice, to procure that the Erle of Morton, a peere of at realme, and of an ancient blood, may be recovered from captivie out of Aubigney's privat possessioun, to be openlie, lawfullie, and differentlie tried, so to receave his judgement; against which er Majestie meaneth not to use anie meanes. And these her Mastie's princelie offers, for God's caus, the king's safetie, and weale the realme, without anie other particular respect, she doeth asredlie promise to performe, and that without delay, as causes sall quire; meaning heerin als muche safetie, weale, and honour to e king, as if he were her proper sonne; as by her actions sall apare."

STRUCTIONS FOR MR MELVILL, SENT TO THE KING'S MAJESTIE OF SCOTLAND BY THE PRINCE OF ORANGE. FEBRUAR 25TH.

"He sall declare to his Majestic and lords, that the said prince seemeth him farre addebted to his Hienesse and their lordships the favour and support that he and the Low Countreis have morted, by their consent and licence granted to sindrie gentlemen all other souldiours, to transport them in these parts, for their suctor and releefe. Forasmuche as the interest is great which might alound to all the true professors of Christian religioun, if anie intervenience sould happin to the realme of Scotland, and that the cetie of the said prince, and all other princes of his qualitie, movement to have a speciall care of the king's person, who, in this is younger age, giveth so great esperance to all good men, that is sall be the meane of some great benefite to all Christendome, is said prince cannot forbeare to give his Majestie and lords intelligence of some things latelie come to his knowledge, tuichi some platts and practises of the King of Spaine, and of the Po against his royall persoun, his countrie, and the kirk establish within his realme: praying his Hienesse, right effectuouslie, to terpret this his boldnesse in good part, as proceeding of a caref desire which he hath to see his Majestie continue his governeme and kingdome in all prosperitie; hoping that his Hienesse sall I his vertue and royall qualiteis be imployed, together with the wh meanes which he may furnishe, to the advancement of God's grie, to the confirmation and suretie of his kirk, where his Word truelie preached, as it is within his realme.

"He is advertised by certan his freinds and servants, which hath in Italie and other parts, that there is ather dressing, or readie dressed, a league and conspiracie betuixt the Pope a King of Spaine, and certan other princes, against the realmes Scotland and England, of intention to trouble the state of bot that by that meane they may subvert and overthrow so may goodlie kirks as are erected within these realmes, and restore their steed the religion which they call Catholick.

"These that travell most earnestlie to sett fordward the leag and conspiracie are certan lords, and other banished and fugit persons, als weill out of Scotland as out of England, that fores there is no meane for them to be restored, but by troubling to present estat.

"They lett the Pope and King of Spaine understand, that, will in Scotland and England, there are sindrie that mislyke the presentate of the said countreis, and therefore goe about by all mean to have the samine altered and changed; and therefore say, that it be brought to passe, that anie forrane power might be convoy within anie of the realmes, that it sould not be difficill to ma such an alteration in both, as the Catholicks' religioun might easilie sett up again, with small support of the malcontents in be realmes.

"They alledge that they live in good hope to see some day! Majestie in the King of Spain's hands, to be brought to pas there, by perswasioun that may be made him of some esperance of mariage, or succession there: at least, for convoying him away, under colour to remove him from all danger of the warres; and therafter to repone him to his owne estate, when all things sall be better quietted and ordered.

"The small forces which arived the last yeere in Irland, resting them so long time unassailed, by reason of the revolt and dissensioun which was in the countrie the time of their arrivall, and the Englishmen making so small accompt of them in the beginning, hath beene the meane to procure some credit in Rome to these fugitives, that would perswade thereby, that to restore again the Catholick religioun, they must beginne ather at England or Scotland; and if they doe it not, they sall tyne time to querrell, or to invade the Low Countreis, where they will be encountered with so manie strong touns, and where the people is now weill acquainted with the incommoditeis that the warres ordinarilie doe carie with them.

"This is not altogether their owne inventioun. But they have dearned it of Escovedo, secretar to Don Johne d'Austriche, who was ever wont to say, that to come to anie good successe of their ntent against the Low Countreis, the first warres would be made against the Iles adjacent thereto; and that sould be a readie meane to provide Don Johne, that as yitt had no estat.

"It is likelie that the Pope and cardinalls would rather seeme to believe this, nor that indeid they doe believe it; and yitt, they travell to perswade the King of Spaine, by the meanes of preests and nonkes which have credite with him. But this is the readiest way, of the end that he tyne not courage in the meane time, seing, with of great losse, he hath continued so long and cruell warre against the Low Countreis, upon intentioun allenarlie to bring them to the Pop's obedience; and that he is not ignorant, that if he could be induced to grant unto the Low Countreis the libertie of religioun, he rest of their diversiteis might easilie be componned, and brought o reasonable midds.

VOL. III.

"There is no questioun but the Pope and the cardinals desire, by all meanes possible, to increase the greatnesse of the King of Spaine, and to bring under his obedience the realmes of Scotland and England, and some others, if they might, seing their estat is grounded whollie upon his greatnesse; and, therefore, they practise, als farre as they may compasse, to enlarge his power; and could be weill content to spaire some silver upon his interprise against Scotland and England, als weill to mainteane their reputatioun, as for feare that the Spaniard sould, in end, be better advised, and understand that they caus them receave the strokes, and they, in the meane time, injoy the fruicts of their paines and travells.

"That the Pope will make no great difficultie to bestow largelie upon this interprise, the letters intercepted, which were directed into Spaine to the Dutchesse of Parme, give sufficient testimonie and prooffe. The King of Spaine hath by experience shewed, the yeeres bygane, what affection he hath borne to the present state of Scotland, when as he practised and attempted to make Don Johne d'Austriche, his bastard brother, King of Scotland; appointed to him for wife the queen, his Hienesse' mother, whom he thought to releeve furth of the part where she is presentlie, trusting, by that meane, to dispossesse his Majestie of his crowne, and to erect again the Romish religioun in the countrie.

"No government can ever be so weill ruled, but that among a number of men there will be alwise some malcontents; becaus there want never enow that thinke they deserve more honour and more credit nor is bestowed upon them. Wherefore, it may weill be that the devisers of thir practises at Rome have correspondence with some men both in Scotland and England, albeit it be not likelie that these with whom they have intelligence be of so great a number as may invert the estat of his Majestie and counsell, remaining willing to mainteane it in peace and tranquillitie, notwithstanding the practisers perswade the Pop and the King of Spaine of the contrarie. In the meane time, the old proverb is true, that a prince can never be too jealous and suspicious in maters which concerne his life, his libertie, his estat; and can not be warie eneugh in anie of them, of suche as he conceaveth anie sinistrous suspicioun of.

"Above all, his Majestie would beware that he fall not in the hand of Spaniards anie way, nor under colour or pretext of anie promise that they can make to him. For that sall kythe, in end, no other thing nor to become of a king a prisoner, seing, that then it sould be in the will and power of the Spaniards to dispon upon his life and his libertie, as they sould thinke expedient. And it cometh often to passe, that, in maters of great importance, kings have greater respect to that which they thinke to be profitable to their course, nor to keepe their faith and promise, except they have the feare of God printed all the deeper in their hearts.

"The said Mr Melvill sall declare to his Hienesse and their lord-ships, that the said prince is of opinioun, that his Majestie sall do weill to interteane the amitie and allyance past, above all memorie, betwixt the Scotish men and the Frenche; for, in so doing, his Majestie may weill perswade himself, that incace Spaine, or anie other countrie, enterprise against his estat, he will not faile to receave succour from France. The amitie which the two realmes have keeped so long together being the onlie ground and occasion of sindrie mutuall commoditeis, which either of them have reported of others, that would not, incace of the like necessitie, be neglected and lightlie lett off.

"That his Majestie can doe or devise nothing more profitable for conservation of his estat, and the standing of so manie kirks erected within his realme, nor to keepe and interteane good love and correspondence with the Queen of England, to whom it importeth most, nixt unto his Majestie, that the realme of Scotland be in good peace and unioun, and that true religioun be mainteanned therin, seing the same is professed within her realme.

"There is no questioun, but if anie interprise were moved ugainst his Majestie or his estat, so long as he remaineth in amitie with England, that he might lippin for more speedie succour from hence than anie other part; wherof times bypast may be a sufficient prooffe; when as his Majestie being of so tender yeeres that he could not for age consider of his owne effaires, the queene did her whole endeavoure to mainteane the realme of Scotland in union and peace, and to preserve true religion in the owne integritie. Heerof it is apparent she will be now more carefull nor before, seing both the kingdoms are querelled and persued by one enemie, and for one caus, to witt, the profession of the true religioun.

"Above all things, his Majestie would be aware to give anie eare to suche as would have division betwixt the realmes, seing, that so farre as he can understand of the enemeis plott, it is the meane whereby the Pop and King of Spain intend to bring to passe their interprise, and to ruine the kirks founded with so muche blood within these realmes; which cannot weill susteane decay, unlesse it carie with it the ruine and calamitie of the whole estat. For which caus, his Majestie sould beware of them that goe about to mak divisioun betwixt the countreis.

"The said Mr Melvill sall likewise declare to his Hienesse, that the said prince requeisteth right humblie his Majestie and the Lords of Counsell, to interpret in no evill part that he hath takin the hardinesse to lett them understand suche things as are come to his knowledge concerning their effaires, by intelligence that he hath of some sure hands, and that he interponeth so boldlie his advice; the motioun heerof proceeding onlie of the great desire he hath, on the one side, to see his Majestie continue his raigne in all prosperitie, and, on the other, the feare that he conceaveth of some inconvenient impendent, both to his estat, and to the kirk of God within his realme.

"That the said prince desireth his Majestie to be assured, that when soever it sall fall out that the King of Spaine, or anie his adherents, sall interprise anie thing against his Majestie's estat, that he sall heartilie imploy, with his present power, the credit that he may have with the whole province of the Low Countreis, to make them like affectionat to his Highnesse' service; and believeth it sall not be difficill to perswade them in this cace to oppone them, and the power they can furnishe, to the attemptats of the Spaniards in his contrare; considering they know, by experience, how muche it importeth their estat, that his Majestie continue his raigne in all neace and tranquillitie; as they believe, on the other side, his Majestie is weill informed that it sould not be to his commoditie if they sould fall again under the tyrannie of the Spaniard, or incurre anie suche calamitie, that the said prince would be of this advice. under correctioun of his Majestie and their lordships, to withstand the forces of the Spaniards. Which justlie ought to be suspected to all Christians, that this were a generous and royall act, and wherof a great benefite might redound to all Christendome, in procuring an assured and firme alliance betwixt the King of France, Queen of England, and his Majestie, the Duke of Anjou and the Low Countreis, wherunto the said prince will not faile to hold hand on his part, and to extend the meanes that God hath granted him to that effect. At Delph, the 25th of Februar."

A CHARGE TO SUBSCRIVE THE CONFESSION OF FAITH.

A charge was subscrived by the king at Halyrudhous, the secund day of Marche, whereby subjects of all ranks were charged to subscrive the said Confessioun, the tenor wherof followeth:—

"Seing that we and our houshold have subscrived, and givin this publict confessioun of our faith, to the good exemple of our subjects, we command and charge all commissioners and ministers to crave the same confessioun of their parochiners, and proceed against the refusers according to our lawes, and order of the kirk delivering their names and lawfull processe to the ministers of our hous, with all haste and diligence, under the paine of fourtie pund, to be takin from their stipends; that we, with advice of our counsell, may tak order with suche proud contemners of God and our lawes. Subscrived with our hand, at Halyrudhous, the secund day of Marche, 1580, (now 1581,) the 14th yeere of our raigne."

THE SECUND CONFESSIOUN OF FAITH.

The tenor of the Secund Confessioun of Faith followeth:-

"Wee, all and everie one of us underwrittin, protest, that after long and due examination of our owne consciences in maters of true and false religioun, are now thoroughlie resolved in the truthe, by the Word and Spirit of God. And, therefore, we believe with our hearts, confesse with our mouths, subscrive with our hands, and constantlie affirme, before God and the whole world, that this onlie is the true Christian faith and religioun, pleasing God and bringing salvatioun to man, which is now, by the mercie of God, reveeled to the world by the preaching of the blessed Evangell, and is receaved, believed, and defended by manie and sindrie notable kirks and realmes, but cheefelic by the Kirk of Scotland, the king's Majestie, and three estats of this realme, as God's eternall truthe, and onlie ground of our salvatioun; as more particularlie is expressed in the confessioun of our faith, stablished, and publictlie confirmed, by sindrie Acts of Parliaments and now, of a long time hath beene openlie professed by the king's Majestie, and whole bodie of his realme, both in burgh and land. To the which Confessioun and forme of religioun we willinglie agree in our consciences, in all points, as unto God's undoubted truthe and veritie, grounded onlie upon his writtin Word.

"And, therefore, we abhorre and detest all contrarie religioun and doctrine, but cheeflie, all kinde of Papistrie, in generall and particular heeds, even as they are now damned and confuted by the Word of God, and Kirk of Scotland. But, in speciall, we detest and refuse the usurped authoritie of that Roman Antichrist, upon the Scriptures of God, upon the kirk, the civill magistrat, and consciences of men; all his tyrannous lawes made upon indifferent things, against our Christian libertie; his erroneous doctrine against the sufficiencie of the writtin Word, the perfectioun of the law, the offices of Christ, and his blessed Evangell; his corrupted doctrine concerning originall sinne, our naturall inabilitie and rebellioun to God's law, our justification by faith onlie, our imperfyte sanctificatioun, and obedience to the law; the nature, number, and use of the holie Sacraments, his five bastard sacraments, with all his rites, ceremoneis, and false doctrine, added to the ministratioun of the true sacraments without the Word of God: his cruell judgement against infants departing without the sacrament, his absolute necessitie of baptisme; his blasphemous opinioun of transubstantiatioun, or reall presence of Christ's bodie in the elements, and receaving the same by the wicked for bodies of men; his dispensations with oaths, perjureis, and degrees of mariage forbiddin in the Word; his crueltie against the innocent divorced; his devilish masse, his blasphemous preesthood, his prophane sacrifice for the sinnes of the deid and quick; his canonizatioun of men, calling upon angels and sancts departed, worshipping of imagerie, relicts, and croces; dedicating of kirks, altars, dayes, vowes to creatures; his purgatorie, prayers for the dead, praying or speeking in a strange language; his processions and blasphemous Letanie, and multitude of advocats or mediators; his manifold orders, auricular confessioun, his desperat and uncertan repentance, his generall and doubtsome faith, his satisfactions of men for their sinnes; his justificatioun by workes, opus operatum, works of supererogatioun, merits, pardons, peregrinations, and stations; his holie water, baptizing of bells, conjuring of spirits, crocing, saining, anointing, conjuring, hallowing of God's good creatures, with the superstitious opinioun joynned therewith; his worldlie monarchie and wicked hierarchie; his three solemne vowes, with all his shavelings of sindrie sorts; his erroneous and bloodie decrees made at Trent, with all the subscrivers and approvers of that cruell and bloodie band conjured against the kirk of God: and, finallie, we detest all his vaine allegoreis, rites, signes, and traditions, brought in the kirk, without or against the Word of God, and doctrine of this true reformed kirk, to the which we joyne our selves willinglie, in doctrine, faith, religioun, discipline, and use of the holie sacraments, as livelie members of the same in Christ, our Head; promising and swearing, by the great name of the Lord our God, that we sall continue in the obedience of the doctrine and discipline of this kirk, and sall defend the same, according to our vocation and power, all the dayes of our lives, under the paines conteanned in the law, and danger both of bodie and soule in the day of God's fearefull judgement.

"And seing that manie are stirred up by Satan and that Roman Antichrist to promise, sweare, subscrive, and for a time use the holie sacraments in the kirk deceatfullie, against their owne conscience, mynding heereby, first, under the externall cloke of religioun, to corrupt and subvert secreitlie God's true religioun within the kirk, and afterward, when time may serve, to become open enemeis and persecuters of the same, under vaine hope of the Pop's dispensatioun, devised against the Word of God, to his greater confusioun and their double condemnatioun in the day of the Lord Jesus: We, therefore, willing to tak away all suspicioun of hypocrisie, and of such double dealing with God and his kirk, protest, and call the Searcher of all hearts to witnesse, that our mindes and hearts doe fullie agree with this our confessioun, promise, oath, and ubscriptioun, so that we are not moved for anie worldlie respect, at are perswaded onlie in our consciences, through the knowledge and love of God's true religioun, printed in our hearts by the Holie pirit, as we sall answere to Him in the day when the secreets of Il hearts sall be disclosed.

"And becaus we perceave that the quietnesse and stabilitie of ur religioun and kirk doeth depend upon the safetie and good beaviour of the king's Majestie, as upon a confortable instrument of fod's mercie, granted to this countrie for the mainteaning of His irk, and ministration of justice among us, we protest and promise ith our hearfs, under the same oath, hand-writt, and paines, that e sall defend his person and authoritie with our geare, bodeis, and res, in the defence of Christ his Evangell, libertie of our countrie, inistratioun of justice, and punishment of iniquitie, against all remeis, within this realme or without, as we desire our God to be strong and mercifull defender to us in the day of our death, and making of our Lord Jesus Christ; to whome, with the Father d with the Holie Spirit, be all honour and glorie eternallie.

In this Confessioun of Faith, under the name of WICKED HIER-CHIE, is condemned Episcopall government: for between these ords, "the Roman Autichrist," and "worldlie monarchie," and tese words, "wicked hierarchie," are interjected manie other cononned errors, as prayer for the dead, dedicating of churches, ars, dayes, &c., where the hierarchie is called his, as prayer for te dead, holie dayes, dedicating of churches, &c., are called his, baus they are invented and mainteanned by him, and would have vaished, if he had not interteaned them. So the hierarchie is cled his, becaus it is mainteanned by his lawes, authorized by him wh suche lordlie power and pre-eminence, and framed according this decretals and councels. Did not the Councell of Trent th nder ANATHEMA against these who would not acknowledge that thre is in the Catholick Kirk a hierarchie instituted by divine o inance, consisting of bishops, presbyters, and deacons? Sess. 2 Canon 6. Our Confessioun damned not the hierarchie otherwise than the Tridentine fathers defynned it. Again, when it said, "We abhorre and detest all particular heeds, as they are not damned and confuted by the Word of God, and Kirk of Scotlan we professe we detest and abhorre episcopall government; for onlie the doctrine in the pulpits sounded against it, but also it waster great deliberation and advisement, condemned by the Gerall Assemblie before the Confession of Faith was subscrively Yea, since the beginning of the yeere 1576, these who were call bishops were not bishops indeid, but commissioners and visiters the bounds prescrived unto them, together with the synod, brethrein deputed by the synod, or the brethrein of the exerce And this power, delegat unto them by commissioun, was alternate the pleasure of the Assemblie. So, howbeit they were call vulgarlie bishops, in respect of the benefice, yith had they not at the extensive or intensive power belonging to the office of a bish

Other simple ministers had the same office of commissioun they had; yea, since the yeere 1573, their power was declared be no greater than the superintendent's. The discipline, the wherof mention is made in the Confessioun of Faith, is not Epis pall government, but the jurisdiction of kirk-sessions, presbyter synodall assembleis, and generall, agreed upon before, when Booke of Policie was approved, that is, since the first Assemble holdin 1578, some few heeds excepted, which mak nothing again this forme of discipline.

GEORGE FLECK APPREHENDED.

Upon Saturday the elleventh of Marche, George Fleck, servito the Erle of Morton, was apprehended by Manderston, in Al ander Lawson's hous, together with the said Alexander, not wi out their owne consents, as was alledged, to reveele where Erle of Morton's treasure lay. The bruite went, when the bowere presented to George Fleck, that he reveeled a part of treasure to be lying in Dalkeith yaird, under the ground; a part Aberdour, under a braid stone before the gate; a part in Lei Certan it is, that he was the wealthiest subject that had been in the kingdome for manie yeeres.

THE LIBELL AFFIXED UPON THE AMBASSADER'S GATE.

Upon Moonday the 13th of Marche, a libell was affixed upon Mr tandulph the English ambassader's gate, full of railing and opprorious words. He compleaned to the king, assuring it himself it ould not be done but by some courteours, and with advice of some f his counsellers, becaus some of them had spokin some like words himself. He gott no redresse, but was biddin searche who was an author, and he sould be punished. The copie of the libell followeth:—

"Wee, the king's Majestie, barons, nobilitie, burrowes, and comouns, mervell not a little, Mr Randulph, seing you are sent in this ountrie ambassader, by so high, worthie, and mightie a princesse, e queen's Majestie of England, whose person you represent, that e give to understand to the king's Majestic and his counsell, that or Majestie, having ever beene so willing, what by the great gifts of od givin her, what by the concord and peace since her Majestie's . ronatioun, as better can testifie her good and best beloved subjets of her owne realme, who have beene so opulentlie mainteaned ed defended in peace and tranquillitie in her time, God preserve Ir Majestie, &c. And now, yee are her officer, being sent in mmissioun to our soveran lord, the king's Majestie, we are consained, openlie and manifestlie, to declare your unduetifull and ell offices, what to the queen's Majestie your mastresse, what to c soveran lord the king's Majestie; willing to bring him in contapt of his subjects, alledging him to be misruled and misguided I certane particular counsellers, and not willing to obtemper the quen's Majestie your mastresse' desires; your principall and whole dnands being contrived in three heeds, as we understand: that is to desire my Lord Lennox to be depesched, and sent (as an unfictfull member to this commoun wealth) to his countrie of I nce, and suche other frivole reasons, as we will not exprime at this present time: which will tend all to this interrogatare. Whether it had beene lawfull caus to the subjects of your countrie to ha made an uproare, for miscontentment against the queen's Maies your soveran, for her Majestie's great liberalitie used toward Rob Dudley, Erle of Leicester, who is worthie of all that she h done, and more, for his good qualiteis and conditions, more tl we can expreme at this time; likewise the secretar, Mr Hatt captan of her Majestie's guarde, and diverse others, to whom pleased her Majestie to extend her large liberalitie, who are nat so neere of kin or blood to her Majestie, as the Erle of Lenno: to the king's Majestie, our soveran lord; who hath receaved little nothing but his heritable right, which could not goe by him? If hath receaved anie other benefite, he is willing to give it to th to whom it perteaned, if his Majestie be content with them, : they become duetifull subjects; or anie other that it pleaseth Majestie to nominat therunto. For it is not for anie recompe he serveth his Majestie, but onlie for humanitie of his Majest advancement, acknowledging him to be of his kin and blood whom he will professe to bestow his heart, his blood, and his v veant, regarding nather boast nor blowing, of whatsomever per or persons, her Majestie being excepted, and the king his Majes

"Secundlie, Your threatning is, in your mastresse' behalfe, have my Lord of Morton putt to a triell. Which demand is altogether out of reasoun, nor altogether impertinent, if yee doe your office for furthering of his triell, as yee doe in stopp of it; to caus him want his head by subtile and summar proce by your evill offices and imaginations, in intycing the king's l jestie's good subjects, as is openlie knowne by your hand writt, suring whatsoever nobilitie or commouns will interprise taking armour for refusall of suche things as are refused to your mastre by the king's Majestie and his counsell, that they sall nather k money nor men to their support. God knoweth if thir be duet offices yee doe to your mastresse, the queen's Majestie, who h ever beene so kindlie and tender a cousin to our soveran lord king's Majestie, and done so muche for him in his minoritie.

who would trow you, it appeareth the queen's Majestie sould be ounselled to play the goate; that is to say, to see all the paines akin in his tender age for setting of his crown on his head (as is lledged) losed, which we assure you nather her Majestie nor her ounsell will allow.

"We are not willing to forgett the thrid of your demands, where our mastresse mervelleth muche of the reteanning of Sir James salfour in Scotland at this time. Truelie we are assured, that his sing in Scotland is unknowne to the king's Majestie and his coundl. But muche more we doe mervell what can your mastresse eane, to find fault with that man presentlie more than she hath one thir five or six yeeres bygane, when he was head and first unseller to the Lord of Morton, and esteemed by him in superiour gree than other in higher calling, as the world can testifie.

"Yee would have the secreits of God obscured, which will not for you; that is, the triell of the murther of the king's Majes-'s father, of good memorie, to be extinguished and putt in oblioun, but as you and some of the factioun of your countrie thinke good, as by good appearance yee show. For yee are so desirous the one hand, and so retractive on the other, that the contractioun showeth it self plainlie. Becaus yee hold Mr Archibald bwglas, who is rebell to the king, and of the principall, that may the trier of the crime which is layed to the charge of Morton, said, with sindrie other rebels receaved by the queen's Majestie, ur mastresse' evill officers, without her advice, as we are weill aured. Moreover, how yee blind our poore ministers of God's Ind, and caus them vaig full oft from their text, by your instigat is and false reports, assuring them that there are about the king vo intend to bring in Frenche men, and tak up the Papisticall r gioun. God knoweth if the king and his counsell, or the queen's I jestie and her counsell, doe most apparentlie bring in ather Inche men or Papistrie in their countrie, seing the King of I mee his brother, who is the cheefe Papist of all France, is treattig mariage with your queene. Last of all, what seditioun yee nve, in moving two young noblemen, the Erles of Angus and Marr, to be howlets and nightingels, who converse with you in the night. If this sall be found good service by the queen, your mattresse, God knoweth. But the samine hand that wrote to Batasar upon the wall may accuse you, when yee come to the error your confusioun. And, therefore, Mr Randulph! Mr Randulph Mr Randulph! take heed to your doings; becaus, if yee hold of yee sall not escape unaccused within this twelve moneth or lesse for evill offices may sett a coale on fire, which ye cannot easily slockin. Exhorting all good readers to take this in good part, we are assured all Scotish men will acknowledge God yitt to lead, and that he will yitt be protector of our soveran lord, and defend him, contrarie all his enemeis."

MORTON'S FREINDS TROUBLED.

Upon the same day, Moonday the 13th, the lieges were charge by proclamation, to be in readinesse, upon six houres' warning, a follow the king's lieutenant, and that becaus of the forces gather on the English border. Another proclamation was made, discharging conventions holdin by the Erle of Angus, and offering pards to these that had alreadie concurred with him, if they would conwithin tenne dayes and seeke it. In the thrid proclamation, Camichaell, Archibald Dowglas, and young Spott, were charged compeere before the counsell. The Erle of Angus was charged enter in waird at Innernesse, betwixt and the 26th of March under the paine of treason. Dalkeith was randered upon Moonday the 20th of Marche, to the Laird of Minto; the Drochels to S Johne Seton; Aberdour to the Lord Sanct Colme; Morton to the Lord Maxwell.

In the beginning of Aprile, young Phairnihirst obteaned licence to returne to his countrie. Upon the 7th of Aprile, Captan France reser mustered the inhabitants of Dalkeith, under colour to know their abilitie to serve the king incace the toun were invaded But leading them within the gates of the castell, (he) disarme them of jacke, speere, and knapskall.

Here followeth a confessioun printed, cum privilegio, at Edinurgh, the 12th of Aprile 1581:—

" At Edinburgh, the 12th of Aprile, 1581.

"Wee, archbishops, bishops, supreme and cheefe heads in the clesiasticall state of Scotland, and everie one of us, acknowledgir the free mercie of God the Father, and his onlie beloved Sonne, er Saviour and Redeemer, Jesus Christ, borne of the holie and prious Virgin Marie, that nather there is, nor can be, anie kinde cecclesiasticall dignitie and office within the catholick kirk, his Ilbeloved spous, except it be receaved by the precise ordinance i tituted by the wisdome of the Holie Ghost, whereby a lawfullie cled pastor calleth another, becaus it is expreslie writtin, 'How they preache except they be sent?' For it is manifest that ithe primitive kirk, founded by the holie apostles, bishops, by eaving of hands, called and gave ordinance to inferiour preests al ministers whatsomever, over whom also they had jurisdicti and power of correctioun; becaus to a bishop it is expreslie wittin, 'Thou sall not admitt anie accusation against a preest or m ister, except it be testified by two or three witnesses.' Likewe, it is expresslie writtin, 'Lay not on thy hands hastilie upon are man, nather communicat with other men's sinnes.

And, considering, according to the symbole of the apostles, it is correslie writtin, 'I believe the holie catholick kirk,' we confesse the onlie kirk to be true and immaculat, and all other authoritie operations of kirk whatsomever, that is not called or elected by the Vicar and Legat of our Saviour, is altogether contrarious to his godlie ordinance, and worthilie called the 'Synagogue of Satar becaus it is writtin, 'He that entereth not in the sheepfold by t doore, is a theefe and throat-cutter.'

"Seing, also, it is expreslie writtin, that the holie apostle, San Peter, was by Christ Jesus constituted prince of the apostles, upo whom, nixt after himself, he grounded his universall kirk which was to build, giving to him and his successors pre-eminence High Preesthood, whereby they might, after his ascension, suppl his place, and be ministeriall head of the kirk militant, which, ur this day, against the rage of Satan and wicked heresie, accordi to the infallible promise of Christ, hath firmelie stand, and obtean victorie. For it is expreslie writtin, 'Upon this rock I sall bu my kirk, against the which the gates of hell sall not prevail We all, moved by the said promise and manifest signes, true a miraculous testimoneis, inward motions of the Holie Spirit in c consciences, believe with our heart, confesse with our mouths, si scrive with our hands, affirming, before God and his holie kirk, her openlie, that this is onlie the true faith and religioun which ple eth God, and bringeth salvation to man, that is, by the mercie God, reveeled to the world by continuall preaching of the Wor and hath beene receaved, beleeved, and defended by the ancie kirk of Scotland, the Christian kings, and three estats of the realr as God's eternall truthe and veritie, grounded upon his expre writtin Word: and that we are readie, at the pleasure of God, defend and seale up the same with our blood, when need sall quire; submitting our self to the most just and lawfull authori of Christ his Vicar upon the earth, ministeriall Head of the k militant, who hath condemned all hereseis to this day, becaus doctrine therof, discipline, order, and exemple of good life and ge conversatioun, hath proceeded of the Holie Ghost, and is ground upon the expresse writtin Word of God, truelie interpretted by apostles, and other their ordinarie successors, without anie int ruptioun; as in speciall, that spirituall dignitie and order of pres hood which was instituted by Christ at his last supper; because is expreslie writtin, 'Doe this in remembrance of me,' whereby gave power to consecrat bread and wine, in his precious bodie and blood, which sould be offered an acceptable sacrifice for the quick and the dead, lyke as the merit of his passioun redounded unto hem which, according to the promise of God the Father, in the postles and their successors, representing the person of Jesus Christ, sall remaine untill the consummation of the world; becaus t is expressie writtin, 'Thou art a preest for ever, after the order of Melchisedeck.'

"We confesse, likewise, the holie sacraments instituted by Christ nd his apostles, grounded upon his expresse writtin Word, to witt, . Baptisme, becaus it is expreslie writtin, 'He who beleeveth and all be baptized, sall be saved.' 2. Confirmation, becaus it is exreslie writtin, that the holie apostles, Sanct Peter and Johne, by ne onlaying of hands, confirmed the Samaritans, who, before, were aptized in the name of Christ. 3. Repentance, becaus it is exreslie writtin, 'Unlesse yee repent, yee sall all perish;' and also it expreslie writtin, 'Receave the Holie Ghost: To whomsoever ce forgive sinnes, they are forgiven to them.' 4. The Supper of ae Lord, becaus it is expreslie writtin, 'Tak yee, eate yee; this my bodie which is givin for you,' &c. 5. Extreme Unctioun, beus it is expreslie writtin, 'If anie man be sicke among you, let him Il the preest, and be oynted with oyle, in the name of the Lord.' Mariage, becaus it is expreslie writtin, 'This is a great sacraent: I meane, in Christ and his kirk.' 7. Order, becaus it is exeslie writtin, 'Neglect not the grace which thou hath receaved, onlaving of the hands of the preesthood.

"Attour, we reverence all and sindrie ceremoneis of the said hokirk, wherby the Christian people are provoked to devotioun, caus it is expreslie writtin, that our Saviour Christ, when he ayed, satt down upon his knees. We obey all constitutions and aditions of the kirk, becaus it is expreslie writtin, that the Gentes receaved, and obedientlie embraced the constitutions of the bunsell of Jerusalem. We grant purgatorie, becaus it is expreslie tittin, If anie man's worke burne in the fire heerof, he sall be safe, It as it were through the fire.' We acknowledge the fruict and use of the pardons and dispensatioun of the treasure of the kirl committed to Sanct Peter and his successors: becaus it is expreshi writtin, 'To thee, Peter, I give the keyes of heaven: whatsoeve thou looseth upon the face of the earth, sall be loosed in heaven. We confesse, that the justice of the faithfull, through Christ and their merits, receaveth for reward the kingdome of heaven; becau it is expreslie writtin, 'Be glade and rejoice, for your rewarde i great in the heavens.' We believe firmlie and constantlie, the in vocation of sancts and angels; becaus it is expreslie writtin, tha we, so farre as possible is, sould require all the members of the kirl of Christ to pray one for another; and farther, becaus it is expres lie writtin, 'Turne thee to some of the sancts.' And siclyke, it i expreslie writtin, 'I beleeve the communioun of sancts.' We ac knowledge auricular confessioun; becaus it is expreslie writting 'They who believed came unto the apostles, showing their deeds and making confessioun unto them.' We believe also, that satisfac tioun is the thrid part of true repentance; becaus it is expreslie writ tin, ' Doe fruicts worthie of repentance.' We firmelie embrace th solide, infallible, and most confortable doctrine of transubstantia tion, and reall presence of Christ's glorious bodie in the sacrament becaus it is expreslie writtin, 'Except yee eat the flesh of the Sonn of Man, yee sall not have life in you :' with all other heeds of doc trine contained in the definitions of the holie, universall kirk visible which may not erre; becaus it is expreslie writtin, 'If thy brothe heare thee not at the secund admonition, declare it to the kirk It is also expreslie writtin, that this kirk is the groundstone and piller of the truthe.

"To this kirk, therefore, which hath no doctrine but that which is expressive writtin and reveeled by the Holie Ghost, we willinglicadjoyne ourselves, in unitie of faith and religioun, as liveline members of the same, in Christ, and his vicar ministerial Head by him instituted; promising and swearing by the great oath of the Lord that we sall obey the doctrine and discipline of the kirk, and saldefend the same to our power, all the dayes of our lives, under the paines conteanned in the law, wherin it is expressive writtin, 'Curse

e he that in works compleiteth not all the words of this booke and tw: and danger both of bodie and soul in the day of God's feareull judgement; becaus it is expressie writtin, 'Who denieth me beore men, I sall denie him before the Father of heaven.'

THE FORTIE-SECUND GENERALL ASSEMBLIE.

The Generall Assemblie conveened at Glasgow the 24th day Aprile. Mr Andrew Hay, Mr James Lowsone, Mr David indsey, Mr Thomas Smeton, William Christesone, David Fergune, the Lairds of Braid, Dunrod, and Pilrig, were appointed to oncurre as assessors with the moderator, Mr Robert Pont, and to twise with him how maters might be easilie exped in the Assemie. Mr Andrew Melvill was not yitt come.

UNWORTHIE MINISTERS TO BE DELATED.

"Forasmuche as, for purgatioun of the ministric of unworthic presents that had entered into the functioun, to the great slander of and his kirk, order was takin in the last Assemblie, that all m, als weill barons, gentlemen, as others of the functioun of the inistric, sould give up the names of the saids persons unto the inistric, sould give up the names of the saids persons unto the inistric, sould give up the names of the saids persons unto the inistric, sould give up the names of ithe slander lyeth upon the kirk: Therefore, as of before, the initial semblic requireth all men, as they tender the gloric of God, and it weals of his kirk, that they delate and give up the names of the persons in ticket, the morne at noone, that order may be takin if removing of the great slander arising to the whole kirk by slhe unworthic persons." What was done the morne we underend not, becaus there wanteth in the Register the thrid and forth session, rivven out by sacrilegious hands in the yeere 1584.

The Laird of Caprinton presented the king's Majestie's letter to the Assemblie, conteaning also a commission from his Hienesse to concurre with the Assemblie; together with certan rolls, conteaning the planting of kirks and the number of the presbytereis, with the kirks of everie presbyterie. The commissioun and rolls were presented in the fyft sessioun.

INSTRUCTIONS TO OUR TRUSTIE AND WELBELOVED WILLIAM CUNNINGHAME OF CAPRINTON, DIRECTED BY US, WITH ADVICE OF THE LORDS OF OUR SECREIT COUNSELL, TO THE GENERALL ASSEMBLIE OF THE MINISTERS OF THE KIRK OF GOD CONVEENED AT GLASGOW THE 20TH OF APRILE 1581.

"Yee sall deliver our letter to them, and lett them understand, that suche of their number as travelled with us, having desired of us answere to their articles sent from the Assemblie holdin at Dundie in Julie last, we caused certan of our counsell conferre with them, at severall times, in October last, as also, now of late, who all find the mater toward the thrids of the benefices mentiouned in the first of the said articles, as the same is there required, not the readiest meane, ather to make the ministers assured of their livings and stipends, or yitt to make us have anie reasounable support thereby, for releefe of the commoun charges of our estate, there being so great alteratioun and diminution of the rents, and so great confusioun otherwise entered in that mater, during thir twentie yeeres and more now bypast; and that thereby there behoveth a forme and order to be prescrived unto, more likelie to have continuance to the posteritie to come, to remove all occasiouns of complaint. For the furtherance therof, there is, by commandement and advice of suche of our counsell and the ministrie as conferred in this purpose, some forme drawin, how elderships may be constituted of a certan number of parishes lying together; small parishes to be united, and the great divided, for the better sustentatioun of the ministrie, and the more commodious resort of the commoun people to their kirks. There is also drawin the forme of a letter of ours, to be writtin to some of the principall noble and gentle men, and certan of the ministers within the bounds of everie eldership, to conveene, advise, and report unto us their advice in things required by us in our said letter, betuixt and the 24th day of Junie nixt. This we thought convenient to communicat with you to the Assemblie now to be conveened at Glasgow, requiring them, in our name, to consider therof, and to send us their judgement and opinioun toward this intended work; and of anie thing they would wish ather to be added or diminished, in the forme of our letter, or otherwise, before the same sall be directed. Wheranent, if care and diligence be takin by them, as our intention, God willing, is, to doe to the furtherance therof as becometh us, we have no doubt but God sall send fruictfull successe of our travells, the removing of the great disorder and confusioun, not withstanding for want of reformationn.

"These grounds advised weill and agreed upon, appearandlie sall not onlie with reasonable time, mak the ministers to be surelie provided of their livings, but it sall bring the ecclesiasticall discipline to be farre better exercised and executed over all this realme than it is presentlie; it being declared, First, what everie presbyterie may cognosce upon; Nixt, what sall be treatted in everie synodall assemblie; and, Last, what causes sall be devolved to the Generall Assemblie, and what persons sall orderlie need to repaire, and give vote therin. The report of thir our letters returning again the sooner, it may be provided with diligent travell, that the good order now intended may take beginning at the first day of November nixt, without farther delay. And if our parliament, upon anie necessar occasioun, sall be conveenned in the meane time, the samine order, or so muche therof as sall be in readinesse, may be past and pproved in forme of law.

"The Secund article was answered in suche sort as, we trust, hey were satisfied with.

"To answere to the Thrid article, the desire therof must be more peciall, before it receave a speciall answere.

"They have to consider in whose default and negligence the per sons compleaned upon in the Fourth articles remain unpunished.

"Our answere to the Fyft article is sufficient, whill upon furtheadvice it may be made more speciall.

"We doubt not also but our answere to the Sixt article sall be found reasonable, upon speciall conference had theranent; and that their desire, if it were granted in the forme required, could not businduce some inconveniences.

"There is order takin, tuiching the desire of the Seventh article.

"There is some order alreadie begunne, for the farther help and confort of the Erle of Arran, which sall be followed, as occasious sall serve.

"We have caused, and yitt will caus, the conference to be keeped, for furth setting of all things requisite, that may sett ford ward the policie, whill the samine may be established by law.

"Our former answers are reasonable, and no insisting hath been in the contrare in these maters sensyne.

"Moreover, yee sall lett the Assemblie understand, that in the particular conference bygane, sindrie maters have beene agreed upon in generall termes, as they were talked and putt in memorial but yitt are not putt in suche formes and termes as it were mee to putt them in articles to our states in parliament, to be past and approved as particular lawes. And, therefore, lett the Assemblicappoint some of their number to extend and putt their articles in suche forme and order as they will wishe them to be past in par liament, speciallie in thir heeds, &c.

"That the Assemblie will require, and caus informe us of the special names of persons culpable of the faults noted in the act of their last Assemblie holdin at Dundie, namelie.

"That the bishops and commissioners may be admonished to refuse readers to the titles of benefices vacand since the first day o November last bypast, althogh presentation have happenned, o happin to be made, after that sort.

"That the Assemblie declare how manie sufficient and weill qua lified ministers there are presentlie in Scotland, and in what place they wish them to serve.

"And that they give their advice how the remanent kirks, wherunto ministers cannot be had presentlie, may be served, and that till the present old possessors of the benefices be departed this life.

"That they give their opinioun and advice of that portioun of rents perteaning to kirks before the alteratioun of religioun, which they thinke sall fall to us, incace all benefices were now vacand; and in the meane time, whill that be, what we sall have yeerelie for support of our estat, and publict effaires of our realme.

"That they consider the forme and proceeding how the taxe for the spirituall men's part sall be payed in times comming.

"As also, to make us some likelie and good overture for the persons that sall occupie the place of the spiritual state in our parliament in times comming, after the decease of the present possessors of the places, in respect of the great decay of the rents thereof.

"That they send us their good advice, how a forme of judgement may be established, till a parliament, for calling of persons provided to benefices since our coronatioun to be deprived therefra, upon the clause writant, conteaned in their provisions, for not doing of their duetie in their vocations, but leaving their charges, and medling with their secular bussinesses.

"That the Assemblie give their advice upon the forme of presentation that we sall give, to be provided to benefices, if this order tak effect; to whom our presentations sall be directed; what sall be the forme and order of the triell, and how the person presented sall be tried; and what forme of admission or collation."

FOR A GROUND THIR HEEDS ARE TO BE CONSIDERED.

"That beside the diocie of Argile and the Iles, of which bounds never rentals were yitt givin up, there are in Scotland about 924 kirks, compting five score to the hundreth. Of these, sindrie are pendicles and small parishes, and manie kirks are demolished. Some parishes also are of greater bounds than that the parochiners may convenientlie conveene to their parish kirks. It hath beene thought meete, therefore, to reduce thir 924 kirks to 600, and at everie kirk to have a minister, their stipends and livings to be modified in foure degrees.

"An hundreth at	In.	500 merk the peece.
"Two hundreth at	-1.	300 merk the peece.
"Two hundreth at		100 pund the peece.
"An hundreth at		100 merk the peece.

"Or somwhat more or lesse, as it may be neere thir summes, beneath or above.

"All stipends and livings to be modified, according to the possibilitie of the rent payed in that place.

"These considerations are to be takin, although all the benefices were presentlie vaiking.

"Where the personage and vicarage pensioun at anie kirk are now severall benefices, to be all united and annexed in one, for the better susteaning of the ministrie there.

"These 600 kirks to be divided in 50 presbytereis, 12 joyned in everie presbyterie, or thereabout.

"Three of these presbytereis, or moe or fewer, as the countrie lyeth, to make a diocie, according to a forme after following, to be considered of.

"The synodall assemblie sall consist of a certan number of presbytereis; and everie synodall assemblie sall appoint the place within that province for their nixt synodall.

"Of persons directed from the synodall assemble is sall the Generall Assemble consist.

"Kirks divided in quarters, to be provided to one man; and if these quarters be annexed to anie other benefices, the quarters to be dissevered out of the provisions of the persons to be provided to these benefices, when they vaike. "The kirks divided inter prebendarios, to be givin to the ministers, as they vaike.

"All benefices provided to ministers, to be divided the yeere of their decease, equallie betwixt their wives, barnes, or executers, and the intrant ministers.

"Young men new come from schooles sall be onlie promoted to benefices and stipends of the lowest degree; and the eldest, and of greatest learning, judgement, and experience, sall be promoved or translated to the highest ranke, and so ascend gradatim, as they sall be judged and tried worthie, from three yeere to three yeere, for the better eschewing of ambition and avarice; and that the charge of the greatest congregations sall not be committed to the youngest ministers at the first, nor they preferred to the elder, of greater gravitie and judgement, at the first.

"The state of all prebendreis to be agnosced and considered, which are founded upon the tithes of the parish kirks, and which are temporall lands; to the effect, that suche prebendreis as are founded upon the tithes may accresce to the livings of the ministers serving at the kirk, and the other may be provided for the help of the schooles, in the best forme that may be devised. And alwise, the laick patronages to remain whole and undivided, except the with consent of the patron."

Commissioun was givin to Mr Andrew Hay, Mr Robert Pont Mr David Lindsey, Mr Adam Johnstoun, Johne Durie, Johne Johnstoun, Mr Johne Davidsone, Mr Johne Craig, Johne Dun cansone, and Johne Brand, or to the most part of their number to summoun the ministers delated in the thrid sessioun for their scandalous lives, and to tak triell and inquisitioun of the haynou and slanderous accusations layed against them; and what they find by triell to report to the nixt Assemblie, that order may be takin with them, as sall be requisite, for purging of the kirk.

The Assemblie giveth full power and commissioun to their lovi brethrein, Mr Robert Pont, Mr James Lowsone, Mr David Lind sey, Mr Johne Craig, Johne Duncansone, Mr Adam Johnstoun Johne Brand, Johne Durie, Mr Walter Balcalquall, to consider and advise upon the articles and petitions givin in by the king's Majestie's commissioner, in so farre as they are yitt unresolved in full Assemblie, rypelie to consult therupon, and crave the judgement of the best learned they can have; and to conceave a formall answere thereto in writt, to be presented by them to the nixt Generall Assemblie, to the effect the king's Majestie and counsel may receave a direct and solide answere thereto; as likewise, to confer, reason, communicat, upon suche articles, with suche as leaseth the king and his counsell to depute thereto, if need be: nd farther, to intimat to his Hienesse, how farre the Assemblie ath proceeded concerning the answeres to his Hienesse' articles. nd wherupon the Assemblie standeth, that his Hienesse may nderstand their willing concurrence with his Majestie's good inentioun, in establishing good policie within the kirk. The speciall aformatioun to be givin to his Hienesse and counsell sall be this: nat the Assemblie praiseth God greatlie for his Majestie's zealous nd Christian affectioun for promoving of good order within the irk; with thanks to his Hienesse for the labours which have beene akin for constitution of presbytereis, union and division of kirks, therin the Assemblie had so farre travelled, that certan presbyereis are by them erected, some platts of kirks receaved, although ot absolutlie ended, the names also of the persons the brethrein inke meete to unite and divide the kirks, in a part receaved, as cortnesse of time and presence of the commissioners would perfitt. Certan are appointed to forme the articles agreed on in onference, the advice of the Assemblie concerning directing of resentations, that they be directed to presbytereis, herewith to ave of his Hienesse, for performance of the work intended, that relaceis be dissolved.

ACTS.

As for the act made in the Assemblie holdin at Dundie, against shops, becaus some difficultie appeared to some brethrein to arise it of the word OFFICE, conteaned in the said act, what sould be eant thereby, the Assemblie, (for the most part that voted at undie were present,) to take away the said difficultie, and to eare the true meaning of the said act, declareth, that they meant sollie to condemne the whole estats of bishops, as they are now Scotland, and that the samine was the determination and contisioun of the Assemblie at that time. Some of the brethrein ske the act to have meant onlie of the spiritual function. This act maketh cleere, that their whole estat, both the spirituall and civill part, was damned.

- 2. The Assemblie ordeanneth everie eldership, in their first meeting which is to be holdin, to choose out of their number a moderator, to continue till the nixt Synodall Assemblie.
- 3. Forasmuche as abbots, commendatars, pryors, pryoresses, and bishops, provided of old under the name of ecclesiastical persons, bruike the rents and revenues of the kirk, without exercing anie spiritual function therin, devouring the patrimonie of the kirk, and daylie diminishing the rents of their benefices, the Assemblie hath determined and ordeanned, that all suche persons sall be cited by the presbytereis, to compeere before the nixt Generall Assemblie of the kirk, to submitt themselves thereto, as they will answere to the Assemblie.
- 4. For a smuche as in Assemblies preceeding, the office of readers was declared to be no ordinar office within the kirk of God, and the admissioun of them was suspended till this present Assemblie, the Assemblie, in one voice, hath concluded, that in time comming no reader sall be admitted to the office of a reader by anie having power within the kirk.
- 5. As for the Confession of Faith, latelie sett furth by the king's Majestie's proclamatioun, and subscrived by his Hienesse, the Assemblie, in one voice, acknowledgeth the said Confessioun to be a Christian, true, and sound Confessioun, to be agreed unto by such as truelie professe Christ's true religioun, and ought to be followed out uprightlie, as the samine is layed out in the said proclamatioun.
- 6. Forasmuche as travells have beene takin in framing the Policie of the Kirk, and diverse sutes have beene made to the magistrat for approbatioun therof, which albeit yitt have not takin the happie effect which good men would wishe; yitt, that the posteritie may judge weill of the present age, and of the meaning of this kirk, the Assemblie hath concluded, that the Booke of Policie; agreed to in diverse Assembleis before, sall be registred in the Acts of Assemblie, and remain therin ad perpetuam rei memoriam, and the copeis therof to be takin by everie presbyterie.

Seing the Booke of Policie was agreed unto in the first Assemblie, holdin anno 1578, and inserted in the Register of this Assemblie, I thought good to sett down the names of suche commissioners as were present at the Generall Assembleis, from the Assemblie holdin in Aprile, anno 1578. THE SECOND BUIK OF DISCIPLINE, OR HEIDIS AND CONCLUSIONES OF THE POLICIE OF THE KIRK.

CHAP. I.

Of the Kirk and Policie thereof in generall, and quherein it is different from the Civill Policie.

- 1. The kirk of God is sumtymes largelie takin for all them that professe the Evangill of Jesus Christ, and so it is a company and ellowship not onely of the godly, but also of hypocrites professing dwayis outwardly ane true religion. Uther tymes it is takin for the godlie and elect onlie, and sometymes for them that exerce piritual function amongis the congregation of them that professe the truth.
- 2. The kirke in this last sense hes a certane power grantit be dod, according to the quhilk it uses a proper jurisdiction and government, exerciseit to the confort of the haill kirk. This power celesiasticall is an authoritie granted be God the Father, throw he Mediator Jesus Christ, unto his kirk gatherit, and having the round in the Word of God; to be put in execution be them, unpulson the spirituall government of the kirk be lawfull calling committit.

VOL. III. 2 L

- 3. The policie of the kirk flowing from this power, is an order or forme of spirituall government, quhilk is exercisit be the members appoyntit thereto be the Word of God; and therefore is gevin immediatly to the office-beararis, be quhom it is exercisit to the weile of the haill bodie. This power is diverslie usit; for sumtyme it is severally exercisit, chiefly by the teacharis, sumtyme conjunctly, be mutuall consent of them that beir the office and charge, efter the forme of judgement. The former is commonly callit potestas ordinis, and the uther potestas jurisdictionis. These two kinds of power have both one authority, one ground, one finall cause, but are different in the manner and forme of execution, as is evident be the speiking of our Master in the 16th and 18th of Matthew.
- 4. This power and policie ecclesiasticall is different and distinct in the awin nature from that power and policie quhilk is callit the civill power, and appertenis to the civill government of the common welth; albeit they be both of God, and tend to one end, if they be rightlie usit, to wit, to advance the glorie of God, and to have godlie and gud subjectis.
- 5. For this power ecclesiasticall flowes immediatlie from God, and the Mediator Jesus Christ, and is spirituall, not having a temporall heid on earth, bot onlie Christ, the onlie spirituall King and Governour of his kirk.
- 6. It is a title falslie usurpit by Antichrist to call himselfe Heid of the kirk, and aucht not to be attribute to angel nor man, of what estait that ever he be, saving to Christ, the onlie Heid and Monarch of the kirk.
- 7. Therefore this power and policie of the kirk sould leane upon the Word immediatlie, as the onlie ground thereof, and sould be tane from the pure fountaines of the Scriptures, the kirk hearing the voyce of Christ, the onlie spirituall King, and being rewlit be his lawes.
- 8. It is proper to kings, princes, and magistrates, to be callit lordis, and dominators over their subjectis, whom they govern civilly; bot it is proper to Christ onlie to be callit Lord and Master in the spiritual government of the kirk: and all uthers that bearis office therein aucht not to usurp dominion therein, nor be callit lordis, bot onlie ministeris, disciples, and servantis. For it is Christis proper office to command and rewll his kirk universall, and every particular kirk, throw his Spirit and Word, be the ministrie of men.

- 9. Notwithstanding, as the ministeris and uthers of the ecclesiasticall estait ar subject to the magistrat civill, so aught the person of the magistrat be subject to the kirk spiritually, and in ecclesiasticall government. And the exercise of both these jurisdictiones cannot stand in one person ordinarlie. The civill power is callit the Power of the Sword, and the uther the Power of the Keyes.
- 10. The civill power sould command the spiritual to exercise and doe their office according to the Word of God: The spiritual rewlaris sould require the Christian magistrate to minister justice, and punish vyce, and to maintaine the libertie and quietness of the kirk within their boundis.
- 11. The magistrate commandes externall thingis for externall beace and quyetnes amongis the subjects: The minister handles externall thingis onlie for conscience, cause.
- 12. The magistrat handles externall things onlie, and actions one befoir men: Bot the spiritual rewlar judges both inward afectionis and externall actionis, in respect of conscience, be the Word of God.
- 13. The civill magistrat craves and gettis obedience be the word, and uther externall meanis: Bot the ministeris be the spiritual sword, and spirituall meanis.
- 14. The magistrat neither aucht to preich, minister the sacramentis, nor execute the censuris of the kirk, nor yet prescryve any well how it sould be done; but command the ministeris to obrve the rewll commandit in the Word, and punish the transgresmuris be civill meanes: The ministeris exerce not the civill jurisctioun, but teich the magistrat how it sould be exercit according the Word.

15. The magistrat aucht to assist, mentain, and fortifie, the jurisdiction of the kirk. The ministeris sould assist their princes in all thingis agreiable to the Word, providing they neglect not their awin charge be involving themselfis in civill affairis.

Finally, as ministeris are subject to the judgement and punishment of the magistrat in externall things, if they offend; so aucht the magistratis to submit themselfis to the discipline of the kirk, gif they transgresse in matteris of conscience and religioun.

CHAP. II.

Of the Pairtes of the Policie of the Kirk, and Persons or Officebeiraris to whom the Administration is committit.

- 1. As in the civill policie the haill common welth consistis in them that ar governours or magistratis, and them that ar governit or subjects; so in the policie of the kirk sum ar appointit to be rewlaris, and the rest of the members thereof to be rewlit and obey, according to the Word of God and inspiratioun of his Spirit, alwayis under one heid and chiefe governour, Jesus Christ.
- 2. Againe, the haill policie of the kirk consisteth in three things, viz. in doctrine, discipline, and distribution. With doctrine is annexit the administratioun of sacramentis. And according to the pairtes of this division, arisis a threfald sort of office-beiraris in the kirk, to wit, of ministeris or preachers, eldaris or governours, and deaconis or distributeris.
- 3. And all these may be callit be ane generall word, ministers of the kirk. For albeit the kirk of God be rewlit and governit be Jesus Christ, who is the onlie King, Hie Priest, and Heid thereof, yit he use is the ministry of men, as ane most necessar middis for this purpose. For so he hes from tyme to tyme, befoir the Law, under the Law, and in the tyme of the Evangell, for our great comfort raisit up men indewit with the giftis of his Spreit, for the spirituall government of his kirk, exercising be them his awin power, throw his Spreit and Word, to the beilding of the same.

- 4. And to take away all occasion of tyrannie, he willis that they sould rewl with mutuall consent of brether, and equality of power, every one according to thair functiones.
- . 5. In the New Testament, and tyme of the Evangell, he has usit the ministry of the apostles, prophetis, evangelistes, pastouris, and doctoris, in the administration of the Word; the elderschip for gude order, and administration of discipline; the deaconschip to have the cure of the ecclesiasticall gudis.
- 6. Sum of thir ecclesiasticall functiones ar ordinar, and sum extraordinar or temporarie. There be three extraordinar functiones: the office of the apostle, of the evangelist, and of the prophet, quhilkis ar not perpetuall, and now have ceisit in the kirk of God, except quhen He pleasit extraordinarly for a tyme to steir sum of them up againe. There are foure ordinarie functiones or offices in the kirk of God: the office of the pastor, minister, or bishop; the doctor; the presbytar or eldar; and the deacon.
- 7. Thir offices ar ordinar, and aucht to continue perpetually in the kirk, as necessar for the government and policie of the same, and no moe offices aucht to be receivit or sufferit in the trew kirk of God, establishit according to his Word.
- 8. Therefore, all the ambitious titles inventit in the kingdome of Antichrist, and in his usurpit hierarchie, quhilkis ar not of ane of these foure sorts, togither with the offices depending thereupon, in ane word, aucht all utterlie to be rejectit.

CHAP. III.

How the Persones that beir Ecclesiasticall Functiones ar admitted to thair Office.

- 1. Vocation or calling is common to all that sould beir office within the kirk, quhilk is a lawfull way, be the quhilk qualifiet persones are promotit to any spiritual office within the kirk of God. Without his lawful calling it was never leisum to any person to medle with my function ecclesiasticall.
 - 2. There are twa sorts of calling; ane extraordinar, be God himself immediatlie, as war the prophetis and apostiles, quhilk in kirks establishit, and well already reformit, hes no place.

- 3. The uther calling is ordinar, quhilk, besydes the calling of God, and inward testimonie of a gude conscience, hes the lawfull approbation and outward judgement of men, according to Godis Word, and order establishit in his kirk. Nane aucht to presume to enter in any office ecclesiasticall without he have this testimony of a good conscience before God, who only knaws the hartis of men.
- 4. This ordinar and outward calling hes twa parts, election and ordination. Election is the chusing out of a person or persons maist abile to the office that vaikes, be the judgement of the elderschip and consent of the congregation to whom the person or persons beis appointed. The qualities in generall requisite in all them wha sould beir charge in the kirk, consist in soundness of religion and godlines of lyfe, according as they ar sufficiently set furth in the Word.
- 5. In the order of election it is to be eschewit that na person be intrusit in ony of the offices of the kirk contrar to the will of the congregation to whom they ar appointed, or without the voce of the elderschip. Nane aucht to be intrusit, or enterit in the places alreadie plantit, or in any rowme that vaikes not, for any warldlie respect: and that quhilk is callit the benefice aucht to be nothing else but the stipend of the ministers that ar lawfullie callit and electit.
- 6. Ordinatione is the separatione and sanctifying of the persone appoint of God and his kirk, eftir he be weill tryit and fund qualifiet. The ceremonies of ordinatione are fasting, earnest prayer, and imposition of hands of the elderschip.
- 7. All thir, as they must be raisit up be God, and be him made able for the wark quhairto they ar callit; so aucht they knaw their message to be limitit within God's Word, without the quhilk bounds they aucht not to passe. All thir sould tak these titils and names onlie (leist they be exaltit and puft up in themselfis) quhilk the Scriptures gevis unto them, as these quhilks import labour, travell, and wark; and ar names of offices and service, and not of idleness, dignitie, warldlie honour, and preheminence, quhilk be Christ our Maister is expreslie reprovit and forbidden.

8. All these office-beararis sould have their awin particular flockis amongst whom they exercise their charge; and sould mak residence with them, and tak the inspection and oversicht of them, everie ane in his vocation. And, generallie, thir twa things aucht they all to respect, the glorie of God, and edificing of his kirk, in discharging their dewties in their callings.

CHAP. IV.

Of the Office-beararis in particular; and, first, of the Pastoris or Ministeris.

- 1. Pastors, bischops, or ministers, ar they wha ar appointit to particular congregationes, quhilk they rewll be the Word of God, and over the quhilk they watch. In respect whairof sumetymes they ar callit pastors, becaus they feid their congregation; sumetymes episcopi, or bischops, because they watch over their flock; sumetymes ministers, be reason of their service and office; and sumetymes also presbyteri, or seniors, for the gravity in manners quhilk they aucht to have in taking cure of the spirituall government, quhilk aucht to be most deir unto them.
- 2. They that are callit unto the ministrie, or that offer themselfis thereunto, aucht not to be electit without ane certain flock be assignit unto them.
- 3. Na man aucht to ingyre himselfe, or usurpe this office, without lawfull calling.
- 4. They that ar anis callit be God, and dewlie electit be man, eftir that they have anis accept the charge of the ministrie, may not leive their functions. The desertours sould be admonishit; and, in case of obstinacie, finallie excommunicate.
- 5. Na pastor may leive his flock without licence of the provincial or national Assemblie; quhilk gif he do, eftir admonition not obeyit, let the censures of the kirk stryke upon him.
 - 6. Unto the pastor apperteinis teaching of the Word of God, in season and out of season, publicklie and privatelie; alwayes travelling to edifie and discharge his conscience, as God's Word prescryves to him.

- 7. Unto the pastor onlie apperteins the administration of the Sacramentis, in lyke manner as the administration of the Word: for baith ar appointit be God as meanes to teach us; the ane be the ear, and the uther be the eyes and uther senses, that be baith, knawledge may be transferrit to the mynde.
- 8. It apperteinis, be the same reason, to the pastor to pray for the people, and namely, for the flock committed to his charge; and to blesse them in the name of the Lord, who will not suffer the blessings of his faithful servants to be frustrat.
- 9. He aucht also to watch over the manners of his flock, that the better he may apply the doctrine to them, in reprehending the dissolute persons, and exhorting the godlie to continue in the feir of the Lord.
- 10. It apperteines to the minister, eftir lawfull proceeding be the elderschip, to pronunce the sentence of binding and lowsing upon any person, according unto the power of the keyes grantit unto the kirk.
- 11. It belongs to him lykewyse, eftir lawfull proceeding in the matter be the elderschip, to solemnizate mariage betwixt them that ar to be joynit therein; and to pronounce the blessing of the Lord upon them that enter in that holie band in the feir of God.
- 12. And, generallie, all publick denunciations that ar to be made in the kirk before the congregation, concerning the ecclesiastical affaires, belong to the office of a minister; for he is as messenger and herauld betwix God and the people in all these affairs.

CHAP. V.

Of Doctors and thair Office; and of the Schoolis.

1. Ane of the two ordinar and perpetual functions that travell in the Word is the office of the doctor, quha also may be callit prophet, bischop, elder, catechizar, that is, teicher of the Catechisme, and rudiments of religione.

- 2. His office is to open up the mynde of the Spirit of God in the Scriptures simplie, without sic applications as the minister usis; to the end that the faithfull may be instructit, and sound doctrine teichit, and that the purity of the Gospell be not corruptit throw ignorance or evill opinions.
- 3. He is different from the pastor not onelie in name, but in dizersity of gifts. For to the doctor is givin the word of knawledge, to open up, be simple teiching, the mysteries of faith; to the pastor, the gift of wisedome, to apply the same, be exhortation, to the manaers of the flock, as occasion craveth.
- 4. Under the name and office of a doctor, we comprehend also he order in schooles, colledges, and universities, quhilk hes bene com tyme to tyme carefullie maintainit, als weill amang the Jewes nd Christians as amangs the prophane nations.
- 5. The doctor being an elder, as said is, sould assist the pastor the government of the kirk, and concurre with the elders, his rethren, in all assemblies, be reason the interpretation of the Word publik is onlie judge in ecclesiastical matters) is committit to his large.
- 6. Bot to preich unto the people, to minister the sacraments, id to celebrate mariages, perteines not to the doctor, unlesse he utherwyse orderlie callit. Howbeit, the pastor may teich in the hoolis, as he wha hes also the gift of knawledge oftentimes meit erefore, as the examples of Polycarpus and uthers testifie.

CHAP. VI.

Of Elders and their Office.

- 1. The word eldar in the Scripture sumetyme is the name of $\delta$, sumetyme of office. When it is the name of an office, sumeten it is taken largely, comprehending als weill the pastors and $\delta$ tors, as them who are callit seniors or elders.
 - 2. In this our division, we call these elders whom the Apostles call presidents or governours. Their office as it is ordinar, so is it petuall, and alwayes necessar in the kirk of God. The elderse is a spiritual function, as is the ministrie. Eldaris anis lawfu callit to the office, and having gifts of God meit to exercise same, may not leive it again. Albeit sic a number of eld may be chosen in certane congregations, that ane pairt of the may reliefe anuther for a reasonable space, as was among the vites under the law in serving of the Temple. The number of eldars in every congregation cannot weill be limitit, but sould according to the bounds and necessitie of the people.

- 3. It is not necessar that all elders be also teichars of the Wo albeit chiefly they aucht to be sic, and swa ar worthie of double nour. What manner of persons they aucht to be, we referre it the expresse Word of God, and, namely, the Canons written be Apostle Paul.
- 4. Their office is, als weill severallie as conjunctlie, to watch ligently upon the flock committit to their charge, baith public and privately, that na corruption of religion or manners enter the in.
- 5. As the pastors and doctors sould be diligent in teiching a sawing the seed of the Word, so the elders sould be cairfull in seing the fruit of the same in the people.
- 6. It apperteines to them to assist the pastor in examination them that cumis to the Lord's Table: Item, in visiting the sick.
- 7. They sould cause the actes of the Assemblies, als weill p ticular as provinciall or generall, to be putt in execution cai fullie.
- 8. They sould be diligent in admonishing all men of their de tie, according to the rewl of the Evangell. Things that they cannot correct be privat admonitions, they sould bring to the asseblie of the elderschip.
- 9. Their principall office is to hald assemblies with the past and doctors, (who ar also of thair number,) for establishing of grordor, and execution of discipline. Unto the quhilks assemblies persones ar subject that remain within thair bounds.

CHAP. VII.

Of the Eldarschips, and Assemblies, and Discipline.

- 1. Elderschips and assemblies are commonlie constitute of pastors, doctors, and sic as we commonlie call elders, that labour not in the Word and doctrine, of quhom, and of whais severall power, less bene spokin.
- 2. Assemblies ar of four sortis. For aither ar they of particular kirks and congregations, ane or ma, or of a province, or of ane haill nation, or of all and divers nations professing one Jesus brist
- 3. All the ecclesiastical assemblies have power to convene lawully togidder for treating of things concerning the kirk, and pereining to thair charge. They have power to appoynt tymes and laces to that effect; and at an meiting to appoynt the dyet, time, and place, for another.
- 4. In all assemblies ane moderator sould be chosen, by common onsent of the haill brethren convenit, who sould propone matters, ather the votes, and cause gude order to be keipit in the assemies. Diligence sould be taken, chiefly be the moderator, that one ecclesiasticall things be handlit in the assemblies, and that there as medling with ony thing perteining to the civill jurisdiction.
- 5. Every assembly hes power to send furth from them of their vin number, ane or moe visitours to sie how all things beis rewin the bounds of thair jurisdiction. Visitation of mae kirks is na dinar office ecclesiastick in the person of ane man, naither may ce name of a bischop be attribute to the visitor onlie, naither is necessar to abyde alwayes in ane man's person; but it is the ret of the elderschip to send out qualifeit persons to visit pro reserved.
- 6. The finall end of all assemblies is, first, to keip the religion 1 doctrine in puritie, without error and corruption; next, to keip the nelines and gude order in the kirk.
 - 7. For this order's cause, they may make certane rewls and constitutions apperteining to the gude behaviour of all the members the kirk in thair vocation.

- 8. They have power also to abrogate and abolish all statutes a ordinances concerning ecclesiasticall matters that are found a some and uprofitable, and agrie not with the tyme, or ar abusit the people.
- 9. They have power to execute ecclesiastical discipline and prishment upon all transgressors and proud contemners of the growder and policie of the kirk; and swa, the haill discipline is thair hands.
- 10. The first kynde and sort of assemblies, although they within particular congregations, yet they exerce the power, a thoritie, and jurisdiction, of the kirk with mutuall consent, and the fore beir sumtyme the name of the kirk. When we speik of telders of the particular congregations, we mein not that every p ticular parish kirk can, or may have, their awin particular eld schips, specially to landwart; bot we think thrie or four, mae fewar, particular kirks, may have ane common elderschip to them a to judge thair ecclesiasticall causes. Albeit this is meit, that some the elders be chosen out of every particular congregation, to eccurre with the rest of their brethren in the common assemblie, a to take up the delations of offences within their awin kirks, a bring them to the Assemblie. This we gather of the practise the primitive kirk, where elders, or colleges of seniors, were constute in cities and famous places.
- 11. The power of thir particular elderschips is to give dilige labours in the bound committit to thair charge, that the kirks keipit in gude order; to inquire diligently of nauchtie and unrupersons, and to travell to bring them in the way againe, aither admonition, or threatning of God's judgements, or be correction.
- 12. It pertains to the elderschip to take heid that the Word God be purely preichit within their bounds, the sacraments right ministrat, the discipline rightly mantenit, and the ecclesiastic gudes uncorruptlie distributit.
 - 13. It belangs to this kynde of assembly, to cause the ordinance nade be the assemblies, provinciall, nationall, and generall, to be ceipit, and put in execution; to mak constitutions quhilk concerne of agémou in the kirk, for the decent order of these particular kirks where they governe; provyding they alter no rewls made by the general or provinciall assemblies, and that they mak the provinciall ssemblies foresein of these rewls that they sal mak, and abolish them that tend to the hurt of the same.

- 14. It hes power to excommunicat the obstinat.
- 15. The power of election of them who beir ecclesiasticall charges erteines to this kynde of assemblie, within thair awin bounds, eing well erectit, and constitute of many pastors and elders of sufcient abilitie.
- 16. By the like reason their deposition also perteins to this kynde assemblie, as of them that teich erronious and corrupt doctrine; at be of sclanderous lyfe, and, efter admonition, desist not; that gine to schisme or rebellion against the kirke, manifest blashemie, simonie, corruption of brybes, falsett, perjurie, whoredome, ift, drunkennes, feghting worthy of punishment be the law, usual, dancing, infamie, and all uthers that deserve separation fra the rk: these also who are fund altogither unsufficient to execute eir charge sould be deposit; quhairof uther kirks wald be adversit, that they receive not the persons deposit.
- 17. Yet they aucht not to be deposit wha, throw age, sicknes, uther accidents, become unmeit to do thair office; in the quhilk se their honour sould remain to them, their kirks sould mantein em; and uthers aucht to be provedit to do thair office.
- 118. Provinciall assemblies we call lawful conventions of the pasrs, doctors, and uther eldaris of a province, gatherit for the comton affaires of the kirkes thereof, quhilk also may be callit the sufference of the kirk and brethren.
- 19. Thir assemblies are institute for weighty matters, to be intait be mutuall consent and assistance of the brethren within the pvinces, as neid requyres.
- 20. This assemblie hes power to handle, order, and redresse, all a ngs omittit or done amisse in the particular assemblies. It hes power to depose the office-beirers of that province for gude and jucauses deserving deprivation. And, generallie, this assemblies hat the haill power of the particular elderschips whairof they are electit.

21. The nationall assemblie, quhilk is generall to us, is a lawficonvention of the haill kirks of the realm or nation, where it is use and gatherit for the common affaires of the kirk; and may be call the generall eldership of the haill kirk within the realme. Nane subject to repaire to this assemblie to vote bot ecclesiasticall persons, to sic a number as shall be thocht gude be the same assemblicated not excluding uther persons that will repaire to the said assemblicated propone, heir, and reason.

22. This assemblie is institute, that all things aither omittit done amisse in the provinciall assemblies may be redressit at handlit; and things generally serving for the weill of the haill bod of the kirk within the realme may be foirsein, intreatit, and s furth to Godis glorie.

23. It sould tak cair that kirks be plantit in places quhair the are not plantit. It sould prescryve the rewll how the uther twkynds of assemblies sould proceid in all things.

24. This assemblie sould tak heid that the spirituall jurisdiction and civill be not confoundit to the hurt of the kirk: that the patr monie of the kirk be not diminishit nor abusit; and, generallie, concerning all weighty affaires that concerne the weill and gude order of the haill kirks of the realm, it aucht to interpone authoritithairto.

25. There is, besydes these, an uther mair generall kynde cassemblie, quhilk is of all nations and estaits of persons within the kirk, representing the universall kirk of Christ; quhilk may be callit properlie the Generall Assemblie or Generall Councell of the haill Kirk of God.

These assemblies were appoyntit and callit together, speciall when ony great schisme or contraversie in doctrine did aryse in th kirk; and wer convocat at command of godlie emperours being for the tyme, for avoiding of schismes within the universal Kirk of od; quhilk, because they apperteine not to the particular estait of ne realme, we ceis further to speik of them.

CHAP. VIII.

Of the Deaconis and thair Office, the last ordinar Function in the Kirk.

- 1. The word Διάκονος sumtymes is largely takin, comprehending I them that beir office in the ministrie and spiritual function in e kirk. Bot now, as we speik, it is taken only for them unto nom the collection and distribution of the almes of the faithfull, decelesiastical gudes, does belang.
- 2. The office of the deacon, sa takin, is an ordinar and perpetuall clesiasticall function in the kirk of Christ. Of what properties d dewties he ought to be that is callit to this function, we remit to the manifest Scriptures. The deacon aucht to be callit and ctit as the rest of the spirituall officers; of the quilk election as spoken befoir.
- 3. Thair office and power is to receave and to distribute the haill tilesiasticall gudes unto them to whom they ar appoyntit. This by aucht to do according to the judgement and appoyntment of presbyteries or elderschips, (of the quhilk the deacons ar not,) at the patrimonie of the kirk and puir be not convertit to private n's usis, nor wrangfullie distributit.

CHAP. IX.

Of the Patrimonie of the Kirk, and Distribution thairof.

Be the patrimonie of the kirk we mein whatsumever thing is a bene at ony time before, or shall be in tymes coming, gevin, on the consent or universall custome of countries professing the C istian religion, applyit to the publique use and utilitie of the is. Swa that under this patrimonie we comprehend all things gen, or to be gevin, to the kirk and service of God, as lands, biggins, possessions, annual-rents, and all sic lyke, wherewith the kirk is dotit, aither be donations, foundations, mortifications, or on uther lawfull titles, of kings, princes, or ony persons inferiour them; togither with the continual oblations of the faithfull. We comprehend also all sic things as be lawis, or custome, or use countries, hes bene applyit to the use and utilitie of the kirk; of the quhilk sort ar teinds, manses, gleibs, and sic lyke, quhilks, be commo and municipall lawis and universall custome, ar possessit be the kirl

- 2. To tak ony of this patrimonie be unlawfull meinis, and convert it to the particular and profane use of ony person, we hald ane detestable sacriledge befoir God.
- 3. The gudes ecclesiasticall aucht to be collectit and distribut be the deacons, as the Word of God appoynts, that they who be office in the kirk be providit for without cair or solicitude. In the Apostolicall Kirk the deacons wer appoyntit to collect and distribute quhatsumevir was collectit of the faithfull to be distribute up to the necessitie of the saincts, sa that nane lackit amang the fait full. These collections war not onlie of that quhilk was collectit manner of almes, as sume suppose, but of uther gudes, moveable and unmoveable, of lands and possessions, the price quhairof we brocht to the feit of the Apostles. This office continuit in the decons' hands, quha intromettit with the haill gudes of the kirk, and whill the estate therof was corruptit be Antichrist, as the a cient canons beir witnes.
- 4. The same canons mak mention of ane fourfald distribution the patrimonie of the kirk, quhairof ane part was applyit to the pastor or bischop for his sustentation and hospitalitie; anuther the elders and deacons, and all the clergie; the third to the pusick persons, and strangers; the fourth to the uphald and uther faires of the kirk, speciallie extraordinar: We adde hereunto tachules and schuile maisters also, quhilk aucht and may be we susteinit of the same gudes, and ar comprehended under the clerging To wham we joyn also clerks of assemblies, als weill particular generall; syndicks or procutors of the kirk affaires, takers uppsalmes, and sic lyke uther ordinar officers of the kirk, sa far as the ar necessar.

CHAP, X.

Of the Office of a Christian Magistrat in the Kirk.

- 1. Although all the members of the kirk be halden every ane in their vocation, and, according therto, to advance the kingdom of Jesus Christ, sa far as lyis in their power; yit chiefly Christian princes, and uther magistrates, ar halden to do the same: For they ar callit in the Scripture nourishers of the kirk, for sameikle as be them it is, or at least aucht to be, manteinit, fosterit, uphalden, and defendit agains all that wald procure the hurt thereof.
- 2. Sua it perteins to the office of a Christian magistrat to assist and fortifie the godly proceedings of the kirk in all behalfes; and namely, to sie that the publique estait and ministrie thereof be manteinit and susteinit as it apperteins, according to Godis Word.
- 3. To sie that the kirk be not invadit nor hurt be false teichers and hyrelings, nor the rownes therof be occupyit be dumb dogs, or idle bellies.
- 4. To assist and manteine the discipline of the kirk, and punish hem civilly that will not obey the censure of the same; without onfounding alwayis the ane jurisdiction with the uther.
- 5. To sie that sufficient provision be made for the ministrie, the chules, and the puir; and if they have not sufficient to awaite upon neir charges, to supplie their indigence even with their awin rents, neid require; to hald hand, als weill to the saving of their perms from injurie and opin violence, as to their rents and possessons, that they be not defraudit, robbit, or spuilziet therof.
- 6. Not to suffer the patrimony of the kirk to be applyit to prone and unlawful uses, or to be devorit be idle bellies, and sic as we na lawfull function in the kirk, to the hurt of the ministry, hules, puire, and other godlie uses, quhairupon the same aucht be bestowit.
- 7. To mak lawis and constitutions agreeable to God's Word, for vancement of the kirk and policie therof, without usurping onie ing that perteins not to the civil sword, bot belangs to the offices that ar meirlie ecclesiasticall; as is the ministrie of the Word and sacramentis, using of ecclesiasticall discipline, and the spirituall execution therof, or ony part of the power of the spirituall keyis, quhilks our Maister gave to the Apostles and their trew successours. And although kings and princes that be godlie, sumtymes, be their awin authority, whan the kirk is corruptit, and all things out of ordor, place ministers, and restore the trew service of the Lord, efter the examples of sum godly kings of Juda, and divers godly emperours and kings also in the licht of the New Testament; yit quhair the ministrie of the kirk is anes lawfullie constitute, and they that are placeit do thair office faithfullie, all godlie princes and magistratis aucht to heir and obey thair voice, and reverence the Majestie of the Son of God, speiking be them.

VOL. III. 2 M

CHAP. XI.

Of the present Abuses remaining in the Kirk, quhilks we desyre to be Reformit.

- 1. As it is the dewtie of the godlie magistrat to mantein the present libertie quhilk God of his mercie hes grantit to the preaching of his Word, and the trew administration of the sacraments within this realme; sa is it to provyde, that all abuses quhilks as yit remaine in the kirk be removit, and utterly takin away.
- 2. Thairfoir, first, the admission of men to Papisticall titles of benefices, sic as serve not, nor have na function in the Reformit Kirk of Christ, as abbottis, commendatoris, priories, prioriessis, and uther titles of abbyis, quhais places are now for the most pairt, be the just judgement of God, demolishit and purgit of idolatrie, is plaine abusion; and is not to receive the kingdom of Christ amangs us, bot rather to refuse it.
- 3. Siclyke that they that of auld wer callit the chapiters and convents of abbayis, cathedrall kirks, and the lyke places, serve for nathing now, but to set fewes and tacks, if ony thing be left of the kirk lands and teinds, in hurt and prejudice thairof, as daily experience teiches, and thairfoir aucht to be utterly abrogat and abording the service of the convergence of

- lishit. Of the lyke nature ar the deanes, archdeanes, chantors, subchantors, thesaurers, chancellars, and uthers having the lyke titles flowing from the Pape and canon law onlie, wha heve na place in the reformit kirk.
- 4. The kirks also quhilks ar unitit together, and joynit be annexation to thair benefices, aucht to be separatit and dividit, and gine to qualifiet ministers, as God's Word craves.
- 5. Neither aucht sic abusers of the kirk's patrimony to have vote in parliament, nor sit in councell under the name of the kirk and kirk-men, to the hurt and prejudice of the libertie thairof, and lawes of the realm made in favouris of the reformit kirk.
- 6. Meikle less is it lawfull, that ony person among these men sould have fyve, sax, ten, or twenty kirks, or mae, all having the charge of saules: and bruik the patrimonie thairof, either be admission of the prince or of the kirk, in this licht of the Evangell: for t is but mockage to crave reformation where sic lyke hes place.
- 7. And albeit it was thocht gude, for avoyding of greater inconvenientis, that the auld possessors of sic benefices quha had imbracit the trew religion, suld injoy be permission the twa pairt of the entis quhilks they possesst of befoir induring thair lyftyme; yit it is not tolerabil to continew in the lyke abuse, and geve these places and uthers benefices of new to als unmeit men or rather unmeitar, uha ar not myndit to serve in the kirk, bot leife an idle lyfe, as there did quha bruikit them in the tyme of blindnes.
- 8. And in sa farr as in the order takin at Leith, in the zeir of our ord 1571, it appeires that sic may be admittit, being found qualiet; either that pretendit order is agains all gude order, or else it tust be understood not of them that be qualifiet in worldly affaires, to serve in court; bot of sic as are qualifiet to teich Godis Word, wing their lawfull admission of the kirk.
- 9. As to bischops, if the name επισχοπος be properly takin, ey ar all ane with the ministers, as befoir was declairit. For it not a name of superioritie and lordschip, but of office and watch-
- g. Yit, because in the corruption of the kirk, this name (as hers) hes bene abusit, and yit is lykelie to be, we cannot allow the fashion of thir new chosin bischops, neither of the chapiters that ar electors of them to sic offices as they ar chosen to.

- 10. Trew bischops sould addict themselves to ane particular flock, quhilk sindry of them refuses; neither sould they usurpe lordship over their brethren and over the inheritance of Christ, as these men doe.
- 11. Pastors, in sa far as they are pastors, have not the office of visitation of mae kirks joynit to the pastorship, without it be gine them. It is a corruption that bischops sould have farder bounds to visit nor they may lawfullie. Na man aucht to have the office of visitation, bot he that is lawfullie chosin be the presbytrie thereunto. The elderschips, being well establishit, have power to send out visitors ane or mae, with commission to visit the bounds within their elderschip: And siclyke, eftir compt takin of them, either continew them, or remove them from tyme to tyme; to the quhilks elderschips they shall be alwayes subject.
- 12. The criminall jurisdiction in the person of a pastor is a corruption.
- 13. It agries not with the Word of God that bischops sould be pastors of pastors, pastors of monie flocks, and yit without anie certaine flock, and without ordinar teiching. It agries not with the Scriptures, that they sould be exemit fra the correction of their brethren, and discipline of the particular elderschip of the kirk where they shall serve; neither that they usurpe the office of visitation of uther kirks, nor ony uther function besyde uther ministers bot sa far as sall be committit to them be the kirk.
- 14. Heirfoir we desyre the bischops that now ar, either to agrie to that order that God's Word requyres in them, as the general kirk will prescryve unto them, not passing that bounds either in ecclesiasticall or civill affaires, or else to be deposit fra all function in the kirk.
- 15. We denye not, in the mein tyme, bot ministers may and sould assist their princes when they are requyrit, in all things agreiable to the Word, quhither it be in councell or parliament, outtherwayis; provyding alwayis they neither neglect their awir charge, nor, throw flatterie of princes, hurt the publick estait of the kirk. Bot, generallie, we say, no person, under whatsumever title of the kirk, and specially the abusit titles in Papistrie, of prelates, convents, and chapters, aucht to attempt ony act in the kirk's name, either in councell or parliament, or out of councell, having na commission of the reformit kirk within this realme.

16. And be act of parliament it is provydit, that the Papisticall kirk and jurisdiction sould have na place within the same, and na bischop nor uther prelate in tymes cuming sould use ony jurisdiction flowing from his authoritie. And, again, that na uther ecclesiasticall jurisdiction sould be acknawledged within this realm, bot that quhilk is, and shall be in the reformit kirk, and flowing therefra. Sa we esteim halding of chapiters in Papisticall manner, aither in cathedrall kirks, abbayis, colledges, or uther conventuall places, usurping the name and authoritie of the kirk, to hurt the patrimonie thairof, or use ony uther act to the prejudice of the same, sen the zeir of our Lord 1560, to be abusion and corruption, contrar to the libertie of the trew kirk and lawis of the realme; and thairfor aucht to be annullit, reducit, and, in all tyme cuming, all utterlie dischargit.

17. The dependances also of this Papisticall jurisdiction ar to be abolishit, of the quhilk sort is the minglit jurisdiction of the Commissars, in so far as they meddle with ecclesiasticall matters, and have na commission of the kirk thairto, but wer erectit in tyme of our soveraignis mother, whan things wer out of order. It is an absurd thing that sindry of them having na function of the kirk, sould be judgis to ministers, and depose them from their roumis. Thairfoir they either wald be dischargit to medle with ecclesiasticall matters, or it wald be limitit to them in quhat matters they night be judges, and not hurt the libertie of the kirk.

18. They also that of befoir wer of the ecclesiasticall estait in the Papis kirk, or that ar admittit of new to Papisticall titles, and now ar tollerat, be the lawes of the realme, to possess the twa pairt of thair ecclesiasticall rents, aucht not to have ony farther libertie, not to intromet with the portion assignit and grantit to them for thair lyfetymes: and not, under the abusit titles quhilks they had, to dispone the kirk rentis, set tackes and fewes thairof at thair pleisure, to the grit hurt of the kirk, and puir lawbourers that dwell-upon the kirk-lands, contrar to all good conscience and ordor.

CHAP. XII.

Certain speciall Heids of Reformation quhilk we crave.

- 1. Quhatsumever hes bene spokin of the offices of the kirk, the severall power of the office-beirars, their conjunct power also, and, last, of the patrimonie of the kirk, we understand it to be the right reformation, which God craves at our hands, that the kirk be orderit according thairto, as with that order quhilk is most agreeable to the Word. Bot because sum thingis wald be touched in particular, concerning the estait of the countrey, and that quhilk we principally seik to be reformit in the same, we have collectit them in thir heids following:
- 2. First, Seeing the haill countrey is dividit in provinces, and thir provinces again are dividit in parishes, als weill in landwart as in townes, in every parish and reasonable congregation there wald be placit ane or mae pastors to feid the flock, and no pastor or minister alwaies to be burdenit with the particular charge of mae kirks or flockes than ane alanerly.
- 3. And because it will be thocht hard to finde out pastors or ministers to all the paroch kirks of the realm, als well in landwart as in townes, we think, be the advice of sic as commission may be gine to, be the kirk and prince, parishes in landwart or small villages may be joyned twa or three, or mae, in sum places together; and the principall and maist commodious kirks to stand, and be repairit sufficiently, and qualifiet ministers placit thereat; and the uther kirks, quhilk ar not fund necessar, may be sufferit to decay, their kirk-yards alwaies beand kept for buriall places; and in sume places where neid requyres, ane parish, where the congregation is owir great for ane kirk, may be dividit in twa or mae.
 - 4. Doctors wald be appointit in universities, colledges, and uther places neidfull, and sufficiently provided for, to opin up the meining of the Scriptures, and to have the charge of schules, and teich the rudiments of religion.

- 5. As for elders, there waldbe sume to be censurers of the manners of the people, ane or mae in every congregation; bot not an assembly of eldars in every particular kirk, bot only in townes and famous places quhere resort of men of judgement and habilitie to that effect may be had; quhere the eldars of the particular kirks about may convene together, and have a common eldership and assembly place among them, to treat of all things that concernes the congregations of which they have the oversicht.
- 6. And as there ought to be men appoint to unite and divyde the parishes, as necessity and commodity requyres; sa wald there be appoint to be the generall kirk, with assent of the prince, sic men as feir God, and knaw the estait of the countries, that were able to nominate and desyne the places where the particular elderships sould convene; taking consideration of the diocesses as they were dividit of auld, and of the estait of the countries and provinces of the realme.
- 7. Lykewise, concerning provinciall and synodall assemblies, consideration were easie to be taken, how mony and in quhat places they were to be halden, and how oft they sould convene, aucht to be referrit to the libertie of the general kirk, and order to be appoyntit therein.
- 8. The nationall assemblies of this countrey, callit commonlie the Generall Assemblies, aucht alwayes to be reteinit in their awin libertie, and have their awin place; with power to the kirk to appoint tymes and places convenient for the same: and all men, als weill magistrats as inferiours, to be subject to the judgement of the same in ecclesiasticall causes, without any reclamation or appellation to ony judge, civill or ecclesiasticall, within the realm.
- 9. The libertie of the election of persons callit to the ecclesiastical functions, and observit without interruption swa lang as the kirk was not corruptit be Antichrist, we desyre to be restorit and reteinit within this realm; swa that nane be intrusit upon ony congregation, either be the prince or ony inferiour person, without lawfull election and the assent of the people owir quham the person is placit; as the practise of the apostolical and primitive kirk and gude order craves.

- 10. And because this order, quhilk God's Word craves, cannot stand with patronages and presentation to benefices usit in the Paipes kirk, we desyre all them that trewlie feir God earnestly to consider, that for swa meikle as the names of patronages and benefices, togither with the effect thairof, have flowit fra the Paip and corruption of the canon law only, in sa far as thereby ony person was intrusit or placit owir kirks having curam animarum; and for swa meikle as that manner of proceeding hes na ground in the Word of God, but is contrar to the same, and to the said libertie of election, they aucht not now to have place in this licht of reformation. And, therefore, quhasumever will embrace God's Word, and desyre the kingdome of his Son Christ Jesus to be advancit, they will also embrace, and receive that policie and order quhilk the Word of God and upright estait of his kirk craves; otherwise, it is in vaine that they have profest the same.
- 11. Notwithstanding, as concerning uther patronages of benefices that have not curam animarum, as they speak: such as ar chaplanries, prebendaries foundit upon temporall lands, annuals, and sic lyke, may be reservit unto the ancient patrones, to dispone thairupon, quhan they vaike, to schulis and bursars, as they are requyrit be act of Parliament.
- 12. As for the kirk rents in generall, we desyre the order to be admittit and mentainit amangis us, that may stand with the sinceritie of God's Word, and practise of the purity of the kirk of Christ; to wit, that as was before spoken, the haill rent and patrimonie of the kirk, exceptand the small patronages before mentionat, may be dividit in four portions: Ane thereof to be assignit to the pastor for his intertainment and hospitalitie: An uther to the eldars, deacons, and uther officers of the kirk, sic as clerks of assemblies, takers up of the psalmes, beadels and keipers of the kirk, sa far as is necessar; joyning therewith also the doctors of schules, to help the ancient foundations where neid requires: The hird portion to be bestowit upon the puir members of the faithfull, and on hospitals: The fourth, for reparation of the kirks, and uther extraordinar charges as ar profitable for the kirk; and also for the common weil, if neid require.

- 13. We desyre, therefore, the ecclesiasticall gudes to be upliftit, nd distributit faithfullie to quham they appertein, and that be the ninisterie of the deacons, to quhais office properlie the collection nd distribution therof belangs; that the puir may be answerit of neir portion thereof, and they of the ministery live without care nd solicitude; as also the rest of the treasurie of the kirk may be eservit, and bestowit to their richt uses. Gif these deacons be ectit with sic qualities as God's Word craves to be in them, their na feir that they sall abuse themselfis in their office, as the pronane collectors did of before.
- 14. Yit because this vocation appeires to many to be dangerous, t them be oblishit, as they wer of auld, to a yeirlie count to the astors and elderschip; and gif the kirk and prince think expent, let cautioners be oblishit for their fidelitie, that the kirk rents na wayes be dilapidat.
- 115. And to the effect this order may tak place, it is to be prodit, that all uthers, intromettors with the kirk rent, collectors, nerall or speciall, whether it be by appointment of the prince, or nerwaies, may be denudit of farther intromission therewith; and after the kirk rents in tyme cumming to be haillie intromettit with the ministrie of the deacons, and distribute to the use before contionat.
- 16. And also, to the effect that the ecclesiasticall rents may since to these uses for the quhilk they are to be appointit, we think i necessare to be desyrit, that all alienations, setting of fewes or the kirk of the rents of the kirk, als weill lands as teinds, in hurt and dinution of the auld rentals, be reducit and annullit, and the primony of the kirk restorit to the former auld libertie. And he ewise, that in tymes cumming the teinds be set to nane bot to the labourers of the ground, or els not set at all, as was agriet upo and subscribit be the nobilitie of before.

CHAP. XIII.

The Utilitie that sall flow fra this Reformation to all Estaites.

- 1. Seing the end of this spirituall government and polic quhairof we speik, is that God may be glorifiet, the kingdom Jesus Christ advancit, and all who are of his mysticall bodie m live peaceable in conscience; therefore we dar bauldlie affirn that all these who have trew respect to thir ends, will even conscience caus gladly agrie and conforme themselfis to this ord and advance the same, sa far as in them lyes; that their conscier being set at rest, they may be replenishit with spirituall gladnes giving full obedience to that quhilk Godis Word, and the tes monie of their awin conscience, does crave, and in refusing all c ruption contrar to the sam.
- 2. Nixt, we sall becum an example and paterne of gude a godly order to uther nations, countries, and kirks, professing t same religion with us; that as they have glorified God in our continueing in the sinceritie of the Word hitherto, without any rours, (praise be to His name;) so they may have the lyke occion in our conversation, when as we conform our selfis to that d cipline, pollicie, and gude order, quhilk the same Word and pur of reformatioun craveth at our hands: utherwise, that fearfull so tence may be justly said to us, "The servant knawing the will his Maister, and not doing it," etc.
- 3. Mairover, gif we have any pity or respect to the puir me bers of Jesus Christ, who so greatly increase and multiplie amang us, we will not suffer them to be langer defraudit of that part the patrimonie of the kirk quhilk justly belangs unto them: A by this order, if it be deuly put to execution, the burden of the sall be taken of us to our great confort, the streits sall be cleans of thair cryings and murmurings; swa as we sall na mair be skandall to uther nations, as we have hitherto bene, for not taking order with the puir amanges us, and causing the Word quhilk we profess to be evill spokin of, giving occasion of sclander to the enemies, and offending the consciences of the sempil and godly.

4. Besydes this, it sall be a great ease and commoditie to the saill common people, in relieving them of the beilding and uphalding of thair kirks, in bigging of brigges, and uther lyke publick varks. It sall be a relief to the labourers of the ground in paynent of their teinds; and, schortlie, in all these things, whereinto hey have bene hitherto rigorously handlit be them that were falslie allit kirkemen, thair tacksmen, factours, chalmerlanes, and extorionars.

Finally, to the king's Majestie and common weill of the councey this profite shall redound: that the uther affaires of the kirk eand sufficientlie provydit according to the distribution of the whilk hes bene spokin; the superplus beand collectit in the treature of the kirk, may be profitablic imployit, and liberallie beowit upon the extraordinar support of the effaires of the prince and commoun weill, and speciallie, of that part quhilk is appoyntite treparation of kirks.

Sa, to conclude, all beand willing to apply themselfis to this der, the people suffering themselfis to be rewlit according there: the princes and magistrates not beand exemit, and these that placit in the ecclesiasticall estait richtlie rewling and governing, od sall be glorifiet, the kirk edifiet, and the bounds thereof ingit; Christ Jesus and his kingdome set up, Satan and his kingme subvertit; and God sall dwell in the middis of us, to our unfort, through Jesus Christ, who, togither with the Father and Holy Ghost, abydes blessit in all eternity. Amen.

CAPTAN JAMES HIS ADVANCEMENT.

Captane James Stuart was promoted to great honours. First, he structure of Arran, but after was promoted to the Erledome of Arran. He and Lennox ruled the king and counsell as the pleased.

CONSULTATION UPON THE CONDEMNATION OF THE ERLE OF MORTON.

Upon Moonday, the 3d of May, the lords conveened in Dakeith, to consult upon the Erle of Morton's condemnatioun. A gile was a malcontent, because he saw Lennox attempt suche thing as he looked not for at his entrie, and because Arran would have takin the office of Chancellerie from him; as also, becaus the were minded to accuse Morton of Bothwell's mariage with the queene, wherof he had a warrant from the queene, which none the rest had, and he might have been convicted of the same far himself. The Lord Ruthven fell sicke, through a drinke of beathe gott in Dalkeith, so that his face and whole bodie brake of in blisters and swelling. The bruite went that he sould have been poysouned.

THE ERLE OF MORTON BROUGHT FROM DUMBARTANE.

Upon Moonday, the 22d of May, two and fiftic citicens of Ediburgh, or, as others report, seventie-eight, were charged by opproclamation to passe off the toun, and not to come neere thing by tenne myle. They feared that they sould raise trouble the toun, in time of the triell of the Erle of Morton. The Erle of Arran and Montrose, with their freinds and dependers, and sidrie men of warre both on hors and foote, went to Dumbarta upon the 23d of May, and upon the 27th of May, returned with Erle of Morton. He was committed to the custodie of a bar of men of warre, in Robert Gourlay's hous. Few or none had a cesse to him.¹

THE ERLE OF MORTON CONVICTED OF TREASON.

Upon Thursday, the 1st of June, the citicens of Edinburgh were in their armes, upon the High Street. Two bands of men of warre were placed about the Croce, two above the Tolbuith. The irst band waited upon the convoy of the Erle of Morton, from the oodging to the Tolbuith. Argile, Chief-Justice, Montrose, Suherland, Rothesse, Glencarne, Ogilvie, Maxwell, Seton, Wemes, Wauchton, Dairsie, Lochinvar, the most part his knowne enemeis, vere putt upon his assise. Manie points sould have been layed to ais charge, but they understood that fourtie dayes leasure was to granted to him to answere, because it was not thought fitt to elay. They slippe from all the rest, pro tempore et loco, except the foreknowledge and concealing of the king's father's murther. They were but forged, for the most part; or suche as no law could make him guiltie of death for them. The heeds, as they are found 1 Mr Johne Davidson's memorialls, follow:—

- 1. The conspiracie for taking of the queene, the king's father ad goodshir, the 1st of Julie, 1565 yeeres.
- 2. His passing to England upon the 20th day of Marche 1565, one after the slaughter of Seigneur Davie, and remaining there long space, traffiquing in the meane time with the Queene of ngland, and other personages, against the queene, the king's ther and goodshir.
- 3. Conspiracie preceeding the murther of the king's father, and neealing the same.
- 4. League made with the Erle Bothwell, to mainteane him, and further him to the queen's mariage, which is to be verified by e principall band.
- 5. Receaving a pensioun out of England, and avowing himself a subject to England, by assisting the Queene of England in all r causes against Scotland.
- 6. Traffiquing with Huntington, in hurt of our king's title to the owne of England.

- 7. The abstracting of the king's casualteis.
- 8. The coining of halfe merke steekes, and fourtie pennie peece after he was denuded of the authoritie, the 8th of Marche 1577.
 - 9. The passing of signatures after the said day.
- 10. The taking of the Castell of Stirline in Aprile, when he w in Lochlevin.
- 11. Traffiquing with forrane princes, speciallie the Queene England, and States of Flanders, since he was denuded of tauthoritie.
- 12. Intercommuning with Claud Hammilton in May 1579, the seige of Hammiltoun.
 - 13. Taking of the king in Stirline, in April 1580.
- 14. Conspiracie for taking of the king, and slaying of the Er of Lennox, in Halyrudhous, in November and December last b past, when his loodging was furnished with weapons.
 - 15. Commandement to furnishe Dalkeith.
- 16. Conspiracie to tak the king, and slay Lennox, the first Januar last, that is, the day after he was accused.
- 17. His meaning to break waird out of the Castell of Edinburg and when he was transported from Edinburgh to Dumbartane.
- 18. The bringing down of English forces to the borders for h releefe.
- 19. The deliverie of his treasure and jewells to James Dowgla his sonne naturall, to the maintenance of the king's rebels, ar furnishing of the English forces.

They were charged to slippe from all thir points, by a letter from the king, but the concealing of his father's murther. The Erle of Montrose, chanceller of the assise, pronounced the verdig in this sort. They had found him guiltie of art and part of concealing of the king's father's murther. Which, when the Erle of Morton heard, he repeated twise, "Art and part! art and part and then held his peace. It is reported that the assise did only convict him of concealing, finding no prooffe for art, and als littly for part, in the murther. But becaus concealing was not a word of suche weight and sound, they joyned art and part of concealing where as the commoun forme is, where there is just mater, "art, part, and concealing." Montrose and Arran devised the other orme. One standing by swore they had stollin off his head with ophistrie. He would have excepted against the Lord Seton and he Laird of Wauchton, but prevailed not; vitt it is thought they lid not much harme. He was condemned to be headed, quartered, nd drawin. About six houres at night, he was convoyed backe o his loodging. Notwithstanding the doome, it was givin to his ptioun, whether he would be content to be hanged or headed. Ie regared not, but was content of heading, as the doome was ronounced. He supped cheerfullie, and sleeped sound, till three oures in the morning. Then he wrote three or foure houres, and w down againe. In the morning he sent the letters with some of ne ministers to the king. The king would not looke upon them, or tak heed what they said; but ranged up and down the floore f his chamber, clanking with his finger and his thowme.

HE SUMME OF ALL THAT CONFERENCE WHICH WAS BETWIXT THE ERLE OF MORTON, JOHNE DURIE, AND MR WALTER BALCALQUALL, AND THE CHEEFE THINGS THAT THEY HEARD OF HIM, SO FARRE AS THEY COULD REMEMBER, THE DAY THAT THE SAID ERLE SUFFERED, WHICH WAS THE 2D OF JUNE.

The Erle of Morton's Confession.

First, Being exhorted, that he sould not be discouraged, in nsideration of that estat wherinto once he had beene in this orld, being in honour and glorie, and of the downcast wherato now he was brought, but rather, that in consideration of e glorie to come, he sould rejoice and be of good confort, his swere was, "As concerning all the glorie I had in this world, care not for it, becaus I am perswaded now that all the hours, riches, freinds, pleasures, and whatsomever I had in the orld, is but vanitie. And as concerning the estate wherunto w I am brought, I thanke God for it; and am at this point, at I am content rather to rander my life than to live, becaus know, that as God hath appointed a time for my death, so hath he also appointed the maner therof. And, therefore, sein now is the time, and this is the maner, that best pleaseth my Go to take me, I am content: and as for my life in this world, I care i not a pennie, in respect of that immortal and everlasting joy whic I looke for, and wherof I am assured."

Secundlie, Being required what was his part or knowledge i the king's murther, he answered, with this attestatioun: "As sall answere to my Lord God, I sall declare trulie all my know ledge in that mater. The summe wherof is this: First, after m returning out of England, when I was banished for Davie's slaugh ter, I came out of Wedderburne to Whittinghame, where the Erl Bothwell and I mett together; and in the yaird of Whittinghame after long commouning, the Erle Bothwell proponed to me th purpose of the king's murther; requiring what would be my par therunto, seing it was the queene's minde that the king soule be tane away, becaus, as he said, she blamed the king more o Davie's slaughter than me. My answere to the Erle Bothwel at that time was this, that I would not in anie wise meddle witl that mater; and that, for this caus, becaus that I am but newlicome out of a new trouble, wherof as yitt I am not ridde, being discharged to come neere the court by seven myles. And, there fore, I cannot enter myself in suche a new trouble again. Afte this answere, Mr Archibald Dowglas entered in conference with me, in that purpose, perswading me to agree to the Erle Both well. Last of all, the Erle Bothwell, yitt being in Whitting hame, earnestlie proponed the said mater to me again, perswading me therunto, becaus it was the queen's minde, and she would have it to be done. Unto this my answere was, I desired the Erle Bothwell to bring the queene's hand-writt unto me of that mater for a warrant, and then I sould give him an answere; otherwise I would not meddle therewith: the which warrant he never reported to me."

Then, being enquired, what would have beene his part, incace he had gottin the queen's warrant in that mater; would he, in respect therof, have meddled with suche a filthie murther as that? He answered, "If I had gottin the queen's hand-writt, and so had knowne her minde, I was purposed to have banished my self again, and turned my backe upon Scotland, whill I had seene better." Then following furth the discourse of this mater, he said, "I being in Sanct Andrewes, to visite the Erle of Angus, a little before the murther, Mr Archibald Dowglas came to me there, both with writt and credit of the Erle of Bothwell, showing unto me that that purpose concerning the king's murther was to be done, and neere a point; and to require my concurrence and assistance thereto. My answere was to him, that I would give no answere to that purpose, seing I had not gottin the queen's warrant in writt, which was promised unto me. And, therefore, seing the Erle Bothwell never reported anie warrant from the queene, I medled never farther with it."

Then, being required, whether he gave Mr Archibald anie command to be there, in his name, he answered, "I never commanded him." Being enquired, if he gave him anie counsell to it, he answered, He never counselled him, Being enquired, if he counselled him in the contrare, he answered, "I counselled him not in the contrare." Then it was said to him, that it was a dangerous thing, that his servant and depender was to passe to suche a wicked purpose, and he knowing therof stayed him not, seing it would be compted his deid. He answered, that "Mr Archibald at that time was a depender upon the Erle Bothwell, making court for himelf, rather than a depender of myne." After this, following furth he said discourse, he said, "Mr Archibald, then, (said he,) after he deid was done, shew unto me that he was at the deid doing, and came to the Kirk of Feilde yarde with the Erle Bothwell and Huntlie." Then, being inquired if he receaved in his companie Mr Archibald after the murther, answered, "I did indeid." Then t was said unto him, "Appearandlie, my lord, yee cannot justlie ompleane of the sentence that is givin against you, seing that rith your owne mouth yee confesse the foreknowledge and conealing of the king's murther, of which two points onlie yee sould not e able to abide the law." He answered, "I know that to be true, adeid. But yitt, they sould have considered the danger that the re-veeling of it would have brought to me at that time; for I durst not have reveeled it for feare of my life. For at that time, whom to sould I have reveeled it? To the queene?—she was the doer therof. I was minded, indeid, to the king's father, but I durst not for my life; for I knew him to be suche a bairne, that there was nothing told him but he would reveele it to her again. And, therefore, I durst in no wise reveele it. And howbeit they have damned me of art and part, foreknowledge and concealing of the king's murther; yitt, as I sall answere to God, I never had art or part, aid or counsell, in that mater. I foreknew, indeid, and concealed, becaus I durst not reveele it to anie creature for my life." Being inquired, why he would not reveele it sensyne to the king's Majes tie, he answered, He durst not for the same feare.

Then he said, "After the Erle Bothwell was clenged by an assise, sindrie of the nobilitie, and I also, subscrived a band with the Erle Bothwell, that if anie sould lay the king's murther to his charge, we sould assist him in the contrare. And, therefore, I subscrived to the queen's mariage with the Erle Bothwell, as sindrie others of the nobilitie did, being charged therunto by the queen's writt and command." Then being inquired, in the name of the living God, that, seing this murther of the king was one of the most filthie acts that ever was done in Scotland, and that the secreits therof as vitt have not been declared, nather vitt who were the cheefe deid-doers, whether he was wirried or blowne up in the aire; and, therefore, to declare, if he knew anie farther secreit therinto: He answered, "As I sall answere to God, I knew no more secreit in that mater than I have alreadie told, and heard by the depositions of suche as have alreadie suffered for it, which depositions are yitt extant." Being inquired, if he knew anie presentlie about the king, who were the doers of that work, by whose companie the king and commoun wealth might be hurt, he answered, "I know none, and will accuse none." Last of all, it was said to him concerning this purpose, that in respect of his owne depositioun, his part would be suspected to be more fowle nor he declared. He speared, For what reasoun? It was answered, "Becaus yee being in authoritie, howbeit yee punished others for that murther, yee punished not Mr Archibald Dowglas, whom yee knew to be guiltie therof." He answered, "I punished him not, indeid, nather durst I, for the causes before shewed."

Thridlie, Being required of the Erle of Atholl's poysoning, and if he had anie art or part therof, he answered with a great attestatioun, saying, "Lett God never be mercifull to me, if ever I knew anie thing of that mater, or heard of it, before I heard the commoun brute of the countrie." And being demanded, if he knew that Mr Johne Provand brought home anie poysoun, he answered, "I knew nothing of Mr Johne Provand but honestie;" and said, "Fy! there is over muche filthinesse in Scotland alreadie: God forbid that that vile practice of poysoning sould enter in among us. If would not for the erledom of Atholl have ather ministred poyson to him, or caused it to be ministred to him; yea, if I had been an thundreth, and he his alone, I would not have stirred a hair of his head."

Fourthlie, Being inquired, if he made anie conspiracies against the Erle of Lennox, he answered, with the like attestations as of pefore, "I never thought in my heart, nor purposed anie conspiracie against the Erle of Lennox, nor minded ever to doe him hurt, in podie or otherwise. But I was greeved, that by the moyen of the Erle of Lennox, who, as yitt, knew not the state of our countrie, nor perceaved the danger of the king's person, but being requested thereto by others, sindrie were brought home that were the king's memeis, walterers of his kingdom, and enemeis of religioun, which was an appearand danger to his person and realme; which I hoped by counsell to have helped, when the Erle of Lennox' familiarities and myne sould have beene greater."

Fyftlie, Being inquired, whether he had anie traffiquing with Engind, for transporting the king or otherwise; or if he had anie penioun of the Queen of England for that effect, he answered, "As I sall nswere to God, under the paine of condemnatioun or salvatioun, never had traffiquing with England that way. There was never one in Scotland or England, nather the queene, nor anie in her name, that ever meaned suche a thing to me, directlie or indirectlie, as to transport or putt the king in England, except it had beene for his profite and honour, and that he had beene crowned King of England. Then I would have riddin with him. to have debated his right, according to my power. And for the more cleere purgatioun of myself in this mater, I will say this: If ever I meant, directlie or indirectlie, hurt to the king, my master, but meaned alwise his weill, let God never be mercifull to me; and I sall never aske God mercie for anie thought that ever entered in my heart against the king; yea, there was nothing I regarded more in this life, than that he sould be brought up in vertue and godlinesse. And I will say more: If I had beene als carefull to serve my God, and walke in his feare, as I was to see the king's weale, I had not beene brought to this point that I am at this day. And where as they say that I was the Queen of England's pensioner, as I sall answere to God, I had never pensioun of the Queen of England in my life. And albeit they caus the brute to goe that I sould have furnished the Queen of England's souldiours, now last upon the borders, I never knew nor heard of it. And, last of all, where they alledge, that I sould have beene a traffiquer with England, I praise God I had never traffiquing with them, but for the weale of the king, his countrie, and subjects. Indeid, a yeere since, the Queen of England wrote to me a letter, the summe wherof was this: that she was informed, that sindrie Papists and enemeis to the king were familiar with him, and come in credit, which could not be without his hurt, hurt to religioun, and estat of both the realmes; and, therefore, desired my counsell how it might be remedied. Unto this I sent her an answere, the summe wherof was this: I be sought her Majestie, that she would not burthein me with suche a thing, for I would no wise meddle in that mater: She would not be content that anie of her subjects sould meddle with anie forraine prince, for the conformation of her affaires. After this answere I receaved a letter from Mr Bowes, howbeit not subscrived by the Queene of England, yitt, as I understand, sent by her moyen, and dyted by her secretar, Walsinghame, wherin was declared, that by this purpose was nothing meant ather to my hurt or to the hurt of the king, the realme, both the realmes, and subjects therof, and speciallie of the religioun. But I wrote no answere again, nor would meddle farther in that mater."

Sixtlie, Being demanded what was his part of the interprise of the Castell of Stirline, he answered, "As I sall answere to God, I knew nothing of it whill it was done. But being in Lothian, I receaved advertisement out of the Castell of Stirline, and a writting from the king, that I sould come there. And where as they say that I minded to keepe the king captive there, I never minded to keepe him in captivitie there, or in anie other place. But I understood by the king's owne speeking, that he was als free at that time as ever he was before, or desired to be for the present; and if that I had understood that his Grace would have gone to anie other place, where greater libertie had beene, I would have gone with him."

Seventhlie, It being layed to his charge that he was a great hinderer of the maters of the kirk, and authorizer of bishops and other corruptions, where he might have done muche good for the furtherance of God's glorie, and advancement of his Evangell, both in the time of his government and sensyne, his answere was, "As concerning religioun and doctrine, as it is now preached and professed in Scotland, I ever meanned alwayes weill in my heart to it; and acknowledge it to be the verie truthe of God, in so muche, that rather ere anie hurt had come to religioun, I would have beene content to have waired my life, lands, and goods, in defence of it, lyke as now I am content to dee in the constant professioun therof. But ndeid, as concerning some things which then were in questioun betuixt me and the kirk, I did therin according to my knowledge, und followed that opinioun that I thought to be best at that time, n consideratioun of the estat of all things as they were. And, therefore, howbeit I will not stand in defence of these things which hen I did, yitt I will make this protestatioun, that as I sall answere o God, I did nothing in these maters ather of contempt, malice, or otherwise: but if there was anie thing done amisse, it was of ignorance, and for laike of better knowledge; and if I had knowne better, I would have done otherwise, and was now purposed, at last, to have helped them so farre as I might."

Eightlie, Being desired, in the name of God, not to stand in defence of his owne innocencie, but plainlie to confesse his sinnes, to God's glorie; and to thinke, how ever it be that man hath done in this mater, vitt God had alwise done justlie, and that he was to suffer nothing but that wherof, before God, he was worthie and more; his answere was, "How ever it be that men have done, I remitt them to God and their owne conscience. But I acknowledge. indeid, that God hath alwise done justlie unto me, and not onlie justlie, but mercifullie also, becaus I acknowledge my self, of all sinners, to have beene one of the greatest; a filthie abuser of my bodie in the pleasures of the flesh, givin over muche to the world and pleasures therof, and suche other sinnes as God might justlie lay to my charge; and that I expressed not the fruits of my professioun in my life and conversatioun. And, therefore, I beseeke God to be mercifull to me. And, indeid, now I acknowledge the great mercie of God in this, that among all the benefites he hath bestowed upon me, this is one of the cheefe; that in this my last trouble, he hath givin me space and leasure to repent my sinnes, and to be at a point with my God. In which trouble also I have found greater confort than ever I could have found before, becaus therinto I had concluded with my self, that if God sould have spaired my life, and delivered me out of this trouble, that then I sould have cast away all the cares of the world, the pleasure of the same, and delyte of all earthlie things, and dedicat my self heerafter to serve my God, in all kinde of quietnesse and simplicitie. And if it sould please God to take me in this trouble, I had concluded to be content therewith also, being alwayes assured of the merceis of God. And, therefore, now I thanke God, that now I find me at this point, that I am rather content to dee than live, and that I sall not see the misereis to come; for I will assure you that I thinke this to be the most acceptable time that ever God could have tane me. For I perceave and foresee suche misereis and confusiouns to ensue, that I thanke God I sall not see them; and yee who feare God, and live behind me, when as yee sall see these things, yee sall wishe of God to be where I sall be, that is, with Him."

Nynthlie, Being demanded what he thought of the forme of judgement used against him, and what was his opinioun therinto; whether he thought anie wrong was done to him or not, and exhorted not to blame men without caus, he answered, "I would be werie loath to find fault, or blame the noble gentlemen that have tane upon their consciences to condemne me: but I remitt them to God and their owne consciences. Yitt I am moved to speeke somewhat freelie in this mater, and it is this: I saw so partiall dealing against me, that it had beene all alike to me, if I had beene als innocent as Sanct Stevin, as if I had beene als guiltie as Judas. For I perceaved plainlie that there was nothing but my life sought, nowsoever it had beene, which appeared in this, that no exceptioun against anie persoun that was to passe upon myne assise could availl. For I required the Erle of Argile to purge himself of pariall counsell givin to the persuer, my accuser. He purged himelf, indeid; but I know the contrare, that he gave partiall counsell o him. Likewise, the Laird of Wauchton, the Lord Seton, and suche others who were knowne to be my enemeis, notwithstanding mie lawfull exceptioun, were putt upon my assise. In consideraioun wherof, I can not be perswaded of a thing which it behoveth ne to communicat to you, and it is this: I perceave it is not my fe onlie that they are seeking; but they who are the authors of my death had some other purpose in hand, which they perceaved could not goodlie be done, except I, and suche others who favour he good caus, were tane out of the way. And, therefore, I cannot ut suspect that I have beene so handled, and suche as heerafter sall e putt at, that they may have a more patent way to doe their urne; and I pray God that yee that are to live behind me see not ne practise therof. But I feare it sore. And, therefore, in respect of his appearand danger of the commoun caus, I will give my counall to the king, my master, and wish you, in the name of God, to beare it to him. The summe wherof is this: I perceave, that they who have beene the king's unfreinds, enemeis to his crown and commoun caus, are brought in credit and in court; and they who have beene mainteaners of his crown, and good freinds, discredited and mislyked of. And siclyke, suche as are knowne to be Papists. and suspected to be enemeis to religioun, are over familiar, and in over great credit with his Majestie; which appearandlie can not be without great danger to religioun, and hurt to his estat. And therefore, I admonishe him, in the name of God, to beware with them, and putt remeed thereto; and as he hath beene broght up in the feare of God, and companie of good men, to continue therin. and not to goe backe, or ellis he hath done with it for ever. For I tell you what moveth me to speeke this: the estat of religioun. in this countrie, appeared never to be in suche danger; and that for this caus. I heare say, that there is a dealing and present traffiguing betwixt France and England, and Monsieur's mariage with the queen is heavilie to be feared. If France and England band together, and that mariage goe fordward, yee may easilie understand, that the one of them will perswade the other to their religioun. The Monsieur darre not change his religioun, if he ettle to the crown of France. And, therefore, yee must be assured he will labour to perswade the other to his religioun, and to bring Papistrie in England, which is over easie to be done, the two parts of England being Papists. If England and France band together, and both be Papists, we are left our alone: we have no league with England. And, therefore, I know what we will doe; to witt, we will cleave to the old league with France. And to band with France as France is now, and France and England being one, judge yee, in what cace sall the religioun be with us. God give the king and nobilitie wisdome to foresee the danger in time!"

Tenthlie, Being required to give his good counsell to the Erle of Angus, and to show him what was meetest to be done, seing presentlie he was in great trouble, he answered, "Truelie I darre give him no counsell. The Lord help him; for, truelie, I darre give him no counsell; and I will tell you why: to bid him come in presentlie I darre not. All men may see in what danger he is, as things goe now, if he come in. And to counsell him to bide furth I darre not; for then he sall lose the king's favour for ever. He sall tyne himself, his heritage, his whole freinds, and all. And, therefore, the best counsell I can give him is this: that he make all moyen possible to purchasse the king my master's favour again, and to see if he may have anie assurance of his life, that he may serve his God and the king truelie, and submitt himself, and all that he hath, to his Majestie's good will: for, poore man! he hath done nothing yitt but it may be mended. I say no more; but the Lord give him his Spirit, to follow that which is best."

Ellevintlie, Being required to declare what was the summe of that admonition that Johne Knox gave him before he accepted the egiment, when he came to him a little before his departure; he answered, "I sall tell you so farre as I can remember. First of all. re speared if I knew anie thing of the king's murther? I answered. ndeid I knew nothing of it. Then he said to me, 'Weill, God ath beautified you with manie benefites, which he hath not givin o everie man as he hath givin you; riches, wisdome, and freinds: nd now, is to preferre you to the government of this realme. and, therefore, in the name of God, I charge you to use all thir enefites aright, and better in times to come than yee have done 1 tymes bypast, first, to God's glorie, to the furtherance of the 'vangell, to the maintenance of the Kirk of God, and his ministrie; ixt, for the weale of the king his realme and true subjects. If yee sall doe, God sall blesse you, and honour you. But if yee pe it not, God sall spoile you of thir benefites, and your end sall ; ignominie and shame." Then being enquired if he had found is true, he answered, "I have found it, indeid; vitt, I doubt not it the Lord will be mercifull to me."

Then being inquired for what caus he held some of the nighbours Edinburgh in waird, he answered, "Surelie I meant no evill to ese men. But it was done upon this respect: we had the mater the bulyeon then in hand. I was informed that they were the aderers therof. I thought it best, at that time, to putt them in waird for a while, till that turne had beene done; and if I did the anie wrong, I crave them forgivenesse, as I forgive all men."

Being inquired, if he knew that he would be accused of this me ter before, he answered, "I was advertised of it indeid, and mighave escaped; but I would not, leaning alwise upon my innoce cie, and not supposing that they would have condemned me upo suche a thing."

Then, after this, he and we called to God together, by earne prayer; during the which prayer he shew most evident tokins the inward motioun of the Spirit of God. The prayer being ende he sayeth to us, "I thank you heartilie for your confort which ve have offered unto me; for now, indeid, is greatest mister of confort and, therefore, as yee have begunne, I beseeche you to continu with me. And, now, after I am come to the knowledge my owne sinnes, there rest onlie two things that I will crav of you: that is, first, That yee will shew to me all kinde arguments whereby I may be conforted, and hold me su upon the merceis of God; and, nixt, Seing the flesh is b fearefull and weake, that yee will confort me against the nature feare of death." Which desire we travelled to satisfie, by lor conference, which were long to rehearse in everie point. Yitt tl summe of it was this: it was said to him, that there were three things cheefelie, which might make him to be assured of the me cie of God in Christ. First, The innumerable and confortable pr mises of God's mercies conteaned in his Word, wherupon it b hoved him alwayes to leane; wherof there were some cited un him. Secundlie, The exemple of God's merceis toward his own servants, howbeit they had beene great sinners, as appeareth David, Magdalene, Peter, the theefe, &c. Thridlie, The oft e perience of God's mercie, which frome time to time he had four in his owne person, ought to assure him now, also, of this merc in the end. Unto this he answered, saying, "I know all that be true: for since I past to Dumbartan, I have read all the Fi Bookes of Moses, Josuah, the Judges, and now I am in Samwel and I will tell you what I have found there. I see there that the merceis of God are wonderfull, and he alwayes inclynned to have itie upon his owne people of Israel. For there, it appeareth, that owbeit he punished the people of Israel when they sinned, vitt, ow soone they turned to him again He was mercifull to them. and when they sinned again, vitt He punished them; and so oft as hey repented He was mercifull again. And, therefore, I am asured, howbeit I have oft offended against my Lord God, vitt he rill be mercifull to me also." Farther, in this point, it was said to im, that incace Satan would travell to discourage him, in consieration of the justice of God on the one part, and of his sinnes on ne other part, we exhorted him, by the contrare, to be of good ourage; and even, in respect of the justice of God, to be assured nat his sinnes sould not be layed to his charge, and that becaus od was just. For the justice of God will not suffer him to tak vise payment for one thing; as we know that in the commoun caling of men, he that is a just man will not crave payment of at wherof he hath beene alreadie satisfied. And, therefore, seg Christ hath alreadie satisfied for our sinnes, and payed God for e utmost farding he could crave of us, he can not lay our sinnes to our charge, being satisfied in Christ, becaus that his justice ill not suffer him to take payment twise for one thing. Unto this answered, "Truelie, that is verie good."

As concerning the naturall feare of death, we exhorted him to alwayes occupied upon the consideration of the glorie of God, e joy and felicitie of the life that is to come; and that sould the onlie way to swallow up the feare of his naturall death. e answered, "I praise God I do so."

All this being done, having in his hand a prettie treatise of the editatioun of Death, writtin by Mr Bradfurd, (which, he said, had gottin from the Ladie Ormiston, before he past in waird; til, therefore, before his passing furth, gave it to Mr James Lowne, desiring him to deliver it to the said ladie again:) having a shooke in his hand, he willed Mr Walter to read to him a peece a rof, which he did. In reading wherof, with sindrie conferences upon the thing which was read, both he and we gott great confor in so muche, as he said, "I praise God, I heare now with other eare than I heard before."

With this, being called to his disjoone, he desired us earnestly to tak part with him; as we did. He eate his disjoone with great cheerefulnesse, as all the companie saw, and as appeared in h speeking. "Now," sayeth he, "I see there is a great difference betuixt a man that is occupied with the caires of the world, an him that is free therof; and this I have found, in two nights' regoing before. For in the night before my accusation, I could ge no rest for care, becaus I knew I was to be accused the morn And, therefore, being solicite to answere to everie point that soul be laved to my charge, I could not sleepe. But this night, after I was condemned, I knew that I sould dee. I was at a point wit myself, and had no thought of the world, nor care of this life, by cast my onlie care upon God; and I praise God I never sleepe better in my lifetime nor I did this night." And (he) said to Wi liam Stewart, "William, yee can beare me record of this." Wh answered, "It is true, my lord." Then Mr Walter said to him " My lord, I will drinke to you, upon a conditioun." He answere "What conditioun?" "Upon this condition, my lord, that ye and I sall drink together in the kingdom of heaven, of that immo tall drinke, that sall never suffer us to thrist again." He answere "Truelie, I pledge you, Mr Walter, upon the same conditioun And after he had receaved the cuppe, he said to Johne Duri "Johne, I drinke to you upon the same conditioun." Who answere "I pledge you, my lord; and I am assured it sall be so." The disjoone being ended, and thanks being givin to God, he passet to his chamber again; at what time Mr James Lowsone came 1 him again, with whom he confered the substance of all thir thing again, after that we departed from him.

Then, after noone we came to him again, with sindrie of the brethrein of the ministrie, as Mr James Lowsone, Mr Robert Pon David Fergusone, Mr David Lindsey, Johne Brand, Mr James Carmichael, and Mr Johne Davidsone; whom he receaved ver ovinglie in his armes, and said to him, "Yee wrote a little booke, ndeid; but truelie I meant never evill towards you, in my pairt: orgive yee me, and I forgive you." At which speeking, the said Mr Johne was moved with teares, all thir brethrein being present. To their great confort he repeated again the cheefe substance of ll these things wherof he spake before, being demanded, point by oint; as their testification of this mater, subscrived by them at nore lenth, will declare.

Therafter he was called to his dinner. But being at his dinner. eing that the brethrein of the ministrie were informed that there as wrong report made of his confessioun to the king, and that he ould have confessed muche otherwise than he did, whereby the ing might have had a worse opinioun of him, they thought good to end down some before his suffering, to informe his Majestie of the outhe of his confessioun; as namelie, David Fergusone, Johne Jurie, and Johne Brand, who, before his death, at lenth, told the hole simple truthe of his confessioun, as it was, to the king's Mastie. At their returning again from the Abbey, his keeper regired him that he sould come furth to the scaffold. He anvered, "Seing they have troubled me over muche this day with orldlie things, I supposed they sould have givin me this one night, have advised rypelie with my God." His keeper said, "All ings are readie now, my lord, and I thinke they will not stay." e answered, "I am readie also, I praise my God." And so, a nfortable prayer being made, he passeth down to the gate, to e directlie to the scaffold. But the Erle of Arran stayed him, d broght him backe again to the chamber, and required of him, at he sould tarie till his confession might have beene putt in writt d subscrived with his owne hand, and the ministers that were esent. He answered, "Nay, my lord; I pray you trouble me no re with these things, for now I have another thing to advise on, that is, to prepare me for my God; seing now I am at a point goe to death, I cannot write in the estat that I now am in. All r honest men can testifie what I have spokin in that mater." ith which answere the Erle of Arran being satisfied, he said unto him, "Now, my lord, yee will be reconciled with me, for I have do nothing upon my particular against you." He answered, "It no time now to remember upon querells. I have no querell to yo or anie other; I forgive you and all other, as I will all to forgi me." And so therafter, with good courage, he past to the scaffol Being upon the scaffold he repeated, in few words, the substance these things which before he had confessed, except he concealed Mr Archibald Dowglas' name, and eeked some words and exhort tions upon the scaffold to the people, which he spake not befor as, namelie, he said, "I am sure the king sall losse a good serva this day." And so he exhorted the people, saying, "I testifie, b fore God, that as I have professed the Evangell which this day taught and professed in Scotland, so also now willinglie I lay do: my life in the professioun therof. And howbeit I have not walke according therunto as I ought, yitt I am assured God will be me cifull to me; and I pray all good Christians to pray for me. Ar I charge you all, in the name of God, that are professors of the Evangell, that yee continue in the true professioun, and mainteau it to your power, as I sould have done, God willing, with my land life, and all, if I had had dayes. Which if yee do, I assure yo God sall be mercifull to you. But if yee doe it not, be assured the vengeance of God sall light upon you, both in bodie and soule." A concerning all the rest of the things wherof he spake confortabl upon the scaffold, he spake them in effect, and more amplie before and, therefore, we thinke it not needfull to repeat them again.

Therefore, all his speeches being ended upon the scaffold, a confortable prayer was made by Mr James Lowsone, during the time of which prayer the Erle of Morton lay on growffel upon his factorized the place of executioun, his bodie making great rebounding with sighes and sobs, which are evident signes of the inward and mightie working of the Spirit of God; as they who were present and knew what it was to be earnestlie moved in prayer, might easilie perceave. The prayer being ended, and after that sindricame to him before his death, to be reconciled with him, who post lovinglie he receaved: And, after he had takin us all by the ands that were about him, and bidden us fareweill in the Lord, he asseth both constantlie, patientlie, and humblie, without feare of eath, to the place of executioun, and laid his craig under the axe. is hands being unbound. And therafter, Mr Walter putting him wise in minde, and crying in his eare thir words following, he ied continuallie, till his head was stricken off, "Lord Jesus, reeave my soule! In thy hands, Lord, I committ my spirit! Lord esus, receave my soule!"-which words he was speeking, even hill the axe fell on his necke. And so, what ever he had beene fore, he constantlie died the true servant of God. And how ever be that his unfreinds alledge, that as he lived proudlie, so he died oudlie, the charitable servants of God could perceave nothing in m but all kinde of humilitie in his death, in so muche, that we e assured that his soule is receaved in the joy and glorie of the avens; and we pray God, that they who are behind may learne, his exemple, to dee in the true feare of the Lord.—2d June, nno Domini 1581.

THE EXECUTION OF THE ERLE OF MORTON.

He was executed about foure houres after noone, upon Fryday the fund of June. Phairnihirst stood in a shott over against the fold, with his large ruffes, delyting in this spectacle. The Lord ion and his two sonnes stood in a staire, south-east from the loce. His bodie lay upon the scaffold till eight houres at even, at therafter was caried to the Neather Tolbuith, where it was tehed. His head was sett upon a prick, on the highest stone of gavell of the Tolbuith, toward the publict street. So ended nobleman, one of the cheefe instruments of the reformatioun eligioun; a defender of the same, and of the king in his minorial for the which he is now unthankfullie dealt with. We may see he absurd it is to committ the raines of governement to the hands childe, who cannot governe himself. In the time of his governement he sett on foot a notable work, which had beene per-fyted if he had continued regent, to witt, the drawing of our law in some certan and easie forme. It was committed to Sir Jan Balfour and Mr Johne Skeene.

ANGUS FLEETH TO ENGLAND.

The Erle of Angus departed from Hawick the same day to Calill, fearing to be apprehended by these who had procured I uncle's death, supposing they would seeke to secure themselve from revenge by taking of him. From Carlill he went to cour was lovinglie receaved, and honourablie interteaned by Queen Exabeth, in memorie of his uncle.

PHAIRNIHIRST PARDOUNED.

Upon Wednisday the 12th of Julie, the king being in Dalkei the Laird of Phairnihirst, by the Erle of Lennox his mediation gott presence in the gardin, after supper; where, sitting down up his knees, he craved pardoun for his offences; which was grant. Heere we may see there was no sincere dealing against Morton, that Phairnihirst, guiltie of more than foreknowledge and conce ing both of the king's father and his goodshir's slaughter, v spaired and receaved in credit.

LENNOX ADVANCED.

Upon Moonday the eight of August, the Erle of Lennox v proclamed solemnlie Duke of Lennox, Lord Darnlie, Lord T bowton, Dalkeith, and Tantallan, Great Chamberlane of Scotlar Commendatare of Arbrothe.

THE FORTIE-THRID GENERALL ASSEMBLIE.

The Generall Assemblie conveened at Edinburgh the 17th d of October. Mr Johne Craig was chosin Moderator. Mr Jan Lowsone, Mr Robert Pont, Mr Andrew Hay, Mr Andrew Melvill, Mr David Lindsey, Mr Thomas Smeton, Mr Alexander Arbuthnet, Mr Andrew Polwart, and David Fergusone, were chosin to be assessors to the moderator, to prepare maters to be treatted in the Assemblie.

The Assemblie sent their brethrein, Mr Adam Johnston and Johne Durie, to passe to the king's Majestie, and, in name of the Assemblie, humblie desire his Hienesse to direct some commissioner from his Grace to observe the proceedings of the Assemblie, and to stay with them. They reported this answere: His Majestie said, that, for sindrie effaires of the counsell, he could direct none till Thursday.

MR R. MONTGOMRIE ACCUSED.

Mr Walter Lindsey presented to the Assemblie the king's missive, writtin in favours of Mr Robert Montgomrie, minister at Stirline. Mr Robert was preferred to the bishoprick of Glasgow, now latelie vacand through the death of Mr James Boyd, who departed this life in Junie last. The Duke of Lennox gott the gift of the bishoprick, and presented Mr Robert. The brethrein of the Presbyterie of Glasgow were charged by Mr George Young, in the ing's name, to give their resolut answere concerning the admission of Mr Robert, the day after the presenting of the king's missive. The Assemblie directed their brethrein, Mr James Lowsone, Mr David Lindsey, Johne Durie, to his Grace, to lett his Grace unerstand that the Assemblie, conforme to his Grace's missive, hath tayed proceeding against Mr Robert Montgomrie till Fryday, nat conference may be had in that mater, as is desired; and hath opcinted Mr Robert Pont, Mr Thomas Smeton, Mr James Lowone, Mr Andrew Melvil, and Mr Alexander Arbuthnet, to conrre therupon; and requested that his Grace would use no proeding or charges against the brethrein of Glasgow, seing all the ethrein of this Assemblie take the charge upon them, and avow cir proceedings. In the meane time, the moderator, in name of VOL. III.

the Assemblie, charged Mr Robert not to depart whill the Assemblie were dissolved, and continued his summouns till Fryday. The brethrein reported answere, in the fyft sessioun, that his Grace had appointed certane commissioners to conferre with these who were appointed by the ministrie. They were sent furth, and, after certan houres, returned, and repeated the conference they had with the king's commissioners; to witt, the scope of all was; it was re quired, in cace the Assemblie damned the office of bishops, wher unto is annexed also a temporall jurisdiction, wherin the king i served, by voting in parliament, assisting in his counsell, contribut ing in taxations, and suche like, what overture they will shev whereby the king be not prejudged, by taking away of that estat For advising upon this heed, which the Assemblie thought of grea consequence, they nominated their brethrein, Andrew Ker of Fa downside, the Laird of Coldingknowes, the Laird of Carden, th Lairds of Colluthie, Braid, Morphie, Fentrie, Dalmahoy, Cowhill Carleton, Segy, the Provests of Edinburgh and Stirline, the Com missioners of Edinburgh, Stirline, Perth, Mr Andrew Hay, Mr Ar drew Polwart, Mr Johne Porterfeild, Mr William Rynd, Davi Fergusone, Mr Johne Rutherfurde, Mr David Lindsey, Mr Wi liam Edmiston, with the six brethrein appointed on the conference to conveene in the New Kirk, at two after noone, to deliberat upo this mater, and to report their judgement to the full Assemblic They reported, in the sixt sessioun, this overture, that, after lon reasouning, they had agreed thus farre, that for voting in parlie ment, assisting in counsell, commissioners from the Generall As semblie sould supplee the place of bishops; and as to the exercing civill and criminall jurisdictioun, the head bailliffes sould exerce th samine. The Assemblie allowed their judgement. In the sevent sessioun, the moderator charged Mr Robert Mongomrie not t depart from the Assemblie till his mater were tryed; which h promised faithfullie to doe. In the tenth sessioun, the offence layed verbo to Mr Robert Montgomrie his charge, and answere heard, the Assemblie ordeanned the said Mr Robert to tak the copie therof, and answere in writt, upon Tuisday, before noone.

The tenor of the accusation followeth:-

- 1. That, publictlie preaching in the kirk of Stirline, he proponed the question tuiching the circumcision of weomen; and, in the end, concluded that they were circumcised in the foreskinne of their forehead.
- 2. In Glasgow he openlie taught that the discipline of the kirk is a thing indifferent, and may stand this way or that way.
 - 3. Approving the inward calling to the ministrie, he left the outward and ordinarie calling in doubt.
- 4. He accused the ministers, that they used fallacious arguments, and captious; and that they were curious braines.
- 5. He went about, so farre as he could, to bring the original languages, Greek and Hebrew, in contempt; abusing thereto the words of the Apostle, 1 Cor. xiv., and tantinglie asking, in what schoole were Peter and Paul graduated?
- 6. To prove the corrupt estat of bishops in our time, he brought furth the exemples of Ambrose, Augustin, &c.
- 7. It is sufficient to baptize in the name of the Father onlie, or in the name of the Sonne, or the name of the Holie Ghost, becaus they are all alone God; and, to that effect, alledged the 19th of the Acts.
- 8. The maters of discipline and lawfull calling in the kirk he called triffles of policie.
- 9. He accused the ministrie of sedition and less majestie, exhorting them not to be seditious, nor to meddle with high maters; to eave off to putt on crowns, and off crowns; for if they meddle therewith anie farther, they would be reproved.
- 10. He condemned the application of Scripture to the particular maners and corruptions of men, mockinglie asking, in what scripture they may find a bishop for a thousand punds, hors, corne, and poultrie? and when they teache of love, how could they find Judas?

- 11. He oppugned the doctrine of Christ, who pronounceth that the most part are rebellious, and perish.
- 12. He denied that in the New Testament anie mentioun is made of the presbyterie or eldership.
- 13. He accused the ministers of pasquills, of grudging and murmuring, of trouble and confusion, of leing and backe-bytting, saying, "Where is it? who will doe it? What fault can they find with the court? As for my self, I find none."
- 14. The kirk being traduced by pasquills and infamous libells not onlie purged he not the kirk or himself therof, having good occasioun, but rather approved the same.
- 15. He used, in his preaching against the ministrie, the veries words of the libell east in the king's chamber against them.
- 16. This quarter of yeere bygane he hath beene negligent in doctrine, discipline, and assistance of the eldership.

The brethrein appointed to insist in the conference returned with answere, in the twelve sessioun, that certan of the king's counsell were ordeaned to conferre the morne, tuiching the bishops As to the forming of the articles, desired that the brethrein sould penne the same, and shew them to the said commissioners; requiring farther, concerning Mr Robert Montgomrie, that the Assemblie sould not proceed against him till the conference were ended. The Assemblie ordeanned the brethrein nominated before, together with Mr David Lindsey, Johne Duncansone, and William Christesone, to await upon this conference, and to conceave in writt the articles which are to be presented to the said commissioners, that the Assemblie may first judge of them. Ir this sessioun, the Assemblie, at the king's requeist, superseeded their processe against Mr Robert Montgomrie till Wednisday and, in the meane time, ordeanned their brethrein, Johne Duncansone and Johne Brand, to crave the king's Majestie, that as the Assemblie had delayed their proceedings, so his Grace would superseed anie farther proceeding with Mr Robert, concerning the bishoprick. The brethrein directed to the king's Majestie and counsell reported, in the sixteenth sessioun, that by reason of the great effaires of the king and counsell, they could gett no answere to suche things as they were directed for. In this sessioun two brethrein were appointed to warne Mr Robert Montgomrie to be present the day following, after noone.

The Commissioner of Stirline desired, in the seventeenth sessioun, the Assemblie to provide a minister for Stirline. Two were directed to Mr Robert, to crave his answere in writt, if he will remaine minister of Stirline or not; and to compeere before the Assemblie, if he may, presentlie. They reported, when they returned, he was lying in his bed, as he alledged, sicke, and if the Commissioner of Stirline would come to him he sall give them answere. As to the answere of the Assemblie in writt, answered, He receaved no ordinance in writt. The same brethrein were directed immeliatelie, with an ordinance in writt, to charge him absolutelie to inswere, under the paine of disobedience. They returned with enswere, and reported, in the eighteenth (session of) Assemblie, hat he answered, If it pleased the Assemblie, he was content to eave it, with their good will, and consent of his flocke. presented also a sermon preached by him, as an answere, in effect, o all the accusations givin in by Mr Andrew Melvill against him. The Assemblie answered to the first point, they would give him no cence to leave the kirk of Stirline; and commanded him to remaine ith his flocke there, whill he be removed by the Generall Asemblie, under paine of the censures of the kirk. As to the seind, the Assemblie admitted Mr Andrew Melvill to probatioun, ad ordeanned the officer of the kirk to warne Mr Robert to comeere the day following in the Assemblie, to heare witnesses and obatioun.

The day following, James Chisholme, the king's maister (of) sushold, compered in the Assemblie, and in his Hienesse' name sired the Assemblie to continue all farther proceedings against r Robert Montgomrie, till three or foure of that number concred with the counsell, at what time the Assemblie sould think od; not that it was his Majestie's will to stay anie good order, t that it might be done with their favour and good will. The Assemblie directed five brethrein of the ministrie to his Majestic with this answere, that the Assemblie condescendeth to delay proceeding against Mr Robert, upon these conditions following: t witt, that Mr Robert Montgomrie sould no wise attempt further concerning the acceptatioun of the bishoprick of Glasgow; that his Majestie will not use farther processe against anie of the brethrei for his admissioun; and, last, that the libertie of the kirk be not prejudged, but that the judgement of his caus perteane to them. Far ther, if conference sall be required, to reasoun and conferre heer anent, and to report again to the Assemblie. The brethrein re ported, in the twentie sessioun, this answere, that his Majestie ha receaved the articles of accusatioun givin in against Mr Rober Montgomrie verie graciouslie, and was content they proceed against him as minister. Farther, that in the heeds of religioun, he agree from his heart with the Kirk of Scotland, albeit in some heeds of policie he was not vitt resolved. As for the provisioun of th ministrie, he sould hold hand thereto. Mr Andrew Polwart re ported, that he had summouned Mr Robert at his loodging, wher he left a copie of the summouns, becaus he could not apprehen him personallie; and sought him in the Abbey, and could not ap

In the last sessioun, the Generall Assemblie giveth full powe and commissioun to their brethrein of the Presbyterie of Stirlin to summoun Mr Robert Montgomerie, minister therof, before them and to trie and examine his life and conversation, and accusatioun to be givin in theranent, with all good and possible diligence, and what they find therin, to report to the Synodall Assemblie of Lothian nixt, to whom the Assemblie giveth power to proceed against him, according to the triell and processe deduced before the said presbyterie, under the paine of disobedience. And sic lyke, charges the said Mr Robert to continue in the ministrie of the kirk of Stirline, and not to meddle with anie other office of functioun in the kirk, namelie, in aspiring or attempting to the bishoprick of Glasgow, against the Word of God and acts of the kirk, or to trouble or vexe his brethrein with his admissioun thereto, under the paine of excommunication to be led against him; wherinto, if he disobey, after triell taikin of his disobedience by the said presbyterie, the sentence of excommunication to be executed by them, with advice and concurrence of Johne Durie, David Fergusone, Johne Duncansone, and Johne Dykes. And this charge to be intimated by the Moderator of the Assemblie unto the said Mr Robert, that he pretend no ignorance therof.

MR W. BALCALQUALL COMPLEANED UPON BY THE KING.

James Melvill, gentleman of the king's chamber, presented his Hienesse' missive in the seventh sessioun, which craved triell to be takin of certan words alledged spokin by Mr Walter Balcalquall, in his sermoun latelie against his cousin, Esme Duke of Lennox, with credit to the bearer. The bearer reported, that becaus, at the last calling of Johne Durie and Mr Walter before the Privie Counsell, upon accompt of their sermons, offence was takin by the ministrie, therefore, his Grace meaned the mater to the Assemblie, willing them to trie the mater, and to tak order. The words wherat the duke was offended were these, that Mr Walter had said in pulpit, that within these foure yeeres Poprie had entered in the countrie, not onlie in the court, but in the king's hall, and was mainteanned by the tyrannie of a great champioun, who is called Grace; and if his Grace would oppone himself to God's Word, he sould have little grace.

Mr Walter craved licence to answere; the summe wherof was shortlie this: First, He praised God, that he was not accused of anie thing wherin, ather civillie or criminallie, in his life and conversatioun, he had offended the king's Majestie or his lawes, wheranto, with all reverence, and at all times, he is readie to submitt timself, as effeirs; but is accused of these things which he hath spokin publictlie in the pulpit, wherin he hath beene more plaine a reproving of vice, than some men can goodlie suffer; which is a point of his doctrine, which howbeit he heareth there called open blander, yitt he must justifie the same: That although all the kings in the earth would call it erroneous, yitt he is readie heere by good reasoun to prove it to be the verie truthe of God; and, if need require, to seale it with his blood. Secundlie, He praised God, that upon the last accusatioun, God hath givin this muche victorie to His kirk, that howbeit then it was called in questioun to whom the judgement of his doctrine sould apperteane, vitt, as then, by good reason it was concluded and promised by the king's Majestie's counsell, and commissioners appointed to conferre with the ministers in that mater, that in all times comming the triell of the ministers' doctrine sould be referred to the judgement of the Assemblie, as the onlie competent judge, so now it is performed; and for that he seeth that promise now keeped, he thanketh God, and is so muche the more willing to give his answere before their godlie wisdoms, as his competent judges in that mater, and after this maner. As concerning these things which he spake in his sermon the last Wedinsday, he spake them not quietlie, but all his brethrein, and all the Assemblie, heard them, and so can best of all others judge of the same. Wherefore, with all reverence he would submitt himself simpliciter to their godlie judgements alwise, nather being ashamed of his doctrine, nor yitt minded to give advantage to his enemeis, so farre as he may, whose purpose he knoweth against him in this mater. He will onlie crave, that the canon of the Apostle be keeped, "Against an elder receave no accusation, but under two or three witnesses." Lett anie man, therefore, according to the canon of the Apostle, stand up before them and say, he hath anie thing to accuse him of, ather in life or doctrine, and have two or three witnesses readie with him to prove the accusatioun; then he sould answere as effeirs. Seing James Melvill heard not his doctrine, and therefore could not take upon him to accuse him, he would superseed farther answere till he saw his accuser.

The Assemblie directed Mr Thomas Smeton and David Fergusone to the king with this answere, and to crave that an accuser, with two witnesses, might be had. Farther, in respect that at the last calling of Johne Durie before the Privie Counsell, for certan words alledged uttered in his sermon, order was takin by certane commissioners of the counsell, and brethrein of the Assemblie, that incace suche accusations sall fall out afterward, the kirk sall have the judgement therof, and if the king pleaseth to send anie commissioners, to be present at the triell, they sould see and marke their proceedings; therefore, desired his Majestie to send commissioners to see this mater tried, seing the Assemblie is most willing to trie the same. Mr Walter, in the fyfteenth sessioun, craved the like again, or ellis, seing he spake nothing but publictlie, in ace of the Assemblie, that they would give their judgement and leterminatioun in the mater; submitting himself alwise reverently o their wisdoms. The Assemblie directed Mr David Lindsey and Mr Thomas Smeton to his Majestie vitt again, to crave that the ccuser, with his two witnesses, might be brought before the Asemblie; as also, if it be his Hienesse his pleasure to send some ommissioners from the counsell to observe the proceedings of the Assemblie therin. The king and counsell were so occupied, that he brethrein directed gott no answere. Howbeit the Assemblie estified their willingnesse to trie orderlie the accusatioun, vitt, for atisfactioun of the king's Majestie, and removing of all slander nat may arise heerby, certan commissioners were directed from ne Assemblie to the particular kirk of Edinburgh, to require of 1em, if in this sermon, which was had upon Wedinsday was eight eyes, by their minister, Mr Walter Balcalquall, anie of them had und, or findeth anie word uttered, which was erroneous, scandal-18, or offensive. A brother of the sessioun of the kirk reported eir answere, that they heard nothing ather erroneous, scandalous, offensive in his sermon, but good and sound doctrine, wherof ev desired the Assemblie's approbatioun. The Assemblie voted, d without contradiction declared, that he had uttered nothing in at sermon erroneous, scandalous, or offensive, but solide, good, ad true doctrine; for which they praised God,

They reported, if the nynteenth sessioun, that they had reasouned upon this heed and that further reasoning was yitt required. Mr Andrew Melvill and Mr Thomas Smeton were apointed to penne a supplicatioun to the king's Majestie and Lords f Articles, that no acts passe in parliament repugnant to the true Vord of God, with sharpe admonitions. The supplication was ad before the Assemblie, and allowed, and immediatlie some ethrein directed to present the same, with the articles. Becaus esbytereis were not as yitt fullie established everie where, the ssemblie nominated some brethrein for everie countrie respective, travell diligentlie in erectioun of presbytereis betuixt and the xt Assemblie. Mr George Hay, Mr Johne Robertsone, Mr eorge Monro, Johne Gray, were appointed for Cathnesse and therland; Mr Johne Robertsone, Mr George Monro, Person of uffus, and the Minister of Innernesse, for Rosse. A PARLIAMENT.

In the parliament holden in October, the duke bare the crown Huntlie the scepter, Argile the sword. James Stewart, Erle Arran, tooke instruments, and protested it sould not be prejudicia to him and his hous, that he caried not the crown at that time; for he alledged his hous to be neerest to the king. Upon Tuisday th 28th day, when the king was mounting on horsebacke, Sir John Seton, sonne to the Lord Seton, one of the king's master stabler was commanded by the Erle of Arran, among others, to stan abacke, and give way; and becaus he would not so readilie as h desired, he offered to cast a battoun at him, or to strike his hors o the face: or, as others report, Sir Johne Seton preassing to ente in Sir James Preston's place, was commanded by the Erle of Arra to keepe his owne place. Which when he refused, the erle com manded his brother William to strike him. The guarde casting u halberts betuixt them, William brake a battoun upon a halber minting to Sir Johne Seton's horse. He minted to doe the lik at the Stinking Style, but prevailed not, for the guarde remove Sir Johne Seton. Upon the day following, the penult of November, the king came again in pompe to the Tolbuith. The duk would not ryde, becaus Seton and his two sonnes were commanded to keepe their loodging. Atholl caried the sword, Argile the scepter, Huntlie the crowne. At this parliament, Angus, Morton, his two sonnes, Carmichaell, and sindrie others, were forefaulted.

It was statute in this parliament, that seing one minister might hardlie instruct manie parishes, that everie parish kirk, and so muche bounds as sall be found to be a sufficient and competent parish, sall have their owne pastor with a sufficient and reasonable stipend, according to the abilitie of the parish. Item, Becaus the Iregges of idolatrie yitt remaine in diverse parts of the realme, by using of pilgrimages to some chappells, wels, croces, and suche other monuments of idolatrie, as also, by observing of the festivall layes of sancts, sometimes named patrons, in setting furth of one fires, singing of carrells, running about kirks at certane seaons of the yeere, and observing of suche other superstitious and Papisticall rites, it was ordeanned, that none of his Hienesse' lieges ant, frequent, or use the said pilgrimages, or others forenamed uperstitious and Papisticall rites, under the paines following, &c.

ARRAN MARIETH THE COUNTESSE OF MARCHE.

Captane James Stewart, after that he was made tutor to the irle of Arran, he grew so familiar with the Countesse of Marche at he begott upon her a child. To cover this adulterous fact, a rocesse of divorcement was intended by her against her lawfull asband, the Erle of Marche, which was easilie obteanned, and so, he new made erle and she were joynned together in mariage. She as delivered of a man childe about this time.

TWO COUNSELLS AT ONE TIME.

Arran, Argile, the Secretar, the Treasurer, the Comptroller, and adrie others, held counsell in the Abbey: the Duke, the Lord axwell, now Erle of Morton, the Lord Seton, and sindrie others, ld counsell in the castell of Dalkeith, where the king was for the VOL. III.

time, and disannulled whatsoever the other counsellers had concluded. The crafts of Edinburgh watched in the Abbey, at Arran's desire.

M.D.LXXXII.

THE DUKE AND ARRAN RECONCILED.

Arran sueth for reconciliation with the duke, which at last, after two moneths' variance, was effectuat by the king. In time of the discord, he flattered the ministers to procure their freindship; and fearing the duke would bring home the Hammiltons, at Seton's instigation, he threatned to bring home the Dowglasses, and wrote twise to Angus. But, after their reconciliation, loath was he to displease the duke for anie man's pleasure.

THE PRACTISES OF THE PAPISTS.

Letters were sent from France, about this time, disclosing some practises of the Guisians and the Cardinall of Lorane; that Mr William Crichton, the queen's pensioner, was to be sent to this effect The drift of the practises was, that the king sould give over the crowne to his mother, and take it of her again with her blessing, or ellis no king in Europ will acknowledge him for king. Wherupor it sould have followed, that the approbatioun of religioun, and al other things done since his coronatioun, sould be compted null suche as had beene the king's freinds sould be compted tratours and his adversareis good servants. Johne Durie, in his sermon upon the 24th of Januar, said openlie in pulpit, that the king wa moved by some courteours, to consent to send a privat message t the King of France, the queen-mother, the Duke of Guise, and t seeke his mother's benedictioun. He was so informed by Georg Dowglas of Lochlevin, who was imployed in the message. Argil confessed to Mr James Lowsone, he had gone too farre in that ma ter, but promised to beware in times comming; and said, if he say anie thing intended against religioun in the court, he sould forsake the intenders, and oppone himself to them.

MR J. DAVIDSON'S CONFERENCE WITH THE KING.

Mr Johne Davidsone, in conference with the king, upon the 23d of Februare, told him what horrible confusioun had entered in the commoun weale, and counselled him to beware of two sort of men: the one, suche as opponed themselves to his authoritie in his minoritie, whereby they committed suche offences, as they are not able to underly the law, and must needs therefore feare his Majestie now, being king; the other, suche as are conjured enemeis to religioun, both at home and in other countreis. Johne Duncansone said, "His counsell, Sir, is verie good." "Indeid," said the king, "his counsell is verie good:" and with that start away, according to his maner.

MR R. MONTGOMRIE HIS INSOLENT BEHAVIOUR.

Upon the eight of Marche, Mr Robert Montgomrie came to Glasgow with a number of the guards; and the minister being in pulpit, he pulled him by the sleave, saying, "Come doun, Sirra!" The other answered, he was placed there by the kirk, and would give place to none intruding himself without order. There was appearance of trouble, unlesse the Laird of Minto had stayed the pishop, and commanded him to ceasse. The eldership of Glasgow was summouned to compeere before the counsell, against the fourth of Aprile.

ARRAN CENSURED BY THE KIRK.

Arran was ordeaned to make his repentance before he could get is childe baptized, borne a quarter of a yeere before he was maried; which he did on the morne after that, the 14th of Marche, in Hayrudhous, before the king. He confessed his offence, and offered to underly the discipline of the kirk. The like ordinance was made for his ladie. She was so greeved, that through her greevous words he conceaved some displeasure.

THE PRESBYTERIE OF STIRLINE SUMMONED BEFORE THE COUNSELL.

The brethrein of Glasgow were charged, under paine of horning, to admitt Mr Robert Montgomrie. Mr Robert Montgomrie was summouned to compeere before the Presbyterie of Stirline. The brethrein of Stirline compeered upon the 20th day, before the counsell in Halyrudhous, for suspending of Mr Robert Montgomrie from the ministrie. They refused to answere to them as judges competent in that caus.

This night, at nyne houres, the Master of Oliphant came to the Lord Ruthven, now Erle of Gowrie, his chamber, without sword or anie other weapon, and offered himself in his will.

THE PRESBYTERIE OF GLASGOW SUMMONED BEFORE THE COUNSELL.

The king road to Stirline the 22d day of Marche, to the baptisme of the Erle of Arran's childe. Upon Tuisday, the thrid of Aprile, the synodall assemblie of Lothiane being conveened in the East Kirk of Edinburgh, was charged by an officer of armes, at the instance of Mr Robert Montgomrie, to compeere at Stirline, the 12th day of that instant, before the counsell, and to desist in the meane time from farther processe. The eldership of Glasgow was continued to the same day. Mr James Lowsone, Johne Durie, and Mr James Carmichaell, were sent from the Assemblie, to requeist the king most humblie to suffer the kirk to execut their discipline; otherwise to protest, that they would stand to it to the uttermost, and rather obey God than men. Upon Wednisday, the elleventh of Aprile, the ministers of the Presbyteries of Dalkeith, Linlithquo, Edinburgh, with diverse elders, as the Lairds of Braid, Fadowside, &c. went to Stirlinc. They consulted with the brethrein of Glasgow upon their answere. They agreed to declyne; vitt were content that the king, or anie of his counsell, sould heare the whole mater, extra judicium. They were called. After some words spokin by the king, the Commendatar of Dumfermline, secretar, urged the presbytereis with an answere. Mr Robert Pont answered, as was concluded before noone. After their comming from counsell, the king and the duke went out also, and the brethrein were not called upon again. Some of the brethrein, fearing that their departure would be takin for a deserting of the caus, they consult what to doe. Johne Durie and Mr Johne Davidsone went to Johne Andrew, the counsell-clerk, and desired a copie of the declinatour uttered by Mr Robert Pont before the counsell. The elerk denied there was anie suche thing mentiouned. They said, t could not be denied. The other said, it would not be granted. Then said Mr Johne, "We will declare our parts, in time and place, where God hath called us to speake, and how we are used." Wherupon it was granted.

Mr James Lowsone, Johne Durie, Mr Walter Balcalquall, and Mr Johne Davidsone, went to the king the day following, to take heir leave. Mr James desired, that the extract of the declinatour night be had. The king said, "Reasoun." Mr James added, hat the godlie were much offended, that the king and counsell ould decree, that they might dispone bishopricks, spirituallie and emporallie, pleno jure, as they terme it, at their owne pleasure. ohne Durie said, that it behoved them to proceed to excommunication of Mr Robert Montgomrie, incace he proceeded anie farther that mater. The king said, "We will not suffer you." "We nust obey God rather than men," said Johne, "and pray God to emove evill companie from about you. The weelfare of the kirk is our weelfare: the more sharplie vice be rebooked, the better for you." "he king seemed to be muche moved, and not farre from teares.

Before their departure from Stirline, they summouned Mr R. Iontgomrie to compeere before the nixt Generall Assemblie, the ourth day therof. Some report that the brethrein of Glasgow were exonered of their summouns, becaus it was actio voluntaria to ad mitt a man to an ecclesiasticall functioun, and the kirk sould no be compelled to admitt anie man under the paine of horning; and seing they were not willing, the king and counsell would admit him to it pleno jure. Wherunto the brethrein opponed, and pro tested for remedie of law. Great hatred was conceaved agains Mr Andrew Hay and Mr Thomas Smeton, becaus they were the cheefe hinderers of Mr R. Montgomrie's admissioun. Becaus Mr Andrew Haye's brother's sonne, the Laird of Tallow, younger, was executed for the murther of the king's father, Mr R. Montgomrie would have had Mr Andrew brought under suspicioun of foreknowledge and concealing, that he being wairded, and so removed out of the way for a seasoun, his turne might be the more easilie wrought.

THE FOURTIE-FOURTH GENERALL ASSEMBLIE.

The Generall Assemblie conveened at St Andrewes, in the New Colledge, the 24th of Aprile. Mr Andrew Melvill was chosin Mo derator. He desired certan brethrein to be assessors, to conveen with him at extraordinarie houres, to prepare maters to be proponed to the whole brethrein, without prejudice anie wise to the liberti of the Assemblie. At his desire were nominated Mrs Johne Craig James Lowsone, Andrew Hay, David Lindsey, Robert Pont, Thomas Smeton, Andrew Polwart, Thomas Buchanan, Patrik Adam sone, the Rector; the Lairds of Lundie, Merchinston, Braid, Pilrig, Elphinston, Patrik Kinninmonth, Johne Johnston, Commissioner of Edinburgh.

COMMISSIONS.

The names of the brethrein who were appointed by the last As semblie to travell diligentlie in the erectioun and constitutioun of elderships being read in the secund sessioun, so manie were called on as were present to report their diligence. Some reported, that they had erected as was committed to them; some, that they had erected a presbytrie of ministers, but not as yitt of gentlemen or elders, to witt, in the Mernes and St Andrewes; some, that they had considered the bounds where presbyteries might most convenientlie be had, but had not as yitt perfyted that worke, as in Aberdeen and Bamf. None were present to declare what was done in the remotest north, to witt, Cathnesse, Rosse, Sutherland, and Murrey. The Assemblie appointed some brethrein to travell in the erectioun and establishing of presbytereis betuixt and the nixt Generall Assemblie, in the particular bounds after specified respective, as they were joyned together in commissioun; to witt, for Cathnesse and Sutherland, for Rosse, for Murrey, for Aberdeene and Bamff, for the west end of Fife, for Tiviotdaill, for Twedlaill, for Nithisdaill, for Galloway.

A commissioun was givin to the Erle Marshall, the Abbot of Deir, Mr Patrik Adamsone, Mr George Hay, Mr Alexander Arouthnet, Mr James Martine, Proveist of St Salvator's Colledge, or o anie three of them conjunctlie, to visite the north, and call before hem, where they think most expedient, suche as be suspected of Papistrie; to urge them to subscrive the Confessioun of Faith, sett out and authorised by the king's Majestie, and if anie be found disabedient or obstinat, to proceed against them, according to the acts of the Assemblie. Commissioun givin before to the eldership of Dundie, to proceid against the Master of Gray, was renued. He and promised to subscrive; but they would not accept his subscription, till he had first communicat, which he also offered to doe.

THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE ASSEMBLIE AGAINST MR R. MONTGOMRIE.

Mr Robert Montgomrie being cited by the eldership of Stirline, o compeere before the Assemblie, to heare the sentence of susensioun from his ministrie pronounced by them, allowed by the cenerall Assemblie, and farther triell to be takin concerning is life, doctrine, and maners, or suche things as the Assemblie eight lay to his charge, he being present, was desired to answere.

He protested, if the Assemblie proceeded in anie thing against him. or charged him with anie thing without warrant of the Word, for remeid. As for the summons, he alledged, the Assemblie sould not allow anie thing deduced in the said processe, becaus he was never lawfullie summoned thereto; knew nothing of his suspensioun from the ministrie, but onlie by bruite; that the samine was never intimated to him; and in so farre as the processe beareth personall intimatioun to him of the said suspensioun, tooke instruments therupon, and offered to improve the samine in that point. The Assemblie having advised upon all his alledgances, found the processe. decreet, intimatioun, orderlie deduced, and the sentence of suspension duelie pronounced, reserving, notthelesse, to Mr Robert, in the secund instance, to seeke reduction and remeid, as apperteaneth Being farther accused of controveening the sentence of suspension. by preaching of the Word and ministration of the sacraments, he pretended ignorance. Mr Mark Ker, Maister of Requests, sonne to the Lord Newbottle, presented the king's letter to the Assemblie, wherin was declared, that the Assemblie sould not trouble Mi Robert for anie thing concerning the bishoprick, or anie thing that may result therupon, or for anie other caus bygane committed by him, but that it might be treatted before his Hienesse. This letter being read in open Assemblie, the brethrein praised God, that moved the king's Hienesse to send his commissioner to the Assemblie. As for the actioun present, promised that nothing sould be handled belonging to the civill power, and nothing but uprightlie, sincerelie, and with just judgement, as they sould answere to God and his Hienesse.

In the sessioun following, that is, the seventh, an ample discourse was made of the diligence of the brethrein to whom commission was givin in the last Assemblic concerning Mr Robert, and the copeis of the charges givin to them at his instance produced, which testified his knowledge of the said suspensioun, howbeit he protested before God, he never knew of the raising of anie of the said charges, or executioun therof. The Assemblic findeth, that he hath contraveened the sentence of suspensioun. Mr Robert sked, if the Assemblie would accuse him upon anie thing concernng the bishoprick, or anie thing resulting therupon; and craved, hat the summe of the discourse made verballie by the brethrein night be givin in in writt, that he might answere to everie point herof. Being removed out of the Assemblie, within a little space fter compeered Johne Burne, messinger, and by vertue of the ing's letters, delivered by the Lords of Secreit Counsell, disharged the Moderator and his assessors, the brethrein of the Asemblie, to direct anie citations against Mr Robert Montgomrie. excommunicat, slander, or trouble him in his ministrie, for asiring to the bishoprick of Glasgow; or calling or persuing of his rethrein for the same, or for anie promise made theranent, or anie her thing depending therupon, in time bygane, under the paine rebellioun, and putting of them to the horne: Certifeing them, they faile, he will denounce them our soveran lord's rebels, and tt them to his Hienesse' horne. He delivered a copie of the arge, subscrived with his owne hand. Mr Robert was called on, but stayed not upon the answere of the Assemblie to his deands. The Assemblie ordeaned Mr Thomas Makgie to warne m to compeere personallie before the Assemblie, the day followr, at ten houres. He promised to compeere, but came not; but filliam Montgomrie, his alledged procurator, produced an apllatioun.

Certan offences were read, wherof he was alledged to be guiltie: gligence in teaching, corrupt doctrine, dissolutioun in life, for nich he was suspended; contraveening of the suspensioun, in asgow, Stirline, and the king's owne chappell; violating of his one promise made to the Presbyterie of Stirline, that he sould reline, and await upon his cure; horrible lees in the face of the nole Assemblie, denying, with protestation before God, the intatioun of his suspensioun, and raising and executing letters, peuring the letters by sinistrous information, for overthrowing to discipline of the kirk; intruding himself in another man's fike, since the suspension, and that accompanied with armed in; procuring a charge discharging the Assemblie, under paine of horning, to proceed against him; blaspheming and railing against the brethrein and the ministrie, in pulpit, since the suspe sioun, and before; contempt of the ordinance of the kirk, and sti ring up of a divisioun betuixt certan of the nobilitie and the kir He is found guiltie of these offences, partlie by his owne confe sioun, partlie by the processe deduced by the Generall Assembl holdin last in Edinburgh, partlie by the processe deduced befo the eldership of Stirline, and partlie by the testification of good and godlie brethrein, who were present at this Assemblie. F these offences, the Assemblie concluded that he was worthie to deprived, in all time comming, of the ministrie, and that the se tence of excommunicatioun sould strike upon him, except he pr vented it by repentance. The Maister of Requests desired the pronouncing of the sentence might be differed till his Majest were advertised. The Assemblie delayed their answere till aft noone. In their meeting after noone, that is, in the nynth session he was deprived, by the voice of the brethrein, from all function in the ministrie, during the will of the Assemblie. Farther, it w decerned, that the sentence of excommunicatioun sould be pr nounced by the moderator, in presence and audience of the who Assemblie; and that the sentence be intimated by everie par cular minister, in the first sermon to be made by them, after the returne to their particular kirks. The pronouncing of the senten was delayed till Moonday, becaus Mr Robert compeered, and r nounced the appellatioun interponed by his procurator in his nam and by himself, before noone; and desired to have conferen with some brethrein, which was granted, till Moonday at ny houres, upon conditioun that he attended upon the exercise of the doctrine, and conference of the brethrein in the meane time, n purchassed new charges to that time, which he promised; and the Assemblie ordeaned him to be prayed for, after sermon, by hi that occupied the place the day following.

This his compearance and submissioun proceeded upon the ground: Mr Johne Davidsone, and some other brethrein, desired, that ere the sentence of excommunication were pronounce ne might be vitt once admonished, seing he was in the toun. Wherupon, Mr Johne Davidsone, Mr Patrik Galloway, Minister of St Johnston, and other two or three brethrein who had made he motioun, were sent to him. They travelled with him, but vere almost readie to returne without prevailing. Mr Johne pake sharpelie to him. Then he said, "What would yee doe, if ee were in my cace?" "We would submitt to the Assemblie," ay they. "That is verie hard," said he. Then Mr John desired im to sitt doun upon his knees, and pray to God with them. He vas so moved with the praver conceaved by Mr Johne Davidsone, ot without manie teares and great vehemencie, that after the raver was ended, he satt still a prettie space upon his knees, roning and sighing. He riseth, and sayeth, "Gett me my cloke: will goe with you to the Assemblie." Yitt, when he came to the 'olledge Closse, loath was he to goe in, under simple submissioun. hey left him, went in, and reported to the Assemblie what had assed among them. After some reasoning, it was agreed, that sould have accesse to come in, if he sought accesse, and offered mself; but they would not seeke him.

Mr Patrik Galloway is directed to declare to him the minde of e Assemblie. He offered himself, and getteth accesse. First, renounced his appellatioun. After, he desired the brethrein to are with his weakenesse, and to grant him some space of time, conferre with some brethrein of the Assemblie, whom he trusted satisfie. As for renouncing his letters of charging, he made me difficultie, except they would grant him some conference. He is removed, and after reasoning, it was granted he sould have ne till Moonday, providing he conferred with Mr Robert Pont d Mr Craig, in the meane time. Sindrie were greeved and ofided, becaus they suspected the conference was sought till Moonv, that then he might ryde off the toun. Mr Patrik Adamsone 1 ight the day following, that is, the Lord's day, upon the thrid Exodus. He said, it behoved the Kirk of Christ to be like to bush sett on fire; but woe be to him by whom it is sett on f.! Mr Andrew Simsone preached after noone. He painted out Mr R. Montgomrie in his colours, named him, and desired the congregation to pray for him. In the conference which some breth rein had with Mr Robert, after noone, he asked the brethrei what he sould doe? Mr Robert Pont said, "Give over all simplicand come in the kirk's will." Mr Craig said the like. He was content to humble himself, so farre as the caus was ecclesiastical. He had made a promise to the king, wherof he would know how to rid himself; and if he could gett a pensioun of the bishoprical he would never meddle with it. They answered, an evill promise did not bind him; and as for a pensioun and recompense of he charges, in their judgement, the Assemblie would not find fau with it, if he might obteane it without corruptioun of the office. They had another conference on the morne, which ended wit some likeliehood. But he had ever a respect to some worldling commoditie.

The Assemblie sitting doun, he was called upon. In the mear time, he had sent for Mr Davidsone, who advised him simplicite to submit himself; but he was wonderfullie perplexed. Then the Master of Lindsey and the Laird of Lundie dealt with him earnestlie to yeeld simpliciter. After long reluctatioun, at lenth he condescended, and came into the Assemblie, and granted, as appeared, with all submissioun, his offences in everie point, to the great admiration and contentment of the Assemblie; and said "If he had knowne the mater would have come to so great a trouble of the kirk, and that it would have been so farre mislyked be good men, he rather [would] have gone where never man known him." Mr Thomas Smeton, Johne Durie, and sindrie others, when had been e most fervent against him, came of their owne accord to him, embraced him lovinglie, and forgave him freelie all offence committed by him against them in particular.

His submissioun and confessioun is sett doun in the Register, i the elleventh sessioun, after this maner: They demand of him, i presence of God, to declare the truthe simplie of these crimes an offences that were layed to his charge. After he had prayed Go to be mercifull to him, granted and confessed, as after follower

Ie confessed the command givin by him to the Reader of Stirline o desist from his office; granted baptizing of infants begottin in pricatioun, but tooke caution of the parents to satisfie the kirk, ut not in presence of the sessioun, or elders therof. As to the ircumcisioun of weomen, he remembred not he preached it; ranted he promised to the Presbyterie of Stirline to await on the harge of his ministrie there, which he hath brokin; confessed pat, upon the 20th day of March last, he heard mentioun made of is suspensioun by the Presbyterie of Stirline, but was not certane perof, for he could not gett a sight of the processe; declared that owbeit he knew not the raising of the letters against the brethrein. tt he keeped the ordinar dyets of the charges; granted intrusion on Mr David Wemes' flocke; granted he had heynouslie ofnded God and his church, by procuring charges to be raised rainst the Generall Assemblie, and in accepting the bishoprick of lasgow, without advice of the same, for which offence he subitted himself to underly whatsoever injunctions of the Assemblie. Being required to declare his upright meaning concerning the tat of bishops, and corruption therof, he desired conference with r James Lowsone, Mr Craig, Mr Robert Pont, Mr David Lindv, and the Laird of Colluthie, for his farther resolutioun; wherto the Assemblie agreed. In the same sessioun, the protestaons made by the Presbytereis of Edinburgh, Dalkeith, and Linhouo, against the sentence givin by the king and Secreit Coun-I, in favours of Mr R. Montgomrie, and the sentence itself, were and publictlie, and the protestations allowed, all the brethrein, in te voice, adhering thereto. Mr Robert for his part allowed the ene also, and adhered thereto. In the 12th sessioun, Mr R. Montmrie promised before God, in face of the whole Assemblie, that I sould meddle nor attempt no farther concerning the bishoprick Glasgow, nor tak upon him the same, or anie office within the ik, without advice and consent of the Generall Assemblie; re-I meed the charges givin to the Generall Assemblie, at his ins nce, with the letters purchassed by him against Mr David Wemes, al protested, that in this mater concerning the bishoprick of Glasgow, he meaned no otherwise than the whole brethrein do Yitt the Assemblie injoyned the brethrein of the Presbyterie of Glasgow to trie diligentlie if he medled with the bishoprick, an proceeded anie farther against his promise made to the Assemblie and if they find him to have medled therwith anie wise, to decembe the him to have contraveened the act of the Assemblie, and to have violated his promise: and to report their processe and decretherupon to the Presbyterie of Edinburgh, to whom the Assemblic giveth power to nominat, in that cace, a brother, to excommunicate the said Mr Robert. Seing he was deprived of his function during the will of the Assemblie, two brethrein were appointed supplee his place, till the nixt Assemblie, when order sould be taikin therin, and the Assemblie sould understand farther of Mr. Robert his behaviour.

THE KING'S LETTER TO THE ASSEMBLIE.

Mr Mark Ker, sonne to the Lord Newbottle, and Maister of R quests, compeered in the fyft sessioun, and presented the king letter, and a certan conference which was had in Edinburgh, b tuixt some of the counsell and some of the ministrie; and crave an answere in writt, conforme to his Majestie's letter. Followeth the tenor of the king's letter:—

"Trust freinds, we greete you heartilie weill. Yee remember, our late parliament there is an act past, tuiching the provisioun ministers, and certan stipends for them at all parish kirks, and a pointing commissioners for ordering thereof: As also, some of t articles givin in by the ministrie, and committed to the considertioun and order of certan commissioners nominated by our act parliament. And finding it needfull, that the saids acts sould ha executioun, and that if it were not done in due time, the ord could not tak effect the nixt yeere, but continue in the stait present to the great miscontentment of manie, we conveened some of you number latelie, at Edinburgh, and caused certan of our couns onfer with them, for the better understanding of our meanin nd that yee all might be the better certified therof, at this your ssemblie, wherethrough the work intended might proceed and tak fect at the first day of November nixt, to the removing of the prent disorder and confusioun, and satisfactioun of all persons havg interesse, as accords of equitie and reasoun, as, by the summe that wherupon they conferred, we doubt not yee have underand, the copie wherof we have also delivered to this bearer, tuichg the making of a new forme of that assignatioun for the minirie, which sall take effect at the first day of November. Albeit ege pains have beene takin theranent, vitt can it not be putt in che order as were seemelie to be divulgated, whill certan of the swers and advices of your brethrein yitt wanting be returned, as melie, from Cathnesse, Elgine, Banff, Kincardin, and bounds advent to Strabogie, Dunkelden, Creif, Falkland, Edinburgh, Dalith, Hadinton, Dunce, Kelso, Melrose, Peebles, Biggar, Lanerk, basgow, Dumbartan, Irwing, Minnibole, Dumfreis, Penpont, Loch-Ibane, and Annand: As also, whill it be resolved from the Asanblie, what is thought meete and concluded, tuiching the readers i generall, and speciallie tuiching vicarages that are givin and proaled to readers for their lyfetimes; and last, tuiching the inequale of stipends, sume having victuals allowed at a small price, and tiers, of the money assigned, constrained to buy their victualls at thighest prices: Which points, with the others conferred upon, Ing once speciallie considered, the forme of assignation for the It yeere may be made the muche more easilie, and the articles rered by the estats to the commissioners answered, and made in les, as apperteaneth. THE TENOR OF THE ARTICLES.

- 1. Whether thinke yee, that all benefices under prelaceis, no lie provided since the king's coronation, sould pay anie thrid, or thrid?
- 2. If some sould pay thrid, and some none, what sall be the ference and distinctioun?
- 3. Sould not all benefices presented to ministers and read before the first day of November 1581, be allowed in their year stipends, from the same day to the first day of November 158 And if yee thinke that there sall be anie difference or distinction by reason of the Annat, or otherwise, that yee declare.
- 4. Sould not all persons presented, and admitted to benefices this time, be placed in the booke of modificatioun, as ministers readers to the kirk belonging to the same benefice?
- 5. Ought suche (being ministers) as have sufficient ecclesial call livings of their owne, by reason of benefices wherunto the are provided for their lyfetime, take stipends to serve at a kirks?
- 6. Thinke yee it not convenient, that the reports answering t king's Majestie's letter, sent over all the realme this last somm sall be seene and considered at this time, for the better understaining of the estate of the kirks; and to see how manie of the sareports are in your hands? For so manie as the Clerk of Regishath sall be readie and patent.
- 7. That yee will lett us understand, what ye have thought me and concluded, tuiching the readers in generall, and special readers that are presented to vicarages for their lyfetime.
- 8. Thinke yee it reasonable, that anie provided in title of a nefice, and serving as minister and reader at the onlie kirk belowing to the benefice, sall have anie maner of allowance or stipe nor the rent of the self-same benefice?
- 9. What thinke yee the most readie and possible moyen to s teane the ministrie of the kirks belonging to colledges?

- 10. To whom, thinke yee, the king's Majestie and the laick patrons sould direct their presentatiouns, for admitting of qualified persons to suche benefices as sall happin to vaike, by decease of the present possessors of them? and that ye will name the persons in speciall.
- 11. Seing the dearth of victuals maketh great inequalitie of stipends, some having victuall allowed for a merk or twentie shilling, and others, of that silver assigned to them, constrained to buy at five or six, and sometimes at seven merkes the boll; were it not agreeable to equitie that all ministers had their proportionall part, als weill of victuals as of money; or ellis that the victuals sould be sold or allowed at the highest price, wherethrough suche as have small stipends might be the better augmented?

ANSWERES TO THE SAID ARTICLES.

- 1, 2. To the First and Secund, Before they be speciallie an swered, it is thought meetest that there be a forme of assignatious made, by some to be directed therto, betuixt and the nixt Assemblie, to all kirks and ministers that are likelie and apparent to stand and continue, respecting the answeres and advices sent out of everie countrie, and as if the present possessours were deid; and that charges be directed to suche as have not sent their answeres, so send them with expeditioun.
- 3. It is thought meetest that the intrant to anie benefice sall enter and serve the cure of the kirk therof, at the nixt first day of November after his admissioun, at the least, at the nixt Witsonlay; and sall have no farther stipend for this yeere but the taxt or superplus, as it falleth, becaus his executors will fall als muche this decease, according to the ancient order of the annats; and hat diligence be done to gett Bagismondis' roll of all benefices axt, and whatever benefices are not taxt, the rents therof, the first eere, be divided equallie betwixt the executors of the defunct nd the intrant, which intrant sall have onlie the half fruicts of the rst yeere of his entreis, and siclyke of the stipends.

VOL. III. 2 Q

- 4. We thinke none sall be placed in the books of modificatious but qualified and worthie persons; and if anie be presented and admitted to benefice since the king's coronation, that are unworthie, and unable to discharge their dutie, that they be called, and deprived by suche order as sall heerafter be condescended upon.
- 5. For the generall, we thinke that suche being ministers as have sufficient livings, as their owne; by reason of benefices wherunto they are provided for their lyftimes, sould not tak stipends to serve at other kirks, without great necessitie seene and allowed by the Generall Assemblie; and upon speciall knowledge of the persons that are not able in this heed, order sall be taken to reforme them, as apperteaneth.
- 6. We think this is most necessar, and agreeable to that which is appointed in the answere to the first and secund articles.
- 7. This article sall be speciallie answered, how soone it may be advised by the Generall Assemblie.
- 8. Upon the sight of the forme of the particular assignation to be made, and what particular causes sall fall under the rule, we sall give our speciall answere heerunto, which is coincident, and will depend upon the answere to be made to the first and secund articles.
- 9. We cannot but thinke it reasonable that the colledge kirks be als weill provided of ministers as other kirks, and thinke that in making of the forme of new assignatioun for the nixt yeere, the ministers of the kirks of the colledges sould be assigned for his stipend upon the fruicts of the same kirk, als muche being assigned otherwise to the helpe of the colledge; or then, the colledge to have the rents of the kirk as before, and the minister to have his assignatioun otherwise.
- 10. The presentatioun to be directed to the commissioners of the kirk within whose bounds the benefice lyeth.
- 11. This mater is weightie, tuicheth manie, and can not be weill answered by us, without advice of the whole Assemblie, to whom it sall be proponed, and therafter resolute answere givin.

Followeth the tenor of the letter writtin to the king's Majestie in name of the Assemblie, which was thought good to be delivered to the Maister of Requests, in the nynth sessioun.

"Please your Majestie, we have receaved your Grace's most loving letter, directed to us by your Grace's commissioner, Mr Marke Ker, Maister of Requests; and are compelled to burst furth with most humble thanks to our God, who of his mercie hath givin us so godlie a king, carefull, and weill willing that God be glorified, and his kirk within your Majestie's realme mainteaned, as plainlie appeareth by the articles by your Grace proponned; wherunto, with all diligence we beganne to make answere. But in suche shortnesse of time, and strait wherinto we are brought by certan letters, raised at the instance of Mr Robert Montgomrie, we are altogether staved in that, and manie other godlie actions. For upon the 27th day of this present, the Assemblie being occupied in quiet and modest reasoning of grave and weightie maters. he caused an officer of armes irreverentlie to enter, and, under the paine of horning, command the whole Assemblie from all proceedng against him, for whatsomever enormitie committed in thir his vicked attempts; a thing that was never heard nor seene since the vorld beganne, wherof we must lament unto your Grace; and vaving no other refuge under God, must humblie crave, that by hir extraordinar charges, direct against the Word of God and lawes f your Grace's countrie, we be not constrained, ather to betray he caus of God, winking and bearing with the horrible crimes maifest to all men in the persoun of the said Mr Robert, or ellis to be eputed and accompted rebellious and disobedient to your Majestie, 1 whose service we have been, are, and sall be, readie to shed our lood and spend our lives: beseeking your Grace we may find is grace and favour in your Majestie's sight, to keepe our conzience cleane before God, and reserve our soules to Him who hath ivin us care of the soules of his inheritance. This most reasonable equeist we doubt not to obteane of your Majestie, our particular easons being heard and considered; which we minde, by God's race, more largelie to expone, by certan our brethrein, directed to our Majestie, both to this effect, and with a full answere to the forsaids articles. In the meane seasoun, we beseeke your Majestie to give no credite to the sinistrous report and wrangous informatiouns of men, that by suche dealing goe about to draw you Majestie's heart from your true and faithfull subjects, and by this unhappie schisme to overthrow the kirk of God within your Grace's countrie, and, for their owne particular gaine, banish Christand his Word; which God, of his infinite mercie, forbid, and proserve your Grace bodie and soule for ever.

"From Sanct Andrewes, the 28th of Aprile 1582."

This letter was delivered before Mr R. Montgomrie's submissiour After the submissioun, the Assemblie gave their full power an commissioun to their lovit brethrein, Mrs James Lowsone, John Craig, Robert Pont, David Lindsey, Johne Brand, Johne Durie to shew to his Hienesse that the articles sent by his Maister Requests were weightie, and some of them obscure, and appeare captious; notthelesse, for better resolutioun, they had appointe some brethrein to confer upon them till the nixt Assemblie, which they had appointed to hold the sooner, to that effect. Farther, t deplore to his Grace, that the jurisdictioun of the kirk is, and hat beene, much hurt and prejudged; and namelie, by the letters givi out in Glasgow, discharging the presbytereis to proceed agains Mr Robert Montgomrie; charges of horning used against the whol Kirk of Scotland, by the decreit and sentence of the Secreit Coun sell, finding themselves judges in the actioun of Mr R. Montgom rie; missives sent to gentlemen, to assist to the placing of him i the pulpit of Glasgow, against the will of the kirk; giving of bene fices pleno jure, and of abbaceis in heritage; and with all humilitie due reverence, and gentlenesse, as apperteaneth, to exhort his Ma jestie to the reforming heerof, and mainteaning of the jurisdiction givin by God unto his kirk, as also, to give admonitioun to th duke's Grace, the Erles of Arran and Gowrie, in the premisses and what they doe heerin to report to the nixt Assemblie.

It was ordeaned that the particular elderships sould have a copi of the articles, that they may be the better resolved to give thei advised answere at the nixt Assemblie.

ACTS.

The Assemblie charged, in the name of God, all presbytereis where they are alreadie established, and all ministers where elderships are not yitt erected, to proceed against Papists, conforme to the king's proclamatioun and acts of the Assemblie, as the said elderships will answere to God, the king's Majestie, and the Assemblie; and that the ministers failing sall underly the paines conteaned in the act made of before.

2. As the examination and admission of ministers within this calme is, by act of parliament, ordeaned to be in the power of the kirk authorized within this realme, so it is thought that the depriratioun of ministers is in the power of the same kirk, and these hat examine and admitt ministers. Siclyke, the deprivatioun of bishops admitted since the king's coronatioun is in the power of he kirk, and these that elect, examine, and admitt bishops; and hat this deprivatioun sall be als weill from the functioun in the ministrie, as from the benefice it self, and fruicts therof, wherehrough the same may be declared vacand, as if he were naturallie eid, to be confered to another. The causes of deprivatioun were idged to be these following: Heresie, Poprie, Commoun Blashemie, Perjurie, Adulterie, Incest, Fornicatioun, Slaughter, Thift, Commoun Oppressioun, Commoun Drunkennesse, Usurie against le lawes of this realme, Non-residence, Absence from his kirk and ffice, by the space of fortie dayes together in a yeere, without a wfull impediment allowed by the nixt Generall Assemblie; Plualitie of benefices provided since the king's coronatioun, of all hich he sall be denuded, except one, lying where he will astrict imself to residence; Dilapidatioun of the rents of the benefices conare to the act of parliament; Simonie. As for the forme of the ocesse of deprivatioun, a libelled precept, upon fortie dayes warng, if the person compleaned upon be within the realme, or sixtie iyes if he be without, sall be directed by the kirk, and suche comissioners therof as elect and admitt ministers, to summoun him to compeere, and answere upon the complaint; and, incace of his ab sence at the first summons, that the secund be directed upon the like warning, with certificatioun, if he faile, the libell sall be ad mitted to probatioun, and he sall be holdin for guiltie. Yitt it sal be permitted to him after this decreit, if he thinke himself wronger thereby, to interpone appelatioun to the nixt Generall Assemblie and to intimat the samine within ten dayes, otherwise the decreit to receave instant executioun.

- 3. Seing sindrie have beene thrust upon the kirk, and presented to benefices of cure, who, by reasoun of their young yeeres, and want of experience and judgment, cannot be able to discharge that high and sacred vocatious whereunto they are called, the Assembli ordeaneth, that in time comming none be admitted to the functions of the ministrie, or anie benefice of cure, unlesse they be of the ag of twentie-five yeeres, except suche as, for singular and rare qualities, sall be judged by the Generall Assemblie meet and worthie.
- 4. Forasmuche as the Sabboth day is manie wayes profaned and violated, to the great dishonour of God, speciallie by holding of mercats, als weill in burgh as countrie, the Assemblie injoyneth everie eldership, within their owne bounds, to tak order therewith, so farre as they may by the law of God, as they will show their zeale towards God, and obedience to the Assemblie.

the meane time according to the accustomed order; and that the king's Majestie be certified heerof by the commissioners directed to him, and requested to hold hand thereto, by setting furth of proclamatiouns to that effect.

QUESTIONS.

The question being moved to the Assemblie, if the Generall Assemblie hath power to revoke whatsoever things done by them, or anie particular member of the same, to the hurt and prejudice of the kirk or not? the brethrein, after reasoning, voted to the affirmative part, that the Assemblie had power to doe the same.

ANSWERES TO CERTAN DOUBTS PROPONED CONCERNING THE PRESBYTEREIS.

In the First, that the moderator may continue from assemblie synodall to the nixt synodall; his election to be by the particular presbyterie.

Secundlie, That the number of suche that are associated to the eldership, for discipline and correction of maners, that are not pastors nor doctors, who travell not in the Word, be not in equall number with the others, but fewer; the proportion as the necessitie of elderships craveth.

Concerning suche elders as verse not in the Word, their resort to the presbyterie sall be no farther straited, but as the weightinesse and occasioun, upon intimatioun and advertisement made by the pastors and doctors, sall require, at which time they sall give their godlie concurrence; exhorting them alwise that commodiouslie may resort, to be present at all times.

Suche of the ministrie as doe not resort to the exercise and presbyterie, sall be subject to the penaltie arbitrall to be appointed at the discretioun of everie particular presbyterie, the samine to be agreed upon the subscriptioun of everie minister therof. And if anie be found to disagree to anie good order, to be compleaned upon to the Generall Assemblie nixt to come; and the order which everie presbyterie taketh to be sighted, and therof a good order after established for the whole.

It is thought meete that the samine day which is the day of exrcise be, in like maner, the day of ecclesiasticall processe; and if he brethrein find it necessar for the haistier expedition of the proesse, that they may appoint dayes, places, and times therefore, by¹ he day of exercise.

It is not thought expedient that the presbyterie be astricted to irect their moderator to the Assemblie, but² libertie to choose the as they thinke most expedient for the confort of the irk.

It is not thought meet that visitatioun be, except e re nata, within the bounds of the presbyterie; and the samine not to be limited to the moderator, but to suche two or moe as the presbyterie sall rect, for the necessitie of the mater, according to the Booke of olicie.

The clerk and moderator sall subscrive in grave maters, and forme proceeding, in name of the eldership, ay and whill God provide me better contribution in everie particular kirk of the eldership, r his interteanment.³

The minister of the parish sall caus execute the summons conrning his parish, and beare the burthein of suche things as sall be rected from the presbyterie, or some deputed by him within his trish.

THE COMMISSIONERS OF THE ASSEMBLIE HARDLIE USED.

Upon the nynth of May, the commissioners of the Assemblie cent to Kinneill to the king, who heard them courteuslie. But tennox and Arran fell out in outragious words against them. The uke hardlie conteaned himself from giving the lee twise to Mr David Lindsey and Mr Robert Pont. Arran called Johne Durie knave, and said, he sould order him weill aneugh.

SEIGNEUR PAUL SENT FROM THE DUKE OF GUISE.

Upon the tenth of May, Seigneur Paul, an Italian, landed at eith, sent from the Duke of Guise to the king with some horses. itt, in the meane time, was the Duke of Guise practising with me fugitive Englishmen, for releefe of the king's mother out of rison. This Seigneur Paul was a famous murtherer at the Mascre of Parise.

MR R. MONTGOMRIE SEEKING LETTERS ACCORDING TO HIS GIFT DISAPPOINTED.

Mr R. Montgomrie, notwithstanding of his submissioun made in a Assemblie, followed the duke, and taught before him, notwithunding of his suspension. Mr Johne Davidsone went to Dalith to conferre with him; but he was disappointed; for he undertood by his oast, that he was so drunken that he was chassing his vants with a drawin whinger. Upon the 22d day of May, Mr tomas Smetoun and Mr Thomas Jacke came to Edinburgh, to i orme the presbyterie that Mr R. Montgomrie had transgressed act, and craved that he might be excommunicated. They reded, till he were orderlie called and convicted, according to the is of the Assemblie, wherupon summons were directed, to sumtoun him upon Saturday therafter. But the belman of Dalkeith, of cer to the letters, was cast in prison at the duke's command.

Mr R. Montgomrie, contrare to his promise, sought letters conforme to his gift, givin pleno jure. The ministers of Edinburgh, and Mr. David Lindsey, Robert Pont, Nicoll Dagleish, compeering in name of the kirk, with Mr Johne Sharpe, Mr Thomas Craig, M. Alexander Sim, advocats, assisted with the rest of the younger ad vocats, withstood, onlie Mr David Makgill opponing himself in the contrare, as procurator for Mr R. Montgomrie. The king sent : discharge to admitt anie in the kirk's name, for their entreisse; bu the lords admitted them, and gave an interlocutor in their favours They consult with their advocats what to alledge the day follow ing. It was answered, First, His inabilitie for suche an office; Se cundlie, His renounciatioun before the Assemblie, subscrived with his hand, never to enter nor proceed in that mater, without advice of the Assemblie; Thridlie, That the act of parliament giveth commissioun to superintendents or commissioners to give collatioun, and not to the king and counsell. As for the acts of the Assemblie which were not vitt ratified by lawes, they could not alledge them When they looked to be called upon the day following, the president was sent for.

J. DURIE CHARGED TO REMOVE OUT OF EDINBURGH.

Mr James Lowsone and Johne Durie were summoned to compeere at Dalkeith the 30th day of May. Johne Durie called the duke and Arran abusers of the king, in his sermon, upon Wedinsday the 23d of May. When he came to Dalkeith castell, the duke's cookes came out of the kitchin with speates and great knives to invade him; but they were restrained. Johne Durie was charged to remove out of Edinburgh, and not to returne during the king's will. A charge was sent to the proveist and bailiffes to remove him. The counsell of the toun, and deacons of the crafts, conveened in the Counsel-hous. It was concluded by the greatest number, to the great greefe of sindrie, that he sould give place. He obeyed, after he had protested that there was no just caus offered on his part. The Presbyterie of Edinburgh had justified all that ne had said in the pulpit that day. So he departed out of Edinburgh upon Saturday the secund of June.

THE DECREIT OF THE PRESBYTERIE OF GLASGOW AGAINST MR R. MONTGOMRIE.

Upon the eight of June, the Presbyterie of Glasgow was sumnouned before the Secreit Counsell. When they were sitting in he presbyterie, to give a decreit against Mr R. Montgomrie, the aird of Minto, proveist of the toun, accompanied with the bailiffe. oline Campbell, and a number of the citicens, came in, and disparged them to proceed, having nather power nor commissioun, ublict nor privat, which they would show. Becaus they refused, ney putt violent hand in the moderator, Mr Johne Howesone, note him on the face, pulled him by the beard, beated out one of s teeth, and then putt him in the tolbuith. He stayed three or oure dayes, and would not come furth, howbeit requested, untill e caus were tried wherefore he was committed. Yitt at lenth, the desire of the brethrein, he came furth. The schollers were commoved that they entered in combat with some of these that d done the injurie. Some of them were hurt. Notwithstandg of all this stirre the decreit was givin furth, and sent to Edinargh.

MR R. MONTGOMRIE EXCOMMUNICATED.

The Presbyterie of Edinburgh conveened upon Saturday, the inth of June, as they were injoyned by the act of the Generall semblie. Mr Johne Davidsone was appointed, by commoun tosent, to pronounce the sentence of excommunicatioun the day lowing, in the kirk of Libberton, where he was minister for the time; which he did willinglie, howbeit he had been a cheef intument to stay the Assemblie from excommunicating him, upon the of amendment. So Mr R. Montgomrie was excommunicated the kirk of Libberton, upon the Lord's day, the tenth of June.

Upon Wedinsday the 13th, Mr Walter made intimatioun of his excommunicatioun in the pulpit of Edinburgh. Intimatioun was made the Lord's day following in the most part of the kirks of the south, and in Glasgow, notwithstanding the charge givin, to pulpim out of the pulpit who sould make the intimatioun. Mr John Davidsone taught in Libberton kirk the same day, nothing affrayed The duke called him "Un petit diable."

Upon Tuisday, the 26th of June, the Erle of Gowrie was summouned to compeere before the Presbyterie of Edinburgh, for making a banket to the Italian and some others in time of the fast, an for receaving of Mr R. Montgomrie in his house, the 20th day of June. He confessed his offence.

THE FORTIE-FYFT GENERALL ASSEMBLIE.

An extraordinarie Assemblie was holdin at Edinburgh, in the Ner Kirk, the 27th of June. Mr Andrew Melvill was continued moderator. In his sermoun, he inveyghed against the bloodie guillie (so he termed it) of absolute authoritie, whereby men intended the pull the crown off Christ's head, and to wring the scepter out of his hand. He shew also, how the dimission of the king's authoritie to his mother had been in working these seven or eight yeeres. The cheefe workers were, Beton, Bishop of Glasgow, and Leslie, Bishop of Rosse, who had writtin tuiching the same mate to the queene; and in his booke, had drawin the pourtrature of queene, and of a young childe twelve yeere old sitting at her feete and she stretching furth her hands toward him, pointing to his fore fathers, to follow their example in religioun and life; "thinking," sayeth he, "to make all null that was done under his raigne.

isobedience; and to absteane from preaching, in respect he had onfessed a fault before the counsell, and had submitted himself to nem, as they alledged. The proveist and bailliffes were comanded, after the same maner, to see this charge putt in execuoun. After that Mr Andrew Melvill had ended his exhortatioun, ohne Durie craved the advice of the Assemblie. He had a large scourse of all the proceedings of the king and counsell against m, and against Mr James Lowsone, Mr Walter Balcalquall, and r David Lindsey; speciallie what was done by himself. The ledged submissioun he affirmed to be false. His affirmatioun was stified by Mr James and Mr David. The mater was remitted the moderator and his assessors to advise upon. It was thought eete that David Fergusone and Mr Thomas Buchanan sould be nt to the king, to understand his minde therin; to crave of his ienesse the promise made to certan brethrein concerning him, to performed; and to lament the cace of their brethrein of the esbyterie of Glasgow, who were charged to compeere before the unsell at Sanct Johnston. When they were gone out at the ore, Mr Johne Davidsone said, "I disassent from their going: f," said he, " why sould yee seeke reposing of Johne Durie from In who hath no power of displacing, howbeit his flocke foolishlie I godleslie yeelded? What flesh may, or sould displace the (eat King's ambassader, he keeping the bounds of his commissun?" The moderator himself desired him to moderat his zeale. "ixt," said he, "I would not seeke to stay the compeerance of 1 brethrein at Perth, seing we have a number of the faithfull p fessers in the land, as the cruell murtherers sall not be able to heme them:" and putt them in remembrance of the like practise, it he beginning of religioun, in the same toun. And with this h departed in a great anger, perceaving nothing but a sillie yelding.

fter this came in the proveist, bailliffes, and some of the counof Edinburgh, to crave the advice of the Assemblie, tuiching the obedience to the king's charge. The moderator asked,

Whether they craved advice, so farre as concerned conscience. otherwise? They answered, They were fullie resolved of the conscience. Then, said the moderator, they could not medi with it, so farre as it was civill. The heate so increased betui them, that Mr Andrew had need of the admonition he gave a lit before to Mr Johne Davidsone. Alwise, the brethrein appoint six of their number to concurre with suche as the counsell won depute, and to confer upon that mater. Howbeit some of t brethrein desired that the proveist and bailliffes would superse their charge till the commissioners of the Assemblie returned from Stirline, vitt they prevented the time. It was concluded by t most part of the counsell and sessioun, upon the 28th day, the Johne Durie sould depart quietlie, and if he refused, he sould charged, as the king had commanded. Johne Durie informed t Assemblie, in their thrid sessioun, that certane brethrein direct from the counsell of the toun, moved, as appeared to him, of go affectioun, have desired him, for avoiding of the danger that m fall upon his flocke, to withdraw himself privatlie out of the tor and to absent himself for a space. Becaus his departure might prejudiciall to the commoun caus, and the maner of privie depart ure might carie a shew of some guiltinesse, he craved their judg ment; and, farther, that the brethrein would give him a testimon that he travelled faithfullie in his calling, that no fault hath bee found with him in his doctrine or in his life; and if it please G he be compelled to remove, that he have libertie to preache t Evangell ellis where, where God sall offer occasioun. The bret rein thought it not meete that he sould withdraw himself off t toun privatlie, but to abide the charge, which was to be givin the provest and bailliffes. As for his doctrine and life, the A semblie acknowledged his doctrine to be sound and wholsome, I life and conversatioun to be upright and honest, and gave him bertie, incace of his removing, to preache the Gospell wheresoev God sould offer occasioun. The same day, the 28th of June, b cause Johne Durie would not withdraw himself quietlie, he w charged by the proveist and bailliffes to passe off the toun. I resolved to obey, fearing some tumult if he refused. So, upon Thursday, at nyne houres, after supper, he went to the mercat croce, accompanied with manie of the brethrein. There he tooke instruments in the hands of Johne Johnston and George Gibson, scribes. First, tuiching his honest conversatioun and sound doctrine: Nixt, that the narrative of the charge, bearing his simple submissioun to the king and counsell in all things, was false; Thridlie, that he would preache the Word wheresoever he sould have occasioun, as the Generall Assemblie had allowed him libertie, notwithstanding he was discharged by the king's letters to preache, als weill as to stay in Edinburgh. Mr Johne Davidsone desired likewise an instrument upon his protestatioun, which was this; that as that was the most sorrowfull sight to Edinburgh that ever he saw, in that they had removed their pastor speeking the ruthe, for pleasure of fleshe and blood, so the plague and fearefull udgements of God sould light upon the devisers, inventers, and rocurers, actors, authors, consenters, and rejoicers, at the banishenent of Christ in that man's person, except they speedilie reented. The people standing throng about them, was muche noved. After this, Johne Durie went furth at the Neather Bow. 'he king's charge prescrived no time nor bounds but the toun; itt they charged him, that same night between eight and nyne, not nlie out of the toun, but also out of all the freedome of the toun.

HE PROCESSE AGAINST MINTO AND HIS COMPLICES SUPERSEEDED.

These who had used violence against Mr Johne Howesone, Ioderator of the Presbyterie of Glasgow, were summouned to impeere before this Assemblie. They were called upon. None impeered except one, who denied he had anie part in that actioun. In Johne Davidsone, Minister of Hammiltoun, Mr Andrew Knox, and some other brethrein, were taikin, sworne, receaved, and aditted witnesses; and were injoyned by the Assemblie to depone fore the moderator and his assessors what they knew. Johne uncansone presented the king's letter, wherin he required that VOL. III.

caus to be handled before the counsell. The same night, about midnight, David Fergusone and Mr Thomas Buchanan returned from the king. The day following, they declared what was his answere: to the First, that when the duke came to Stirline, lett them send some brethren, and it sould be considered; that is, Johne Durie's caus. To the Secund. He would not be farre from superseeding the compeerance of the ministers of Glasgow presbyteric at Sanct Johnstoun, provvding no processe be led against the Laird of Minto and his complices. Farther, they reported, that the king was muche offended for Johne Durie's comming to the toun withou his licence. It was answered, that the king had willed him to ab sent himself but for nyne or tenne dayes, and vitt he absented him self foure dayes longer; and when he returned, he returned privatlie to visite his wife, who, not long since, was delivered of a childe That the king was offended at the publict rebooke of noblemen without privat admonitioun preceeding; that it was answered by David Fergussone, that publict faults sould be publictlie re booked. "As for exemple," said he, "the duke mainteanneth openlie, an excommunicated person." But the king replied, "W are not yitt agreed upon that excommunication," etc., and fell ou in a passioun at the minister who excommunicat him, stammering upon his name. Howbeit, after due triell and examinatioun, th Laird of Minto and his complices their offence was verified, and found worthie to be punished with excommunication; notthelesse at the king's requeist, the Assemblie continued the pronouncing c anie sentence against them to the 6th day of Julie nixt to come to which time his Majestie offered to superseed the brethrein Glasgow, and, on which day, the nobilitie was to conveene a Perth; granting and committing full power to the commissioner directed by the Assemblie to the king's Majestie, his counsell, an conventioun, incace they find no remedie and redresse, to proceebetuixt the sixt day and the 24th of the same moneth, or soone at their discretion, and pronounce sentence in the said caus; and to appoint speciall persons for executioun, as they will answere t the Assemblie. And as for Johne Durie his place, the Assembli inhibited the kirk and presbyterie of Edinburgh to displace him, or to admitt anie other in his place; and inhibited all ministers, and all that aspire to the ministrie, to usurpe or take his place whill the Generall Assemblie be farther advised, except it be to helpe the ninisters of Edinburgh, at their desire; and incase anie sall be shosin, decerneth the said election to be null, void, and of no effect-

COMMISSION TO PROCEID AGAINST THE DUKE, IN CACE, &c.

Some brethrein were directed to the duke, to informe him, what great slander it was to interteane an excommunicat person; what as concluded by the acts of the Assemblie against these who intereaned excommunicat persons; to desire him earnestlie to remove im out of his companie; and to admonishe him, if he continue isobedient, the Assemblie will proceed according to their acts. Te answered, first, Interrogate, whether the kirk or the king were operiors? and therafter that he had command of the king and his ounsell to interteane him; and whill he were contramanded by im, he would not remove him. The Assemblie having considered s answere, ordeaned the brethrein of the ministrie directed in mmissioun to Perth, as they see occasioun there, and the offence interteaning the said Mr Robert not remedied, to appoint some eciall men, to proceed farther against him with the censures of e kirk, according to the acts of the Generall Assemblie, to whom e brethrein giveth their full power to that effect.

The Assemblie giveth full power and commissioun to Johne reskine of Dun, the ministers of the king's hous, Mrs Robert ont, James Lowsone, Andrew Melvill, Thomas Smeton, David ndsey, Andrew Hay, Andrew Polwart, Peter Blekburne, Pak Galloway, William Christesone, James Melvill, Thomas Buanan, Patrick Gillespie, Johne Porterfield, David Fergusone, d Johne Brand, to present to his Highnesse and nobilitie which to conveene at Perth the sixt day of Julie nixt, their Greeves livered to them in writt; and to crave, in the name and feare of Eternall God, remedie; and, if need be, to conferre and reasoun on the same, and to report to the nixt Assemblie.

THE TENOR OF THE GREEVANCES OF THE ASSEMBLIE.

"Unto your Majestie most humblie meanes and showes your Grace's faithfull and obedient subjects, the Ministers of God's Word within your Grace's realme, conveened in the Generall Assemblie, holdin at Edinburgh the 27th day of June: That where, upon the occasioun of diverse great and evident dangers appearand to the whole kirk of God, and professours of his true religioun in this countrie, finding the authoritie of the kirk abrogated, the censures therof contemned, and violence used against some of our brethrein, without punishment therof, the like hath nather beene seene in this realme, nor anie other, where the truthe of the Gospell hath beene preached and receaved: And fearing least your Majestie, for laike of information, might neglect in time to provide remedie for the inconveniences likelie to ensue therupon, we conveened our selves, in the feare of God, and your Hienesse' obedience; and, after diligent consideration of this present estate of the kirk, and enormiteis fallin furth in the same, with commoun consent, thought necessar, by our commissioners, to present and open to your Grace certan of our cheef and weghtie Greeves. Without hastie redresse, the kirk of God and true religioun can no wise stand, and continue in this your Grace's countrie.

"First, That your Majestie, by device of some counsellers, is caused to tak upon your Grace that spirituall power and authoritie which properlie belongeth to Christ, as onlie King and Head of his kirk. The ministrie and executioun therof is onlie givin to suche as beare office in the ecclesiasticall government of the same. So that, in your Grace's person, some men preasse to erect a new Popedome, as though your Majestie could not be free king and head of this commoun wealth, unlesse als weill the spirituall as the temporall sword be putt in your Grace's hand; unlesse Christ be bereft of his authoritie, and the two jurisdictions confounded which God hath divided: Which directlie tendeth to the wracke of all true religioun, as by the speciall heeds following is manifest:—

"1. For benefices are givin by absolut power to unworthic persons intrused in the office of the ministrie, without the kirk's admissioun, directlie against the law of God and acts of Parliament, wherethrough the kirk livings come in profane men's hands, and others, that sell their soules and make shipwracke of their conscience, for pleasure of men, and obteaning some worldlie commoditie.

- "2. Elderships, Synodall and Generall Assembleis, are discharged by letters of horning to proceed against manifest offenders, and to use the discipline of the kirk and censures therof, according to God's Word.
- "3. Johne Durie, by act of counsell, is suspended from preaching, and for the same caus banished from his flocke.
- "4. Excommunicated persouns, in contempt of God and his irk, are mainteaned in cheefe lords' houses, namelie, Mr Robert Iongomrie; authorized and caused to preache, and brought in our Majestie's presence; which is a sore wound to the consciences f them that love your Majestie, and know your Grace's upbringg, and a heavie slander in all natiouns professing the true relicioun.
- "5. An act or deliverance of counsell is made against the proedings of the ministrie, with a slanderous narrative, suspending npliciter, and disannulling the excommunicatioun justlie and orrlie pronounced against Mr R. Montgomrie, a rebellious and obinat offender, and troubler of the kirk of God, and open proclaations made according thereto.
- 6. Upon Moonday the secund of Julie, Mr R. Montgomrie was proclamed openlie, at the Croce of Edinburgh, Bishop of Glasgow, and his excommunication declared null.

The commissioners directed from the Generall Assemblie to Perth, with the Greevances of the Assemblie, repaired to Perth the sixt of Julie. They gott no good countenance. Sir James Melvill of Halhill counselled Mr Andrew Melvill to depart secreitlie out of the toun, becaus the king was offended with that he had said in the Assemblie, and in his sermons at St Andrewes. But he was not so easilie terrified. The Greeves and Articles being delivered und read, Arran, with a throwne countenance, and in boasting naner, said, "Who darre subscrive these treasonable articles?" &c. Mr Andrew answered, "We darre; and will subscrive them, and rander our lives in the caus." With this, he taketh the penne rom the clerk, and subscriveth, and calleth couragiouslie upon the est to subscrive, which they did. The duke and Arran, perceaving heir boldnesse, became affrayed, suspecting they had some secreit ssistance. After some calmer language, they were dismissed in eace.

DISCORD BETUIXT LENNOX AND GOWRIE.

A discord ariseth betuixt the Erle of Gowrie and the Duke of The original of their discord was this which followeth: The erle procured the colonellship of Tiviotdaill to the Laird of Traquar's brother. The duke obteaned another presentation to Charles Geddesse, and desired the Erle of Gowrie, Treasurer, to subscrive it. The erle shifted, and at last refused, and said, Traquare had made good service to the king. The duke layed to his charge the misspending of the king's patrimonie, oppressing the king's subjects, taking in muche, but applying little to the king's use, and said, "Va, pultron!" The erle said he was als true and faithfull a subject, and had made als good service to the king as anie of his ranke within the realme; and that this realme could not suffer two kings. The duke upbraided Tullibardin with the like language. He offerred to prove his service to have beene upright, against any under the king, Scotishman or Frenche, hand for hand, two, three, fourtie, or an hundreth. The duke was accompanied with Huntlie in the streets; Gowrie was accompanied by Atholl, Tullibardin, and others of the toun of Perth. The duke was faine to keepe his loodging. The Erle of Marshall and Maister (of) Glames departed off the toun malcontents. When the Commendatare of Dumfermline was at the port, in his journey, the duke sent for him. He answered, he knew the king's minde weill eneugh: he had takin leave of the king, and knew no other king; and so departed. The duke had layed this plott, that unlesse Glencarne, Boyd, Barganie, Marr, the Abbots of Cambuskenneth and Dryburgh, William Dowglas of Lochlevin, Lord Lindsey, Maister of Glames, and the Commendatar of Dumfermline, who were suspected to favour the Dowglasses, were putt out of the way, there was no suretie for him and his; and unlesse Mr James Lowsone, Mr David Lindsey, Mr Andrew Hay, Mr Thomas Smeton, Mr Indrew Polwart, Mr Andrew Melvill, were wairded in sindrie laces beyond Spey.

MR R. MONTGOMRIE EXPELLED OUT OF EDINBURGH.

Upon Wednisday the 25th of Julie, Mr James Lowsone went to the counsell of the toun, to informe them that Mr R. Montmrie shewed himself publictlie in their streets. The magistrats scharged him the toun by their officers. When he was out at e port, he said they sould see another thing within halfe an houre. tters were proclamed at twelve houres, at the Croce of Edin-Irgh, in his favours, declaring him to be a good Christian and e subject, notwithstanding of the pretended excommunicatioun, l charging everie man so to accept of him. Immediatlie after proclamation he returned to the toun. The counsell, with the atest part of the merchants and craftsmen, assembled upon Jursday earelie in the morning, and consulted whill ten houres. xander Clerk, proveist, was loath to putt him out of the toun, respect of the proclamatioun. Johne Adamsone said he had no suple to putt out Johne Durie, what danger soever ensued; and he made a scruple to putt out a false, mansworne, excommuniknave, perturber both of kirk and commoun weale. Mr James Lysone being sent for, said the like; and farther, that unlesse he we expelled, he sould take his leave in the pulpit the morne; so ch moved the proveist to consent with the rest. Mr R. Mont-Fire was gone to the Tolbuith, but was not suffered to enter whin the utter barre. When he would have takin instruments, that libertie was denied, having the king's letters upon him for ni varrant, all that stood about him fled from him, and the pokebe ers began to crie, "Aha, carle, hoy away!" Arran, sitting in ement beside the lords, desired that he might have accesse, aco ing to the king's licence. The lords answered, it was contrarie to le king's lawes that he sould stand or persue in judgement. In magistrats and officers came to the Tolbuith, to remove him on of the toun. The people were waiting for his comming furth; craftsmen with battons, wives and boyes with stones and rot eggs. If he had not beene convoyed by the proveist down to Kirk Wynde, he had hardlie escaped danger of his life. It people cried after him, "False theefe! mansworne theefe!" So went out at the Potterraw Port to Dalkeith. When the kinheard of it, he lay down on the Inche of Perth, not able to content himself for laughter, and said he was a seditious lowne; and if understood the deduction of the processe, he sould never acknowledge him more. After Bishop Montgomrie was expelled out Edinburgh, the Duke of Lennox procured that Mr Patrik Goloway, minister at Perth, sould be discharged the pulpit and to of Perth, so long as the king was in the toun. But he said would not remove till his flocke removed him, and would preshimself to the pulpit till they discharged him. He removed Kinnowle.

He promised to find law eneu to caus them both want the head, and then he sould have the their patrimonie, if their heyres would not be content. The ther answered, he had intentioun to meddle with Manderston, but as never wronged by the other. The duke and Arran, forseing nat Bothwell might be moved by the perswasioun of his ladie, the lite of Angus' sister, to favour the Dowglasses, used all the meanes ney could to sow discord betuixt them, by raising slanders upon er.

MR J. LOWSONE PAINTETH OUT THE DUKE'S ENORMITEIS.

The day following, that is, the Lord's day, the 26th, the provei requeisted Mr James Lowsone to be spairing in his sermon. H answered, as Micah did, whatsoever the Lord putt in his mout he would speeke, and as the text offered occasioun. He taugl upon the beginning of the 6th of Zacharie, and opened up th meaning of the two hills of brasse. He declamed against Array the duke, and their counsellers, as violaters of discipline, annulled of excommunicatioun, setters furth of proclamations to traduce th best of the nobilitie and ministrie, setters up of Tulchan bishor through insatiable covetousnesse. He layed to the duke's charge in speciall, raising of uproars in the kirk, troubling of the commou wealth, the introducing of prodigalitie and vanitie in apparrell, st perfluitie in banketting and delicat cheere, deflowing of dames an virgins, and other fruitts of the Frenche court, and vexing of the commouns of the countrie with airs. He exhorted Edinburgh t be thankfull to God for their deliverie from that which was in tended the nixt Tuisday, if God of his mercie had not prevented or ellis warned them, that a greater judgement would light upo them. "It becometh thee, O Edinburgh," said he, "to sing La queus contritus est, et nos liberati sumus." But he layed cheefelie t his charge, that he made the king the author of all these faults, an laboured to corrupt him.

at time, till farther order were takin with things out of order;
d said plainlie, ather the duke or they sould leave Scotland.
Then he was to come furth at the doore, the Maister of Glames layed leg before him. The king layed these things up in his heart, and toke them heavilie. Mr James Lowsone, this day, that is, the lest day, in his sermon, exhorted earnestlie the nobilitie to concurre the the rest, to the present reformation; for it was unreasountele that one man, though never so good, sould have all the guidif, of the king and countrie.

A DECLARATION PROCLAMED THAT THE KING WAS NOT CAPTIVE

Upon the first of September, the Lord Hereis, the Lairds of K syth and Corstorphine, were sent by the Duke of Lennox to tl king; but all privat conference was denied unto them. The A bot of Lindores was sent to the duke, and to the proveist of Edi burgh, to tell them by tongue, that if he came not that night Edinburgh, or the day following, he was deteaned captive again his will. Howbeit the lords staved him in Stirline, vitt purchasse they his declaratioun, that he had chosin Stirline, to make his r sidence till the present commotioun were settled, and that he w not deteaned captive; which was proclamed in Edinburgh tl thrid of September, as a ratificatioun of the former, together wi a discharge to levie anie men of warre, under paine of treasoun, ar a charge, to dissolve, within six houres, these who were alread levied. In the meane time, the king sent a letter to the toun s creitlie, to tak heed that the duke receaved no harme. The were the magistrats and counsell verie franke for the duke.

J. DURIE'S RETURNE TO EDINBURGH.

Johne Adamsone, Alexander Udward, and Johne Wilkie, crected commissioners from Edinburgh, to understand the king minde, if he would come to Edinburgh, and when, interceeded f Johne Durie. They purchased licence to Johne Durie to return to Edinburgh. He preached before the king in Stirline, upon the Lord's day, the secund of September. As he is comming fro Leith to Edinburgh, upon Tuisday the 4th of September, the mett him at the Gallow Greene two hundreth men of the inhabi ants of Edinburgh. Their number still increassed, till he came within the Neather Bow. There they beganne to sing the 124 Psalme, "Now Israel may say," &c. and sang in foure parts, knowne to the most part of the people. They came up the street till they came to the Great Kirk, singing thus all the way, to the number of two thowsand. They were muche moved themselves, and so were all the beholders. The duke was astonished, and more affrayed at that sight than at anie thing that ever he had seene before in Scotland, and rave his beard for anger. After exhortatioun made in the reader's place, by Mr James Lowsone, to thankfulnesse, and the singing of a psalme, they dissolved with great joy.

THE DUKE CHARGED TO DEPART.

The Lords Hereis and Newbottle, directed from the duke to the king, returned with answere, that the duke must depart out of Scotland within fourteene dayes; that he must remain at Dalkeith or Aberdour, accompanied onlie with fortie persons, till he depart; and that he must rander the castell of Dumbartan instant-lie. Their intentioun was, to have made reconciliatioun betuixt the duke and the other parties: but all secreit conference with the king was denied them. And this was concluded in counsell, and all hostilitie against him to cease in the meane time: otherwise, if he agreed not to these conditions, to looke for no assurance.

THE CITICENS WATCHE FOR SAFETIE OF THEIR MINISTERS.

The counsell of Edinburgh took it verie high, speciallie Henrie Nesbit and James Adamsone, that Mr James Lowsone had said, he day before, there would be moe to putt the duke furth of he toun, and lett in the lords, than would be for the contrare. Some of the counsell said, they sould skaile their nest; wherepon some of the best affected citicens watched, to the number of two or three hundreth, in the backe of the kirk, for the safetie of their ministers. The proveist and James Adamsone, with threatnings, commanded them to goe home to their houses; but they continued watching and singing psalmes all the night.

THE DUKE DEPARTETH OUT OF EDINBURGH.

The duke and his factioun perceaving how the inhabitants of the toun were inclynned, thought it not expedient to stay in Edinburgh. So the duke departed out of the toun, upon the fyft of September, after noone, accompanied with the proveist, bailliffes, and 500 men, toward the Scheans; for he pretended he was to ryde to Dalkeith. But after he had stayed a prettie space upon the south side of the Burrow Mure, he turned westward, and road toward Glasgow, accompanied with the Lord Maxwell, the Maister of Livingston, the Maister of Eglinton, Phairnihirst, and sindrie other gentle men. Cesfurd and Coldingknowes went homeward.

A CHARGE TO THE CAPTAN OF DUMBARTAN.

Upon Fryday, the 7th of September, the king's letters were proclamed at Glasgow, discharging anie to resort to the duke, but suche as minded to accompanie him to France; and discharging the captan of the Castell of Dumbartan to receave in moe with the duke than he was able to maister and overcome.

ARRAN COMMITTED TO GOWRIE'S CUSTODIE.

At this time, the Erle of Arran was in waird in Stirline, in the Erle of Gowrei's loodging. He promised, upon conditioun of their favour and his libertie, to make the king favorable to them, and, as others report, to furnish mater of treason against the duke. They made what vantage they could of him, but did not trust him. Some of the lords would have had him executed; others, considering the king's affectioun toward him, thought it not expedient.

e was transported from Ruthven Castell, and committed to the stodie of the Erle of Gowrie.

Upon Wednisday, the 12th of September, three proclamations ere made at the Mercat Croce of Edinburgh: one, tuiching the scharge of the airs, and all the commissions and blanks which ere givin to apprehend and punish suche as the duke, Arran, and eir supposts, thought good; another, tuiching the king's freedome Stirline: the thrid, tuiching the libertie to the Assemblie of the k, and free preaching of the Word, limited by a proclamatioun ted at Perth, the 13th of Julie, wherin the sentence pronounced unst the Reverend Father in God, R. Montgomrie, Archbishop Glasgow, was declared null, as before, when licence was granted t him upon the 12th of June, notwithstanding of his excommunicioun, to stand in judgement, to persue and defend whatsoever ers depending or persued by him, or against him, before whatsnever judges. A charge was givin in the proclamation, made 1 13th of Julie, to the Presbytereis of Stirline, Glasgow, and o er burrow touns, to desist from persuing anie man for intercomouning with Mr Robert. In this, and other proclamatiouns, nisters were reproached, and the executioun of discipline stayed. I rdlie could the king be induced to grant this proclamation y ch followeth, he had beene so poysouned by the duke and A an. They fostered him in his bawdie talke, provoked him to tl pleasures of the flesh, and all kinde of licentiousnesse. When was urged to subscrive a warrant for this proclamatioun, he et red not to say, that the ministers were but a pack of knaves; th: he had rather lose his kingdome, ere he were not avenged un them; that the professors of France were but seditious trato's, rebels, and perturbers of commoun wealths. Bothwell rebe ked him sharpelie, and said, suche talking was the readie way to lucke the crown off his head; and desired him to tak up himin time. At lenth, he was moved, by Bothwell's perswasioun, to obscrive the proclamatioun; for nothing of importance, which mint serve for furtherance of the Lord's caus, was obteaned within his procurement. The tenor of the proclamatioun followeth:-

"James, by the grace of God, King of Scots, to our levits, & messingers, our shireffs in that part, conjunctlie and severallie, ciallie constitut, greeting. Forsameekle as it is humblie mean and heavilie compleanned to us by the ministers of God's W that where, by the proclamatioun made in Perth the 12th of J last bypast, published in diverse parts of our realme, ordeanned be intimated at all mercat croces and parish kirks within samine, bearing, that false brutes are divulgated, givin furth, publictlie declamed, under colour of religioun, and title and ne of the kirk, to stirre our good subjects, in our contempt, to neg their duetie and obedience owed to us; commanding and charg all and sindrie kirks, lords, barons, ministers, and all others lieges, to desist and cease from all publishing, preaching, rep ing, or affirming suche false brutes and manifest lees, exhort them not to be moved to anie conventions or assembleis, ur whatsoever title or names, except our advice and directioun thereto: Certifeing them that doe in the contrare, they sall holdin, reputed, and punished as makers of convocatioun of lieges, disquietters of our commoun peace, rebellers, and ener to us, our authoritie and lawes; by the words of which procla tioun, the authoritie and libertie of God's Word in free reprov sinne and iniquitie, and the priviledge granted to God's kirk, in all ages observed, and speciallie since our coronatioun, in convocatioun of generall, synodall, and particular assembleis at times convenient, is thought to be inhibited and putt under junctions in a new and strange maner; which was not, nor is our meaning: Wherefore, we have declared, and by thir our let declare, that our true intentioun and unfained will never was, is, to resist or putt stay or injunctioun to the free preaching God's Word in reproving of sinne and iniquitie, as by the se Word occasioun is offered; nor yitt to stoppe the convention generall, synodall, or whatsomever particular assemble is of the and ministers, at all times requisite, according to the Word God, and lovable use and custome observed heretofore: wil them to proceed as God's Word directeth, as by use and custo nath beene receaved, notwithstanding the proclamation made, or mie other to be made, in the contrare; anent the which, we lispense for ever. Our will is heerefore, and we charge you traitlie, and command, that incontinent, thir our letters seene, yee masse to the mercat croces of the heed burrowes of our realme, and ther places needfull, and there, by open proclamatioun, make publication of the premisses, that none pretend ignorance of the ame, as yee will answere to us therupon. The which to doe, we ommitt to you, conjunctlie and severallie, our full power by thir sur letters, delivering them, by you duelie executed and indorsed, again to the bearer.

DECLARATION OF THE JUST AND NECESSAR CAUSES MOVING US OF THE NOBILITIE OF SCOTLAND, AND OTHERS THE KING'S MAJESTIE'S FAITHFULL SUBJECTS, TO REPAIRE TO HIS HIENESSE' PRESENCE, AND TO REMAINE WITH HIM, FOR RESISTING OF THE PRESENT DANGERS APPEARING TO GOD'S TRUE RELIGION AND PROFESSORS THEROF, AND TO HIS HIENESSE' OWNE PERSON, ESTAT, AND CROWNE, AND HIS FAITHFULL SUBJECTS THAT HAVE CONSTANTLIE CONTINUED IN HIS OBEDIENCE; AND TO SEEKE REDRESSE AND REFORMATION OF THE ABUSE AND CONFUSION OF THE COMMOUN WEALTH, REMOVING FROM HIS MAJESTIE THE CHEEFE AUTHORS THEROF, WHILL THE TRUTHE OF THE SAMINE MAY BE MADE MANIFEST TO HIS HIENESSE' ESTATS, THAT WITH COMMOUN CONSENT, REDRESSE AND REMEED MAY BE PROVIDED. DIRECTED FROM STIRLINE, WITH SPECIALL COMMAND AND LICENCE TO BE PRINTED. ANNO 1582.

"Wee, the nobilitie and others, the king's Majestie's faithfull bjects, moved latelie to repaire to his presence, and remaine with him, for resisting the great dangers appearing to the true religi and professors therof, to the king's owne person, estat, and crown and to the commoun wealth of this countrie, willing that t grounds and occasions of all our proceedings be made patent all our soveran lord's true lieges and good subjects, wherethrou the prosecutioun of this our godlie and honest caus may take t better effect to the glorie of God, the cheefe and onlie author the of, and to the releefe and confort of this poore afflicted commo wealth, have thought it most meete and expedient to publishe a divulgat the just and necessar causes moving us to provide for good and godlie redresse and reformation of the abuses and end miteis underwrittin; hoping that all the true professors of Go religioun presentlie preached within the same, and all suche have constantlie continued in the king's Majestie's obedience, a tender the commoun wealth of their native countrie, will putt their hand, and farther this godlie interprise, that with commo consent and sound advice the best and most sure remeed ther fore may be provided.

"In the first, it is not unknowne, how our forbeares faithful served our king's most noble progenitors, and spent their lives defence of this realme, against all forrane enemeis; as our fathe and we have hazarded our lives and lands, in preservatioun of l innocent person, first, from the murtherer of his father, and the after, in defence of his crowne and authoritie, being so joyn with the caus of God's true religioun, as the one could receave detriment without the inconvenient of the other; upon sure ho alwayes of his Grace's good allowance, and assured protection therefore, at his yeeres of discretion; like as, indeid, we nev found, nor find in his Majestie's owne good nature and proper i clinatioun, but a love and zeale to that true and Christian religiou wherin he was godlie nourished; a loving affectioun to all his n bilitie, and others faithfull subjects; an earnest desire to have tl commoun wealth of this his realme governed in peace, according to justice and equitie. Yitt, of late yeeres, since some few me borne heritours to nothing in this land, partlie moved by ignoran of this estate, and partlie by an ambitious desire, not onlie to be quals, but superiors to the ancient nobilitie, clothing themselves vith the pretence of the king's Hienesse his name and kinred. nd ascriving to his Majestie the odious title of an absolut power. hey have not ceased to attempt in effect what they pleased, in a trange and unaccustomed maner; and in a verie short space of is Majestie's young age, have aspired to titles of high honour. nd obteanned the possessioun and commoditie of great and faire vings, both spirituall and temporall, beside great bribes in money, wells, and other costlie graith, receaved by some of them; but ow justlie, and with what good ground and order, Almightie God noweth, and will declare with time. Which we patientlie beeld, whill by experience we found all things tending to the undervning and overthrow of true religioun putt in livelie practise, nd working fordward to the destruction of the ministers of God's Yord, and whole professors therof; and therewithall, the king's lajestie's good fame falling in decay, and his crown and authoritie be putt in questioun, by the privie practise of a reconciliatioun tuixt his Hienesse and his mother, by dimissioun of his crown, joyning her in conjunct authoritie with his Hienesse; drawing, the meane time, the order of justice, and whole government of e commoun wealth in a dissolute, partiall, and confused order, at the other mischeef intended might proceed the more easilie espied.

"For as concerning the dangers appearing to the true religioun of professors therof, what greater preparation of wracke and certhrow of the true religioun could be intended, nor to goe about the corrupt the king's Majestie's tender age, most godlie and happinourished, instructed, and exercised, before this men came in codit; occupying his Hienesse, for the most part, not onlie in vanitas, but also defyling his eares with filthie and uncomelie speeches; twing his residence in the places of Dalkeith and Kinneill, where the greatest resort of people was commounted Papists, dissolute persus, and suche as had beene ever adversars to true religioun, his one person and estat, and where whoordom and insolencie was more frequentlie than princelie and vertuous exercises; that v and impudent woman, over famous for her monstrous doings, n without suspicion of the devilish magicall art, never ceasing by h wicked inventions, slanderous leing and filthie words, and by h uncomelie doings, to vexe and importune the king's Majestie, the great greefe of sindrie that beheld, and could not amend t same?

"And by that companie, and from these places, his Majestie w perswaded to write, not onlie to Papists, and to enter in intelligen with them, but to suche Papists, Scotishmen borne, as were by I Hienesse' estats justlie forfaulted for treasonable crimes committed by them against his authoritie; perswasioun givin to his Hieness that the suretie of his estat and crowne depended cheefelie upsuche freindship, as their travells and practises might compasse an procure to him: Which in end, notwithstanding of the concurrent of the Pop's nunce, and others, most notable persecuters of the kirk of God in France, wrought not so muche as to procure his once to be stiled King. Yitt, to interteane this trade, some toking and presents were procured, and sent unto his Majestie, to hold he Hienesse occupied with contemplatioun and use of the novelt therof, whill with time he might be drawin farther into the sna intended for the wracke of his Majestie and us all.

"In the meane time, the practise of the associatioun working fordward, the king's Majestie hath beene perswaded to allow the the ministers sould be putt at, not plainlie, but indirectlie and colouredlie at the first; beginning with dispositioun of benefices persons unworthie and unqualified, pleno jure, and by absolut power without examinatioun or admissioun of the kirk, against the law and constitutions of this realme, and without due provisioun made for sustentation of the ministers serving at the kirks of prelaceis that sort disponed.

"Nixt, the discipline of the kirk more openlie impugned, who as the king's Majestie, by perswasion of thir enemeis to the kir was induced to make himself and his privie counsell judges, in the cognition and judgement of maters meere ecclesiasticall, and compared to the compared to the cognition of the kirk more openlie impugned, who as the king's Majestie, by perswasion of thir enemeis to the kirk more openlie impugned, who as the king's Majestie, by perswasion of thir enemeis to the kirk more openlie impugned, who as the king's Majestie, by perswasion of thir enemeis to the kirk more openlie impugned, who as the king's Majestie, by perswasion of thir enemeis to the kirk more openlie impugned, who are the kirk more openlie impugned, which is the compared to the kirk more openlie impugned, which is the compared to the kirk more openlie impugned, which is the compared to the kirk more openlie impugned, which is the compared to the kirk more openlie impugned, which is the compared to the kirk more openlie impugned, which is the compared to the kirk more openlie impugned, which is the compared to the kirk more openlie impugned to t rning the doctrine of the preachers, and to tak upon him whatmever jurisdictioun the Pop usurped therinto of old; yea, and ore, to discharge the Generall Assemblie, and whole pastors withthis realme, to proceed to the sentence of excommunicatioun; o, to suspend the same sentence of excommunicatioun, most justand orderlie pronounced, and to decerne the same of none availl, tree, nor effect.

At last, the mouths of preachers have been stopped by comndement. Some ministers have beene dung, banished, susnded from the ministrie, cast in prison, and removed from their takes, untried or lawfullie convicted of anie crime or just occasun. Others of them have beene latelie indyted, and called to herly the law in most suspect judgement, for treasonable and file crimes, to make them and their doctrine odious; and they, heing purchassed advocation to the Justice-Generall, (whose judgenut they meane never to declyne,) the receaving of their soverteis in the ordinar maner by commandement was differed, and refused the receaved, that they, being putt to the horne as rebels, their can eats might have beene dispouned upon. Commandement also he beene givin, not to proceed in execution of the ecclesiasticall casures against manifest and obstinat offenders.

It is more than manifest, how the king's Majestie hath beene is sed and provoked to tarie from the sermons of godlie preachers, at to tak loath to heare the truthe, in reproving of sinne spokin by them; and by the contrare, to permit a perjured and excommicated person, worthilie cutt off from the societie and fellowship of thrist, to be interteanned and fostered in his sight and compile.

Was there not violence used to pull the ordinar minister out of th kirk of Glasgow, and by force to place and intruse therin the sae unworthie man? Were not Papists, and men weill knowne in mous, purposelie placed as magistrats in that citie and universit, to trouble the kirk, and stude of the schollers; with speciall dictioun to them, and to the gentle men of the countrie, to disple the ordinar minister, and intruse in that rowme that selfsame unworthie person, who, long before, was discharged of functioun in the kirk of God? Was he not there mainteanned, expresse commandement given, to suffer none of the ministers withstood him to have rest or freindship in these bounds? And not the officer of the kirk, that past to charge him, taikin and I in prison?

"To what excessive charges and travells were the minis within and about Glasgow, and the maisters of the universitie regents putt to, by their oft summouning before his Majestie counsell, and continuation of their caus to sindrie dayes and place the schollers therewith all being the sonnes of noblemen, barrand others of good qualitie, furiouslie invaded, and their ble drawin!

"Wherupon, diverse privat and publict complaints being may and the ministrie conveening, and presenting the causes of the greeves unto the king's Majestie at Perth, how hardlie and unsonablie they were used by some of the counsell for the time, how slenderlie answered with reformation of little or nothing of pleanned upon, by the same answere may yitt appeare.

"In place of which redresse and reformatioun hoped for, there not a decreit givin, and letters in the foure formes past, these Lords of the Privie Counsell for the time, to answere a obey the said excommunicat man, of the rents and fruicts of archbishoprick of Glasgow, in a maner partiall, and altogether traordinar; that being no competent judgement for anie suche ter, but the Lords of the Counsell and Sessioun, to whose jud ment suche maters properlie perteaned, plainlie refusing the graing of anie suche letters to a persoun so standing excommunicat

"And besides all this, by act of Privie Counsell, and proclar tions past therupon, and published not onlie at diverse mer croces, but in the kirk of St Johnstoun, in the king's Majest hearing, which his Grace was intised to affirme by his owne mou there was a narratioun made, right slanderous and displeasant the hearts of all suche as feared God, and loved the true religio whereby the ministers are called unnaturall subjects, seditious p sons, troublesome and unquiett spirits, members of Satan, enemeis to the king's Majestie and the commoun wealth of their native countrie; concluding, in the same proclamatioun, with a commandenent to desist from preaching of suche things as there are called ees, howbeit, in veritie, known'e sinnes and offences against God. and to the hurt and slander of his kirk and true religioun; and discharging them the conventions and assembleis of the ministrie, inder the paine to be punished as rebels and makers of convocaioun. To all this concurred the frequent advertisements and runors of forrane countreis, of the sudden alteratioun of religioun, and cutting away the principals of the nobilitie, professors therof, o be shortlie attempted in Scotland. It was inquired by some, if ur king's Majestie past alreadie to the masse? Famous books and bels were printed, and dispersed in this countrie, warning the proessors of God's true religioun to remove. Daylie intelligence was etuixt thir men that governed the king's person and the Papists, oth in France and England; and some of the English fugitives, eing Papists, resett and interteaned verie neere the king's Maestie's person for the time. The speciall names of suche of the obilitie, officers, and of the king's true servants that were destiated for the massacre, were in all men's mouths, and nothing restig but the executioun, since the authors of the like in France had bteaned place and credit to command also in Scotland. The lives and death of noblemen, and others the king's faithfull subjects, not epending upon an ordinar and lawfull triell of that wherewith they ight anie wise be charged, according to the ancient and lovable wes of this realme; but their dittay and destruction standing in 1e privie advertisements daylie receaved furth of France and Engand, from their adversars in religioun, and their knowne professed nemeis, who have long awaited procuring their wracke, wherof teir intentioun was to mak our king's Majestie the instrument.

"And for the better performing of their ungodlie interprise, ending to the utter wracke and finall subversioun of the true regioun, and whole professors therof, they have travelled with the ing's Majestie, to perswade him, by all meanes possible, to tak upon himself to be author of all this wracke and dissimulatioun, he was moved by their importunitie to declare in St Johnstoun, abuses compleaned upon to be his owne deid; howbeit we don't not but his Majestie is altogether innocent.

"Now, the true and Christian religioun, and whole professo therof, being brought to suche hazard and extremitie as is abor rehearsed, who can not consider and behold the evident dange which appeared to the king's owne person, estat, and crowne, seir the one so dependeth upon the other, that the one can not be hu or impaired anie wise without the great incommoditie and dctr ment of the other? For by and attour the travelling to corrupt th king's age, giving him all the provocatiouns to dissolute life in ma ners that was possible, by licentious companie, by interteaning their owne harlots in his presence, and careing them about wit them to all places where his Hienesse did repaire, what sall w speeke of the shamelesse and filthie behaviour of her that is calle Countesse of Arran, who, not being satisfied with the ignominie an shame done to the Erle of Marche, the king's dearest uncle, throug her inordinat lust, ceaseth not vitt to pervert the king's Majestie owne youth, by slanderous speeche and countenance, which we ar ashamed to expresse?

"What greater danger can be devised against the king's Ma jestie's estat and crowne, nor to ding¹ continuallie in his eares, and to perswade him to thinke his raigne unsure, wanting his mother' benedictioun; and that France and Spaine would not call hir king, but at her desire—and to that effect, to write to her, and enter in practise anent the dimissioun of his crowne, or for asso ciatioun of her in conjunct authoritie with him, to the extreme perell of his owne estat, to cast all things done since he was crowned in doubt, and to mak all his true nobilitie and subjects tratours. And in the meane time, whill all this purpose was still working nather the estats nor counsell being made privie to the message, of answere returned, sindrie practises have beene made with Papists both in France and England, speciallie with Scotish men standing orfaulted; of whom, sindrie were drawin home, some intrused by nagistrats within burrowes, whose inhabitants for the king's querell they have murthered, beside, that they were guiltie of the blood f the king's Majestie's parents; others, standing convicted of the ing's father's murther, evill affected to his crowne, brought in serice, and their advices in maters of greatest importance cheefelie llowed. The noble men, and others that had alwayes continued te king's faithfull subjects and weill willers, reproached and unished his Hienesse' court and companie, unheard and untried; airs layed to trappe them; some sakleslie forefaulted, others imeded to give their free votes in counsell, and if they did, bragged ad querrelled therefore; continuall lees and misreports of them ing in the king's Majestie's eares, to make them odious; and the aird of Innermarkie, fugitive, and remaining furth of the realme r a foule murther, for a bribe brought home again and pardouned, mak him for his owne remissioun an accuser of noble men, and te king's good and faithfull subjects. Thus, the king's Majestie's sthoritie, fame, and reputatioun, being brought in decay, and seatlie diminished, no care nor mention is made for his provision a mariage with a partie agreeable, and of the same religion.

"That thir forenamed practises, both against the true religioun to the king's Majestie's estat and crowne, have beene devised and is ended, experience teacheth it to be most true; lyke as also, the maine appeareth most manifestlie, by the dissolutious of the amitie and freindship betuixt his Majestie and his decrest sister, the Queene at England, and the two realmes, maliciouslie procured by thir in, altogether ignorant of the estat of the countrie, and authors othir calamiteis; travelling by all meanes possible to alienat the lag's Majestie's minde from her freindship, notwithstanding her geat zeale and affection, shewed from time to time, in the maintance and protectious of the true religious in both the realmes, all of the great care, love, and providence, declared oftentimes in prevations of the king's Majestie's person, estat, and crowne, all repressing, by her force and substance, of the diverse rebellies attempted against his person, during his infancie.

"As concerning the commoun wealth of the realme, standing cheefelie in the good and vertuous governing of the king's persoand estat, and in the equal administratioun of justice to all th subjects, to the confort of the good and terrour of the wicked, let all indifferent men judge what hath beene the conditioun thero thir two or three yeeres bypast. Is not the whole order of justic and policie in the realme interverted, the law brokin, by makin of men and weomen prisoners, and using and threatning of tortur for everie light and simulated caus; and banishment of the hones men of Edinburgh from their owne houses, they never being calle nor convicted of anie crime, but delated by the malice of the evill willers, and relaxed and keeped strait at thir men's appetit who have left nothing unsought or unassaved, that they migh mak profite or money of; not spairing that which sould have susteaned the king's owne estat, and the needfull effaires of the realme, and vitt the samine not able to susteane the needlesse an prodigall consumptioun, and the unsatiable ambitioun and greed nesse of thir men, their wicked counsellers and followers, to who nothing hath seemed unlawfull merchandice? Was not justic blood, freindship, and the king's proper rent, bestowed upon th duke for his living, and all made commounlie sellable?

"How farre hath the commoun weale beene interessed, in rai ing and abasing of the coine, thir last two yeeres? What loss at least have the subjects receaved, by the crying doun of the money this yeere? To whome, in particular, hath the commodit of that commoun skaith redounded? Hath it releeved anie pa of the king's Majestie's debt, or supplied anie one honorable oprofitable worke in the commoun weale?

"Toward the administration of justice, lett first the session consider, how extraordinarilie they have beene urged in this fear full time bypast, looking when they sould be taikin, one and on out of the judgement seate, and committed to prisson, or banishe when anie thing proceeded contrare the appetite and intention thir men, or where they requested or favoured.

"Was not command givin to repossesse men forfaulted, whe their pacification and restitution was not ratified and approved by parliament; and that no suspensioun, for lawfull causes, sould be granted against the same? In maters criminall, no justice done, and some time warrants givin to proceed, and continue justice courts together, and at once? Great feeds fostered, to make the fatter escheats to fall, and plaine opposition made to the agreement of parteis standing at variance?

"Taking of order with the burnings, slaughters, heirships, and depredations committed on the borders, and in the Hielands, altogether neglected. Little or no care taikin for interteanement of the peace and amitie with the Christian princes and commoun wealths, to gett the new exactions raised on the merchants in France and Flanders releeved, and the quietnesse in the borders keeped: the course of justice and redresse at the frontiers impeded and drivin over; leaving this countrie loose to be invaded at all occasions, without sure freindship of anie, but if it sall be sought where the king's Majestie is not acknowledged for a king, and where it will not be obteaned without the hazard of his religioun, and perell of his owne estat and crowne.

"What sall we say of the unlawfull taking of the tutorie of Aran, a confortlesse noble man, innocent of all foule crimes, and isited by the hand of God, and under that pretext, after solemne athe made, of lawfull administration of that charge and office to us utilitie, according to right and lawes of the realme, bereaving im (after he was declared idiot) of his stile, heritage, and living, y a fraudfull and stollin resignatioun, to the wracke and disherishng of him and all his linage, although not declared offenders; prosuring strange and extraordinar acts of parliament to be made, to nainteane that godlesse and unlawfull conquest, and reproaching he principals of the nobilitie with lees, and other unsufferable inureis in their faces, the like wherof was never done in Scotland; reside the inhumane handling of that innocent and dejected creaure, and of the miserable noblewoman the dutchesse his mother; eeping him in a prisson with prissoners, evill furnished of meete, trinke, or clothing, in a most cruell and barbarous maner, to the hurt of the king's conscience, honour, and good fame, whom they travelled to perswade to tak upon him to be the author of all thin wrongs and wickednesses?

"When all other shifts that might make profite or money had beene scummed and sought, yea, the goods of living men, before they were convicted or putt to the horne, intrometted with, or factore granted therupon in a new and unaccustomed maner; at last, the Justice Air of Cliddisdaill holdin, and the Chamberlar Airs devised, for scourging of the burrowes, testifie with what forme or good order thir men beganne, or ettled to have proceeded.

"Compositions tane for men, and vitt they never impannelled nor accused; and oftentimes, the landed man and his tenants sold over head for a summe, without respect to the offences, but to the number of the persons, and sindrie other fashiouns of briberie new and most perellous to enter in custome, under the name of justice, lyke as the poorer sort in the burrowes sould not have escaped the importable scafferie1 intended; and the wealthiest, albeit of never so good fame, were threatned with the pursute of hom-bringing of false money; a crime, indeid, deserving severe punishment; but whether the motioun proceeded of zeale to justice, and punishement of offenders, lett it be judged, considering to whose gaine and profite these exactions sould have come; and when suche as were appointed to be judges and rulers of that court, for the most part, were mocked with some note of infamie. And was it not great presumption for anie subject to preasse to impyre in suche sort, above the whole burrowes, being one of the three estats; and derogatioun and impairing of the king's Majestie's owne authoritie, and to his Hienesse' Justice General? Yea, to intrude in the offices of him and of the Admirall, was esteemed for the time no maters of effect or importance?

"What extraordinar and fearefull commissiouns and charges have beene impetrated of the king's Majestie, not simplie of Justiciarie, but with blanks for taking and apprehending what persons they pleased, and incace of their refuse to be takin, to raise fire, asseige houses, slav or mutilat. And to whose discretioun was the execution therof committed, but of him that is famous, and alreadie in danger of the law, (when God sall send justice,) of fire raising, commoun adulterie, sindrie odious slaughters, ravishing of a woman, assieging of men in their owne houses within burgh, holding of a hous of warre within burgh, and shooting furth of the same the king's Majestie's subjects and barons, leishing of men with belts and bridles, slaughter of an officer of armes at the mercat croce, in the verie executing of his office, ryving the king's letters, causing the executer therof sweare that he sould not reveele the same; taiking of a gentleman out of the king's Majestie's owne hous of the Castell of Stirline, careing him to the Parke under silence of night, tirring1 him naiked, bidding him choose whether he would be hanged or headed, and after dinging and misusing him, causing him sweare that he sould reveale the same to none but to his maister; forcing of the king's Majestie's waird of the Tolbuith of Edinburgh, cruellie wounding a man committed to waird therin, and maisterfullie taking another offender out of waird, without finding of cautioun, or commandement had of the magistrats; hanging in a sword belt and tormenting of a young man comming to him, for executing a precept of wairning, before this last Witsonday, in a foule and unworthie maner to be rehearsed; participatioun with pyrats in their thift, and robrie of the goods of the freinds and confederats of this realme; reproaching and misusing some of the king's Majestie's counsell, in his owne hous. If this man was meete to have the credit of the executioun of suche a fearefull and bloodie commissioun, or was anie wise worthie to be suffered to come to his Hienesse with a companie of armed men, for putting of further cruelteis to executioun, lett first God, and then the king's Majestie and estats judge.

"In all this time, little ordinar privie counsell being keeped, except it had beene for propped causes, to the advancement of thir men, their freinds or followers; the rather, becaus the duke had procured an ordinance, that nothing past out of counsell sould be valuable that was not subscrived by him.

"Thus, the king's Majestie's honour being greatlie impaired, the most part of the nobilitie and good subjects finding no sure accesse, to admonishe and certifie his Majestie of his owne honour and weelfare, nor to move his Hienesse in their owne errands, or to procure expeditioun of their lawfull and reasonable causes, but by the said duke his mediatioun, and to him, by some interpreter oft times deerelie hired; finding ourselves in continual danger by misreports to be putt at, and hourelie looking for executioun of the cruelteis intended against us, we thought nothing better nor to repaire to his Majestie, and remaine beside him; removing the cheefe and principall authors of thir enormiteis, whill the truth might be manifested to his Highnesse and his estats; and that by commoun advice, suche speedie and substantious remedeis may be provided, as the ministers and professors of God's true religioun publictlie preached, and by the lawes of the realme established, may live, and use the exercise of the same religioun, als weill in the free dispensatioun of God's Word, and reproving sinne and impietie, as in administratioun of the Sacraments, and using ecclesiasticall censures and discipline, where occasioun is offered, according to the same Word, and lovable lawes and custome observed within this realme heretofore, untroubled or burthenned with extraordinar or strange injunctiouns; they behaving themselves the king's Majestie's duetifull subjects, and being obedient to his Majestie's lawes, in ordinar and lawfull judgement, for anie offences, criminall or civill, wherewith they may be charged.

"Nixt, that the truth may be manifested of the travells that have beene tane, and practise used for moving of the king's Majestie, to condescend to anie dimissioun of his crown and royall authoritie, or associatioun of the queene, his mother, in a conjunct governement with him; and that it be considered, what advantage or perrell that intentioun, taking effect, might have wrought to the true religioun, the king's Majestie's persoun and estat, and to his obilitie and faithfull subjects professing his obedience; and that are provisioun may be had, how the further proceeding in this angerous practise sall be snibbed and cutt off, and the attempting of the like, in time comming, forborne and eshewed.

"And, finallie, that the said corruptions, abuses, and disorders, ntered within thir late yeeres in the commoun wealth, ather in ne corruption and misusing of justice, or the king's owne person, ous, rent, officers, order of counsell, and government of the pubct effaires, oppressing and extorsing of subjects under colour of stice or otherwise, being particularlie considered, may be so nended and reformed, as God may be thereby pleased, the king's lajestic honoured and loved, and that the nobilitie and subjects ay live in justice, peace, and tranquillitie, releeved of the cruelis, dangers, and calamiteis intended against them, in time omming."

The Duke of Lennox purposed to lurke for a certan time in and bout Dumbartan, and to await upon opportunitie. In the meane one published he this declaration following:—

THE DUKE OF LENNOX HIS DECLARATION TUICHING THE CALUM-NEIS AND ACCUSATIONS SETT OUT AGAINST HIM BY THE ERLES OF MARR AND GOWRIE, WITH OTHERS, THEIR CONFEDERATS.

"It is commoun to persons that are willing to committ treasoun colour their ungodlie interprise under some honest pretext, to see effect that they be not esteemed and holdin as odious to the ople, and cheefelie, where it tendeth against their owne king of prince; as they who have latelie deteaned the king's Majestie reforce, and against his will, with sindrie kindes of armour, as if that been in time of warre, unwitting how to colour and shadow their mischeevous and ungodlie interprise, and intention to bring the forfaulted persons who, for their conspirations made against had said against are exiled out of the countrie, as their processe and doome of forfalture cleerelie testifieth.

"They sett furth, by their false allegatiouns, that my pretence was, to subvert the religioun, and that I mainteanned the mu therers of his Majestie's father, and his two regents; used sore or pressioun among his true and faithfull subjects; practised a rconciliatioun betuixt his Majestie and his mother, by an invente association conjunctlie in authoritie, and that I interprised nothir but that which was agreeable onlie to the Bishop of Glasgow ar Rosse's directioun. As to the first, I protest before God, it nev entered in my minde to subvert the religion, as it is falselie a ledged upon me: but since God hath givin me that grace to en brace it, I have professed it, and mainteane the same with m heart, as, with the help of God, for all the troubles that ever I r ceaved of the ministers, by the perswasioun, calumneis, and falinformatioun of my evill willers and enemeis, I sall not desist mainteane and professe the said religioun; being assured it is the onlie true religioun. And albeit the saids ministers have oppoune themselves in some part against me, by reasoun and their voca tioun, yitt I must grant, that the said religioun is not the wors but remaines good, true, and holie.

"And concerning the maintenance of tratours and murtherers his Majestie's father and two regents, it passeth their power t prove, that ever I requested his Majestie to pardoun anie of then Tuiching the reconciliatioun between his Grace and his mother, believe that there is no honest man in the world but he will gran that the duetie of a loving and obedient sonne is to love and hor our his mother, according to the command of God. I will no denie but I have givin his Majestie my counsell, to enter in lov and favour with his mother; but never to dimitt his authoritie nor to joyne her with him conjunctlie in the same, as I report m to his Majestie's self, who may declare the truthe of all; and also to the Erle of Gowrie, who was present in my counsell givin to hi Grace, who allowed and granted the same to be reasonable, an desired his Majestie siclyke to performe it. And incace he wi denie it, I sall gar it be provin by honest and true persons, an men of honour. True it is, that my opinioun was, that there soule have beene some suretie of the crowne among them, to witt, tha f his Majestie died without bairns, (as I prayed the Eternall God to permitt it,) that the crowne sould have returned to his nother; believing, that all true Scotish men will not grudge at ;, but rather wishe the same be performed, before the Hammiltons gett entrie to the crowne, as the intentions of some are.

"Notwithstanding of their calumneis, I am readie, as I have ofered by my Lord Hereis, to the king, and to them that deteane ne king's Majestie, presentlie to be presented before the generall stats of this realme, and there to be judged upon all their accuatiouns, without anie respect or remissioun, if they will anie way rove me worthie of punishment. But when as they sould have esired me to come to the triell of the mater, they have done the ontrare. Thereby their unrighteous pretences may be knowne: r if they were, as the brute is among them, to accuse me, they ould no wise have permitted me to stirre; but sent letters to mmoun me before the generall estats of the realme, to anvere to suche accusatiouns as they had to lay to my charge, acording to the contents of the supplicatioun presented to his Mastie in Sanct Johnstoun, wherin they make promise, upon the errell of their lives, lands, and heritage, that the said accusatiouns uld be provin and mainteaned before my face: the which, I am rtan, they darre not doe, becaus they consider it would be e right way and moven to manifest their disloyaltie, falshoods, d treasoun, and to cleange me of all they have to lay to my arge. Therefore, I most affectuouslie desire all honest persons consider this my declaratioun, by the which, I have requeisted the estats of this realme, that it may be permitted to me to impeere before them, to have justice, according to the will of God, d good reasoun. And if anie wise I be found offensive, I am entent I be punished as I have deserved, according to the lawes this countrie. In the meane time, I believe they will esteeme other of me, considering my reasonable offers, but that I am a I thfull servant, and true subject to his Majestie. And albeit I be die to obey his Majestie's command to depart out of the coun-12, vitt, if it be his Grace's pleasure and estats' that I sould present myself before them, I sall ever be readie to come at suche time ar day as sall be appointed. Attour to satisfie the kirk, I have offere to the ministers of Edinburgh, by my Lord Hereis, the Laird Traquare, and proveist of the said toun, after that they had refused 1 come in conference with me, that if they would putt in writt all the points and heeds wheron they plainted on me, I sould have answere them in writt; and therafter I was content that both their accuse tiouns and my answeres sould have beene delivered to six min sters, suche as they would have choosed, with six of the noble me of this countrie, and to the Proveist of Edinburgh, and other fiv men of the toun. So, whatsomever the saids eighteene person would have ordeanned me to doe, for their satisfactioun, I we content to obey. But I receaved no direct answere from ther And to the effect that my innocencie may be knowne to all hone men, and that I have submitted my self to reasoun in all things. have made this declaratioun, to stoppe all my enemeis' false pe swasiouns and calumneis, that they may not have place to be trowe among the said honest and faithfull persons: requeisting them a in generall, to take this my declaration in good part, the which for more sure approbatioun, I have subscrived with my hand, the Castell of Dumbartane, the 20th of September, the veere God 1582 yeeres."

AN ANSWERE TO THE DECLARATION OF THE DISSEMBLED INNO-CENCIE OF THE LORD AUBIGNEY, DUKE OF LENNOX.

"As it is commoun to all hypocrits, tuiched with the wand of God's corrections, to justifie themselves, and not by true repen ance and open confessioun of their iniquitie to flee to God's merciso it is the duetie of a true Christian, in time to occurre, and be open declaration to reveele the truthe as it is, that both the hypocrit him self (being convicted in his owne conscience) may amend and they that are ignorant of his proceedings, by his poysoune perswasiouns be not infected. Wherefore, it was thought good, be on, to expresse shortlie Aubigney's ungodlie attemptats in this ingdome since his arrivall; answering only to the declaratioun f his owne dissembled innocencie, latelie sett out in his name.

"But, first, his false calumneis, layed to the charge of the noble rles and lords presentlie with the king's Majestie, must be refelled. Vhere as, therefore, he accuse th these noble and virtuous Erles f Marr and Gowrie of treasoun, for alledged deteaning of the king's fajestie's person by force, and against his will; as it is a manifest e in it self, and the contrare is knowne to all men that resort here his Hienesse is, so, no good person will once conjecture thir les ever to have thought, muche lesse to have practised, treasoun gainst his Grace; seing they were the principall mainteaners of is Grace's good caus against all tratours, and hitherto, with no nall hazard of their lives, lands, and heritage, by the bloodshed their deerest freinds and brethrein, stand in his Grace's defence om his infancie, and as vitt constantlie abide in the same minde, the effect will declare. Nather is it to be imputed to them, a point of treasoun, for alledged inbringing of forfaulted perons; in respect both the king's Grace's clemencie may be exnded toward anie of his subjects, in pardoning their offences hen he pleaseth; and these lords presentlie with his Hienesse in mpanie have condescended, that none be admitted, as vitt, to his esence, whill the mater be reasouned and wiselie concluded by e effald counsell of the estats of the countrie, to whom it prorlie belongeth. So, all good men may easilie perceave the unue accusations of them, and their innocencie.

"Now, as concerning the duke's protestatiouns; where as first, protesteth before God, it was never in his minde to subvert the de religioun of Jesus Christ within this countrie, but constantlie fend the same, lett all the faithfull judge of the equitie of this otestatioun, who, in the beginning, saw his subscriptioun, and are present at his oath-giving and communicating at the Lord's able, and therafter perceaved, how fracklie, as a perjured and un-sworne person, he past fordward, putting daylie in practice things that might hinder the truthe, stoppe the free course of the Evangell, and bring the pastors and professors of it to haist wracke and ruine; as in speciall, in maintenance of an excommur cated Judas, against God, and good lawes of this countrie; in pr tecting and defending of knowne enemeis, and profane Papists; discharging generall, provinciall, and particular assembleis, so spoing the kirk of God of the libertie and jurisdictioun ecclesiastica grounded on God's Word, and granted thereto by Christ; in b nishing of other pastors most tyrannouslie from their flockes, f preaching of the truthe; in striking and dinging of others, ar pulling of Christ out of his throne, for sincere proceeding their lawfull assembleis; in discharging of others from preachin and stopping of their mouths, becaus freelie they spake again his painted hypocrisie and evill life. What man of meane judg ment will denie thir devilish attempts to be the immediat foreru ners of the wracke and overthrow of religioun, and an open doore the inbringing and establishing of idolatrie again; as the vaine at bloodie minassing, and shoring of his counsells in France at England, did oft times testifie, to the great greef of all the godli and encouraging of the enemeis, beginning again to lift up the heads? But, blessed be God, who disappointed the bloodie cour sell of Achitophell, although for a short space he hath suffere poore David and his servants to be whipped. And, heerefor where he avoweth before God to stand constant in the religio professed in Scotland, assured in his conscience that it is the onl truthe bringing salvatioun to man, all good men doubt of it, the have knowne his religioun, and ungodlie behaviour in all kinde ungodlinesse, since his arrivall to Scotland, and have great occ sioun, as vitt, to doubt of it, whill better effects proceed of hi nor as vitt have appeared.

"Secundlie, Tuiching the mainteaning of tratours, and murthere of the king's father and his regents, where he sayeth, it sall past the power of anie to prove it, surelie, as it is over true in the sel so may it be easilie provin; yea, the stones and dumbe elemen about the Abbey, Edinburgh, the castell of Dalkeith, and palace of Seton and Kinneill, can be are sufficient witnesse of it, if the gi

f speeking, granted to Balaam's asse, were givin to them. But ho knowes not, how these unnaturall murtherers and detestable atours were daylie brought in presence of the king's Majestie, his great greef, and heavie displeasure of his true nobilitie? Vas there not obteaned to some of that race (the most part of the bilitie opponing in the contrare) respits for all faults generall and articular, committed by them and their predecessors? Were ere not granted to others supersedereis for certan yeeres? Were ot others promoted to beare office within the commoun weale? ere not others called home again to the countrie, and great prorement made for advancement of them to high honour, although e lovable lawes of this countrie provide, that nather suche like natural murtherers and blood-thristic tratours, nor vitt anie of eir posteritie, sould bruik land or heritage within the countrie? ut Aubigney's treasonable counsell and decree of Frenche conferats could never be brought to passe, if thir preparatives had t past, for establishing of himself king in this countrie; hoping, th expeditioun, to be declared secund person to the crowne; en the true nobilitie sould have beene cutted off, our innocent nce, being daylie in hazard of his life, in the companie of this able dissembled hypocrit, of these murtherers of his father and ent, who were his plaine enemeis from his craddell upward, and all their might and craft ceassed not to denude him of his wne.

Thridlie, Concerning the demissioun of the king's Grace's auritie, and associatioun with his mother, which of all treasoun t ever was devised against a king is the cheefe, tending to his er wracke, and the offcutting of his true nobilitie to make himking; although he cannot denie it, yitt, with the terme of reciliatioun betwixt the sonne and the mother, he preasseth to cour it, but all in vaine, by reasoun his treasonable dealing in it point is now disclosed to all, as at lenth is sett furth in the lies' letter concerning their proceedings against him. And where we would burthein the noble Erle of Gowrie with a part of that crable treasoun, for unburthening of himself, becaus marrowes in desolation are wretched consolation; although that now the erle were dead, the king's Grace can report of his innocencie; ho manie writts the duke did abstract from him concerning that purpose directed from his Grace's mother to the Erle of Gowrie, and suffer them never be presented to him, how soone he knew my Lo Gowrie's minde not consenting to that unnaturall interprise again his native king and soverane. Moreover, how unlikelie it is, the the Erle of Gowrie would consent to their dimissioun, lett the judge, who have knowne his stedfast and true partaking at all tim with his Hienesse, from his infancie; as also, whether he wou condescend to associat her in authoritie with his Grace, of who he could hope for nothing but his owne wrack, and perpetuall over throw of his posteritie.

"Fourthlie, Where he affirmeth, that he offered himself to t king's Grace and nobilitie to a triell, the contrare is knowne. F where as the nobilitie were of minde, in presence of the esta of the countrie, publictlie to have accused him, and disclosed I great and most treasonable dealings and practises against the tr religioun, the king's person, crown, and estat, in commoun weale the countrie, with all earnestnesse; guiltie in his owne conscient almost by the knowledge of the nobilitie, he procured a libertie depart, thinking thereby to burie in silence his former practis But, in time, his offer sall be heard, and his requeist sall be grante and before his face, (except he be disobedient,) by the mouth of owne familiars, traffiquers in his treasonable interprises, sall be veeled whatsoever he hath attempted, without feare of God, a love of his prince, that hath exalted him to honour.

"Last, What maner of way he handled the ministers of Gotruthe, I doubt not, but as it is knowne to all, so themselves, due time, will declare it. But blessed be God, that hath so hubled that proud Pharao, now, in the eyes of all, that he is copelled to offer amendiment to them whom before, when with hur litie they craved reformatioun, disdainfullie he called 'Pultro Mischants, False Prophets,' and shamefullie handled, stroke, nished, and putt oft in hazard of their lives. But I feare, if Pl rao were freed of his plague, he sould returne to his wonted hardnesse, and doe as a dog in his old vomite."

ENGLISH AMBASSADERS COME.

Upon Fryday, the 14th of September, Sir George Carie and Mr Bowes, sent in ambassadge from the Queen of England, gott presence in Stirline. Their intentioun was, to trie if the lords minded the defence of religioun, the preservatioun of the king, and interteanement of peace betwixt the two realmes. If they did, they were to offer to them assistance.

Upon the Lord's day, the 16th, letters directed out of France from Mr Cobhame to Berwick were delivered to the king, wherin was declared, that the duke practised with France; that he would be esteemed a coward, lose his honour, and hazard his freinds, if he come away; that he had the king's heart, and would not want assistance in Scotland.

THE DUKE SEEKETH A DELAY.

Upon Moonday the 17th, a requeist was sent from the duke, for a prorogatioun of some few dayes, which was granted; with certicatioun, if he departed not at the time appointed, the king would bersue him, as a tratour, with fire and sword. The king confessed to the English ambassaders, that the duke was not wise; that he had beene urged to manie things against his will; and that the ords' action was honest. But, said he, "Three sorts of men have interprised it: one meaning weill, another for their owne particular, the thrid to avoide punishment." The ambassaders asked if they night assure their mastresse of the removall of the duke. He aid they might; wherupon they directed away a post upon Tuislay.

MR CRAIG REBOOKETH THE KING.

Upon Wedinsday the 19th, Mr Craig, teaching upon Psalme ii. ver. 10, rebooked the king so sharpelie, for subscriving the slanderous proclamatioun of which we made mentioun before, that the king weeped, and said, he might have told him privatlie. It was answered, it had beene oft told him, but to no purpose.

THE LORDS GETT A REMISSION.

The counsell concluded, that some companeis, both on hors and foote, sould be levied. The king mislyked their purpose, and to move them to desist, promised to give them a remissioun in the most ample and sure forme they could devise. They, perceaving him unwilling, and themselves in hazard, devised, for their owne securitie, the best forme of remissioun they could, which was afterward confirmed by the estats.

MR G. BUCHANAN HIS DEATH.

Upon Fryday, the 28th of September, Mr George Buchanan ended his dayes, the 68th yeere of his age. I need not to spend paper in his commendatioun; for his workes have commended him to all Europ. Onlie I will comprehend his praises in these words which Mr Thomas Smeton hath used, in his answere to Mr Archibald Hammiltoun, the apostat, where he calleth him, "The ornament of our age, the samplar of ancient vertue and pietie; a miracle of profound eruditioun; the father and prince, or cheef of all the learned, and of all kinde of learning."

THE ERLE OF ANGUS HIS PEACE PROCLAMED.

The Erle of Angus his peace was proclamed at the Croce of Edinburgh, upon Moonday, the first of October, but upon conditioun that he conteaned himself within the bounds of Merce and Tiviotdaill.

Upon Tuisday, the secund of October, the craftsmen not being content with the electioun of the magistrats, went to their armour. The merchants stayed still in the Tolbuith. The ministers travelled betwixt them, that no blood might be shed. Both parteis send their commissioners, with complaints, to the king. The king came to Halyrudhous, the eight of October, and then it was concluded by the king and counsell, that the magistrats whom the merchants had chosin sould be obeyed, to witt, the old proveist, Alexander Clerk; Johne Adamsone, Andrew Sklaiter, Michael Chisholme, and William Fairlie, bailliffes.

Mr Johne Davidsone and Johne Durie were directed, about this time, by the Presbyterie of Edinburgh and the Synod of Lothiane, to travell among the barons of Lothian and Tiviotdaill, and to procure the subscription of the band, which was subscrived latelie by the lords at Stirline, tuiching the maintenance of religioun, the king's estat and person, and the peace of the countrie.

THE FORTIE-SIXT GENERALL ASSEMBLIE.

The Generall Assemblie conveened in the New Kirk of Edinburgh, the 9th of October. Mr David Lindsey was chosin Molerator. Mr Robert Pont, Mr James Lowsone, Mr Andrew Hay, Mr Andrew Melvill, Mr Thomas Smeton, David Fergusone, Mr George Hay, Johne Duncansone, William Christisone, the Lairds of Lundie, Whittinghame, and Braid, were nominated to conveen with the moderator, at extraordinar houres, and advise upon suche things as sall be proponed and reasonned in this Assemblie, till the end therof.

THE KING'S COMMISSIONERS SENT TO THE ASSEMBLIE.

In presence of the whole Assemblie, compeered Mr James Halyburton and Colonell William Stewart, and presented the king's Majestie's commissioun in writt, the tenor wherof followeth:—

"We, by the tenor heerof, with advice of the Lords of our Secreit Counsell, give and grant full power, authoritie, and commissioun to our right trustie and weill-beloved Mr James Halvburton. Proveist of Dundie, and Colonell William Stewart, conjunctlie and severallie, for us and in our name, to passe to the Generall Assemblie of the kirk of our realme, and there to heare and consider the maters proponed, tending to the advancement of God's glorie and his true religioun, for correctioun of maners, and reteaning of the ecclesiasticall maters in decent and comelie order, as the Word of God alloweth; and to report the maters proponed and intreatted of to us, for our allowance and ratification of the same, as apperteaneth. And, generallie, all and sindrie other things to doe, that to the furtherance and assistance of all godlie and good maters are necessarilie required, firme and stable, &c. Subscrived with our hand at Halyrudhous, the 10th day of October, the yeere of God 1582, and of our raigne the 16th yeere."

THE LORDS' ACTION APPROVED.

My Lord of Paisley, in name of the noble men, interprisers of the late actioun, gave the Assemblie to understand, that the grounds moving them to their actioun simplie were, the danger they perceaved the Kirk of Scotland and religioun in, the evident perrell they saw the king's Majestie and his estat to stand in, and the confusioun and misorder of the commoun weale: that, as they doubted not to feele a good testimonie in their owne conscience, so would they the Assemblie sould shew their good lyking of the same, and give ordinance to everie minister at his particular kirk, to lay out the ground of their actioun to their flocke; and to exhort all noble men, and other faithfull subjects whatsoever, to concurre with them in the said good caus, to the full prosecutioun and following furth of the same. The Assemblie declared, that they understood all these dangers, but, to the effect they might understand the king's minde, Mr James Lowsone, Mr David Lindsey, and the king's ministers, were directed to his Highnesse, to confer with him tuiching the saids dangers; to open the same at lenth to his Majestie, and to report his answere theranent. They reported in the eight sessioun, that his Hienesse confessed that the religioun within this realme was in perrell, and an indirect course runne to the detriment therof, wherewith his owne perrell was joynned; for he esteemed his standing to be joyned with the standing of religioun: that he acknowledged also sindrie abuses in the commoun weale, before the late interprise of the nobilitie; and that all good men ought to concurre, of duetie, to avert the danger from the Kirk, his person, estat, and for reformatioun of the commoun weale. Tuiching the two heeds left unresolved, which were proponed in name of the noblemen, undertakers of the late Reformatioun, the whole Assemblie in one voice agreed therewith, and ordeaned a speciall act to be conceaved therupon, and to be put in forme by the clerk, Mr Robert Pont, and Mr Thomas Smeton, to be presented to the Assemblie, that they may consider how it agreeth with the meaning of the brethrein. It was presented, considered, and approved by the brethrein, as agreeable to their meaning, in the nynth sessioun. But, becaus some brethrein were not present, it was read again in the ellevinth sessioun, and ordeaned to be registred among the Acts of the Assemblie: the tenor wherof followeth:-

"Forasmuche as the noble men, and others joyned with them in the late action of Reformation, willing the Assemblie, and the whole professors of true religioun, to understand the ground and occasioun moving them to repaire toward the king's Majestie, to seeke redresse of the disorders that were fallin out in the commoun weale, have made publict and solemne attestation to the whole Assemblie, that the motions and grounds of their good caus were, and are, to deliver the kirk of God within this realme, and the true religioun professed within the same, from evident and certan dangers, wherin all men perceaved the same to stand; as also, to preserve and guarde the innocent person of the king's Majestie, and his royall estat, being in no lesse perrell than was the other; and to remove and purge the great corruptions and confusioun entered in the bodie and estat of this commoun weale, wherin, as they are weill persuaded to have done good service to their God, their bound and naturall duetie to their soverane and native commoun weale, so would they the brethrein in this Assemblie, and all that feare God, sould judge and esteeme of their lawfull actions, and declare their weill lyking and approbatioun of the same; and further, sould give out an ordinance to the whole pastors and ministers within the realme, at their particular kirks, to declare publictlie to their congregations their good action and grounds therof; exhorting all noble men, barons, and other faithfull men whatsomever, to give their good concurrence and assistance to the same. Which petitioun and desire, with the whole circumstances therof, being weill weighed and deepelie considered, and the said brethrein, in the feare of God, with commoun and mature deliberatioun, resolved, found, and voted, but 1 contradictioun, that not onlie the kirk of God within this realme, and his true religioun preached therin, but also the king's Majestie's most noble person, and his kinglie estat, were, and stood in extreme danger and hazard; beside the manie grosse abuses that had invaded the commoun weale, before the said noblemen had entered in the said actioun, wherof also, it hath pleased the king's Majestie to give that for declaratioun unto Colonell Stewart, his Grace's commissioner, Mr James Lowsone, Mr David Lindsey, and his Grace's ministers, being directed from the Assemblie to his Majestie for the same effect. And, therefore, the said brethrein cannot but thinke, that their honours imploying themselves to the averting of all thir dangers, have done good and acceptable service to God, their naturall and bound duetie to their soveranc, and shewed their carefull affectioun to their countrie; and that the prosecutioun and following out of the said good and godlie caus, all particulars layed asyde, is, and sall be, most acceptable to all that feare the Majestie of God aright, tender the preservatioun of the king's Majestie's most noble person and estat, love the prosperous and happie successe of the troubled natioun. And to the effect that the said actioun and grounds therof might be the more manifest and notour to all men, it is thought expedient, that everie miister, at his owne particular kirk, publictlie, at the first occasioun, av out the dangers and perrell wherein the kirk of God, and reigioun within this realme, the king's Majestie's person and estat, and the whole commoun weale stood into; open up the grounds and action of the said noble men, recommending the samine to all of whatsomever estat; with exhortations to them, as they love and tenler the glorie of God, the prosperous estat of their soveran, and the pappie standing of the commoun weale, faithfullie to concurre and oyne with the said noble men and others forsaid, following out the uids grounds, to the full deliverance of the kirk, the king's person and estat, and reformatioun of the commoun weale; and if anie nan be found, ather by word maliciouslie, or violentlie by way of leid, to oppone unto the said good caus, that he be called in the particular elderships, and order putt to him, by the censures of the irk; and incace of obstinacie, and willfull continuing therin, to be lelated to the king's Majestie and his counsell, to be punished for nis offence, civillie."

This act was read to the commissioners of Edinburgh, who, after dvising apart therewith, agreed thereto, with the rest of the rethrein.

THE KING'S ADVOCAT CENSURED.

Mr David Makgill, the king's advocat, was summouned, by orinance of the Assemblie, to compeer before them to answere similie, if he was the former or dytter of the slanderous proclamatioun att out against the ministrie, and for opponing him to the lawfull roceedings of the kirk; with certificatioun, if he compeered not, ney would proceed as apperteanned. He was called upon in the 3th sessioun, but was continued till the 14th, at what time he ompeered, and excused his absence, and desired to have a short pace to advise with the tenor of the proclamatioun, and a sight of suche other particulars as he was burthenned with, wherinto he sould answere simplie, as God sould judge him, which was granted. He compeered again in the 15th sessioun, and willed the Assemblie to consider their proceeding against him, being an officer to his maister, the king's Majestie, called his alone, upon the alledged forming of a proclamatioun givin out in the king's name, under the title of a Declaratioun, and concluded by authoritie of his counsell; and as they sall find, he sould not contemptuouslie refuse to answere everie point which they had to lay to his charge. The brethrein, after deliberatioun, found, that, in respect of the slander risin by his person, he may, and sould be called simpliciter to give his declaratioun for removing therof. He was content; and plainlie and openlie taking God to be his witnesse, declared, he nather invented, penned, nor formed the said proclamatioun; but at the desire of the duke, translated out of Frenche the last part therof. As to the rest of the points, the brethrein were fullie satisfied with his answeres.

COMMISSIONS.

As for the constitutioun of presbytereis where yitt none was established, the brethrein thought meet to tak accompt of the commissioners' diligence in this charge. They were called upon, so manie as were present. The Assemblie giveth commissioun to erect presbytereis in Cathnesse and Sutherland, in Rosse, Murrey, Aberdeen, and Bamff; and what the brethrein deputted to this charge sall doe, to report to the nixt Assemblie, against which time, if the said presbytereis be not erected, the Assemblie giveth commissioun to these brethrein to use the office of visiters, as was accustomed before the forme of elderships came in use.

As for the presbyterie of Tweddaill, forasmuche as the Assemblie understandeth, that by reasoun of the raritie of qualified ministers in these bounds, a presbyterie cannot presentlie be erected there, and that also, diverse, unfitt for the function of the ministrie, as yitt remaine in office, the Assemblie giveth commission to their brother, Johne Brand, to visite Tweddaill to the nixt Asemblie, and with all convenient diligence to summoun before the resbyterie of Edinburgh suche as sall be judged unfitt for their unctions, to give triell of their doctrine and sufficiencie, and if hey be found insufficient, to deprive them of their offices, with adice of the said presbyterie; and in the meanetime, till a better orer be taikin, that the ministers of that countrie resort to the Syodall Assemblie of Lothiane.

In the fourth sessioun, it was thought meet that the presbytereis f Merce, Tiviotdaill, and Tweddaill, sould be joyned to the Syodall Assemblie of Lothian, the places alwise where the said Syodall sall conveene being changed from time to time. Commissioun was givin to the presbyterie of Perth to putt in executioun ne commissioun givin upon the 30th October 1578, concerning the ishop of Dunkelden, betuixt and the nixt Assemblie, as they will aswere to the Assemblie.

Seing great slander and offence ariseth by the impunitie of bitops, the Assemblie giveth commissioun to the particular presbyreis underspecified, with all possible and convenient diligence, to ammon and call before them respective, in maner following; the resbyterie of Perth, the Bishop of Murrey; the presbyterie of dinburgh, the Bishop of Aberdeen; the presbyterie of Mernes, the ishop of Brechin; the presbyterie of Dundie, the Bishop of Dundleden; the presbyterie of Glasgow, the Bishop of St Andrewes; are presbyterie of Stirline, the Bishops of Dumblane and the Isles; and to accuse them, and everie one of them, of the offences followers, all or in part, as they are guilty, viz., of non-preaching and inistratioun of the sacraments, of negligence of doctrine or discinine, haunting and frequenting of the companie of excommunicatives are persons, waisting of the patrimonie of the kirk, setting of tacks rainst acts of the kirk, giving collatioun of benefices against the rainst acts of the kirk, giving collatioun of benefices against the nor of the said acts; and, finallie, for giving slander, anie wise, in e and conversatioun; and after due triell, processe, and conviction, to tak order with everie one of them, according to the qualie of their offence and acts of the kirk, betuixt and the nixt Astemblie.

Commissioun was givin to Mr Andrew Melvill and Mr Thoma Smeton, to confer with the Bishop of Orkney, for he had ceasssaffrom exercise of the ministrie, and had not takin him to a particula flocke. He pretended inabilitie of bodie, and continuall sicknesses They reported in the 12th sessioun, that as for a particular kirk he alledged, his age, inabilitie of bodie, and weaknesse of memoric suffered him not to accept that weightie charge; and as to the provisioun of all his kirks, that he receaved a dismembred benefice skarse worth 500 merks, at his entrie. The Assemblie ordeannes the Presbyterie of Edinburgh to trie his abilitie, and if he be foundable to discharge the function of the ministrie, to appoint to him particular flocke; and to tak order with anie other complaint that sould be givin in against him, according to the acts of the kirk, betuixt and the nixt Assemblie.

Commissioun was givin to some brethrein of the ministrie, and some others, to travell betuixt the merchants and crafts of Edin burgh, for reconciliatioun of both parteis.

Commissioun was givin to the eldership of Hadinton, with the concurrence of William Sandersone, Alexander Hume, Mr Adar Johnston, Mr George Ramsay, Mr David Lindsey, and one of the ministers of Edinburgh, to call before them the Laird of Phairni hirst his ladie and daughter, for going to masse in France, and othe parts beyond sea, and incace it be found to be true, to tak orde with them, according to the acts of the Assemblie; and, likewise to charge them to subscrive the articles of religioun of the Confessioun of Faith, sett out by the king's Majestie's proclamatioun and if they repyne, to proceed according to the tenour of the said proclamatioun.

Commissioun and power was givin to some ministers and barons to concurre with suche as the king's Majestie and counsell sal direct, in visitatioun of the colledges within the realme respective as they sall be appointed for everie colledge, and what sall be done by them heerin, to report again to the nixt Assemblie.

Commissioun was givin to some brethrein, to putt in forme the articles which sould be presented to the king, counsell, and estats

Full power and commissioun was givin to some other brethrein, to resent the said articles to his Hienesse, his counsell, and estats, resentlie assembled at Halyrudhous; to confer and reasoun upon he same, and to report their answere. The tenor of the articles olloweth:—

MINTO AND HIS COMPLICES CENSURED.

The Laird of Minto confessed the wrong he did to Mr John Howesone, and submitted himself to the Assemblie. The Assemblie referred the censuring of him to the discretioun of the presby terie of Glasgow. The Assemblie ordeanned, that his complice Coline Campbell, Malcolme Stewart, Hector Stewart, Archiba Hegget, be excommunicated by Mr David Wemes, minister Glasgow, in the kirk of Glasgow, with advice of the presbyteri for hanting the companie of Mr R. Montgomrie, after his excommunicatioun, and other enormiteis committed by them.

ACTS.

It was thought meete, that the places where synodall assemble are to conveene sall be changed from time to time, as the bretl rein sall find meetest, that no ambitioun grow, by continuing the samine in anie one place.

- 2. The brethrein appointed to present the articles to the conventioun of the estats in parliament were asked, seing they were taking order for a counsell, consisting of three estats, who sould sit in name of the kirk, to vote in counsell or parliament? They do layed answere, till they had the advice of the Assemblie. The meaning was, If bishops sould sitt in counsell, in name of the kirk The Assemblie resolved, that they could not agree that anie soul vote in name of the kirk, but they that bare office in the kirk, an were authorized with commissioun of the Assemblie; and ordeane this their answere to be returned to Mr George Hay and M Thomas Buchanan immediatlie.
- 3. The Assemblie thought it lawfull to a minister, for a seasout to cease from the exercise of his ministrie, and use the office of doctor; and, therefore, the Assemblie appointed Mr Thomas Bu chanan to enter in the new Colledge of Sanct Andrewes, and ther exerce the office of a doctor, his kirk being provided in the meane time of a sufficient pastor.

BOTHWELL'S PROFESSION.

The Erle Bothwell compered before this Assemblie, and proessed he would live and dee in the reformed religioun professed vithin this realme, as he had done before his departure out of the countrie, and in time of his absence.

A new counsell is chosin. Angus is to be sent for, upon some and conditions; to witt, that he sould not persue Aubigney nor Arran for Morton's death, nor seeke anie of Morton's lands, but the king thought good, nor band with anie in anie caus.

The king and counsell agree, that Arran sall remain in waird till ne duke depart, which was looked for shortlie, if weather served, and therafter, that he remain on the north side of Erne.

THE LATE INTERPRISE APPROVED BY THE CONVENTION.

The interprise of these that guarded the king (so they called that tioun) was approved at the conventioun which was holdin at this me. But the estats refused to descend, in speciall, to the grounds ad motives, to witt, the hazard of religioun, the king's person, and mmoun weale, and, therefore, would nather condemne nor ratifice printed declaration of the caus of their interprise.

THE LORDS URGE THE DUKE'S DEPARTURE.

The Duke of Lennox sent to the king, and desired libertie to see through England, pretending he durst not venture through e seas. The lords interprisers suspected that he was waiting on some alteratioun, and, therefore, urged the king to putt in ecutioun the act made at Stirline, to witt, that the duke sould oy his rents for the space of five yeeres, provyding he returned France within twentie dayes after the making of the act; which, if he performed not, he sould be denounced rebell, and the king sould passe upon him with fire and sword. The king answered, it sould be putt in executioun, but would first warne him. The lords, suspecting he had givin other secreit informatioun to Kilsyth than he had sent by letter, made a new motioun of leveing of men of warre. This motioun pleased not the king, but it was caried away by pluralitie of votes. Glencarne, constituted colonell, having receaved secreitlie some letters from the duke, and through the king's perswasioun, was moved to withdraw himself, and to goe home, where upon the lords still urge the king with the duke's departure.

VOL. III. 2 x

MR R. MONTGOMRIE'S OFFER.

Upon Tuisday the 13th of November, Mr Andrew Hay and Mi Andrew Polwart presented Mr R. Montgomrie's supplicatioun to the presbyterie of Edinburgh, which had beene before presented to the presbyterie of Glasgow, conteaning a confessioun of his of fences, and a sute to be restored, with offer to underly their in junctions. They answered, as the presbyterie of Glasgow had done before, that it behoved him to begin his sute at the Generall Assemblie, seing the Generall Assemblie had ordeaned him to be excommunicated.

Gowrie, at this time, fearing his owne estat, was drawin by the king to be a freind to Arran. This suspicioun was confirmed, in that it was concluded in counsell, upon the 15th of November, that Arran sould be sett at libertie, the king declaring, that it was his will. No man opponed, onlie Cambuskenneth excepted, who said they could not vote in privie counsell, against that which had been concluded in the whole convention. Mr Bowes, the English ambassader, told both the king and counsell, that he would advertise his mastresse, assuring himself, that her Majestie would not trust anic more ather king or counsell in Scotland. Heerupon it was concluded upon the 16th day, that he sould be deteaned in waird til the duke's departure. Glencarne and Gowrie were muche blamed for the favour which was granted to Arran. His brother, Willian

Stewart, had beene sett at libertie out of the castell of Stirline before, in October, and commanded to remaine with the Shireff of Air, under the paine of five thowsand punds.

A CONSPIRACIE OF THE DUKE'S.

Sindrie of his confederats came with armed companeis, some to Restalrig, some to the Potterraw, and some about the West Port: Maxwell, Newbottle, Phairnihirst, Sir Johne Seton, the Maister of Livingston, the Laird of Traquair, and sindrie others. Strait watche was keeped both in the toun and the Abbey. Colonell Stewart, with the men of warre latelie taken up. watched in the Abbey, and the lords themselves within the yron gate. The lords suspecting some treacherie among themselves, concluded, that Maxwell, with some others, sould be apprehended, till farther order were taikin. But Maxwell had gone out of the toun upon Tuisday, at night, and returned secreitlie on the morne, as was suspected.

THE DUKE CHARGED AGAIN TO DEPART.

Mr George Young ras sent again, with a charge to depart from Blacknesse to Kirkston, and from thence directlie to Hadinton, and so to passe ford-rard in his journey. The king had writtin to the barons of Loniane to convoy him to Berwick. But he returned to Kallendar, and from thence to Dumbartan. Sindrie barons of Lothiane, who road to convoy him, were disappointed.

GLENCARNE LEAVETH THE LORDS.

The duke sent for a testimoniall, under the great seale, of his good service. The king was earnest for it, but Gowrie opponed stoutlie to it. Glencarne left the lords, becaus he perceaved they suspected him. He confessed he had promised to save the duke's life, but no farther, and that was their owne meaning; and with all professed, he would stand to the maintenance of religioun, king, and countrie, as they did.

MORTON'S HEAD BURIED.

The Erle of Angus had the king and the lords with him at dinner, upon the 25th of November. Upon Moonday the 10th of December, the Erle of Morton's head was taikin down off the pricke which is upon the high gavell of the Tolbuith, with the king's licence, at the elleventh houre of the day; was layed in a fyne cloath, convoyed honorablie, and layed in the kist where his bodie was buried. The Laird of Carmichaell caried it, shedding tears abundantlie by the way.

THE DUKE AGAIN CHARGED TO DEPART.

Upon Fryday the 14th of December, a new act was made in the counsell, for charging the duke to depart out of the countrie, or ellis without delay to putt him to the horne. A sharpe letter was sent from the king, shewing to him, that his wilfull ignorance was like to bring him and the countrie to great danger, and himself to destruction. Mr George Young and Patrik Fentoun were sent to him to Dumbartan, together with an herald of armes, to putt him to the horne in cace he disobeyed.

GOWRIE'S MOTION TO THE MINISTERS AND LORDS.

Upon Moonday the 17th, the ministers of Edinburgh were sent for by the lords, who were conveened in the Counsel-hous at five houres at night; Angus, Marr, Gowrie, Lindsey, Boyd, Dumfermline, Pittenweme, Glames, Cathcart, Justice-Clerk. Gowrie desired earnestlie he might be rid of Arran, so that the good actioun had no hurt thereby. He regrated heavilie that he was bruted for unfaithfull dealing. It was thought good to advise upon his propositioun, and give answere upon the morne.

THE DUKE DEPARTETH.

The duke came to Dalkeith the 20th of December, and from thence he tooke journey the day following. There were two thowsand crowns sent to him when he was at Dumbar. The Lord Seson, the Maister of Livingston, Mr Mark Ker, Mr David Makgill, and sindric others, convoyed him. When he was in his journey, the king hurt his leg with the fall of his hors, and keeped bed five or six dayes.

The duke and Seigneur de la Mott, the Frenche ambassader, nett at Topleth, be-north Yorke, and conferred together in the hieray, about the space of half an houre. Mr Davidsone, the English mbassader, who was sent with the Frenche, hearkened to all that ney spake, but heard not all, becaus the wind and weather would ot suffer. Alwise he said, he was banished more through the

He had another head to propone, which he concealed till a little before his departure, to witt, that the queene, the king's mother, was content to receave her sonne in associatioun of the authoritie.

Mr Bowes, the English ambassader, moved Mr Johne David-ne to counsell the brethrein to speeke little or nothing of the renche ambassader till his message were knowne, which would ll furth shortlie, becaus the Frenche ambassader would rejoice have occasioun, at his entrie, to have the king offended with anie 'the ministers; and willed, that the gravest of their number uld declare their minde both to the king and counsell.

Mr David Lindsey said, the was one of the principal instruments of working the matche betuixt his mother and the Duke of Norfolke. Little answere made to that point. Alwise the king said, the ambassaders wo not meddle in religioun; and if they did, they would soone answered. Mr David Lindsey replyed, that their maner was pretend at the first civill and politick maters; and vitt religion was their butt, and, therefore, their worldlie pretences would wiselie handled, and short dispatche made. "For," saveth "they may now foster the variance which is among your nobili and move you to variance with England; and whereto tendeth this but to the destruction of religioun?" The Abbot of Du fermline said, "Sir, this is it that Mr David meaneth: they n seeke the overthrow of religioun indirectlie, though not directli Gowrie affirmed the same, and therefore thought it best that the sould be dispatched als soone as could be possible. LA MOTT BANKETTED BY THE TOUN OF EDINBURGH.

Upon Fryday the first of Februar, a letter was sent from the ing to the counsell of Edinburgh, craving that a bankett might e made to the French ambassader, La Mott, who was now readie depart. It was thought that some merchants, traffiquers with rance, procured this command. The proveist and bailliffes comunicated the letter with the ministers and sessioun of the kirk. ; was thought unmeete, for sindrie reasons; yitt the counsell conuded it to be done, alledging the sessioun had suspended their dgement therin. Upon the Lord's day, the thrid of Februar, e sessioun of the kirk of Edinburgh conveened, and concluded, at in case anie bankett sould be made to the Frenche ambassader, at the congregatioun sould meete upon Moonday, to fasting and rayer. Mr James Lowson his exhortioun was grounded upon 2 Cor. cap. vi. ver. 14; Johne Dureis oon the nynth of Esdra; Mr Walters upon the fourth of Esther. etuixt the three exhortations, there was reading and singing of psalms. Mr James Lowson affirmed, that the banket was a together unlawfull: if they meant truelie, they sealed up their followship of true love with the murtherers of the sancts of God; they dissembled, it was hypocrisie, and so was evil. The ambass der, after the bankett, went that night to Seton, and from them to Berwick. The king was offended with Angus for not going the bankett, and with the ministers, speciallie Mr James Lowsone.

After the departure of La Mott, the king would have had son of the nobilitie to addresse themselves to court. The lords inte prisers would have had a conventioun for their owne particular Becaus the dissensioun among the nobilitie stayed the conventious and their comming to court, there was a band devised to be sulscrived by the king and the whole nobilitie, the tenor where followeth:—

"We, undersubscriving, considering the present estat and age of the king's Majestie, our soverane lord, the youth of so great a number of his nobilitie, and the occasiouns of the troubles and variance which have beene in this realme since his Hienesse' birth, and before to the great hinderance to establishe the policie, peace, and justice and to the prejudice of the nobilitie, and all others his Majestie' good subjects in all estats: Which inconveniencies, by all appear ance, sall daylie increasse to the perrell of his Majestie, and decay of the estimation of his Hienesse and this realme, our native countries and to the trouble and skaith of everie one of us in particular, if God of his mercie, remove not the occasiouns: And finding his Majestie now comming to the state of man-head, possessed in his owne person with the governement of this realme and subjects, and having manie and weightie maters in hand, concerning the honour and suretie of his persoun and estat, his mariage, his interteanement of

And ing we are to resort to his Majestie, as we sall be called upon, others as have necessar occasioun, wherinto suche grudges, diseasures, and unkindnesses as have happenned among us in times gane, may be some lett and stay; therefore, for removing all che doubts, we have assured, and by the tenor heerof, everie one us taking on us the burthein for ourselves, and all that we may t, assure eache one others, to be unhurt, unharmed, molested, rsued, or in anie wise invaded, ather for old feed or new, otherse than by ordinar course of law and justice; nather sall we, nor ie that we may lett, make provocatioun of trouble, displeasure, tumult, in word, deid, or countenance, as we will answere to God, d upon our fidelitie and honours to his Majestie. Upon Fryday, the first of Marche, Brereton and another Englishman were taikin at Leith in the night, when they were making toward their ship to depart, being layed for at the direction of M Bowes, and Mr David Lindsey, and was brought to Mr Bowe hous. Sindrie letters were found upon Brereton, one directe from the Ladie Seton, another from her sonne, Alexander Pryon of Pluscardie, to the maister of the Seminarie at Rome; a thrick showing the interprise of taiking the king to France. He was delivered to Colonell Stewart. Some brethrein were directed from the presbyterie of Edinburgh to the king, to urge a triell of the nglish Jesuit. The king said, it was delayed, at the desire of the nglish ambassader, till the Frenche ambassader were gone; that clonell Stewart had the keeping of him, who had the custodie of sowne person.

STRUCTIONS FOR THE COMMISSIONERS DIRECTED TO THE KING'S MAJESTIE, FROM THE SYNODALL ASSEMBLIE OF LOTHIANE, HOLDIN IN EDINBURGH THE THRID OF APRILE 1583.

- "Imprimis, To remember his Grace, that this hath beene the affique of Papists of divers countreis and forrane natiouns this ng time, to bring the religioun and his Majestie in danger; in kin wherof, sindrie moyens have beene used, as namelie, the oft adding home of sindrie Jesuits, Papisticall bookes, and tokins from a Pop's self. Which kinde of dealing was appearandlie overene, or rather mainteanned by the duke and his confederats, nen he ruled the court, for which caus he seemed cheefelie to the vector to the vector of which evident dangers, albeit we, the kirk, we meanned ourselves privilie to his Grace and counsell, and pubtile have admonished, yitt lightlie have they beene esteemed and edited, untill these probations following shewed themselves:—
- "1. The confederacie earnestlie sought and required by the Pasticall faction of France, &c.
- "2. The incomming of thir ambassaders of France, who never knowledged his Majestie's authoritie before, the one bearing the manifest badge of the antichrist, and the other openlie requiring an idolatrical masse, which, albeit it was not granted by hi Grace, yitt it is to be feared that the same he hath privilie, sein he hath an idolatrous preest ydinglie with him; as also, in manifest contempt, he plainlie past to the most manifest superstition, i counterfooting Christ in washing of his disciples' feete.

"3. The keeping of Seminarie preests, partlie in the ambassa der's hous, and partlie interteaned by my Lord Seton, to over throw and undermyne the religioun, and speciallie William Holtwho presentlie is in waird, with whom are deprehended sindri writtings, wherin is declared the treasonable dealing against God' true religioun and his Majestie, untried yitt and unexamined, al though these letters remitt more to the report of the said William nor is conteaned in them. And as tuiching your Grace's estat, th article of the particular associatioun proponed by the ambassaders is a plaine declaratioun of the overwhelming of all things occurring since his Grace's coronatioun.

"Item, It is to be suspected, that there be sindrie person about his Grace, that are no lesse knowne enemeis to God's religionand his Majestie's authoritie, than these who of before were with his Grace.

"For remeed of the which, requeist his Grace to dispatche this wicked ambassader, and to trie and examine the said preest; certificing his Grace, if thir things be not done, the zeale of the people will not be stayed from some inconvenient; wherof the brethrein desire some confort of his Grace presentlie, before our departure."

A CONVENTION.

A convention was holdin at Edinburgh, the 18th of Aprile There was motioun made of a Parliament to be holdin, which pleased not the king, nor the duke's favourers. The king burs out in teares, and could not be satisfied till the Erle of Angus moved him to agree that a parliament might be sett for his owne and his dependers' full restitutioun. The king, hoping that some thing might fall furth in processe of time, which might serve his designes, desired that the parliament might be appointed to be holdin the 24th of October, which was granted. A taxatioun of an hundreth thowsand pund was intended for discharge of the king's debt; but no farther was granted but twentie thowsand pund, unlesse the parliament yeelded to further. It was concluded that an ambassader sould be sent to England, to seeke a matche to the king, and further amitie betuixt the two nations. Colonell Stewart was directed ambassader, and tooke journey the 25th of Aprile, accompanied with Mr Johne Colvill and Mr George Young.

THE FORTIE-SEVEN GENERALL ASSEMBLIE.

The Generall Assemblie conveened at Edinburgh, the 24th of Aprile. Johne Brand made the exhortatioun in place of Mr David Lindsey, the last moderator, by reasoun he was to depart the day following with the ambassader. Mr Thomas Smeton was chosin Moderator. Eight other ministers were appointed to confer with him upon suche heeds as were to be treated before the Assemblie everie day, as they sould think expedient, without prejudice of the libertie of their brethrein in anie thing.

ARTICLES FOR SUPPLICATION.

The Assemblie directed Mr Johne Craig, Johne Durie, and Mr Alexander Hume, to the king's Majestie, to desire his Hienesse to send some commissioners in his name, to assist the Assemblie with their presence; and farther, to desire his Hienesse to direct his ambassader to travell that an unioun and band may be made betuixt his Grace, the Queene of England, and other Christian princes and states professing the true religioun, for defence and protectioun of the professors therof, against the persecution of Papists banded together by the bloodie league of Trent: as also, the her Majestie would disburthein their brethrein in England of the voke of the ceremoneis imposed upon them. They reported, the thrid sessioun, that the king promised to send three commisioners; that he granted that the secund article was most resonable; and as for the thrid, that he sould give command to b ambassader to intreate for the same, as opportunitie served be for the advancement of the caus. The brethrein directed M Alexander Arbuthnet, David Fergusone, and Johne Durie, wi the king's ministers, to the king and counsell, in name of the A semblie, to crave that the Frenche ambassader, whose traffiquin heere is suspected to tend to the hurt both of the religioun ar commoun weale, may be depesched: that Mr Holt, the Jesu may be tried, and according to his offence, if he be guiltie, pu ished: that my Lord Seton's sonne might be sent for, and trie for his letter sent to the Jesuits; and that order be taikin wi him that a brother of the Laird of Camboe's, refusing to abide tljudgement of the kirk, and allowing the breake of the king's law concerning his religioun, may be summouned to a particular dyet to underly the law: to remember his Grace that no licence givin to the Abbot of Halywood to depart out of the countries and to remember his Grace, of order to be taikin with Mr Day Chalmer: to show to his Hienesse the pitifull complaint made the Erle of Arran to the Assemblie, and to crave his gracious a swere. The summe of his lamentable supplicatioun was, that the Assemblie had travelled before with the king and Lords of S creit Counsell for his deliverie from a long and lamentable capt vitie, and restitutioun to him of his heritage, most wrongous withholdin from him, so, now, they would not pretermitt the pr sent opportunitie, when his enemie, the unjust possessour of h heritage, by whose crueltie he hath susteanned much miseri manie wrongs and greeves, in bodie, in spirit, and in worldl goods, is now removed from his Majestie's presence; that the would now procure that his bodie and patrimonie may be con mitted to the custodie and guiding of his undoubted freinds, wh would have unfained care both of the one and the other. The brethrein reported his Majestie's answere, that, as for the Frenche ambassader, he was presentlie upon his journey to depart; that Holt and the Lord Seton's sonne sould be tried and confronted together; that Camboe's brethrein sall be summouned; that he remembreth not of anie licence past to the Abbot of Halywod; that order sall be taikin with Mr David Chalmer; that he sould send to try how the Erle of Arran was interteaned, and if he was not weill used he sould provide some remedie.

COMMISSIONS.

An accompt was taikin of the execution of the commissions givin to some brethrein to constitute presbytereis where as yitt none were erected. Impediments were alledged for Rosse, Cathnesse, and Sutherland, and the commissioun givin before continued. An accompt was taikin of the commissioun givin for visitation of the universiteis. As to Sanct Andrewes and Glasgow, the commissioners answered, they were readie, but wanted the concurrence of the king's commissioners. Mr Thomas Smeton, Mr Andrew Melvill, Mr Nicoll Dagleish, or, if he may not convenientlie, Mr Robert Pont, were appointed to conveen at Sanct Andrewes, the fyft day of September nixt to come, to trie the members of the Colledge of Aberdeen, if they were answerable and conforme to the orders of the new erectioun made by the Erle Marshall, the Commendatar of Deny, and certan brethrein, who had charge by the king's commissioun and the Assemblie to visite the said colledge.

Commissioun was givin, as in the last Assemblie, to Mr Robert Pont, or Mr Nicoll Dagleish, Mr Alexander Arbuthnet, Mr Andrew Polwart, Mr Thomas Smeton, Mr Thomas Buchanan, Mr David Lindsey, or anie foure of them, to conveene the fyft day of September, at Sanct Andrewes, and to try how the rents and livings of the colledges are bestowed; what and in what order the masters or regents teache. If conforme to the act of parliament, how order is keeped among the schollers and students; and heerin, as order or misorder sall be found, to tak order, and to report to the nixt Generall Assemblie. Captan Montgomrie, being directed from the king, required the Assemblie, in his Hienesse' name, not to meddle with removing anie of the members of the Colledge of Glasgow, speciallie the Principall, seing his Majestie is patron and erecter of the said colledge. Commissioun and power was givin to Mr Andrew Hay, Mr Alexander Arbuthnet, Mr George Hay, to present to the king's Majestie and his honorable counsell suche heeds, articles, and complaints, as are givin to them in writt, conferre, treat, and reasoun therupoun, and to crave his Highnesse' and their Honours' answere.

COMMISSION FOR CENSURING OF BISHOPS.

Tuiching the ordinance givin out in the last Assemblie against bishops, and their triell, &c., the particular commissioners being orderlie called upon for executioun of their commissioun, none compeered for the Presbyterie of Perth. As to the Bishop of Brechin, the processe led against him was produced. The processe against Aberdeen and Orkney was committed to the triell of David Fergusone and Patrik Gillespie, and what they found they were appointed to report to the Assemblie. The sight of the processe against the Bishop of Dumblane and the Iles was committed to Mr Peter Blekburne and Mr Adam Johnston. As for the Bishop of Sanct Andrewes, Mr Andrew Melvill answered, he could not addere afflictionem afflicto. In the elleventh sessioun it was concluded as followeth: As for the order to be taikin with the bishops, and the commissiouns givin in the last Assemblie concerning them, in respect that oversight is found in executioun of the said commissioun upon sindrie occasions, yitt, least that estat, so long slanderous to the kirk, be not overpast (as it hath beene) negligentlie, the whole Assemblie hath continued the commissioun givin to the brethrein of before, concerning S., the Bishop of the Iles and Dunkelden, ordeaning them to proceed in all points according to the said commissioun, as they will answere to the kirk; and, cheefelie, the Presbyterie of Stirline, to proceed against the Bishop of the Iles, according to the processe deduced before them; with full power to them to that effect. As concerning the Bishop of Aberdeen, in respect some processe hath beene had before the Presbyterie of Edinburgh against him, where his answere hath beene givin in negative, and no probation led against him, the Assemblie ordeanned the officer of the Assemblie to warne him to competer before their brethrein, Mr James Lowsone, Mr Andrew Melvill, Mr Walter Balcalquall, Johne Durie, Mr Johne Craig, David Fergusone, Mr Johne Davidsone, and Johne Brand, to heare witnesse receaved against him in that mater, the morne at six houres; to whom the Assemblie giveth power to examine and trie the said witnesses, and everie one of them, upon the points denied by the said Mr David, and to report the probatioun again to the Assemblie.

THE RING'S COMMISSIONERS' INSTRUCTIONS.

The Proveist of Dundie and the Laird of Colluthie presented certan instructions directed with them by the king's Majestie and his counsell, with a letter writtin in favours of the Bishop of Murrev, which were read in the sixt sessioun. In the seventh, they answered, that for expedition of their first heed the Assemblie sould appoint their nixt conventioun the sooner, that a resolute answere might be givin thereto. As for the secund, they had found by experience commissiouns givin to brethrein with power to conclude, to have done great hurt to the kirk. As to novelteis, they sould meddle with none. As for the article putting them in remembrance of the acts made in the last parliament, speciallie tuiching provisioun for ministers, and stipends for them at all parish kirks, and appointing commissioners for ordering therof; for execution of the which it sould be required that they sould nominat three commissioners, with power to them to conveene; with als manie to be directed to his Grace, for consideratioun and appointing of the order and estat of the kirk and stipends, to beginne and tak effect at the first day of November nixt; and that the same commissioners sould have power to treat, confer, and conclude, that their travells might be effectuall in all maters concerning the said act, or depending therupon, to the full executioun therof. The Generall Assemblie having advised with the said article, nominateth and giveth power to their loved brethrein, the Laird of Dun, Mr Andrew Hav, Mr Thomas Buchanan, Mr Johne Craig, Mr David Lindsey, Mr Robert Pont, or Mr Thomas Buchanan, conjunctlie, to conveene with the king's Majestie's commissioners, at suche time as sall be assigned, to treate, confer, and reasoun, for a solide order and forme of provisioun of the ministers' stipends and estat of the kirk; and to lay the ground therof, and reduce the samine to a certan perfectioun, to be advised upon in the nixt Assemblie, there to be concluded, if it sall be thought expedient by the universall votes of the whole Assemblie. And for their better informatioun, to that effect ordeanneth everie presbyterie, as they sall be required by the said brethrein, to send some of the most qualified and meetest men of the presbyterie, to informe the six commissioners upon the estat of their countreis, for advancing of the said work, and informing them in the premisses.

MR D. RUSSELL CENSURED.

Mr David Russell, one of the Bailliffes of Sanct Andrewes, was summouned by the Synod of Fife, to compeere before this Assemblie, to heare sentence pronounced upon a processe led and deduced before the Presbyterie of Sanct Andrewes, for publishing of a scandalous letter upon the 17th day of Marche last, in presence of the congregatioun of Sanct Andrewes; in calling the ordinance of the presbyterie a rable; in giving command, with threatning, in face of the congregatioun, to publishe the letter; for penning and forming the said blasphemous letter; for denying, first, with attestatioun, the penning therof, and therafter granting the same; for opponing in all the heeds of the said letter to the ordinance of the presbyterie; for writting these outragious words therin, "Pretended Presbyterie," "Usurped authoritie of presbyterie, without unic ground of God's Word, or lawes of the realme;" that the said presbyterie did "against their owne consciences and Christian charitie;" that some of them were "promise-breakers." For contemning not onlie the jurisdictioun of the presbyterie, but also of the Synodall Assemblie, the Assemblie not onlie decerned his appellatioun from the presbyterie to be unformall, but also ordeanned him, upon Thursday come eight dayes, to compeere before the Presbyterie of Sanct Andrewes, and humblie confesse these his offences; and if they take his repentance to be unfained, that, upon the Lord's day immediatlie therafter, he compeere before noone, after sermon; and before the prayer, in the parish kirk of Sanct Andrewes, before noone, and, in presence of the congregatioun, confesse his offences, as they are above deduced in particular, and exhort all men to obey the ordinance of the kirk: and if he obey not the sentence in all points, that the Presbyterie of Sanct Anlrewes proceed against him with the censures of the kirk.

MR R. MONTGOMRIE'S FAUTORS CENSURED.

The Assemblie ordeanned that Gavin Graham, and the rest of his complices, alreadie excommunicated, sall underly the inunctiouns layed upon murtherers, incestuous persons, &c., before they be absolved from the said sentence, the forme wherof a conteaned in the act made the thrid day of Marche 1565; and hat when they have satisfied, the Presbyterie of Glasgow absolve hem. As for the rest who are yitt under processe, for the violence used against Mr Johne Howesone, the Assemblie referreth the ensuring of them to the discretioun of the Presbyterie of Glasgow, ne, of the Presbyterie of Edinburgh, James Anderson, and the Minister of Air, providing the said censure and injunctiouns be not so rigorous as these that are inflicted upon them that incurred he sentence of excommunicatioun.

ACTS.

The Assemblie, with full consent, concluded, that baptisme mainstred by laick persons, and suche as have no ordinar functioun is the ministrie, to be no baptisme; and that these that are baptized in this pretended maner sall be baptized according to God Word.

- 2. The Assemblie ordeanned, that everie presbyterie within the owne bounds sall tak order with ministers that make not residence at their owne kirks, as they will be answerable to the Assemblie.
- 3. As for the difficultie moved by certan brethrein, if it be law full for a pastor alreadie serving a flocke to receave presentatio and collatioun of a benefice apperteaning to another kirk, and t remove, without licence of the presbyterie where he serveth, or the Synodall Assemblie or Generall, the Assemblie resolved that h might not remove from his owne flocke without licence of his presbyterie, the Synodall or Generall Assemblie; and discharged all presbytereis, in times comming, to admitt anie person ellis where serving, as said is, to benefices, without testimoniall and licence shewed by them of the consent of the Presbyterie, Synodall, or Generall Assemblie, as said is. And if anie be found to remove him self without the consent forsaid, the Assemblie ordeanneth that he be deposed from his function and calling of the ministrie in time comming.

A COMMISSION FOR COLLECTING THE ACTS OF THE ASSEMBLY.

That the great travells taikin by Mr Craig, not without the singular fruict and profite of the whole brethrein, may be brought to perfectioun, it is thought good, that Mr James Lowsone, Mr David Lowsone, Mr David Lindsey, Mr Robert Pont, Mr Walter Balcalquall, Mr Nicoll Dagleish, Mr Johne Davidsone, travell in perusing the whole work, consider and weygh what things are requisite to the full completting therof, that the judgement of the whole kirk may be had therupon.

THE FRENCHE AMBASSADER DEPARTETH.

Manningvill, the Frenche ambassader, had gottin his dispatche about the 20th of Marche, yitt delayed he his departure, faining sicknesse and taking medicine, till the time of the conventioun. Then he came from Seton, where he had stayed certane dayes, for feare of invasioun, becaus of his masse and preest. He travelled among the nobilitie for an affirmative that the king was deteaned captive, to the end that the King of France being perswaded of a partie in Scotland, might send men or money, or both, with the duke, to restore him again. He tooke ship the 20th of Aprile; yitt appointed the Abbot of Sanct Colme, Lord of Down, and the Proveist of Glencluddan, to be agents in his businesse after he was gone.

THE KING'S PROGRESSE.

The king is desirous to tak a progresse, and writteth for some of the nobilitie, to have their advice. The lords reformers were not weill pleased with this motioun, yitt was it concluded in counsell, not without some difficultie. He entered in his progresse the 20th day of May, and tooke journey that day to Linlithquo. Marr, Angus, Bothwell, and Marshall, accompanied him.

THE LORDS REFORMERS RENUE THEIR CONFEDERACIE.

By the travells of the English ambassader and the ministers, the lords reformers composed their privat controverseis, and joyned themselves together in a straiter band of freindship than they had done before; and so were more terrible to their adversareis, whom they perceaved to gaine by their discord.

COLONELL STEWART'S AMBASSADGE.

The king's ambassader, Colonell Stewart, gott presence of the Queen of England upon the sixt of May. All the articles the queen refered to the counsell, except one, which concerned the advice of mariage; which she reserved to herself to answere t Commissioners were to be appointed for ratification of the band and treatie of the league-defensive. Order was promised to l taikin with pyrats. Mr Archibald Dowglas was to be sent hon upon some conditions. The onlie difficultie rested concerning the lands which apperteaned to the Ladie Margaret and the Erle Lennox. A Scotish man of Dumbartan, called Smallat, cam about this time out of France, from the duke to the queen, to thanke her Majestie for her favours, and to insinuat farther, unde colour of faire promises. Colonell Stewart proponed to the Queen England, that it was the king's desire to have the Erle of Arran court again; and craved her Majestie's consent, becaus the kin had promised he would not doe it without her consent. The quee called for Mr Johne Colvill, and enquired if he had the like commissioun. He answered, not; and that he supposed Colonel Stewart would not alledge anie suche thing, wherupon the colonel was forced to desist. The colonell returned from England the thrid of June, and went to Falkland to the king. He obteaned of the king, that the counsell sould not tak accompt of the discharge of his commissioun.

THE DUKE'S DEATH.

The Duke of Lennox ended his dayes the 26th of May. It was tried by physicians, chirurgeons, and others, who were present as spectators, that he was not poysoned in England, as was falselie surmised. His heart was taikin out, to be sent to our king; his bodie was layed in a leidden kist. He desired to be buried in Aubigney. He desired likewise before his death, that his letter be sent the Scottish king, wherin he recommended the estat of his childein; and his heart embalmed. He died of a dissenterie, or excoation of the inward parts, engendred of melancholie, wherewith as joyned gonorrhea. The report of his death came to Edinburgh be fourth of June. The Maister of Livingston, the Maister of orbesse, and sindrie gentle men, Papists, returned about the same me out of France, where they left the duke deidlie sicke at Pase.

THE KING WITHDRAWETH HIMSELF FROM THE LORDS.

The king, greatlie greeved at the death of the duke, was the ore exasperated against the lords reformers. He advised with olonell Stewart how he might be freed out of their hands. It as devised that he sould withdraw himself secreitlie out of Falknd to Sanct Andrewes, and there remaine till suche noblemen paired to him as he sould write for. So he went out of Falkland Sanct Andrewes the 27th of June, accompanied with Colonell ewart. After he had supped with the Erle of March, his grandther's brother, he went secreitlie to the castell. The colonell oke the custodie of the castell. Huntlie, Crawfurd, Montrose, rgile, came to Sanct Andrewes the day following, privie, as apared, to the interprise. Marr sent to the Erle of Angus; Angus ut to the Erle Bothwell, to come over the water in all haste. at before that Angus and Bothwell came within six myle of Sanct ndrewes, they were discharged, by an herald of armes to come th forces. They obeyed, and went in quiet maner; and after ey had spokin with the king, he commanded them to returne me, and remaine at their owne houses. It was thought that e Erle of Gowrie was privie to his departure out of Falkland. thers report that he was not privile to it, nor to the change made Sanct Andrewes: but fearing that the king would remember interteanement the last yeere, resolved to prevent the inconnient, if it were possible, and, therefore, desired the king's lince to come to him in a privat maner. Others report that he was sent for. When he came to the castell of Sanct Andrev without anie farther processe, he asked pardon upon his knees the fact committed the yeere before, and professed himself petent for the same, as also for the speeches he had uttered again the umquhile Duke of Lennox. Yitt, it is said, that he constan affirmed, that howbeit there was a fault in the forme, yitt the ditself was not evill, in respect of the great danger that both regioun and the commoun wealth did stand into at that time. It was done in presence of Argile, Atholl, Rothesse, and so others. By seeking and accepting a remissioun he condemn himself and his whole associats, and in the end overthrew him and the caus.

The king, his cheefe counsellers, and Colonell Stewart, the co teour, purposing to take their advantage against suche as favou not their course, charged the Laird of Cleish, the Laird of Druquhassill, and Mr Johne Colvill, to enter in waird. Drumquhas obeyed, but Cleish went to England.

BISHOP ADAMSONE INVEYGHETH AGAINST THE LORDS AND T MINISTRIE.

Mr Patrik Adamsone, called commounlie Bishop of Sanct Adrewes, had keeped his castell, like a tod in a hole, diseased of great feditie, as he called his disease. He becometh now a who man when the king cometh to Sanct Andrewes, occupieth the pit incontinent, declameth before the king, in a raging man against the ministrie and the lords, and all their proceedings. keeped his castell since the Generall Assemblie in Aprile, and 1582, till this time. He sought cure of weomen suspected witchcraft, namelie, of one who was apprehended, tried by the presbyterie, and committed to the castell to his custodie, to keeped to farther triell. He suffered her to escape out of the catell; yitt was she apprehended within three or foure yeeres aft and executed in Edinburgh. It was constantlie reported that the duke died a Papist; but he stoutlie contradicted the report in p t, and affirmed, for certan, that he died a Protestant; having in a hand a scroll, which he called the duke's Testament. A meriant woman, sitting before the pulpit, and spying narrowlie, affirmed that the scroll was a compt of foure or five yeere old debt, hich, a few dayes before, she had sent to him. The bishop, who refessed before that he had not the gift of application, now deameth and inveygheth, but inspired with another spirit than faith-ll pastors are.

A CONFERENCE BETWEEN THE KING AND SOME MINISTERS.

The king sent for Mr James Lowsone, and challenged him for ying, that as the duke thristed for blood in his life, so he died blood: for it was reported that he died of the bloodie fluxes. lexander Clerk, Proveist of Edinburgh, had writtin to the king, and elated Mr James. But the mater was easilie past over betuixt em. At the same time, Mr Robert Pont, Mr David Lindsey, Mr ohne Davidsone, were directed by the presbyterie of Edinburgh the king, to admonishe him to beware of innovations in court; try reports before credit were givin to them, and to putt him in membrance of Holt, the English Jesuit. They came to Falkland e 18th of Julie, and David Fergusone in companie with them; r James Lowsone was there the day before. They were brought to the king's cabinet. Mr Robert Pont and Mr David Lindsey ake off, and advised him to beware of alterations. The king enied there were anie alterations. They answered, there was eat appearance. The king said, there was no king in Europ ould have suffered the things that he hath suffered. David Fersone answered, "I would not have you like anie other king in urop. What are they all but murtherers of the sancts of God, d the King of France in speciall? But yee have been otherwise ought up." "I am catholick King of Scotland," said the king, and may choose anie that I like best to be in companie with me; d I like them best that are with me for the present." Some of e number were not weill pleased with these speeches. David Fergusone said, "No, brethrein; he is universall king, and n make choice of his companie, as David did in the 110th Psalm He had beene telling the king, a little before, that he had seene king's paraphrase in meeter upon that psalme, commended it hi lie, and exhorted him, that as he had acquainted himself specia with that psalme, so he would follow David's exemple. Then Johne Davidsone, after he had professed his loving affectioun the king, said, "Your Grace's government hath beene a gr blessing of God, which maketh us, indeid, to be mervellous care of your Grace's weelefare, and speciallie now, when we see e companie drawin about you in your young yeeres: ye are greater danger now than when yee were rocked in the cradde The king said, he saw no danger, and few or none of the nobili to be preferred for their godlinesse. Mr Johne answered. "It is be lamented there is so small godlinesse in anie of them as the is. But vitt, Sir, there is great difference betuixt them that, wi their infirmiteis, alwise have professed the truthe and defend your authoritie; and betweene them that never loved the trutl and have fitted the feild to pull the crowne off your head." Day Fergusone, fearing that Mr Johne sould have gone too farre, terrupted him, and rounding in the king's eare, said, "There w no wisdome in keeping the murtherers that slue your goodshir a father, or their posteritie, about you." Mr Johne proceeded, a said, "It will appeare, if your deeds be agreeable to your word if yee love not them that hate the Lord, as the prophet said Jehosaphat: otherwise, we will looke no more to your words, b to your deeds and behaviour; and if they agree not, which Go forbid, we must damne sinne in whatsoever person. Nather that face upon flesh that we may, or will spaire, incace we fir rebellioun to our God, whose message we carie. Nather ougl your Grace to mak light accompt of our threatnings; for there was never one yitt in this realme, in cheef authoritie, that ever pro pered after the ministers began to threattin them. (Here th king smiled headingfullie.) And, therefore, we beseeke your Grace to tak heed to your wayes, in God's obedience." Then Davi Fergusone directed his speeche to Colonell Stewart, and exhorted him to bewar what counsell he gave to the king; "for assure your self," said he, "if yee counsell him to place and displace the nobilitie as yee please, they will not bear it at your hands, who is but a meane man." The colonell stormed at the first, but grew calm incontinent. After some fairé speeches, as they took their leave, the king layed his hands upon everie one of them.

There was a proclamatioun at the Croce of Edinburgh, wherin ballats, bookes, libells, and hard speeches of the duke's death, were discharged, and intimatioun made that he died a good Protestant.

THE PROCLAMATION DATED AT PERTH, THE PENULT OF JULIE 1583, DECLARING THE KING'S INTENTION CONCERNING THE ALTERATION MADE AT ST ANDREWES.

"JAMES, by the grace of God, King of Scots, to our levits, &c., messingers, our shireffs in that part, conjunctlie and severallie, speciallie constitute, greeting. Forsameekle as we, understanding the practises and bussie travells of some of our unnatural and disordered subjects, who, by misconstruing and misreporting, by word and by writt, of our owne good minde and proceedings, studie continuallie to interteane factiouns and unquietnesse within our realme, the rather to stay the ordinar course of justice, and to eshew the due punishment of their owne evill deserving: To obviat and resist the effects of which wicked speeches and travells, and to resolve and satisfie all our loving and good subjects that, peradventure, stand yitt doubtfull of the truthe of our meaning and loings: We, with advice of the Lords of our Privie Counsell, have thought expedient to ratifie and publish to the world, speciallie to our loving and good subjects, the truthe of our verie minde and yking, tuiching our estat the yeere bygane, and of our present conditioun; declaring heerby, that howsoever we find our self come to the 17th yeer of our age, and remembring the troubled stat of our realme, through the frequent troubles and alteratiouns ncurred in our young age in time past, (alway to our prejudice and skaith,) but speciallie by that which fell out the last yeere, & farre to our offence, and to the mislyking of our minde; albeit, for publict quietnesse' sake, we indirectlie bare with the fact, and a that succeeded theron, vitt we had it alwayes in thought, so soon as God sould offer proper time and occasioun, to tak unto our se our owne place and state, to shew us a king indifferent to all or nobilitie and good subjects, and not to be led nor caried by ani special surnames or races, or by particular men in anie degree, t the prejudice of the commoun accesse which all subjects ought t have of their soveran lord and king. And, therefore, of our own proper motive, upon the 26th day of Junie last, took purpose t passe from Falkland to our citie of St Andrewes, where, reposin in suretie till the conveening of a great number of the principal of our nobilitie, notifie unto them, at their comming, the effect c our proceedings and intentioun; permitting and licencing other not writtin for to passe home, whill we, with advice of suche chosi persons of our counsell as we elected to tarie with us, sould deli berat further in all things needfull concerning the suretie of our per soun, and conservatioun of the publict quietnesse of our countrie wherinto we have occupyed our self cheefelie sensyne, intending with God's grace, to governe our realme and subjects heerafte in peace and justice, and in professioun of God's true religioun publictlie preached, and by law established, in the same, unseeking the hurt or evill of whatsomever our subjects, in respect of ani their bygane offences, if they sall tymouslie acknowledge the samwith penitent hearts, and trust our forgivenesse therefor: which we are willing to grant to them, and by thir presents promise so to doe, they no wise provoking us, by anie other unlawfull and unquiet doings, to remember their former transgressiouns, and uncalling to minde anie factiouns that have beene in our minoritie, which we have, and will have, buried in oblivioun; as we will the like to be among our whole subjects, everie one to other, without anie querrel or questioun for anie thing that hath happenned and fallin our heretofore; and without casting up or querrelling others for this or that factioun, as we have givin good prooffe of our clemencie and favour to some alreadie. Our will is heerefore, and we charge you straitlie and command, that, incontinent thir our letters seene, yee passe, and in our name and authoritie mak publicatioun of the premisses, by open proclamatioun at the heed burrowes of our realme, and other places needfull, that none pretend ignorance of the same; and that yee command and charge all and sindrie our lieges to conteane themselves in quietnesse, under God's feare and our lawfull obedience; and that none of them tak upon hand to move or provoke trouble, unquietnesse, or seditioun among our subjects, by way of deed, or show them the authors and instruments of alterations and novelteis tending to the disturbance of our estat, as they will answere upon their allegiance, at their highest charge and perrell, under the pain of incurring our indignatioun and displeasure, if they sall attempt anie thing in the contrare; as yee will answere to us therupon. The which to doe, we, &c.

"Givin under our signet, at our burgh of Perth, the penult of Julie, and of our raigne the 17th yeere, 1583.

" Per actum Secreti Consilii."

Upon Saturday, the thrid of August, the king returneth from Perth to Falkland. Mr Bowes came to Edinburgh, malcontent with the proceedings of the court, crying out, "Fy, fy upon false dealing!" No promise keeped by the king, nather to the queene, as mastresse, the kirk, the lords, nor to himself.

THE COLONELL PROVOKETH THE SECRETAR.

The Commendatar of Dumfermline perceaving Colonell Stewart o be in great credit with the king, sent to him a velvet purse, with threttie foure-pund peeces of gold in it; craved and offered autuall freindship. The colonell maliciouslie traduceth him to the ring, as if he had sent this purse to betray the king. He gave the peeces to thrittie of the guard. Everie man bowed his peece, and caried it hanging at his knapskall or hatt all the way, as they

ARRAN RECEAVED IN COURT.

Upon Moonday, the fyft of August, Arran went over at the Queen's Ferrie from Kinneill, accompanied with fortie or fiftie horse. He came to Falkland that night to the king, and was weill accepted, and within few dayes beganne to looke braid.

PARDON OFFERED FOR THE ROAD OF RUTHVEN.

This day, the fact committed at Ruthven was disallowed, and all that had anie part in it were willed to come and crave pardoun, which was promised upon their good behaviour. Argile travelled with Marr, at Stirline, to come and crave pardoun, which he did. Easter Wemes likewise sought pardoun, and obteaned it. Angus and Bothwell past their time, in the meane time, in the south.

Mr James Lowsone, Johne Durie, Mr David Lindsey, Mr Andrew Hay, Mr Thomas Smeton, David Fergusone, Mr Patrik Galloway, were sent for to compeere at Sanct Andrewes, the 22d of August, at which time a conventioun was to be holdin. They compeered, and answered to the heeds proponed by his Majestic and his commissioners, as followeth:—

"First, Concerning that which fell furth the last yeere, for preservatioun of the kirk of God, the king's Majestie's person and commoun weale, we simplie submitt our judgements to an act made by the Generall Assemblie theranent." They agreed not to give this in, becaus, as the most part said, they were not demanded of it.

"Secundlie, Tuiching the estat of things present and to come, in uprightnesse of conscience we protest that we minde nothing but quietnesse and peace, under the obedience of our good God, and the king's Majestie, wherof we have beene and sall be procurers, according to the Word of God, our owne callings, and duetie toward his Grace and commoun wealth.

"Thridlie, As to the late proclamatioun, declaring the king's Majestie's minde of his Grace's estate the last yeere, it apperteaneth not to our vocatioun curiouslie to inquire therof, nather know we anie of our number that have transgressed in that point, nather doe we purpose, in time comming, rashlie or unadvisedlie to speeke of that proclamatioun, or anie other; and solemnelie protest, that whatsoever we sall speeke, we sall leane upon the warrant of God's Word, conteaning our selves alwise within the bounds of our calling.

"Fourthlie, Forasmuche as we are heavilie burthenned by wrangous brute made, als weill of the whole ministrie in generall, as of some of us in speciall, we most humblie crave that his Majestie and your lordships would not suddanlie credit everie report, but to use diligent triell, wherby we are assured that our innocencie, and the ungodlie mindes of our accusers, sall easilie appeare.

"Last, Becaus we are come heere in few number at his Majestie's desire, without anie commissioun of the Generall Assemblie, and, therefore, may answere onlie for our owne parts; if his Majestie would crave anie farther, good it were to caus propone the same to the Generall Assemblie, where, with advice and consent of the whole number, resolution may be had."

DRUMQUHASSILL EXAMINED.

In time of the conventioun, Drumquhassill was brought from Blacknesse to Sanct Andrewes; was examined, and therafter wairded in the castell.

THE CONVENTIOUN DISSOLVED.

Upon Fryday, the 24th of August, the conventioun dissolved, vithout concluding anie thing of importance, except the conceaving of a new proclamatioun, sharper than the former, against the Road of Ruthven, which was sett furth in print.

MARR, GLAMES, DUMFERMLINE, WAIRDED OR CONFYNED.

The Commendatar of Dumfermline came to Falkland. The king gave him verie good countenance, yitt was he convoyed to Colonell Stewart's chamber, and keeped there till Moonday the 27th; or, as others report, was taikin by Colonell Stewart himsel at the king's command, and sent, upon Moonday the 27th, to the fortalice of Lochlevin; for the Laird of Lochlevin was confynned in the north, becaus he favoured the other faction. The fortalice was committed to the Erle of Rothesse, and souldiours putt in it to keepe it. The Maister of Glames was charged to enter in Dumbartan within three dayes; Marr was committed to the Erle of Argile's custodie, till he goe out of the countrie.

SECRETAR WALSINGHAM'S CONFERENCE WITH THE KING.

Secretar Walsinghame came to Edinburgh, the first of September, directed in ambassadge from the Queen of England to our king. Upon the seventh of September he road to Stirline, and frome thence to Perth, where he gott presence of the king. He required the king, that his Majestie would continue in freindship with the Queen of England; which he promised, providing she intended nothing against him. When Secretar Walsinghame asked, how her Majestie might be assured? he answered, By his owne handwritt. Secretar Walsingham replyed, as is reported, that her Majestie had his hand-writt before, for sindrie things, and among the rest, that Arran sould not come to court. The king answered, he was then in feare of his life, and in their hands of whom he was not assured; but now, being at libertie, the thing he promised he would stand unto.

THE GREEVES WHICH SECRETAR WALSINGHAME PRESENTED TO THE KING, IN NAME OF HIS MAISTRESSE.

First, For that the late alteration was made without her Majestie's privitie, contrare to his promisses by letter, his owne ambassaders, and to her ambassaders.

His strait dealing against sindrie noblemen, and others weill affected, constraining some of them to accept remissioun for a fact approved by an instrument in the word of a prince, by act of counsell, convention, and Assemblie Generall of the church; as also, contrare to his letter of the secund of Julie 1583.

The immediat removing of his servants and officers, without anie stay to acquaint her Majestie therewith, notwithstanding that he was required therunto in her Hienesse' name, by her ambassader resident there, directed so to doe.

His progresse in this action expressie against her Majestie's requeist, by her letter with her owne hand.

The revocatioun of Arran, against his Hienesse' often promises and assurance particularlie givin to her Majestie in that behalf.

That notwithstanding his Highnesse franklie offered to apprehend the two Papists with Lennox, yitt he suffered them to depart into France.

The escape of Holt in that strange maner, approving thereby, that he had more regard (as her Hienesse conceaveth) to content Manningvill, in respect of a secreit promise, than to satisfie her Majestie.

AT PERTH, 12 SEPTEMBRIS 1583.—ANSWERES OF THE KING'S MAJESTIE TO THE GREEVES PRESENTED BY SECRETAR WALSING-HAME, AMBASSADER TO THE QUEEN'S HIENESSE OF ENGLAND.

"His Majestie esteemeth that the queene, his deerest sister, continuing in her former care of his weilfare and standing, must also, of necessitie, allow of his proceedings tending to his honour, suretie, and contentment, as the late procuring of his owne releefe and libertie hath beene, and is, in respect he himself was the onlie does therof; and that he now of himself also offereth unto her als great good will, and more arct amitie, than ever anie of his subjects through anie qualitie in them, was able to offer in his name of before And where she accuseth him of promise, seeming to allow of his late hard estat, he trusteth she understandeth how he shewed his mislyking of the proceedings of the authors of his restraint then about him, both to her cousin and late ambassader, Sir George Carie. and to Bowes, left heere resident. For anie promise not to alter the same, howsoever the conditioun of the time, the danger of his persoun, to eshew civill warre, moved him so to show himself contented to doe, vitt was it alwayes so meaned, if they sould behave themselves as his duetiful subjects therafter, returning them home, and leaving his Hienesse in the companie he best liked of, as once they promised to doe: howbeit, meaning nothing lesse, and continuing in more dangerous courses for his person and estat than before, as partlie are discovered, and may appeare by absenting of sindrie of them from triell. It behoveth his Majestie to seeke and provide for his owne suretie, which if he had delayed, had muche more endangered his estat than it that is done, as her Majestie, he doubteth not, sall shortlie by good experience understand. For which causes he esteemeth, and is surelie persuaded, that the queen, his deerest sister, in consideration of the good will borne. not onlie by him towards her, but by all his good subjects that respect his estat and weale, to the continuance of their amitie, sall thinke it more sure and convenient to deale now with himself than heeretofore it was, in his unperfyte age, with anie his subjects in his name. His Highnesse hath used no strait dealing against anie nobleman or others, his subjects weill affected to him; but his proceedings have beene and are according to the lawes of this realme, alwayes mixed with mercie to such as acknowledge their offence, crave his pardoun therefor, which he doubteth not but the queen, his deerest sister, and all others, will esteeme in him a gracious and favourable dealing. For the approbatioun of the fact by his word, act of counsell, or conventioun, he doubteth not also but her Majestie, and all other princes in Europ, know how, in the meane time, and long therafter, he was vitt still captive, restrained of his libertie; and vitt by that act they could pretend no assurance for anie unlawfull deid attempted after the date therof, wherin they continued, rather with greater outrage and appearand perrell to his Highnesse' person and estat than of before, as had provin shortlie by effect, if their practises and dangerous matters intended had not beene prevented. For which causes cheefelie his Hienesse hath beene moved to seek the triell of some, and the deserved punishment of their offences. And to that conventioun verie few others nor the perpetrators of the fact and their associats assembled, the most and best part of the nobilitie and estats absteaning, by their presence or assents, to allow the same; and of such as came, some, although they disallowed it by their votes, vitt, by his Majestie's privie requeist, through the considerations before specified, were moved to subscrive the same.

"And the said approbatioun pretended of the Assemblie of the Kirk, in a mater of the self so civill and politick, and little concerning them, proceeded rather of opinioun conceaved of his Majestie's owne allowance and consent, than of anie right and due consideration of the circumstances of the caus, incace that had been a convenient judgement therof. Alwise, the truthe is, that one of his Hienesse' domesticks taiking upon him a message in his Majestie's name, without his knowledge or directioun, had (as sent from his Hienesse) sought the same approbatioun, wherof, how soone his Majestie understood, he utterlie disallowed the fact. avowing that the messinger sould never therafter serve him, as in truthe, for that same caus, he was removed from his Hienesse and service. And for anie thing writtin by his Hienesse, in his letter of the secund of Julie, he is weill able to explane his owne meaning therin, and to performe his lawfull promises everie way, as in honour and reasoun apperteaneth.

"Toward the removing of his Hienesse' servants and officers, he trusteth her Majestie, respecting that he is a free prince, and can best judge who is meetest for his owne service, and what her self would doe in the like cace, sall no wise, in reasonn, thinke his Hienesse' new choice anie greefe to her Majestie.

"Nather yitt his progresse in his late proceedings, what soever it pleased his Hienesse to write in the letter with his owne hand, not doubting but all princes sall worthilie esteeme the fault done unto his Hienesse haynous, and weill deserving punishment, with the doings of the authors sensyne; and the necessitie of his Hienesse' present conditioun could not suffer to be altogether delayed: yitt hath none susteaned harme in lands or goods that yeelded their due obedience, or that was not weill knowne to have travelled to the endangering of his Hienesse' estat, in whose favour, he trusteth, her Majestie will never requeist nor perswade.

"Tuiching the revocatioun of the Erle of Arran, as his imprisonment ensued upon his Majestie's restraint, so could not his releefe and libertie be effectuallie knowne and published without calling again of the said erle to his Hienesse's presence and companie; and according to his Majestie's promise, he made her Hienesse foreseene of his doings in that behalfe by his letter, as likewise, following her good advice, effectuallie travelled, and brought to passe the accord of the querrells among sindrie of his nobilitie; speciallie betweene the Erles of Arran and Marr, immediatlie after the returne of the Erle of Arran to his presence.

"And toward the departing of the two Englishmen called Papists, by the west sea, true it is that they past away indeid before his Hienesse' officers, and others directed hither, could apprehend them, whereof his Hienesse gave advertisement immediatlie therafter, and Bowes, if he list, can declare the truthe of his Hienesse' good will and diligence shewed in that behalfe. And for the escape of Holt, it is not to be thought so strange a mater as is objected, since suche an accident can be thought no noveltie in Scotland nor England, and some of his Majestie's owne subjects have semblablic escaped out of the same place, and about the same time, with whom it is weill knowne his Hienesse hath great cause of fence; nather hath her Hienesse anie just caus to conceave anie ache caus of his Hienesse for the causes predict.

"By commandement of his Majestie, in absence of the Secretar, "HAY."

I find in a certan manuscript, that the king gave this answere llowing to Secretar Walsinghame. His Majestie assured him at he was resolved to harme no man, nor putt at anie man farer in bodie, lands, or goods, for the publict fact at Ruthven; they behaving themselves as duetifull subjects heerafter, not havg dealt with anie other privie practises against our person, weale, rretie, nor estat, the which we doubt not but the queen, our eerest sister, will both allow, and assist in triell, taiking, and unishing of the same. As for anie putt at presentlie, upon just iell of their innocencie in others their privie practises and dealgs prejudicial to us, as said is, they finding suche noble men utioun, and answerable for them, whom we can like of and trust to, that they, and ilk one of them, sall be answerable to us in ping their duetie and obedience, we will use our former clemencie to our good subjects. We are content, at our nixt parliament, ecording to our deerest sister's advice, to assure all our good subcts, that we minde to call, accuse, nor harme, no man for the iblict causes bypast, as the civill troubles taikin up by act of acificatioun, as likewise the publict fact at Ruthven; excepting wise the three murthers, and other privie practises before menoned, as they are or sall be tried heerafter. We have resolved, at ir nixt parliament, and after that our estats have proponed unto s a number, to choose upon, as sall be most meete to give us adce and counsell, to elect suche as are best affected to religioun, cretie, and tranquillitie of our estat, and best like of the amitie etuixt us and our deerest sister. We require, that the said seretar be a good instrument, to hold fordward the treatie for reewing of the peace betuixt both the realmes; as also, for comissioners meeting tuiching the effaires of the borders: that there suche a person chosin, by whom there may be at all times a privie and sure intelligence past betuixt us and our decrest ter, for the more full interteaning of amitie and good love amus."

A NEW OFFER OF PARDON.

About this time, divers proclamations were made, offering don to all that would seeke the same. But suche as were un the interprise of Ruthven feared to come to court, becaus, the bot of Dunfermline hanting the court, and suspecting no evil, wairded in Lochlevin, and, as the brute went, was in hazard of life. For answere to the rumors that were spread, and doubts put into men's hearts, that the king intended, notwithstanding of late proclamatioun made at Perth, to call men to accompt for publict attempt made the last veere, becaus some were commit to waird, and some had fled, a declaratioun was published the 21 of September, wherin the king assured all the subjects, that order latelie used against anie particular persons, hath beene or for trying of certan privie and particular attemptats practised to have beene committed against his person and estat, both before and af the said publict act: that some fearing and finding themsel guiltie, would perswade men, that they are persued for that prolict act: that that pretence was most false: that as he promised his deerest sister, the Queene of England, he would keepe inve lablie his promise, and yitt offereth pardon to all that will huml crave the same; assuring all the subjects, that he mindeth no har to anie nobleman, for whatsoever publict caus bygane, not dou ing but the subjects who have heeretofore offended him will p cure his gracious good will and clemencie, by duetifull obedier and good behaviour.

The Abbot of Dumfermline was sett at libertie, out of Lochler castell, upon the 23d of September, upon cautioun to remaine Dumfermline, and five or six myle about, under the paine of thousand pounds.

THE COURTEOURS FORTIFIE THEIR OWNE FACTION.

The Erle of Marr, confyned in Argile, was commanded to rander the castell of Stirline to the king and counsell, under the paine of reasoun. The king gave it in keeping to the Erle of Arran, who vas also appointed Proveist of Stirline. The Erle of Crawfurd vas made Proveist of Dundie, by the king's letters, after that the oun had long resisted. Robert Lord Boyd was charged to compeere by himself, or his procurator in his name, before the Secreit Counsell at Falkland, or where it sall happin to hold, and there esigne in the king's hands, and dimitt the bailifferie of the Archishoprick of Glasgow, with the pertinents and pendicles therof, ogether with all the right, title, entreisse, or clame, he now hath, r had at the making of his promise to the umquhile Duke of Lenox, in and to the same, in favours of the said duke, and for infeftnent to be made to him therof, conforme to his promise forsaid. 'he castell of Glasgow was randered to Montrose. The old Proeist of Edinburgh, Alexander Clerk, was continued in his office. o, the court fortified themself the best way they could against nie dangerous interprise. Mr Bowes, the English ambassader, ooke his leave of the king the secund of October, and tooke jourey toward England the fourth of October.

They were ordeane to conveene the sixt day of Marche nixt to come, and to report their proceedings to the nixt Assemblie. Mr Robert Wilkie pro tested, in name of the universitie, that the said commissioun pro judge not the liberteis and priviledge of the universitie.

raig, in collecting the Acts of the Assemblie, reported, that God as to be praised for his labours; yitt, some things they had marked, herupon they desired conference with him, and therafter would receed with him to farther reasoning.

The commissioners appointed in the last Assemblie to proceed rainst the Bishops of the Isles, Dunkelden, Dumblane, and Sanct ndrewes, but speciallie these who had commissioun for the Bishops the Isles and Dunkelden, reported their proceedings in writt. Beous the Bishop of Dumblane pretended he wanted the act of the Asmblie, the Assemblie ordeaned the former commissioun to be exeated in all points. In the ellevinth sessioun, the processe led by ne presbyterie of Sanct Andrewes against Alesone Person, together ith the processe led against Mr Patrik Adamsone before the said resbyterie, and before the Synodall Assemblie of Fife, were exbited to the Assemblie, in the thritteenth sessioun, which were ad, together with the depositions of the witnesses led against m. The Assemblie ordeaned their brethrein, Mr Andrew Hay, ohne Johnstoun, and James Ramsay, to collect the deposioun of the witnesses, and the articles they prove. The Bishop Sanct Andrewes had beene wairned by the Synodall of Fife, oud acta, to compeere before the Assemblie upon the thrid day. ommission was givin to the minister of Dundie, to admonish the oung Laird of Fentrie, who, after his returning to the countrie, aved over the time limited by Act of Parliament, without makag confessioun of his faith, to subscrive the said Confessioun; and he obey not, to proceed with the sentence of excommunication gainst him upon the fourth Sabbath day after; and if he obey, that is solemne oath be taikin to everie article, and that he be injoyned subscrive the samine before the congregation publictlie; and nerafter the presbyterie sall injoyne satisfactioun to him for his postasie. For a smuche as the constitutioun of presbytereis within nis realme being considered to be most necessar and profitable for ne whole kirk, yitt, for interteanement of good policie and disciline therin, if the same be duelie and accordinglie erected, the Asemblie hath advised, and thought it meete, that the brethrein after specified sall visite particularlie the bounds after following, v Mr David Lindsey, Mr Alexander Hume, and Mr Johne F bertsone, from Dee north to Tayn, and the said Mr Johne to mee them at Elgine; Mr Andrew Hay, Mr Andrew Polwart, Mr G bert Gairdin, from Dee to Forth; Mr George Hav. Mr Thor Buchanan, James Andersone, Johne Clappertone, from Forth Berwick, by East Clyde as after followeth, viz., the said Jan from Edinburgh west, the said Johne from Edinburgh east, and t said Mr George and Mr Thomas the rest of the saids bounds; Joh Durie, Mr Johne Davidsone, and the minister of Glasgow, t whole bounds from Clyde, both to the south and west; and betui this and the nixt Assemblie diligentlie consider the estat of ti whole presbytereis within the saids bounds, where they are erected see if there be uniformitie of order and policie keeped among there and, as they find just caus of reformatioun, to putt hand theret and reforme the same; as also, where no elderships are vitt erec ed, to plant and erect the same, and of their diligence concernir this commissioun to give accompt at the nixt Generall Assemblic and that the presbytereis where their brethrein remaine and serv tak order for provisioun of their kirks in their absence. Commi sioun was givin to some brethrein, to putt in forme the article which were to be presented to the king, together with the instructions to be givin to the presenters.

THE TENOR OF THE ARTICLES.

"Sir, The strait commission we have receaved of the Eternal our God, when as in this your Majestie's realme we were mad watchmen of his people, and fearefull threatning pronounced agains suche as neglect faithfullie to execut everie part of their weighticharge, compelleth us, presentlie to have recourse unto your Majestie, perceaving manie things to fall furth greatlie to the prejudice of God's glorie, and no small appearance of utter wracke of this his kirk and commoun weale, unlesse some haistie remeed be put thereto; most humblie, therefore, beseeking your Majestie dilintlie to weygh and consider thir few heeds, which, with all rerence and observance, we present, looking for a gracious answere d speedie redresse therof.

"First, It is a great greefe to the hearts of all them that feare od, to see Papists, apostats, sworne enemies to Christ, to your race, and all your faithfull subjects, forfaulted for their treasoun, me also suspected, and heavilie bruted with the murther of the ost noble person of your umquhile father, impugners of the truther word and writt, continuing still in their wickednesse, unreconsed to the kirk, to receave of your Majestie the benefite of pacification, to the prejudice of faithfull ministers, whom violentlie, by at meanes, they labour to dispossesse.

"Secundlie, That others, from their youth nourished in the kirk God with us, and sensyne fearefullie fallin backe therefra, and ecome open renegats, and blasphemers of the truthe, and mainaners of idolatrie, and that man of sinne, Lieutenant of Satan, and oppressors of God's people, and yitt, notwithstanding, are reaved in court, authorized, and so farre countenanced, that they be become familiar with your Majestie; wherethrough, beside the reef of your Grace's faithfull subjects, manie are brought to doubt that sall ensue upon suche beginnings.

"Thridlie, That a wicked and obstinat Papist, sent into the counie to traffique against God, and quietnesse of your Grace's estate, ad, therefore, as worthie of death, committed in waird at your race's command, with sure promise that he sould not escape unishment; yitt, as we understand, was by indirect meanes lett epart, and no triell taikin to find out the author of his deliverie.

"That your Majestie seemeth to have over good lyking of the nemeis of God, als weill in France as some within this realme, he have never givin testimonie of anie good meaning, ather in regioun or in your Majestie's service; beside the dissolute life, and religious behaviour of them that, in your Grace's service, have acceeded to men that were knowne zealous in God's caus, and withfull to your Grace in your tender age.

"Since your Majestie tooke the government in your owne hand, manie faire promises have beene made, that order sould be taiki for preservatioun of the kirk of God, and continuance therof to ou posteritie. Yitt, after long and continuall sute, nothing is perform ed; but in place of redresse, daylie the kirk is bereft of their priviledges and liberteis.

"The thrids are sett in tacks for summes of money, in defraud ce the kirk, so that no minister heerafter can be provided. Abbacei are dispouned, without anie provisioun made for ministers serving in the kirks annexed thereto, directlie against the Act of Parlia ment.

"Spiritual livings are givin to bairns, and translated in temporall lordships.

"That there is no punishment for incest, adulterie, witchecraft murthers, abominable and horrible oaths, in suche sort that daylie sinne increaseth, and provoketh the wrath of God against the whole countrie.

"There is a sore murmure among your Grace's lieges, and a lamentable complaint that the lawes of the countrie have no place; that no man can be sure, nather of his land, life, or goods, which threatneth a miserable confusion, and the heavie hand of God to ensue therupon.

"That oftentimes your Majestie interponeth your Hienesse' au thoritie, by letters of horning, to stop the execution of the acts made in the Generall Assemblie, in maters properlie belonging to the kirk, and nothing tuiching the civill estat.

"Last, We most humblie beseeke your Majestie to suffer us lament this great divisioun among your Hienesse' nobilitie and subjects, the one part seeking by all meanes possible, for their owne particular, to perswade your Majestie to wracke the other; which fostereth a continual strife, malice, and rancour, to the great danger of your Grace's person, whom God preserve to the kirk of God and this poore countrie; beseeking your Majestie, for the tender mercie of God, to call to your Hienesse some of the most wise, discreit, and indifferent, and by their counsell to tak a moderat course, that unquiett spirits may be bridled, good men cherished and interteanned, and the hearts of all your Majestie's subjects united, to the maintenance of God's glorie, preservation of your royall estat, and confort of all them that bewaile this miserable desolation."

THE PARTICULAR INSTRUCTIONS AND MORE FULL DECLARATION GIVIN BY THE GENERALL ASSEMBLIE TO THEIR COMMISSIONERS, DIRECTED TO THE KING'S MAJESTIE, THE 12TH OF OCTOBER, UPON EVERIE HEED OF THE ARTICLES GENERALLIE PROPONED.

"First, How heavilie the godlie are offended, and the whole kirk slandered, that Mr David Chalmers, a man notoriouslie knowne unto his Grace and counsell to be not onlie a formall and professed enemie against the truthe of Christ's religioun, a plain practiser and traffiquer against the same, but also against his Hienesse' authoritie and estat in all parts where he hath travelled, having heerewith resting upon his head the foule brute and commoun suspicion conceaved in the hearts of manie, upon no small or obscure presumptions, of the cruell and barbarous murther of the most noble person of umquhile his Majestie's father, of good memorie, sould be so suddanlie, and with suche small accompt, entered in mercie and grace, and receave his Majestie's pacificatioun, with letters to dispossesse this Majestie's faithfull servants, and ministers of God, of their livings and possessions, no due satisfactioun being made to the kirk: A mater no lesse importing great prejudice to his Hienesse' noble estat, than tuiching his Majestie in the highest point of his honour; and, therefore, his Hienesse would be moved wiselie to looke upon the consequence therof; and, in consideration of this weightie greef, would call backe and suspend the effect and force of anie thing yitt granted to him, and the charges givin to his repossessioun, untill the time that, after just and lawfull triell, his innocencie be agnosced, and the whole kirk, so farre offended in his person, be satisfied, and the same satisfactioun be returned from the kirk tto his Grace.

"The young Laird of Fentrie, directed into this countrie, as we are surelie informed, to practise with his Grace and his faithfull subjects, for overthrow of religioun, by moyen of freinds increeping in court, and where ever he cometh, plainlie mainteaneth papistrie and under colour of conference, which by all meanes he fleeth, doet great slander in this countrie.

"The Thrid article is notour.

"By the Ferd article is meant the King of France, the Duke of Gwise, and other Papists there; and likewise within the countries, the Erle of Huntlie, the Erle of Crawfurd, and others.

"The kirk is hurt in their liberties and priviledges sindrie wayes, as will appeare in the articles as follow.

"Tacks of the thrids of Hadinton and St Andrewes sett to the Laird of Segy.

"The abbacie of Arbrothe is disponed to the duke, and no provisious made for ministers.

"The abbacie of Halyrudhous to the abbot's young sonne; siclyke, the Abbot of Newbottle's sonne provided to the abbacie.

"The nynth notour, and so is the tenth; as, for example, Mr George Gairdin being provided to the personage and vicarage of Fordice, in the 68 yeere of God, and yitt standing titular therof, the king's Majestie hath sett in tack the fruits of the saids benefices to Robert Stewart of Todla, and command givin to the Lords of Sessioun to grant letters upon the said tack.

"Mr Alexander Arbuthnet is charged, against the acts of the kirk, to remaine in the Colledge of Aberdeen, under the paine of horning.

"The ministers of the chapter of Halyrudhous are charged, by letters of horning, to subscrive the gift of pensioun made to the Person of Pennycooke his wife and sonne, for their lyfetimes, siclyke against the same act.

"The greeves of the Assemblie were sent to Stirline, to the king, upon Saturday at night, which day the king came to Stirline. The commissioners returned with small contentment. When the king's answers were read before the Assemblie, and confered with their articles and instructions, the brethrein thought a great part of them were not yitt satisfied. As tuiching the Laird of Fentrie, they thought good his Grace sould be informed concerning the testimonial alledged givin to him. As to the rest of the articles, except that which concerneth the changing of abbaceis in temporall lordships, that they may yitt seeke better answeres. At length, they receaved these slender answeres which follow:—

THE TENOR OF THE KING'S MAJESTIE'S ANSWERS TO THE ARTICLES OF THE ASSEMBLIE.

"His Majestie having considered the heeds, and confered with the messengers tuiching the meaning and explanatioun of the generaliteis therof, understanding the first point to be gathered of the granting of the benefite of pacificatioun by his Hienesse to Mr David Chalmer; his Majestie knowing that man onlie to have beene forfaulted for that commoun action of his being at the feild of Langside, for which pardon was granted to so manie, thought it no new or strange thing, at the requeist of suche as earnestlie moved his Hienesse, to grant unto him the like benefite, as manie others for the like caus had of before obteaned: Yitt, no wise intending to spaire the due punishment of him, or anie others, that may be charged, or may be found culpable of the murther of his Hienesse' deerest father; or that are, or sall be adversareis to the religioun, and impugners therof, against his Hienesse' lawes made theranent, the executioun of which his Majestie hath beene, is, and will be willing to farther.

"The Secund heed, generallie conceaved, being particularlie meant of the young Laird of Fentrie, his Majestie wisheth the Assemblie to remember, how his Hienesse hath dealt in this mater, and what testimoniall the kirk of Edinburgh granted to him. His Majestie hath not hindered the proceedings of the kirk against him, nor no other, but meaneth to hold hand thereto, according to the lawes.

"The Thrid heed being speciallie meant of one William Holt, Englishman, that escaped out of the castell of Edinburgh, his Majestie hath answered the Queen of England's late ambassader, who moved his Hienesse in that mater, not long since. It is no uncouth 1 thing, to heare suche a man escape. Alwise, what they understand by anie indirect meanes used for letting him depart, his Majestie being speciallie informed therof, will, after due triell, see the offenders punished according to their deservings.

"The Fourth heed being verie generall, his Majestie thinketh the Assemblie will not think it pertinent for them to have vote in the choice of his Majestie's servants, or to be over curious of the occasions of the placing or removing of them; nather yitt of the intelligence betuixt his Hienesse and anie forraine countreis, for interteaning of civill peace and amitie, from the which no princes or commoun wealth in the world absteaneth, although being diverse in religioun.

"The Fyft heed, containing a generall complaint upon certan speciall maters appearandlie expressed in the maters therafter following, his Majestie wisheth the Assemblie, as they would be speciallie and directlie answered, so to forme their petitions, forbearing in particular exemples to ground generall propositions; and to remember that since his Majestie tooke the government in his owne person, there are moe good and profitable lawes made for advancement of the kirk and true, religioun nor of before, the default of the execution therof, and performance of promises, not standing in his Hienesse' default.

"The Sixt, meaning speciallie of the tack sett to the Laird of Segy, of certane victuals out of the superplus of the thrids which he had of before in pensioun, that was no new forme, nor anie wise prohibited. He could als weill content him with the pensioun as he had it of before, free of all payment of duetie. The necessar considerations that moved the granting therof are weill eneugh knowne to manie. He is imployed in publict service; wanting the living wherunto he is provided in title, during his father's lyfetyme; and his service is and may be necessar, both for his Hienesse and the kirk.

"For anie thing that may be thought omitted, toward provisioun of ministers serving at the kirks annexed to abbeyes, in the late dispositions of them, that is weill supplied by Act of Parliament, the execution wherof hath rather stayed thir two yeeres past in their owne default; or otherwise, they, craving to have their assignations continued, as in the yeeres preceeding, and as yitt not having directlie answered to his Majestie's message, sent with his Maister of Requeists to the Assemblie, holdin at St Andrewes. Alwise, his Majestie made choice of certan barons, and others of good appearance, knowne zealous to the furthering of that good work, lippening to have had the assignations formed before the Assemblie; but being uncertan of the time appointed therefor this yeere, is doubtfull if they be come in Edinburgh; where if they be, his Hienesse sall send directioun to them to proceed; or incace of their absence, sall appoint others, so as the assignations may proceed, and so other things as are most needfull resolved, without anie farther delay.

"Tuiching the giving of the spiritual livings to bairns, and translating them in temporal lordships, his Majestie considereth his owne skaith, and hinderance of his service therin. Whatever abuse hath entered before his Hienesse accepted the government, time, and the approbation of suche provisions, by decreits of the Sessioun, hath brought the mater to that strait, as it can not be otherwise helped than by the Parliament; unto whom this being proponed, his Majestie sould hold hand to have suche reformatioun in this behalfe as possiblie can be obteaned.

"The default of punishment of the vices mentioned in the Nynth heed, and of the act for provision of the poore, and punishment of vagabounds, must not justlie be imputed to his Hienesse, who hath ever been willing and readie to grant commission to suche as the ministers thought meetest to execut the same, where inhabilitie was in the judges ordinar.

"The Tenth heed being generall, his Majestie would be glade not onlie to have it explained, but to heare all good advices that sall be offered to him, for reformation of that which may be found amisse; and how his lawes may have place, and justice be ministred, to the confort and commoun benefite of all his good subjects.

"The Elleventh heed is also verie generall; and for the onlie one exemple that hath beene spokin of to his Highnesse, tuiching the removing of the Principall of the Colledge of Aberdeen to be minister of Sanet Andrewes, his Majestie trusteth the Assemblie will not thinke that mater (the circumstances weill considered) ather so proper to the kirk, or so improper to the civill estat; but that his Hienesse and his counsell had good grounds and reasons to direct his letters as he did, upon the generall of the north countrie; wherin none was prejudged, seing there was nothing conteaning power to denounce at the first, but rather to doe the thing required, or compeer and shew a caus in the contrar."

ACTS.

It was determined and resolved, that it sall not be leasome to anie particular brother, in anie Generall Assemblie, to call in questioun anie act concluded before in a Generall Assemblie, no caus of changing therof interveening.

- 2. It is ordeaned that the moderator of the Assemblie receave from the clerk the extract of commissions givin to brethrein, incace they be absent from the Assemblie; and that he direct them tymouslie to the said brethrein, that the said commissions want not due executioun, upon pretence of their absence, and ignorance of the same.
- 3. The Assemblie ordeaned everie presbyterie within their owne bounds to call before them the beneficed persons within their jurisdictioun, and trie how they have keeped the act of the Assemblie tuiching the dispositioun of their ecclesiasticall livings; and wherin they have transgressed to report to the nixt Assemblie, by the moderator of the eldership, or commissioner, as they will answere to God and his kirk.
 - 4. The Assemblie ratifieth and approveth the act made upon the benult day of October 1578, concerning setting of fewes and tacks of benefices and ecclesiasticall livings, or anie part therof, by suche is beare the function of the ministrie; with this declaration, that under the said act all pensions and factore and whatsoever other lisposition of the benefice, or anie part therof, without consent of the Generall Assemblie, is, and sall be comprehended in time comning; and that the disponers therupon sall incurre the penaltic conteaned in the act of the date the 12th of Julie 1578. And for the particular observation therof, Mr Andrew Blackhall, in name of the chapter of Halyrudhous, is charged not to subscrive the gift of pension givin to the Person of Pennycooke by the said abbot, under the paine conteaned in the said act.

- 5. That no act, or anie other thing proceeding from the particuar presbytereis, have faith in time comming, unlesse the samine be subscrived by the moderator and the clerk.
- 6. Commissioun was givin to Mr Thomas Smeton, Mr Andrew Melvill, Mr James Lowsone, Mr Peter Blekburne, Mr Nicoll Dagleish, Mr James Martin, and Mr Robert Wilkie, to draw furth and collect, als farre as their memorie in shortnesse of time might serve, suche propositions, as they find erroneous in profane authors read in the schooles, and speciallie in Aristotle, and to report to the Assemblie. After their report, this act following was made therupon :- " Forasmuche as of reading in schooles of profane authors, wherin manie things are writtin directlie impugning the grounds of religioun, and speciallie in the philosophie of Aristotle, oft times the youth being curious, and of insolent spirits, drinke in erroneous and damnable opinions; and founding them upon the bruckle authoritie of profane writters, mainteane their godlesse and profane opinions obstinatlie in disputations, and otherwise, to the great slander of the Word of God, and offence of the simple and unearned; therefore, it is provided, and after reasoning and good advice, by universall consent agreed, that, in all times comming, the maisters, regents, and teachers of schooles, in reading of profane writters, sall vigilantlie tak heed if there be anie thing alledged or writtin in them against the grounds and heeds of religioun; and, in teaching therof, to marke and note the places, confer and evince the errours, and admonish the youth to eshew the same as erroneous and false; and, namelie, in teaching of philosophie, to note the propositions following, as erroneous, false, and against the religioun, and condemned by commoun vote of the whole Assemblie: to witt,

- 1. "Omnis finis est opus aut operatio.
- 2. "Civilis scientia est præstantissima, ejusque finis præstantissimus, et summum hominis bonum.
- 3. "Honesta et justa varia sunt et inconstantia, adeo, ut sola opinione constent.
- 4. "Juvenes, et rerum imperiti, et in libidinem proclives, ab audienda morum philosophia arcendi.
- 5. "Quod aliud ab aliis bonis, et per se bonum est, et causa cur cætera bonum sunt, non est summum bonum.
- 6. "Dei agnitio nihil prodest artifici, ad hoc ut arte sua bene utatur.
- 7. "Summum bonum vel minimi boni accessione augeri, et reddi potest optabilius.
- 8. "Pauper, deformis, orbus, aut infans, beatus esse non potest.
 - 9. "Bonum æternum bono unius diei non est magis bonum.
 - 10. "Felicitas est actio animi secundum virtutem.
 - 11. " Potest aliquis, sibi studio suo, felicitatem comparare.
- 12. "Homo in hac vita cumulate, et esse, et dici potest beatus.
- 13. "Post hanc vitam, nemo potest vel esse, vel dici beatus, nisi propinquorum vel amicorum ratione.
 - 14. "Natura apti ad virtutem eam agendo comparamus.
- 15. "Virtus est habitus electivus, in ea mediocritate positus, quam ratio prudentis præscribit.
 - 16. "Libera est nobis: voluntas ad bene agendum.
 - 17. "Mundus est physice æternus.

- 18. " Casus et fortuna locum habent in rebus naturalibus et hu-
- 19. "Res viles et inferiores non curat Dei providentia.
- 20. "Animi pars una, vel etiam plures sunt mortales, et quæ inc pendent, et necessario consequentur.
- "And if anie sall be found to doe in the contrarie heerof, the ensures of the kirk to proceed against them; and siclyke, that aisters, regents, teachers, auditors, or others, sall not assent or efend anie of the saids propositions alreadie condemned by the assemblie, or others that sall happin to be condemned by them cerafter, philosophice, probabiliter, or otherwise, under the paine the same censures of the kirk."
- 7. Forasmuche as sindrie acts have beene made before, to close ne hands of beneficed ministers, that they sett not tacks of their enefices, or anie part therof whatsomever, without the advice of ne whole Assemblie, yitt supplications are givin in daylie to the ssemblie, for their consent to be had thereto, howbeit, both for nortnesse of time and otherwise, the estat of suche supplications an not convenientlie be reasouned and tried before them; heerefore, is thought expedient that where anie suche sute is to be made, ne samine be first presented to the particular presbytereis where ne benefice lyeth, before whom triell sall be taikin, both of the d kindnesse and title of the supplicant, and of the estat of the enefice; what was the old rentall therof, what present, and the rocesse and triell therof returned again to the Generall Assemblie, there order may be taikin with the sute, according to equitie; and kewise ordeaneth everie presbyterie within their owne jurisdictioun trie and examine what persons have brokin the act made gainst beneficed persons within the ministrie, that sett tacks or wes, or make other dispositions whatsoever of their benefices, or mie part therof, against the acts of the Assemblie; and after calling If parteis, and due triell taikin, to report their names, with the proesse, to the nixt Assemblie.

QUESTIONS.

The questioun being moved concerning the punishment of m nisters that beare with the people repairing in pilgrimage to well hard beside their owne houses, without reprooffe; yea, rather interteaning them with meete and drink in their houses; distributing the Communication to their flockes, and not communicating with them by the space of seven or eight yeeres: It was answered, the suche persons deserve deprivation.

THE SYNOD OF LOTHIAN DIVIDED.

Forasmuche as the synodall assemblie of Lothian is considere to be verie populous, and above the number of presbytereis whice the brethrein thinke meet to unite thereto, it is thought expedient that the same be dismembred; that Dumbar and Chirneside, Me rose and Pebles, be joyned in one assemblie; that the place of their first meeting be in Lauder, and that the place therafter be changed with their owne consent and advice, as they sall thin expedient.

Mr Alexander Arbuthnet, Principall of Aberdeen, departed thi life upon Wedinsday the 10th, and was buried upon Thursday th 17th of October. Mr Thomas Smeton, Principall of Glasgow died not long after him.

FENTRIE'S CRAFT.

The presbyterie of Edinburgh sent a letter to Johne Duncansone, the king's minister, to informe him that young Fentrie had craftilie circumveened their clerk, Mr George Makesone, and purchassed from him a letter of commendatioun, in name of the presbyterie, wherunto none of the presbyterie was privie, for the which he craved God and the presbyterie forgivenesse, and willed him to informe the king how he had abused the simplicitie of their presbyterie.

Upon the 24th of October a proclamatioun was made, wherin was declared, that, whereas it hath beene bruted and reported in favours of certan persons latelie denounced rebels, and putt to the horne, for their disobedience to enter in waird whill their triell, in certan practices concerning the king's person and estat, compleaning of the short space of time appointed for them to enter, and pretending the occasioun of their persute to be for the publict attempt committed the last yeere, notwithstanding that his Majestie's meaning was published by diverse proclamations before, that he noise minded to seeke the lands, lives, or goods of anie maner of ersons, and that he continueth in the same elemencie; therefore, not all suche subjects alreadie putt to the horne for their disobetience to enter in waird, be wairned, that upon their offer yitt to nter betuixt and the first of December nixt to come, finding evertie to that effect, sall be relaxed from the processe of horning dagainst them; and their escheats, goods, and livings, sall not disponed nor intrometted with, for the contempt and disobetience of the charges forsaid.

THE DUKE OF LENNOX HIS SONNE ARIVETH.

Upon Wedinsday, the 13th of November, the Duke of Lennox seldest sonne landed at Leith, accompanied with the Maister of ray, the Laird of Craigiehal's sonne, and some others. Colonell tewart convoyed him the day following to the king, then passing se time in Kinneill, who receaved him verie kindlie.

The Pryour of Blantyre, keeper of the privie seale, was sent to Erle of Angus with a letter of credit, dated at Halyrudhous, to 14th of November. The credit followeth:—

"Yee sall lett him understand, that for removing of brutes, and casioun of casting and alteratioun of the court, wherof we can owise like; and for the opinioun that hath or may be conceaved him and his freinds to be meddlers in anie suche purpose, howeit we have ever esteemed him to be of a good and quiett nature, clyned to serve and obey us to the satisfactioun of our owne inde, and the rather beare we him good will and affectioun, being desirous to have him preserved from inconveniences; therefore, ye sall lett him know the effect of our desire to be, that he, ith suche of his freinds and domestick servants as he sall please tak with him, will addresse himself to passe and remaine beouth, betuixt and this day eight dayes, and enter in Murrey betre the 15th of December nixt. The occasioun moving us heereto, to save and preserve him from occasioun of inconveniences, wherinto others, peradventure, may travell to draw him, and by his exemple to mak others the more willinglie to yeeld the like obedience, seing, for good and necessar respects, some are appointed to waird, and some to depart furth of our realme; and whill ather they obey, accepting our mercie and favour offered, or then sall be declared, upon their contempt, unworthie therof, it sall be meetest that he withdraw him in thir north parts, eshewing the occasiour of jealousie that his presence in thir parts may ministrat. Which persons once having yeelded their obedience, and he giving us prooffe of his willing disposition to satisfie our minde in this behalfe, he may rest assured not onlie to find our favour in the enlarging of his bounds, but in admitting him to come to our presence, and extending our favour otherwise, in that which may be his ease and comfort."

GREAT TRAINS DISCHARGED.

Upon Saturday the 16th of November, the king came to Edinburgh; for these that were about him were so affrayed that they sent for the toun to meete them. This feare continued till the 20th day. Then a proclamatioun was made at the Croce of Edinburgh, discharging all erles, lords, prelats, barons, and gentlemen, to come to Edinburgh till the seventh of Januar nixt, except so manie as the king sould write for in speciall: and these to come after this maner; the erle with sixteene, the prelat with eight, the baron with six. They pretended that poore men's actions could not be heard before the Lords of Session. The proclamatioun excepted so manie as the king sould give licence unto, which was partialitie.

COLONELL STEWART'S PURGATION.

Upon Tuisday the 19th of November, Colonell Stewart came before the presbyterie of Edinburgh, to purge himself of some reports which went of him, viz. that he caried a double message to England; that he proceeded not joyntlie with Mr Johne Colvill; that he was the cheef instrument of change of court. Little answere was made to him, but the brethrein praised God if it was true that he spake.

Upon Thursday the 21st, it was thought good that the Lairds of Dun, Pittarrow, Braid, Colluthie, Mr David Lindsav, Mr Andrew Hay, and the king's ministers, sould travell for agreement among the nobilitie and with the king. But nothing could be effectuated. Ather must the decourted noblemen submitt themselves, and acknowledge a fault, and suche as are charged to waird must enter, or ellis depart out of the land. Licence was granted and subscrived by the king and counsell, at Halyrudhous, the 23d of November, to Robert Fairlie of Braid, Mr David Carnegie of (Colluthie, Mr David Lindsey, and Mr Andrew Hay, ministers, conjunctlie and severallie, to intercommoun personallie, or by their letters or mediat persons, with all the king's rebels or subjects standing under his offence and displeasure, remaining within the realme, or without the same; to informe them of his Majestie's clemencie, when he sall find submissioun and true obedience; to receave supplications and offers from them; to present the same to his Hienesse, and to mak intercessioun for them, to whom his Hienesse will extend his mercie and favour, as he sall find caus moving, and as may best stand with his honour; assuring all persons with whom they sall thinke meete to intercommoun, to repaire to suche place or places as they sall appoint, providing the same be 30 myle distant from his Hienesse' present residence, and to passe and repasse safelie and freelie, untroubled, to the effect forsaid.

This licence was to endure till the first of December nixt to come. The king declared his minde upon the 25th of November, after this maner:—

"Tuiching the persons presentlie our rebels, as yitt remaining without our realme, if they sall offer yitt to enter in their wairds, wherunto they were charged, before the first day of December, or so soone as possiblie they may travell, or to depart furth of Scotland, England, and Irland, and find cautioun in suche forme as his Majestie, with his counsell, sall find to stand with his Highnesse's honour, obedience, and suretie, it may be promitted to them that they sall have remissions, relaxations from the horne, and licence to depart, wherethrough their wives, barnes, and freinds, may injoy their lands, livings, and goods, in their absence, als weill fallin by vertue of escheat, through the hornings executed against them, as otherwise. And if there be difficultie of shipping, they sall have licence to passe through England, and remaine some reasonable space at Berwick, or the Newcastell, where their furnishing may be provided, and come to them there."

Mr Andrew Hay, Mr David Lindsey, &c., were sent to Berwick to travell with the Laird of Cleish, the Abbot of Cambuskenneth, Mr Johne Colvill, &c. Sindrie mislyked their journey, speciallie Johne Durie and Mr Johne Davidsone, who, upon Tuisday the 26th, protested plainlie that they liked not that anie ministers sould travell in this mater; but if they travelled, they sould doe it in their owne name, becaus they saw no profite to come thereby. Mr Johne Davidsone protested, in speciall, that their travell were nowise prejudiciall or hurtfull to the good caus. Mr Andrew Hay said, the king would have it a fault. The other replyed, "We sould instruct the king, and truelie informe him in that mater."

"A DECLARATION OF THE INNOCENCIE, EVILL HANDLING, WITH THE OFFERS IN END, OF MY LORD COMMENDATAR OF CAMBUS-KENNETH, THE LAIRD OF CLEISH, AND MR JOHNE COLVILL; PRESENTED TO HIS MAJESTIE'S COMMISSIONERS, DIRECTED TO THEM FROM HIS HIENESSE.

"Forasmuche as your worships are appointed by his Hienesse to confer and intreate with us, to the effect your worships may be the better encuraged to treate for us, and that yee may have forcible reasons to perswade his Majestie to pitie, we must, first of all, desire you to consider our innocencie: how, to this houre, (wherof we thanke our Eternall God,) we have never made defectioun from true religioun, nor his Majestie's lawfull defence, in his authoritie, howbeit we be calumniated; and that we have no familiaritie or freindship but with the professors both of the one and the other, for maintenance of his crowne, and no querrell but with the oppugners of the same. Yitt, if anie of your worships be otherwise perswaded that we are guiltie of the severall points falselie objected against us, upon knowledge what is particularlie to be layed to our charge, we sall ather presentlie make you satisfied and resolved, or ellis confesse ourselves unworthie of your intercessioun.

"Nixt, please you consider, how unworthilie we were persued before we left the realme, which was in this sort: We were commanded to enter in strait waird, without respect ather to the distance of the place of our waird from the part where we were charged, or of our estat, some of us being extremelie sicke and bedfast. Nather were we summouned super inquirendis, nor for anie speciall crime; a noveltie not heard of heeretofore, that anie free holder or beneficed person, undetected with some notable crime, was ever so used. Moreover, some of us, hearing that we sould be charged, came to his Majestie, humblie desiring to know wherin we had offended; desiring no other grace than triell of law, and punishment or favour according to our merit; which humble sute his Majestie thought reasonable, affirming, that he had no crime to lay against them; albeit, that immediatlie therafter they were charged; which, notwithstanding, we cannot impute to his Grace. Others of us that might not travell, desired by our letters, most humblie, of his Majestie, to be confronted with our accusers, challenging also our said accusers, if they sould faile in their probation; and yitt, entering in waird, and lying bound under great summes not to escape, in the meane time, at the procurement of their said enemeis, a guarde of souldiours was appointed to them, of a farre greater number than they were able to susteane; and that of suche persons as were chosin by their saids enemeis for that effect. Some also of the best of us, understanding that they were to be charged, meaned to present themselves before his Grace with all humilitie, and to have rendred themselves subject to his pleasure, but were expreslie hindered, by commandement from his Majestie, in anie wise to compeere before him. These reasons, with manie others which we omitt, moved us to absent our selves for a seasoun, till his Majestie might better consider how extremelie we were persecuted and dealt with all.

"Thridlie, Whill as we hoped daylie that his Majestie sould publishe, by his proclamatioun, some more temperat forme of proceeding against us, whereby we might, without feare of violence of our enemeis, present our selves to triell, at lenth we found our selves farre frustrated of that good expectatioun. For all the foure proclamatiouns which are come to our knowledge seeme to us, or anie indifferent man, so captious, generall, and contrare to the order led against us, that we can find no ground by them how to deale for our self; as may appeare by the reasons following:—

"In the first, dated at Perth, 1583, the penult of Julie, his Majestie declaring the truthe of his meanings and doings, is moved to say, that all the alterations and troubles which were in his minoritie tended to his skaith and prejudice. Which claus, and manie others conteaned in the said proclamatioun, if it be not interpreted of suche factiouns as were interprised by the enemeis of his crowne, carieth no small suspicioun of captiousnesse with it to the prejudice of us, and all others that have professed true religioun, and have mainteaned his innocent caus. Siclyke, where it is said, his Majestie will be indifferent, and not guided with particular surnames and races, it is easie to behold if it be so indeid or not; when as, not onlie particular surnames and races guide all, but suche surnames and races as are suspected in religioun, or have ever beene enemeis to his authoritie in his youth; or, at least, have made defectioun therefra, by joyning themselves with these that sought to pull the crowne off his head, who now are all in all. And where it is promised, that all question and former transgressioun sall be bureid and putt in oblivioun, als weill with his Majestie as all other his subjects; if so be, it appeares that no man is presentlie persued, but suche as Arran and the colonell have at particular wrathe and indignatioun, farre contrare the sinceritie of his Majestie's intentioun. And where it is said, that no man's lands, lives, and possessiouns, sall be sought, for anie offence bygane, so being, they come tymouslie and confesse their offence: this claus is no lesse captious nor generall, not onlie in this ambiguous word tymouslie, but throughout all, if it be not meant of suche as have committed offences against his crowne, when the same was in danger. For if this offer is made speciallie to these that are alledged to have offended his Majestie the last yeere, (which, by the secund, thrid, and fourth proclamations, seemeth to be the onlie offence they would move his Majestie thinke worthie of punishment,) then are we so cunninglie dealt with all as is possible. For before the said proclamation was ather concluded or published, some of us were charged to waird; and for declaration of their clemencie, some of our escheats were lifted, before we were putt to the horne. By which reasons, and manie others that may be collected of the said first proclamation, the captiousnesse, generalitie, and contrarietie therof, with the effects of our enemeis proceeding against us, may easilie appeare.

"In the secund proclamatioun, dated the 21st of September 1583, (all offences being omitted that were committed in his Majestie's minoritie, als weill the cruell murther of his father as of his regents,) it is somwhat more speciallie declared, yitt no lesse captiouslie, that no man is or sall be persued for the attemptat done the last yeere: and yitt all men are compelled to tak remissioun for the same, or ellis to be subject to the censure of the law. And, moreover, so manie as have obeyed his Majestie's charge, and entered in waird, are onlie examined upon that heed, and no other. If heerin there be contrarietie or not, it is evident. It is also added there, that they who sall not be persued for that fact must come and crave his Majestie's pardon, which is impossible for us to doe; for we are all expreslie discharged to come to his presence, by his Majestie's owne commandement, or ellis so under the professed displeasure of Arran and the colonell, that we can not present ourselves, nather darre anie of our freinds, for feare of their violence, mak intercession for us. And where it is said, (to mak us the more odious.) that we are persued for attemptats done both before and after the committing of the publict fact, the last yeere, if there were anie suche thing to be objected against us, we doubt not but our enemeis had long since expressed the same in particular; and, therefore, their silence in that point justifieth our part. And for the promise mentioned, which his Majestie hath made to her Majestie of England, it is knowne how farre his Hienesse hath said in that behalfe, by his manifold letters sent to her, all bearing, that the fact at Ruthven was to his confort and weale, and that he would never persue anie for the same; but cherish and rewaird bountifullie the interprisers therof, as men studious and carefull of his preservatioun, according to the Acts of Secreit Counsell and Estats, and declaratioun givin to the ministers for that effect; wherof his Hienesse not onlie certified her Majestie, being accompanied with these that are now distressed, but even after this late alteratioun, by his letter of the date the secund of Julie, he hath ratified the same to her Majestie. And albeit she be farre frustrated of the good hope she had, (like as all honest men areellis where,) yitt we doubt not, she and all others, discreit beholders, will think his Majestie's young and innocent yeeres voide of all suche suspicioun and dealing, as may be justlie imputed to our enemeis.

"Concerning the thrid proclamatioun, the 24th of October, albeit the naked word of clemencie be expressed therin, as in all the rest, yitt nothing is apprehended there but a higher degree of rigour: for, by the generalitie of the former proclamations, although all was doubtfullie conceaved, yitt we were upholdin with some hope that, in time, we might have favour, in respect of the words promitting favour to them that tymouslie acknowledge their offence. But by this, we are limited to a certan short day, which being expired, all hope is secluded. And, therefore, it appeareth weill, the more they would colour the mater, the more the fraud breaketh out.

to us, but also to suche as have alreadie obeyed, and receaved remitt and pardoun, of whom some are licenced to depart off the countrie, lyke as they have done, and can not be advertised, to caus their signatures of remissioun passe the seale before the day appointed. And, therefore, the last proclamatioun, importing like incertantie both to these that have receaved presence and favour. and to us that are debarred from both, it is to be thought more captious and doubtfull nor the rest. And becaus our enemeis thinke they have great advantage by this word, CLEMENCIE, so oft remembred in the proclamations forsaid, thereby thinking to mak us odious, as men refusing the benignitie of our soverane, please your worships consider, that no greater rigour can be used against the cruell murtherers of his Majestie's father and regents than is devised against us. For there are but foure kindes of notable punishments for most high treasoun: banishment and confiscatioun of goods to them that can not be apprehended; and to the apprehended, wairding or death. And all these foure are executed, or intended against us. And, therefore, this elemencie may he better named crueltie

"As concerning this licence granted to your worships to mak intercessioun for us, and his Majestie's declaratioun of his minde in that point, albeit there were no other argument against the captiousnesse of their meaning, yitt these were sufficient to argue the same. For your licence is granted the 24th of November, to treat and intercommoun with all the distressed, als weill without as within the realme, betuixt that and the last of the same, to receave their offers, and to mediat for them; wheras, indeid, in so short space, is it possible to your worships to advertise us, and receave our answere in anie mater so great, comprehending our possessions, lives, and allegiance to our soverane? And albeit, both in the one and the other, yee be permitted to heare our offers, receave our supplicatioun, and to reasoun with us, yitt are we limited, in expresse words in both, to one conclusioun and decreit, which we may not transcend, by which yee have onlie power to assure us of his Majestie's favour if we sall ather agree to enter in waird, according to our first charge, or ellis find cautioun, within short space, to depart off Scotland, England, and Irland. Now, when this is sett down for a certan declaration of his Majestie's minde, all place of reasoning, and presenting of offers and supplications, is takin from us both. And, therefore, except your worships have some farther intelligence of his Majestie's good meaning, we can not thinke that this our travell can be so effectuall as yee would wish it to be.

"Ferdlie and last, That no significatioun of obstinacie and guiltinesse appeare in us, and that his Majestie, and all indifferent men, may evidentlie see how unjustlie we are reproached and slandered, your worships sall offer in our name, that a competent day being appointed for that effect, we sall present ourselves vitt, as we ever meant, with all duetifull reverence and humilitie, to be judged and used according to his Majestie's lawes, providing your worships will first gett us relaxed from the horne, that we may the better travell for our selves; and nixt, give us your bands and assured promises that we sall receave no violence nor wrong by forme of law, at the pleasure and appetite of our enemeis: which maner of proceeding sall prove to be more honorable to his Majestie, and the neerer way to punish us, if we be offenders, than in this sort to banish us, confiscat our goods, preasse us to receave remissioun before we be convicted of crimes. But if it be so that your worships can not mak us assured in the premisses, then we heartilie desire you, as yee love innocencie and equitie, to report our innocent and equitable part to his Majestie, that his Grace be not moved, upon the untruthfull surmises of our enemeis, yitt as before, ather to mislyke of our doings, or to publishe anie new proclamatioun to our prejudice and slaunder; but that his Hienesse, understanding the sinceritie of our meaning and readinesse, with all humilitie, to obey his pleasure, may be moved to pitie; and our brethrein, true professors of the Evangell, (if they were heertofore doubtfull of our intentions and proceedings,) through your testimonie may be resolved; and thereby, according to the charitable commiseratioun that true Christians ought to have of others, may be moved to lament our pitifull distresse, and by their earnest prayers to Almightie God, and humble sute to his Majestie, may call and insist for our releefe."

A FALSE FRAY IN THE ABBEY.

Upon Saturday, the last of November, there was a great feare in the Abbey, by reason of the Erle of Angus his comming at morning, by Dalkeith, to passe over the water of Forth, to enter in waird beyond Spey, within fyfteen dayes after. The drumme was beaten in Edinburgh, and all the citizens charged to be in readinesse, within an houre after the nixt warning. Colonell Stewart road furth, the provest went down to the Abbey. He said to the king, the feilds were foule: the king said, they would be fouler when his dogs came out. This feare was causelesse.

HUME AND BOTHWELL CHARGED TO WAIRD.

Upon Fryday, the 28th of November, there was an evill favoured brawle betuixt Bothwell and Hume, the one taking part with Coldinghame, the other with Alexander Hume of Manderston. But they were sindered by Seton, Colonell Stewart, and some others. Bothwell was charged, in the evening, immediatlie after he went out of the Abbey, and after the king had been hanging about his necke, to enter in waird in the Palace of Linlithquo; the Lord Hume and Manderston in Leith. The day following, when Bothwell was readie to depart to Linlithquo, he was charged to waird in his owne hous, where he remained three or foure dayes. Then the king sent for him, and challenged him, with manie hard speeches, for the band. The Ladie Arran cried to strike off his head!

THE TENOR OF THE REMISSION OFFERED TO MR JOHNE COLVILL.

"Our soveran lord, of his special grace and favour, ordeaneth a commissioun to be under his great seale, in due forme, to his lovit, Mr Johne Colvill, chantour of Glasgow, for the treasonable consulting, treating, devising, art, part, raid, counsell, assistance, and ratihabition of the most odious and unnaturall surprize, restraint, captivitie, and detentioun of his Hienesse' person, attempted and committed at Ruthven in the moneth of August, the veer of God 1582 veeres. and prosecuted therafter at St Johnstoun, Stirline, Halvrudhous, and other parts of this realme; making, passing, and subscriving of whatsomever bands, with whatsomever person or persons, to that effect, or the maintenance and defence therof, besides his Hienesse' full consent, privitie, and knowledge, with all that hath followed, or may follow therupon; together with whatsomever actioun, paine, crime, or danger, the said Mr Johne and his heyres might have incurred, or may incurre therethrough, by the lawes and consuetude of this realme, and acts of parliament; and als, for all actions, crimes, transgressions, and offences of whatsomever weight or qualitie they be of, done, attempted, or assisted by the said Mr Johne, whatsomever time bygane preceeding the date heerof; the detestable murther of his Hienesse' deerest father and two regents, witchcraft, incest, fire, murther, ravishing of weomen, thift, and recept of thift allanerlie excepted: remitting and discharging the same to the said Mr Johne and his heyres, for his Hienesse and his successors for ever, by thir presents; and that precepts be directed heerupon, in forme as effeirs. Subscrived by our soveran the veere of God 1583." day of lord, at the

THE TENOR OF THE LICENCE OFFERED TO MR JOHNE COLVILL.

"Our soverane lord ordeaneth a letter to be made under the privie seale, in due forme, to his lovitt, Mr Johne Colvill, giving and granting him licence to depart and passe furth of this realme, to whatsomever part beyond sea, England and Irland onlie excented, therin to remaine during the space of three yeeres nixt after the date heerof; and willeth and granteth, and for his Hienesse' successors decerneth and ordeaneth, that the said Mr Johne, for his remaining and departing furth of the realme, as said is, sall incurre no skaith nor danger in his person or goods, nor be called or accused therefore, ather criminallie or civillie. notwithstanding whatsomever our lawes, acts, letters, statuts, or proclamations made in the contrare, anent the which, his Majestie dispenseth by thir presents; providing alwise, that the said Mr Johne find cautioun presentlie, under the paine of five thowsand pund, to depart betuixt the day and date heerof, and the first of Januar nixt to come, but longer delay; and that he returne not again to anie of the realmes forsaid, during the space above mentioned, without our speciall licence and warrant; and that also, the said Mr Johne behave himself as a duetifull and obedient subject to us, and doe nor attempt nothing to the prejudice or hurt of us or our estat, during his absence; and that before his departing, he nowise repaire neere the place of his Majestie's residence by the space of 30 myles, otherwise this his licence to be null, and of no strenth, force, nor effect: and that the said letter be extended in the best forme, with all clauses needfull. Subscrived by our said soveran lord, at Halyrudhous, the thrid of December 1583."

A CONVENTION.

Upon the fourth of December, there was a conventioun holdin in Edinburgh. None were writtin for but suche as were gracious to the court. At this conventioun, the Road of Ruthven was judged treason, and suche as had beene guiltie in fact or assent were appointed to seeke remissions. It was statuted, that the old placks, babees, three pennie peeces, and twelve pennie peeces, sould be brought in betwixt and Julie nixt, to be brokin; and that a new coine be strickin, foure pennie groats, eight pennie groats, sixteene pennie groats, and that they be three pennie fyne. Yit were they not so fyne. This was done to gett silver to Colonel Stewart to pay the waiged men of warre. The burrowes disas sented from breaking of the old coine.

MR J. LOWSONE AND J. DURIE CALLED BEFORE THE KING AND COUNSELL.

Upon Fryday, the 13th of December, Mr James Lowsone and Johne Durie were called before the counsell. Johne Durie had said, the Road of Ruthven had brought furth some good effects The king asked, if they thought that a good effect, that he was keeped prissoner, and his kinsmen and servants hurt and taikin i They answered, these were not the effects they meant of. They went about to circumveene Johne Durie. They being removed it was concluded that Johne Durie had transgressed the act, and therefore, sould be punished at the king's will. They were called in again, and their judgement craved, tuiching a new act. Mr James answered, it was meere civill, and so it belonged not to them. Johne Durie said, he had nothing to say against that act: wherupon the court tooke hold, and gave furth, that Mr James Lowsone and Johne Durie had approved the act. The rumour went abroad, that the ministers had veelded to the court, wherat the wicked rejoiced, and the godlie were muche displeased. But Mr Johne Davidsone preaching upon Saturday, the 14th of December, upon Manasseh, (2 Chron. xxxiii.) so inveyghed, and threatned the king and court, that the brute was soone repressed. He said, he ceassed not to be a loving freind and subject to the king, howbeit, as the caus craved, he reproved publictlie the king's publict offences: "For honey," said he, "is sweete; and yitt, being laved to a sore, it byteth vehementlie."

MR P. ADAMSONE SENT IN AMBASSADGE TO ENGLAND.

About this time, Mr Patrik Adamsone went in ambassadge to England, and tooke journey about the middest of December. His purpose was, to practise the alterationn of the discipline of the kirk, and to eshew the censures of the church discipline: for the Generall Assemblie had found the processe led against him before the Presbyterie of Sanct Andrewes and Synodall of Fife rightlie deduced, and for his contumacie in not compeering, suspended him, as corrupt both in doctrine and life, from the office of the ministrie, and ordeaned farther triell to be taikin of him. He was summouned de novo, to compeere to that effect. Pretending he would goe to the well of Spa, for the recoverie of his health, he purchassed from the king immunitie, that during his absence the kirk sould not proceed with their censures against him. But it was his purpose to stay in England, and there to seeke the advice and concurrence of the most corrupt he could find, for the overthrow of the discipline of the Kirk of Scotland: for he thought, the surest course to keepe his benefice was to use some wicked and indirect dealing against the kirk. He consented to the act made, that a minister deposed from his office, namelie, for drunkennesse, incest, witchecraft, &c., the benefice sould vaike in the king's hands, to be disponed to some other; and that this act sould strike upon bishops, als weill as other ministers, becaus, as he then said, "Propter officium datur beneficium." Yitt returned he to his vomite, to his old drunkennesse, gluttonie, which kythed diverse times, and once in presence of the Assemblie, by filthie vomiting. Through his drunkennesse and gluttonie, he fell in a fearefull and terrible feditie, as he himself termed his disease: the physicians could skarse understand the nature of it. He consulted with witches for recoverie of his health, which one of them confessed before the presbyterie of Sanct Andrewes. Lying now under the danger of depositioun from his office, he laboured, by all meanes possible, to save his benefice. When he was in his journey toward Londoun, hearing that Francis Throgmorton was apprehended, and had discovered a conspiracie for invaiding of England, and setting at libertie of the Scottish queene, with assistance of the Gwisians, he was taikin with suche feare, that he trembled hand and foote, to the astonishment of these that were in his companie, as some of them testified. He came to Londoun about the end of December.

J. DURIE CONFINED IN MONTROSE.

Upon Thursday, the 19th of December, the Laird of Colluthie and the Maister of Requests came from the king and counsell to the sessioun of the kirk of Edinburgh, to intimat, that it was the king's will that Johne Durie sould passe within nyne dayes over Tay, and to remaine at Montrose; and that he preache no where by the way. After reasoning, it was answered, they could not put thim away, except he himself were willing. After some consultatioun, he willinglie yeelded. He tooke leave at the counsell upon Fryday, and from the sessioun of the kirk upon Saturday the 21st, who gave him their testimoniall, approving his life and doctrine.

MR KNOX his letter to the Generall Assemblie, holdin at Perth, in the Tolbuith, the 6th of August 1572, the tenour wherof followeth, howbeit it be not extant in the Register.

" Fight and faint not, &c.

"Albeit I have takin my leave," &c. (see page 222.)

With this letter, which was sent by Mr John Winerame, Superintendent of Fife, and Mr Robert Pont, were sent thir articles following:—

- "1. First, Desyring a new act to be made, ratifeing all things concerning the king and his obedience, that were enacted of before, without anie change; and that the ministers who have contraveened the former acts be corrected as accordeth.
- "2. That sute be made to the regent's Grace, and nobilitie mainteaning the king's caus, that whatsoever proceedeth in this treatie of peace, they be mindfull that the kirk be not prejudged therby in anie sort; and they, speciallie, of the ministrie, that have beene robbed of their possessions within the kirk, during the time of thir troubles, or otherwise dung and injuried, may be restored.
 - " 3. To sute at the regent that no gift of anie bishoprick, or other benefice, be givin to anie person contrare the tenour of the acts made in the time of the first regent, of good memorie; and they that are givin contrare the said acts, or to anie unqualified person, may be revoked, and declared null, by an act of Secreit Counsell; and that all bishoprics vacand may be presented, and qualified persons nominat therunto, within a yeer after the vaiking therof, according to the order takin in Leith, by the commissioners of the nobilitie and of the kirk, in the moneth of Januar last; and in speciall, to complean upon the giving of the bishoprick of Rosse to the Lord Methyen.

- "4. That no pensions of benefices, great or small, be givin by simple donation of my lord regent, without consent of the possessor of the said benefices, having title therto, and the admission of the superintendent or commissioner of the province where this benefice lyeth, or of the bishops lawfullie elected, according to the same order takin at Leith; and desire an act of counsell to be made therupon unto the nixt parliament, wherin the samine may be speciallie enacted, with inhibition to the Lords of Session to give anie letters or decreets upon suche simple gifts of benefices or pensions not being givin in maner above rehearsed; and that the kirk presentlie assembled declare all such gifts null, so farre as lyeth in their power.
- "5. That the first forme of presentation to benefices, which were in the first and secund regents' time, be not changed, as now it is commonlie. But that this clause be conteaned in the presentations, that if the person presented make not residence, or be slanderous, or found unworthie, either in life or doctrine, by the judgement of the kirk, (to the which alwise he sall be subject,) or meet to be transported to another roome, at the sight of the kirk, that the said presentation, and all that sall fall therupon, sall be null, and of no force nor effect; and this to have place also in the nomination of the bishops.
- "6. That an act be made in this Assemblie, that all things done in prejudice of the kirk's assumptions of the thrids, either by Papists or others, in giving of fewes, lyferents, or tacks, or anie other wayes disponing the said assumed thrids, be declared null, with a solemne protestation, that the whole kirk disassenteth thereto.

- "7. That an act be made, decerning and ordening all bishops admitted by the order of the kirk now receaved, to give accompt of their whole rents and intromission therwith once in the yeer, as the kirk sall appoint, for suche causes as the kirk may easilie consider the same to be most expedient and necessar.
- "8. Anent the jurisdiction of the kirk, that the same be deternined in this Assemblie, becaus this article hath been long postnoned.
- "9. To mak sute to the regent and counsell, for remedie against masse-mongers and excommunicat persons.
- "10. Last, That order be takin anent the procurers of the kirk, who procure against ministers and ministrie, and for suting of justice of the kirk's actions in the session."

Thir questions were also presented at this Assemblie:-

- "If a bishop being elected to a great diocie, may be admitted, beside that, to the office of rectorie of an universitie, or proveist of a colledge, or anie other like charge, or to bruik anie inferior benefice?
- "If controversie rise upon doctrine, before whom sall it be treated? Where bishops are placed according to the order of the kirk, whether sall the superintendent's jurisdiction expire or not?
- "If anie abbot may sett his whole abbacie, in prejudice of his successors, and of the ministrie, for the half of the thing it payed before; or otherwise, farre within the availe?"

Thir articles were read in the Assemblie, with the former letter; but who were appointed to be suters at the regent's and counsell's hands, I know not: but the Assemblie wrote again answer to Mr Knox thus:—

"Wee have received your wryting, (deare brother in the Lord Jesus,) together with certan articles and questions, the which wee have redd, and diligentlie considered, and find the same both reasonable and godlie; and, therfor, wee have takin like order as we could, for the furtherance therof, as thir our brethren, bearers of this present, will declare unto you; beseeking you to confort your self in the mercies of God, through Jesus Christ.

"Wee think it not meete to trouble you presentlie with [a] long letter, seeing our minds are all bent (as we believe) to sett fordward the selfe same caus which our God hath putt into our hands, to the advancement of his glorie, and confort of his kirk, through Jesus Christ, to whose protection we committ you. Off Perth, the 20th of August 1572.

"Your brethren, and fellow members in Jesus Christ,

David Lindsey. Robert Pont. Jhon Row. Bishop of Cathnesse.
John Areskine.

A PROCLAMATIOUN, THAT THE KING'S MAJESTIE DID NOT REMAINE IN THE CASTELL OF STIRLINE AGAINST HIS WILL, 18TH MAY 1577, IN PURGATION OF MORTON.

" REX.

"Forasmuche as we, being inquired, in presence of our counsell conveened for the time, by our right trust cousine, James Erle of Morton, Lord of Dalkeith, late regent of our realme, in the moneth of September 1577, whether we remained within our castell of Stirlin against our owne good will and pleasure or not; or if there was anie place where, and amongst whom, we were more desirous to abide, we then answered, that we both liked the place and companie, and thought our self in better securitie heere, than to have the appearance of more libertie with greater danger; which is yitt our constant minde and resolute deliberatioun. For although, by advice of our nobilitie and estats, we have accepted the government of our realme in our owne person, notwithstanding, we meane to continue still our residence as yett in our said castell of Stirline. whill God make us somewhat more able and strong in bodie, and that, by our owne good lyking, with the advice of our estats, till there be a good and substantiall order appointed, tuiching the attendance and preservatioun of our person therafter, and provisioun of our hous and servants, which must await upon us.-We have thought expedient, therefore, to notifie by our owne letter, subserived by our hand, this our minde and intentioun, for satisfactioun of suche our subjects as, peradventure, vitt remaine doubtfull in this behalfe, and upon mis-report, are drawin oft tymes to arme themselves without caus, as for our service, when littill necessitie urgeth the same. Willing, therefore, all our good subjects to stay themselves in quietnesse, unattempting anie thing by way of deid or otherwise against us, this our castell, or keepers therof, or the order latelie appointed by us with the advice of our counsell, and suretie made for our preservatioun, whill further and more substantiall order theranent, and our houshold be provided by us, with advice of our estats: Certifeing all that doe in the contrare, they sall incurre our displeasure, beside the paines of our lawes, and Acts of Parliament: and that suche of our nobilitie and estats as are doubtfull of our meaning in this behalfe, repaire to our presence when they thinke good, where they sall be sufficientlie resolved of our owne minde theranent. Subscrived with our hand, at our Castell of Stirline, the 18th day of May, and of our raigne the elleventh veere, 1577.

This copie agreeth with the principall subscrived with the king's Majestie's owne hand.

A FAMOUS LIBELL SETT OUT AGAINST MORTON, AFFIXED UPON THE CROCE, 14TH AUGUSTI 1579.

"Be it kend manifestlie to all men, how maliciouslie the Erle of Morton and his adherents abuse the king's Majestie's authoritie, to the advancement of their owne particular. For if unfainedlie they professed, deceatfullie they perswade, his Grace, the glorie of God. his Grace's service, and the commoun weale of the countrie, they would postpone all other things, yea, and their owne lives, to the furtherance therof. But the simple sound veritie is of suche invincible strenth, that it will alwise prevaile to the detectioun of fraudulent falshood, and of all these that wickedlie professe the same. And for true and certane probatioun heerof, lett all true and zealous Scotishmen consider, if the said Erle of Morton had ever, or vitt hath, anie regard to the glorie of God, when induring his governement, he dealt so rigorouslie with the ministers of his Holie Word, in taiking from them the two thrids of their living, and giving to everie one of them the cure of three or foure kirks; and when, sensyne, after his depriving, having played the dissembled hypocrit, he rebooked shamefullie the ministers of Edinburgh at their comming to Stirline, he and his said assistors making yitt no accompt of their godlie admonitiouns concerning the order [that] ought to be tane with the benefices. Moreover, lett us consider and ponder with an equall ballance, if they be moved with anie true affectioun to the king's Majestie's service; for albeit the Hammiltons and Phairnihirst be lawfullie summouned to underly the law, vitt they can not denie but they were first persued by all order of justice; and there are now partialities used, becaus the Laird of Balcleuch's freinds, and some others that were also at the interprise of Stirline, which was attempted, are omitted, for their allya and freindship, shewed at that time to the Erle of Morton. On the other part, to remove all suspicioun of partiall dealing, according to all equitie and reasoun, they ought first to persue the king's cruell murther against the Erle of Morton, and certan others their owne associats, which is of greater importance, and tuicheth the king's Grace's owne person muche neerer, nor ather his said guidshir or uncle's death; as also, the odious and treasonable slaughter the said Erle of Morton and his adherents then committed in the queen's Majestie his mother's presence, expreslie for to caus her and the king's Grace, who was then in her wombe, dee instantlie of the fearefull apprehension of that horrible and barbarous crueltie; which undoubtedlie had so succeeded, if God of his infinit goodnesse had not wonderfullie preserved both their Majesteis, by the expectatioun of the said detestable murtherers. Finallie, for to show if they be carefull of the commoun weale, together with his Grace's service, after the Erle of Morton and his assisters had cleanged the Erle Bothwell of his father's slaughter, they made a privie band, whereby they promised to mainteane the said Erle Bothwell against all that would oppone themselves to their contract, which is subscrived with their owne hands, promising also to perswade or force the queen's Majestie to marie him. Which band Sir James Balfour would have shewed, and sufficientlie declared all the circumstances of this whole mater, if he had beene suffered, as he will doe vitt, God willing, when time and place may serve. These things foresaid being so done, they cast slanderouslie the ignominie of their secreit crime upon the queen's Majestie herself; and under that false and coloured pretence, they expelled her Hienesse unjustlie from her realme, which the Erle of Morton, sensyne, hath cruellie vexed and tyrannised over, under cloke of the king's Majestie's authoritie; as he and his factioun of Stirline persist to doe yitt, in exercising daylie diverse odious enormiteis, which they suffer never to come to the king's Majestie's knowledge, whose grandshir was slaine at the instigatioun of the Erle of Angus, uncle to the said Erle of Morton, and of George Dowglas, his father; who, for this effect, led King James the Fyft to the feild, contrarie his will, in boasting him outrageouslie, if he would not assent to their desires and remaine with him, they sould sunder him in two, and send one half to their adversareis, and retaine to themselves the other. Wherefore, lett us beseeke the Almightie God to prosper and preserve eternallie the king's Majestie, our soverane, from all his enemeis; and speciallie from the said Erle of Morton's craftie practises, who, with his forbears, als presumptuous as he is, hath ever wickedlie aspired to the king's Grace's crowne; and so doeth yitt continue, having ejected the Hamiltons, who are neerest to his Hienesse' blood, to the effect that, after the king's Majestie himself be cutt off, he may, without impediment, come to his long desired expectatioun; to the utter confusioun and eversioun of this poore afflicted commoun weale, which it will please God to deliver of his tyrannie.

" Per decretum Secreti Consilii,"

THE JUST COPIE OF THAT PART OF MR W. BALCALQUALL'S SERMON MADE IN THE KIRK OF EDINBURGH UPON WEDNISDAY THE 7TH OF DECEMBER, anno 1580, WHEROF HE SUPPOSETH, THAT ATHER THE ERLE OF LENNOX, OR ANIE OF HIS DEPENDERS, MAY TAK ANIE OCCASIOUN OF OFFENCE.

"After that, according to my maner, I had sensible exponed these words of the Apostle Peter, who giveth this precept following, 'Bee yee readie at all times to answere unto everie man who asketh reason of that hope which is in yow, with all lenitie and reverence;' amongst the rest of the notes which I observed of this place against the doctrine of the Papists, I observed this note and applicatioun following:—

"Of this place it appeareth, that it is not enough for Christians to keepe their faith onlie within their owne breasts, and hyde the professioun of their religion within themselves: but it behoveth them also, whenever need and necessitie requireth, to give a publict professioun and plaine declaration of that hope or faith which is in them, and religioun which they professe, notwithstanding of anie trouble and danger which may ensue therupon. This doctrine condemneth the damnable heresie of the Papists, who, concerning this mater, affirme that it is lawful unto a Christian, if he feareth anie danger or trouble, outwardlie to denie his faith and religioun, with this conditioun, that he keepe it closse within himself. In respect wherof it is, that both plainlie they speeke and write, that if anie of their Catholicks (for so they terme their Papists) come among us, (whom they call hereticks and Calvinists,) if they be affrayed of anie trouble or danger, it is lawfull to them to denie their Catholick or Roman religioun, and so dissemble with the same, that they doe anie thing that we bid them doe, and it were with their mouth to denie their Papistrie, subscrive the articles of our religioun, and be participant of the sacraments, with this conditioun, that they keepe their religioun inwardlie and heartilie to the Catholick Roman kirk, and faith therof. How farre this doctrine of the Papists doeth repugne to the doctrine of Peter and Paul, all men of sound judgement may easilie perceave. For Peter sayeth plainlie, that everie Christian ought to be readie to give a plaine confessioun of his faith when ever he sall be demanded: and Paul, writting to the Romans, he giveth this reasoun, that as man with the heart beleeveth unto righteousnesse, so also with the mouth he confesseth unto salvatioun. The Papists, in the contrare, plainlie affirme, that Christians may dissemble with their religioun, and denie the outward professioun therof.

"And as this doctrine in it self is most pernicious, so also it was wont als perniciouslie to be observed and followed by our Scotish Papists. For, within these two yeeres and lesse, our Papists stood [in] suche aw of the lawes of the realme and discipline of the Kirk of God, that they durst not plainlie professe their Papistrie, but were constrained ather to depart the realme, or subscrive to the religioun; which sindrie of them did, hypocriticallie, and against their heart; and yitt excuse their hypocrisic and dissimulatioun with this doctrine of the Papists, that it is lawfull to a Catholick to denie his religioun, being amongst hereticks and Calvinists. But now, with the dolour of our hearts, we that feare God perceave, that the Papists have cast off their wonted dissimulatioun and feare, and have taikin suche hardinesse and boldnesse unto them selves, that not onlie were they bold in Parise, and other parts out of the countrie, plainlie to preache Papistrie, to impugne the truthe of the Gospell, to querrell and persecute their owne countrie men for the same, but also, when they are come home heere in Scotland, they darre not onlie professe their forsaid Papistrie, and impugne the truthe, but also debate their querrells upon the streets of Edinburgh, which, for the religioun, they had begunne in Parise. And suche bloodie and cruell Papists as durst be bold, in Parise, to cast whingers at the heads of the servants of God for religioun, are become now so bold, as to draw their bloodie swords upon the calsey of Edinburgh, to shed the bloed of the professors therof. Wherin it may appeare. that their cruell mindes tend to performe that thing which, cruellie, in Parise they had begunne.

"And now, brethrein, to be plaine in this mater, whill they that feare God rypelie consider these things, they are compelled to feare these things to be the fruicts of our Frenche court, which, if they be, I pray God keepe us from the like, or worse. For if these things continue and go fordward, I will tell thee, O Scotland, and these that feare the Lord within thee, thou sall repent that ever this Frenche court came in Scotland, or that ever thou saw it, or the fruicts therof, with thy eyes. And this I am compelled to speeke, by reasoun of the great inconveniences that I perceave therewith to be conjoyned. But some, perchance, may demand and speere of me, what evill fruicts and inconveniences are these that I perceave to be therewith conjoyned, that make all good men therof mislyke? Among the rest, I onlie make mentioun of these few:—

"The First inconvenient that I see is this; that wheras, before this Frenche court came in Scotland, there were ather few or none that durst avow themselves for Papists, nather yitt publicitie in the countrie, nather in reformed citeis, nather in the king's palace. But sensyne, not onlie beginne the Papists within the realme to lift up their heads, but also, our Scotish Papists, that were out of the realme, swerme home from all places, like locusts; and have tane suche hardement unto them, that not onlie have they had accesse to the Frenche court, but also in the king's palace, in the particular sessiouns of our kirks, and Generall Assembleis therof; durst plainlie avow their Papistrie, and impugne the truthe, both against the lawes of the realme and discipline of the kirk, contrare to all practise that we have had of before. And this inconvenience maketh us that feare God to suspect the forsaid court, and have a great mislyking therof.

"Secundlie, Wheras our king's Majestie, from his infancie, was trained and brought up in the feare of God, and by the mercie of God yitt continueth therinto; where before, no profane person durst come in his Grace's chamber or presence, his Grace's eares are now offended by a profane Frenche ruffiane, who, if he were in anie other reformed countrie, he would rather be hanged before the sunne, than to be suffered to pollute the eares of so good and so godlie a young prince; who, if he be not removed in time, they that feare God will repent that ever they saw him, or them that brought him heere.

"Thridlie, If we will give credit unto the constant brute of all men, not onlie is the countrie, and, namelie, the Kowgait, the Cannogate, and some houses of the toun, defiled with their whoordomes, but also that sicknesse which yee call the Frenche sicknesse, which, of old, was esteemed to be most odious in Scotland, is become most ryfe and commoun.

"Fourthlie, By their licentiousnesse, they have brought in suche vaine pastymes and foolish games with our whoorish dames, as have not beene seene of before in Scotland, tending to suche new licentiousnesse as will breed farther evill, if it be not prevented. As concerning other inconveniences, time will try; and I pray God we find them not to our hurt.

"Now, brethrein, I speeke not this as though I would flatter the iniquiteis of anie other courts. Na, my lords; from my heart,

I condemne the whoordoms and adultereis of your courts; the murthers, the oppressiouns, the cruelteis, and all the rest of the vices that are into your courts. But rather by the contrare, with Christ, I pronounce this against you, and against all your courts, that except vee doe repent, it sall be easier for Sodome and Gomorrha in the day of the Lord's judgements, than it sall be for you. And, therefore, my lords, the exhortatioun that I give unto you in the name of the Lord is this. That everie one of you be carefull. first, to beginne to reforme your owne persons, to reforme your owne housses and courts: to travell and see that the king's hous be weill reformed, that no profane nor mischant persons be found there, but suche as feare the name of God. If so vee sall doe, I doubt not but God sall be glorified, the poore realme and afflicted kirk within the same sall be conforted, the devill sall be ashamed, and the blessing and benedictioun of God sall abide and remaine upon the whole realme Amen."

"THE KING'S LETTER UNTO THE PRESBYTEREIS, FOR UNIOUN AND DIVISIOUN OF KIRKS; THE LAST OF MAY 1581.

"To our traist cousins and counseller, the Lord Seton, Lord Yester; and to our weillbelovits, the Lairds of Ormeston, Elphinston, Mr James Carmichaell, Mr Walter Hay, and Alexander Forrester, ministers, or so manie of them as sall be conveened.

"Traist cousine and weillbelovits, we greete you heartilie weill. Upon conference latelie had, and consideratioun taikin by some of our Privie Counsell, and certane of the ministrie, by our directioun and commandement, anent the actioun of the constitutioun of the ecclesiasticall policie, so oft ettled unto, and yitt unperformed, in the space of twentie yeeres, with the more now bypast, we have perceaved how this worke hath alwayes heeretofore been hindered, through the great and manie troubles and alteratiouns which have occurred within our realme during that space, to the decay, not onlie of the ecclesiasticall discipline, and of all good order within the kirk, but to the great consumptioun and diminutioun also of the kirk rents, by fewes, tacks, pensiouns, and other dispositiouns practised and brought in use, als weill by bishops, commendatars, ministers, and readers, latelie provided to benefices since our coronationn, as by others provided of old; besides manie abusses daylie creeping in. through the impetratioun of sindrie benefices to ministers and readers, suche as sute the same, concealing the just availl of the veerlie rents of the said benefices, and obtean that oft tymes for a reader that might be a competent living for a minister: Others having obteaned once presentation, although their admissioun be justlie refused as unqualified, vitt intruse themselves in possessioun of the living, returning no report to us of their repelling, for their inhabilitie, that a better qualified person may be presented of new. Manie being admitted, upon their promise to serve and make residence, utterlie cast off that professioun, occupying themselves in profane charges, leaving the flockes over which they sould have care, by reasoun of their said livings, destituted of pastors, and vitt take up, and are answered of their rents; yea, cowppe, change, and diminishe the saids in suche skaithfull and shamelesse maner, as it may weill appeare they are altogether carelesse of the soules of them upon the fruict of whose labours they live, without thought of the posteritie that sould serve in these rownes heerafter. Besides, consideratioun being taikin of the unequall divisioun of the dioceis, some being of so great and large bounds, as no one person is able convenientlie to visite the kirks therof, nather are the ministers, in these bounds, able to conveene so oft together in one place as need requireth: some other dioceis of lesse bounds conteaning fewer parish kirks nor were requisite, by a good order, nather these kirks lying contigue, it is thought, therefore, impossible to atteane to anie formall order likelie to have continuance to the posteritie over our whole realme, whill the ancient bounds of the dioceis be dissolved where these parochins are thicke together, and small ones united; and where they are of over great and large bounds, to be divided, and thereafter presbyteries and elderships constituted for a dossone parochins or therabout, some moe, some fewer, as the commoditie of the countrie lyeth; where the ministrie and elders in these bounds conveening, may commodiouslie exercise ecclesiasticall discipline, and take order in the effaires of the kirk, saifer, as sall be appointed, before cognitioun therof be brought to the synodall assemblie.

"Wherefore, and to the effect that this worke in hand may proceed more formallie, to the honour of God, and ease and commoditie of all our good subjects, we have thought convenient, by advise of our counsell, and suche of the ministers as were heere conveened, that yee to whom we have directed this our letter, or so manie others within the bounds of the parochins, conteaned in this forme sent you heerewith, as yee sall find good [to] call unto your assistance heerin, conveene together at Hadinton, how soone goodlie yee can, and there consult all together; or then, with commoun consent, elect some fewer number among you of best zeale, judgement, and experience, to consider and trie the ancient and present estat of all these particular kirks and parochins in their bounds; which of them are principall parish kirks, and which pendicles; which are standing, and which decayed; and how manie parish kirks it were requisite, of necessitie, to have standing heerafter within the said bounds, and in which places, in consideration of the great number of kirks alreadie decayed, and not weill situat; having respect herewithall how a minister may be weill and honestlie susteaned at everie kirk according to the rents of that parochin: And for the more certantie, that yee trie out and certifie, als weill the ancient as present estate of the rentals of everie parochin, both personages and vicarages, pensioners and others; as also, all prebendreis, chaplanreis, and hospitalls; and by whom, and by what title, the rents therof are now possessed, whether it be a benefice of itself, or be a kirk annexed to anie prelacie ather within burgh or to landwart; and if the kirk be sett in tacke, to whome, and for what maill and duetie; what was the conditioun therof before the tacks, or what may it be thought worth in an ordinar standing, extent, and value, if the present tacks were ended; and not to be hurt nor diminished from that availl and state by suche as sould be minister therin, to the prejudice of his successours therafter; and how manie worthie and weill qualified ministers there are presentlie within the said bounds; and at what kirks it is meetest they be placed at this nixt Alhallowmesse: and send us your report heerupon, in als speciall maner as may be, together with the good advice anent the executioun of the act of parliament for punishment of vagabounds, and support of the poore. where, unto our greefe, we see over little good will shewed, betuixt and the last day of Junie nixt to come; wherin vee sall doe us acceptable pleasure, and find your zeale and travells bestowed heerin greatlie to advance the commoun weill and quietnesse of our whole realme. Farther, yee may assure your selves, and all others that sall deale and treate in these maters, that our meaning is not anie wise to prejudge whatsomever laick patrons in their patronages. nor the present possessors of benefices provided of old during their lyftymes, nor anie persons provided of new, they doing their dueteis in their vocatioun, according to their promise, as becometh them. Nather minde we, that fewers, tacksmen, parochiners, and suche others as have lawfull and good titles, sall be prejudged in their rights and possessiouns, against the order of law.

"And so, looking for your resolute answere against the said day, and speciallie, if anie show themselves hinderers of your proceedings; and that one or two of your selves will repaire unto us with the said report in writting, showing your effectual good will to the furtherance of this good worke, and speciallie, to tak up all occasiouns of eylists, and differences amongst your selves, if anie be; at the least, to putt them under assurance, whill the first day of November nixt to come, that this commoun good worke be not hindered through anie of your particular querrells, as ye will declare your selves favourers of God's true religioun, and will doe us acceptable and good pleasure. Thus, we committ you to God. At Halyrudhous, the last day of May 1581.

A DECLARATIOUN OF THE KING'S MAJESTIE'S WILL AND INTENTIOUN ANENT THE RELIGIOUN.

"James, by the Grace of God, King of Scots, to our Lovits,—Messingers, our shireffs in that part, conjunctlie and severallie, speciallie constitut, greeting. Forsameekle as we, and the Lords of our Secreit Counsell, are surelie informed, that, of late, sindrie most false and untrue brutes and informatiouns are made and dispersed through our realme by some persons, our unnaturall subjects, moved and stirred up by the spirit of unquietnesse and seditioun, als weill privilie perswading as publictlie declaming, that we, moved or ellis seduced by some of our counsell, against our owne minde and inclinatioun, were induced to consent, that the true religioun taught and professed within our realme sould be subverted, Christ's kirk planted therein changed, altered, and rather removed, and in place therof, Papistrie to be erected, the most abominable idolatrie of the masse to be again receaved: All this tend-ng rather to seditioun and commotioun of our faithfull subjects. than to anie edificatioun of Christ's flocke; meaning therethrough, as appeareth, for some their particulars, to disquiet our estate, the true religioun of Christ, and his kirk planted by his owne right hand, and to bring, so farre as in them is, contempt and disobedience both of the law of God and man; wherethrough it must be beleeved that the givers out of suche false brutes seeke no other thing but change of authoriteis and trouble of commoun peace, all to evade punishment of them and their confederats' offences committed against us and our lawes. And although the said brutes and reports be givin furth most falselie, yitt are the samine divulgat under colour of religioun, and title and name of the kirk, to persuade the simple multitude (as most subject to change and mutabilitie) that the samine are upon zeale of their obedience to God, whom they, with all the people, are bound rather to obey than to obey man; wherunto this tendeth in the mouths of suche troublesome, seditious, and unquiett spirits, fearing punishment for their enormiteis and offences knowne to us and our counsell. Wee doubt not but our good and faithfull subjects are able eneugh for to perceave Sathan with his members being discovered, who can transforme himself in an angell of light, remaining alway in all his actiouns enemie to Christ and to all his faithfull members; and from the beginning hath never prevailed against anie therof but by deceate, falshood, and lees, as of the whole historie of the Booke of God is easilie to learne. And in all their seditious brutes, and ungodlie perswasiouns, (to stirre our good subjects in our contempt to neglect their obedience and duetie ought to us,) they speeke, report, and esteeme of us, as of one being ather ignorant, an idiot, and carelesse of religioun and commoun wealth of our realme, or ellis that we are forced and compelled against our will, as being thralled and captive, to doe anie thing not seeming profitable and acceptable in their eyes; the verie forme of speeche and words used in all ages, to induce and provoke good subjects, to contempt and rebellioun against their soverane princes and lawfull magistrats; howbeit, God be praised, they can no wise justlie, in thir causes, burthein us, having givin sufficient prooffe to the world of the con-

"Wherefore we, with advice of the Lords of our Secreit Counsell, command and charge all and sindrie erles, lords, barons, ministers, and others our lieges whatsomever, that they desist and ceasse from all publishing, preaching, reporting, or affirming of suche false brutes and manifest lees as are before mentioned, by the which, we and our counsell are most untruelie accused: Certifeing them, and every one of them, that doe in the contrare, that they sall be called, accused, and punished therefore, with all rigour, according to our Acts of Parliament, and lawes of our realme. Attour, by thir presents we, with the advice foresaid, declare and make manifest, that our principall care and affectioun is, to the glorie of God, the continuance of true religioun taught and professed, and Christ's kirk planted within this our realme, which we professe with our whole heart, and sall, God willing, mainteane with all power to our lyve's end; and sall not suffer anie other name. kirk, or religioun, to be professed, but the name, kirk, and religioun, of our Maister and Saviour, Christ Jesus, which were confirmed and established by our lawes, and ordinance of parliament, by advice of the whole estats; deteasting and abhorring all kinde of idolatrie, superstitioun, Papistrie, or other infidelitie whatsomever, with all kinde of false and hypocriticall religioun not conteaned in the Booke of God. And this we protest solemnelie before God. his deere Sonne, the Lord Jesus Christ, with his Holie Spirit, and you our subjects, his members, with our whole heart and minde, in due and faithfull obedience to our God, and reverence ought to his true kirk, ruled by his Word and Holie Spirit. Which declaratioun we make, of the tender love we beare to all our good and faithfull subjects, exhorting them no otherwise to be perswaded by the givers furth and proclamers of suche false brutes; and that they be not moved to anie conventiouns or assembleis, under whatsomever titles or names, whereby they may give occasioun of offence to us or our lawes, except our advice and directioun be had thereto; certifeing them that doe in the contrarie, that they sall be reputed, holdin, and punished, as makers of convocatioun of our lieges, disquietters of commoun peace, rebells and enemeis to us, our authoritie and lawes.

"And becausit is come to our knowledge, that, by the saids disquietters of our commoun peace, rumors are published, that our deerest cousine. Esme, now Duke of Lennox, &c., sould be a counseller and deviser to us in the premises presentlie, of the erecting of Papistrie, and abolishing of the true religioun, which he hath subscribed with his hand, sworne in the presence of God, approved with the holie actioun of the Lord's Table, lyke as he is readie to seale the samine with his blood: We, therefore, with advice of the Lords of our Secreit Counsell foresaid, have thought expedient to publishe to all our faithfull subjects, the malicious falshood of thir calumneis laved and published against our said cousine, his faithfull and constant abiding in the true religioun of Christ professed within this our realme, his debtfull obedience to us, our authoritie and lawes, his care and diligence in the preservatioun of our persoun, with all other vertues required in a true counseller and obedient subject. That none of you our faithfull subjects be moved or animated against our said cousine, by the false brutes givin out by suche seditious persons, enemeis to our said cousin, or others our faithfull counsellers, whole estat, and commoun wealth of our realme, our will is heerefore, and we charge you straitlie and command, that, incontinent these our letters seene, yee passe to the mercat croces of all burrowes, and to all parish kirks within our realme, and there, by opin proclamatioun, make publicatioun and intimatioun heerof, that none pretend ignorance of the samine, as yee will answere to us therupon. The quhilk to doe, we committ to you, conjunctlie and severallie, our full power, by thir our letters, delivering them, by you duelie executed and indorsat, again to the bearer. Givin under our signet, at Perth, the 12th day of July, and of our raigne the 15th yeere, 1582.

[&]quot; Per actum Secreti Consilii."

THE COPIE OF THE KING'S MAJESTIE'S COMMAND.

"Alexander Arbuthnet, our printer, we greete you weill. It is our will, and we command you, that, after the sight heerof, yee imprint, and cause be imprinted, the proclamatioun made, tuiching the declaratioun of our intentioun tuiching the true religioun of Jesus Christ presentlic professed and preached within this realme; for the which, thir presents sall be to you sufficient warrant. Subscrived with our hand, at our Burgh of Perth, the 15th day of July, and of our raigne the 15th yeere, 1582.

THE KING'S VERSES WHEN HE WAS EYETEENE YEERE OLD.

Since thought is free, thinke what thow will,
O troubled heart, to ease thy paine!
Thought unreveeled can doe no ill,
But words past out turne not again.
Be carefull, ay, for to invent
The way to gett thyne owne intent.

To play thyself with thy conceate,

And lett none know what thow doth meane;

Hope ay at last, though it be lait,

To thy intent for to atteane:

Whiles, lett it breake furth in effect,

By ay lett witt thy will correct.

Since foole-haste is not greatest speed,
I would thou shouldest learne to know
How to make vertue of a need,
Since that necessitie hath no law.
With patience, then, see thow attend,
And hope to vanquishe at the end.

ANTITHESIS.

Since thought is thrall to thy ill will,
O troubled heart, great is thy pain!
Thought unreveeled may doe thee ill,
But words weill past come weill again.
Be never carefull to invent
To gett thy owne, but God's intent.

Play not thy self with thy conceate,

For God knoweth all that thow doth meane.

Hope without faith will bring thee late

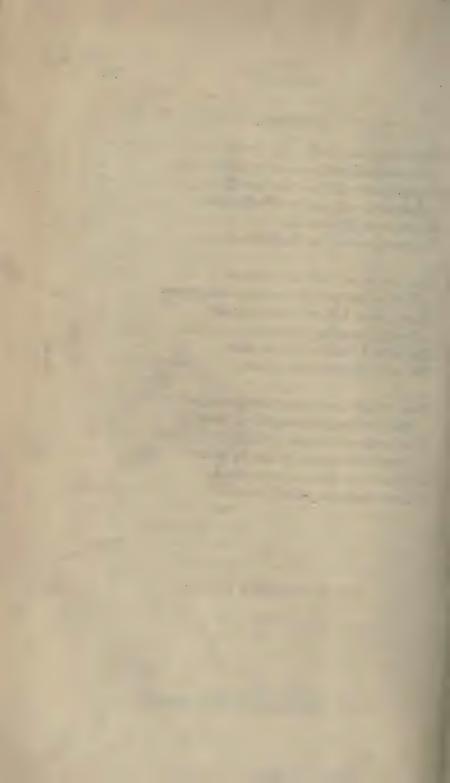

To thy intent for to atteane.

And when it breakes furth in effect,

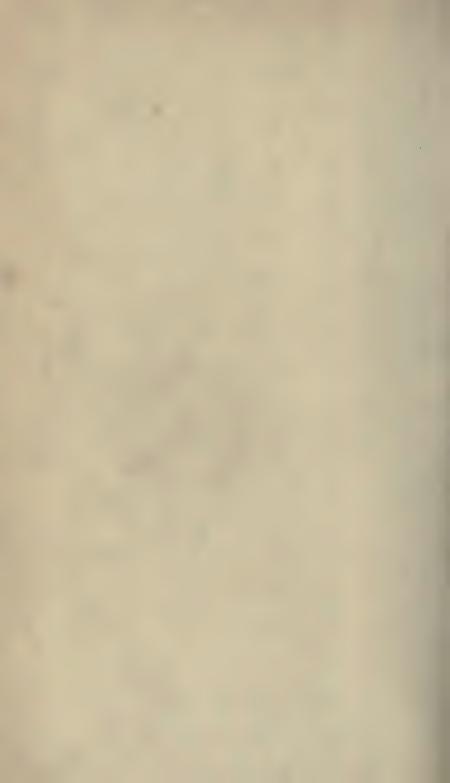

Thy wylie witt God will correct.

Since of foole-haste came never good speed,
Pray God to give thee grace to know,
That vertue onlie forced by need,
Serveth little thanks to thee by law.
On God's will, then, see thou attend,
If thow would vanquishe in the end.
